Whereas a doubt has arisen as to what lands were granted by section ten of said Act; and

Whereas by section twenty of the Act of Congress of March second, eighteen hundred and fifty-three, entitled "An Act to establish the Territorial government of Washington," the county commissioners of counties in said Territory were authorized to locate and select certain lands in lieu of sections sixteen and thirty-six occupied by actual settlers; and

Whereas by the Act of Congress of February twenty-sixth, eighteen hundred and fifty-nine, entitled "An Act to authorize settlers upon sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections, who settled before the surveys of public lands, to preempt their settlements," certain lands were appropriated for school purposes in lieu of such as might be patented by preemptors, and to compensate deficiencies for school purposes where said sections sixteen and thirty-six were fractional in quantity, or where one or both were wanting by reason of the township being fractional, or from any natural cause whatever, and providing for their selection; and

Whereas certain lieu lands have been selected by the Territory of Washington under said Acts of Congress: Therefore, [32 Stat. L. 756.]

SEC. 13. [Mineral lands excepted from grants — lieu lands.] That all mineral lands shall be exempted from the grants made by this act. But if sections sixteen and thirty-six, or any subdivision or portion of any smallest subdivision thereof in any township, shall be found by the Department of the Interior to be mineral lands, said State is hereby authorized and empowered to select, in legal subdivisions, an equal quantity of other unappropriated lands in said State in lieu thereof, for the use and benefit of the common schools of said State. [26 Stat. L. 224.]

See note to section 4, supra.

SEC. 14. [Selections, how made — deductions.] That all lands granted in quantity or as indemnity by this act shall be selected, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, from the surveyed, unreserved and unappropriated public lands of the United States within the limits of the State entitled thereto. And there shall be deducted from the number of acres of land donated by this act for specific objects to said State the number of acres heretofore donated by Congress to said Territory for similar objects. [26 Stat. L. 224.]

See note to section 4, supra.

[LEASE OF SCHOOL LANDS IN WYOMING.]

An act to authorize the leasing of the school and university lands in the Territory of Wyoming, and for other purposes.

[SEC. 1.] [Lease of school lands in Wyoming.] That the county commissioners of each of the counties organized or hereafter organized in the Territory of Wyoming are hereby authorized to lease the lands devoid of timber and known mineral deposits heretofore reserved or that may hereafter be reserved for school purposes in their respective counties, in such manner as may be provided by the laws of the said Territory. [25 Stat. L. 393.]

SEC. 2. [Use of funds.] That all moneys derived from the leasing of the lands as provided by the first section of this act shall become part of the school funds of the county where such lands are situated, and shall be used for the building of school-houses and the support of public schools in such county, and for no other purpose. [25 Stat. L. 393.]

SEC. 3. [Lease of university lands—regulations.] That the governor, superintendent of public instruction, and auditor of the Territory of Wyoming are hereby constituted a board, with authority to lease the lands heretofore selected, or that may be hereafter selected, for university purposes, under the provisions of the act of Congress entitled "An act to grant lands to Dakota, Montana, Arizona, Idaho, and Wyoming for university purposes," approved February eighteenth, eighteen hundred and eighty-one, in the said Territory of Wyoming, in such manner as may be provided by the laws of the Territory of Wyoming: Provided, That until the legislature of said Territory shall provide by law for the leasing of said university and school lands the said governor, superintendent of public instruction, and auditor are authorized, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, to make the necessary rules and regulations to carry out the provisions of this section. [25 Stat. L. 393.]

SEC. 4. [Use of funds.] That all moneys derived from the leasing of the said university lands, as provided by the third section of this act, shall become a part of the university fund of said Territory, and shall be used for the support of the university of Wyoming, and for no other purpose. [25 Stat. L. 393.]

SEC. 5. [Terms of leases and annulment.] That no lease under the provisions of this act shall be made for a term exceeding five years, and all leases shall expire within six months after the Territory is admitted as a State into the Union: Provided, That the Secretary of the Interior may at any time in his discretion annul any lease made under the provisions of this act. [25 Stat. L. 393.]

SEC. 6. [Lands to be selected in lieu of school lands found to be mineral lands.] That where lands in the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections, in the Territory of Wyoming, are found upon survey to be in the occupancy, and covered by the improvements of an actual pre-emption or homestead settler, or where either of them are fractional in quantity, in whole or in part, or wanting because the townships are fractional or have been or shall hereafter be reserved for public purposes, or found to be mineral in character, other lands may be selected by an agent appointed by the governor of the Territory in lieu thereof, from the surveyed public lands within the Territory not otherwise legally claimed or appropriated at the time of selection, in accordance with the principles of adjustment prescribed by section twenty-two hundred and seventy-six of the Revised Statutes of the United States, and upon a determination by the Interior Department that a portion of the smallest legal subdivision in a section numbered sixteen, or thirty-six, in Wyoming, is mineral land, such smallest legal subdivision shall be excepted from the reservation for schools, and indemnity allowed for it in its entirety, and such subdivisions or the portions of them remaining after segregation of the mineral lands or claims, shall be treated as other public lands of the United States. [25 Stat. L. 393.]

These sections were incorporated into the Revised Statutes from the Timber-culture Act of March 3, 1873, ch. 277, 17 Stat. L. 605. They were amended by the amendment of such Act by the Acts of March 13, 1874, ch. 55, 18 Stat. L. 21; May 20, 1876, ch. 102, 19 Stat. L. 54; June 19, 1876, ch. 134, 19 Stat. L. 59; June 14, 1878, ch. 190, 20 Stat. L. 113, the latter Act superseding all prior Acts and giving all provisions on the subject. This latter Act was as follows:

"An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to encourage the growth of timber on the Western Prairies.'

"[Sec. 1.] That the act entitled 'An act to amend the act entitled "An act to encourage the growth of timber on Western Prairies"', approved March thirteenth, eighteen hundred and seventy-four, be and the same is hereby amended so as to read as follows: That any person who is the head of a family, or who has arrived at the age of twenty-one years, and is a citizen of the United States, or who shall have filed his declaration of intention to become such, as required by the naturalization laws of the United States, who shall plant, protect, and keep in a healthy, growing condition for eight years ten acres of timber, on any quarter-section of any of the public lands of the United States, or five acres on any legal subdivision of eighty acres, or two and one half acres on any legal subdivision of forty acres or less, shall be entitled to a patent for the whole of said quarter-section, or of such legal subdivision of eighty or forty acres, or fractional subdivision of less than forty acres, as the case may be, at the expiration of said eight years, on making proof of such fact by not less than two credible witnesses, and a full compliance of the further conditions as provided in section two: Provided further, That not more than one quarter of any section shall be thus granted, and that no person shall make more than one entry under the provisions of this act." [20 Stat. L. 113.]

This Act was construed, cited, or referred to in Bucklin v. U. S., (1895) 159 U. S. 682; Adams v. Church, (1904) 193 U. S. 510; U. S. v. Shinn, (1882) 14 Fed. Rep. 447; U. S. v. McCook County, (1898) 11 S. Dak. 258.

"Sec. 2. That the person applying for the benefits of this act shall, upon application to the register of the land-district in which he or she is about to make such entry, make affidavit, before the register or the receiver, or the clerk of some court of record, or officer authorized to administer oaths in the district where the land is situated; which affidavit shall be as follows, to wit: I, ———, having filed my application, number —, for an entry under the provisions of an act entitled 'An act to amend an act entitled "An act to encourage the growth of timber on the Western prairies"' approved ——— 187—, do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I am the head of a family (or over twenty-one years of age), and a citizen of the United States (or have declared my intention to become such); that the section of land specified in my said application is composed exclusively of prairie lands, or other lands devoid of timber; that this filing and entry is made for the cultivation of timber, and for my own exclusive use and benefit; that I have made the said application in good faith, and not for the purpose of speculation, or directly or indirectly for the use or benefit of any other person or persons whomsoever; that I intend to hold and cultivate the land, and to fully comply with the provisions of this said act; and that I have not heretofore made an entry under this act, or the acts of which this is amendatory. And upon filing said affidavit with said register and said receiver and on payment of ten dollars, if the tract applied for is more than eighty acres; and five dollars if it is eighty acres or less, he or she shall thereupon be permitted to enter the quantity of land specified; and the party making an entry of a quarter-section under the provisions of this act shall be required to break or plow five acres covered thereby the first year, five acres the second year, and to cultivate to crop or otherwise the five acres broken or plowed the first year; the third year he or she shall cultivate to crop or otherwise the five acres broken the second year, and to plant in timber, seeds, or cuttings the five acres first broken or plowed, and to cultivate and put in crop or otherwise the remaining five acres, and the fourth year to plant in timber, seeds, or cuttings the remaining five acres. All entries of less quantity than one quarter-section shall be plowed, planted, cultivated and planted to trees, tree-seeds, or cuttings, in the same manner and in the same proportion as hereinbefore provided for a quarter section. Provided, however, That in case such trees, seeds, or cuttings shall be destroyed by grasshoppers, or by extreme and unusual drouth, for any year or term of years, the time for planting such trees, seeds, or cuttings shall be extended one year for every such year that they are so destroyed: Provided further, That the person making such entry shall, before he or she shall be entitled to such extension of time, file with the register and the receiver of the proper land-office an affidavit, corroborated by two witnesses, setting forth the destruction of such trees, and that, in consequence of such destruction, he or she is compelled to ask an extension of time, in accordance with the provisions of this act: And provided further, That no final certificate shall be given, or patent issued, for the land so entered until the expiration of eight years from the date of such entry; and if, at the expiration of such time, or at any time within five years thereafter, the person making such entry, or, if he or she be dead, his or her heirs or legal representatives, shall prove by two credible witnesses that he or she or they have planted, and, for not less than eight years, have cultivated and protected such quantity and character of trees as aforesaid; that not less than twenty-seven hundred trees were planted on each acre and that at the time of making such proof that there shall be then growing at least six hundred and seventy-five living and thrifty trees to each acre, they shall receive a patent for such tract of land." [20 Stat. L. 113.]

"SEC. 3. That if at any time after the filing of said affidavit, and prior to the issuing of the patent for said land, the claimant shall fail to comply with any of the requirements of this act, then and in that event such land shall be subject to entry under the homestead laws, or by some other person under the provisions of this act. Provided, That the party making claim to said land, either as a homestead-settler, or under this act, shall give at the time of filing his application, such notice to the original claimant as shall be prescribed by the rules established by the Commissioner of the General Land Office; and the rights of the parties shall be determined as in other contested cases." [20 Stat. L. 114.]

"SEC. 4. That no land acquired under the provisions of this act shall, in any event, become liable to the satisfaction of any debt or debts contracted prior to the issuing of the final certificate therefor." [20 Stat. L. 114.]

"SEC. 5. That the Commissioner of the General Land Office is hereby required to prepare and issue such rules and regulations, consistent with this act, as shall be necessary and proper to carry its provisions into effect; and that the registers and receivers of the several land-offices shall each be entitled to receive two dollars at the time of entry, and the like sum when the claim is finally established and the final certificate issued." [20 Stat. L. 114.]

"SEC. 6. That the fifth section of the act entitled 'An act in addition to an act to punish crimes against the United States, and for other purposes', approved March third, eighteen hundred and fifty-seven, shall extend to all oaths, affirmations, and affidavits required or authorized by this act." [20 Stat. L. 114.]

"SEC. 7. That parties who have already made entries under the acts approved March third, eighteen hundred and seventy-three, and March thirteenth, eighteen hundred and seventy-four, of which this is amendatory shall be permitted to complete the same upon full compliance with the provisions of this act; that is, they shall, at the time of making their final proof, have had under cultivation, as required by this act, an amount of timber sufficient to make the number of acres required by this act." [20 Stat. L. 115.]

"SEC. 8. All acts and parts of acts in conflict with this act are hereby repealed." [20 Stat. L. 115.]

Repeal.—This latter Act was repealed by the provisions of the following text.

An act to repeal timber-culture laws, and for other purposes.

[SEC. 1.] [Timber-culture laws repealed.] That an act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to encourage the growth of timber on the Western prairies, ['']" approved June fourteenth, eighteen hundred and seventy-eight, and all laws supplementary thereto or amendatory thereof, be, and the same are hereby, repealed: Provided, That this repeal shall not affect any valid rights heretofore accrued or accruing under said laws, but all bona fide claims lawfully initiated before the passage of this act may be perfected upon due compliance with law, in the same manner, upon the same terms and conditions, and subject to the same limitations, forfeitures, and contests as if this act had not been passed: And provided further, That the following words of the last clause of section two of said act, namely, "That not less than twenty-seven hundred trees were planted on each acre," are hereby repealed: And provided further, That in computing the period of cultivation the time shall run from the date of the entry, if the necessary acts of cultivation were performed within the proper time: And provided further, That the preparation of the land and the planting of trees shall be construed as acts of cultivation, and the time authorized to be so employed and actually employed shall be computed as a part of the eight years of cultivation required by statute: And provided further, That if trees, seeds, or cuttings were in good faith planted as provided by law and the same and the land upon which so planted were thereafter in good faith cultivated as provided by law for at least eight years by a person qualified to make entry and who has a subsisting entry under the timber culture laws, final proof may be made without regard to the number of trees that may have been then growing on the land. Provided, That any person who has made entry of any public lands of the United States under the timber-culture laws, and who has for a period of four years in good faith complied with the provisions of said laws and who is an actual bona fide resident of the State or Territory in which said land is located shall be entitled to make final proof thereto, and acquire title to the same, by the payment of one dollar and twenty five cents per acre for such tract, under such rules and regulations as shall be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior, and registers and receivers shall be allowed the same fees and compensation for final proofs in timber-culture entries as is now allowed by law in homestead entries: And provided further, That no land acquired under the provisions of this act shall in any event become liable to the satisfaction of any debt or debts contracted prior to the issuing of the final certificate therefor. [26 Stat. L. 1095.]

This section was amended by Act of March 3, 1893, ch. 208, 27 Stat. L. 593, by adding thereto, after the fourth proviso, the provisos given above as following it.

Previously acquired valid rights not affected by repeal of timber-culture laws. Bucklin v. U. S., (1895) 159 U. S. 682.

Exemption of land from entryman's debts.—The provision that no land acquired under the timber-culture laws shall in any event "become liable to the satisfaction of any debt or debts contracted prior to the issuing of the final certificate therefor" is substantially a re-enactment of R. S. 2468, and there seems to be no valid reason why such exemption should not be enforced in the state as well as in the federal courts. Gould v. Tucker, (S. Dak. 1904) 100 N. W. Rep. 427.

[Final proof, where taken.] That timber-culture claimants shall not be required, in making final proof, to appear at the land office to which proof is to be presented or before an officer designated by the Act of May twenty-sixth, eighteen hundred and ninety, within the county in which the land is situated; but such claimant may have his or her personal evidence taken by a United States court commissioner or a clerk of any court of record under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe. [29 Stat. L. 43.]

[XVIII. RIGHT OF WAY OVER PUBLIC LANDS.]

Sec. 2477. [Right of way for highways over public lands.] The right of way for the construction of highways over public lands, not reserved for public uses, is hereby granted. [R. S.]

Transfer of right of way by settler. See R. S. sec. 2288, infra, p. 516.

"The object of the grant [made by this section] was to enable the citizens and residents of the states and territories where public lands belonging to the United States were situated to build and construct such highways across the public domain as the exigencies of their localities might require, without making themselves liable as trespassers." Wells v. Pennington County, (1891) 2 S. Dak. 1.

A railroad is a highway within the meaning of this section. Tennessee, etc., R. Co. v. Taylor, (1893) 102 Ala. 224; Flint, etc., R. Co. v. Gordon, (1879) 41 Mich. 420. See also Verdier v. Port Royal R. Co., (1881) 15 S. Car. 476; Sams v. Port Royal, etc., R. Co., (1881) 15 S. Car. 484. Contra, Burlington, etc., R. Co. v. Johnson, (1887) 38 Kan. 142.

Is grant in præsentis?—It has been held that this section operates as a present grant and that when the offer which it makes is acted on and accepted, the acceptance relates back and becomes effective from the date of the Act. Walcott Tp. v. Skauge, (1897) 6 N. Dak. 382; Wells v. Pennington County, (1891) 2 S. Dak. 1. See also Tholl v. Koles, (1902) 65 Kan. 802.

It is believed, however, that the statement thus broadly made is inaccurate unless it is accepted as subject to the qualification that the creation of a highway by prescription or by state legislation accepting the offer made by the federal statute relates back to the date of the Act only when no adverse rights to the land in question have intervened. The theory upon which these cases were decided is that the words "is hereby granted" import a grant in præsentis which is analogous to that made by the act granting swamp and overflowed lands to the states. (See supra, this title, XII. Swamp and Overflowed Lands.) In the case of that grant, however, the swamp and overflowed lands were susceptible of exact identification, while the application to this section of the principles invoked in the construction of that Act, would operate to create endless confusion, as every sale of public lands made after July 26, 1866, would be subject to the right of third persons to create highways over the lands sold. The true rule would seem to be that laid down in Wallowa County v. Wade, (1903) 43 Oregon 253, wherein it was said: "The Act of Congress is more than a mere general offer to the public, being in effect a dedication of the land, which becomes operative and relates back to the date of the Act whenever the public, either by user or by some appropriate act of the highway authorities, affirmatively manifests an intention to use a certain definite portion of the public land as a highway. The right is necessarily indefinite, and, in a sense, floating and liable to be extinguished by a sale or disposition of the land, until the highway is surveyed and marked on the ground, or in some other way identified or designated; but when the public authorities lay out and locate a road over public land of the United States by surveying and marking it on the ground, or by some legislative act, or when it is shown by user, the right becomes complete, and an intention to accept the dedication is manifested, and subsequent settlers on the land take subject to the easement." See also Red River, etc., R. Co. v. Sture, (1884) 32 Minn. 95.

As a matter of fact it would seem that in some of the cases cited above it was unnecessary for the court to hold that this section operated as a grant in presenti. Thus in Tholl v. Koles, (1902) 65 Kan. 802, while the court held that the Act was a grant in presenti, the point actually decided seems to be that the proper acceptance of the grant by the state established a highway. And in Wells v. Pennington County, (1891) 2 S. Dak. 1, a pre-emption settlement was made on the land after the passage of the territorial statute accepting the offer, but before the lands were surveyed and the highways identified, and while there was a distinct assertion that the grant was in presenti, the precise point decided seems to be that when the lands were surveyed and the highways designated, the right of the territory attached to the highways and took effect as of the date of the territorial statute of acceptance.

State's acceptance of grant establishes highway.—This statute is a standing offer of a free right of way over the public domain, and as soon as the offer is accepted in an appropriate manner by the agents of the public or by the public itself, a highway is established. Thus, evidence of user, general and long continued, and proof that the county authorities has assumed control over the road and had worked and improved a portion of it, has been held competent evidence as tending to show an acceptance of the offer of the statute. Streeter v. Stalnaker, (1901) 61 Neb. 205; Rolling v. Emrich, (Wis. 1904) 99 N. W. Rep. 464.

An Act of the state legislature declaring that all roads within a certain county which had been used as highways for two years or more before the passage of the act, should be considered highways, operated as an acceptance of the grant of this section and established the status of such highways over the public land, so that when it passed into private ownership it was taken subject to the easement of the highways. Schwerdtle v. Placer County, (1895) 108 Cal. 589.

And the same effect has been held to result from the passage of a state statute declaring the section lines in a county containing public lands to be highways. Tholl v. Koles, (1902) 65 Kan. 802; Wells v. Pennington County, (1891) 2 S. Dak. 1; Keen v. Fairview Tp., (1896) 8 S. Dak. 558.

But in one case, the court, while taking judicial notice of the United States and state statutes, held that it was necessary to prove that the particular land in controversy was a part of the public domain until the passage of the state statute, as it could not take judicial notice of such fact. Schwerdtle v. Placer County, (1895) 108 Cal. 589.

Lands subject to right of way grant.—Lands acquired by the United States under the provisions of the Direct Tax Act of 1863, 12 Stat. L. 422, are public lands within the meaning of this section, and unless they are reserved for public uses, a railroad may acquire a right of way over them. Verdier v. Port Royal R. Co., (1881) 15 S. Car. 476; Sams v. Port Royal, etc., R. Co., (1881) 15 S. Car. 484.

The mere announcement of a governmental policy to withhold, when the same shall be surveyed, specified portions of the public domain from settlers and purchasers "for the purpose of being applied to schools of states hereafter to be erected" is neither a grant nor a reservation for public uses within the meaning of this section. Riverside Tp. v. Newton, (1898) 11 S. Dak. 120.

Rights of railroad as against homestead entryman.—Where a railroad acquired a right of way under this section over land which had been entered as a homestead, but not patented to the entryman, it was held that the patent, when subsequently issued, would not relate back so as to defeat the railroad's right to the right of way, as the homestead entryman made his entry subject to the possibility that it would be defeated by the subsequent construction of any railway before he earned his patent. It was also held, however, that the railroad should compensate the entryman for improvements made by him prior to the appropriation of the right of way. Flint, etc., R. Co. v. Gordon, (1879) 41 Mich. 420.

It has been held, on the other hand, that a settler who has entered public land under the homestead law, though no patent has been issued, has an inchoate title to the land, which is property; that this is a vested right, which can only be defeated by the settler's failure to comply with the conditions of the law: that if he complies with these conditions, he becomes invested with full ownership and the absolute right to a patent; that the patent, when issued, relates back to the date of his settlement; and that as against such a homesteader a railroad company has not, under the Act of March 3, 1875, or under this section, a right of way over the land homesteaded unless such right was acquired before the homesteader's settlement. Red River, etc., R. Co. v. Sture, (1884) 32 Minn. 95.

It would seem that this is clearly the better view. See supra, this title, VI. Homesteads, notes to R. S. 2289 et seq. And see infra, p. 501 et seq., notes to Act of March 3, 1875, ch. 152, 18 Stat. L. 482, 483.

Grant not revocable.—The right granted by this section is not in the nature of a mere license revocable at the pleasure of the grantor. When highways are once established over the public domain, under and by virtue of this section, the public at once becomes vested with an absolute right to the use thereof which cannot be revoked by the United States. Walcott Tp. v. Skauge, (1897) 6 N. Dak. 382.

Establishment of highway by prescription.—This Act is an unequivocal grant of the right of way for highways over public lands, without any limitation as to the manner of their establishment, and therefore authorizes the establishment of highways over public lands by prescription whenever prescription is recognized as a mode for the establishment of highways in the state wherein the public lands are situated. Smith v. Mitchell, (1899) 21 Wash. 536. See also Wallowa County v. Wade, (1903) 43 Oregon 253.

Insufficient acceptance of grant.—A few months desultory use by a few persons of a logging road or trail through the woods, with no action by the public authorities of any kind, is insufficient to constitute an acceptance of the offer made by this section. Rolling v. Emrich, (Wis. 1904) 99 N. W. Rep. 464.

Grant severs land from public domain.—After an entry and appropriation under the provisions of this section and the proper designation of the right of way granted thereby, the way so appropriated ceases to be a portion of the public domain. Estes Park Toll Road Co. v. Edwards, (1893) 3 Colo. App. 74.

Subsequent purchaser takes subject to existing easement.—Where a right of way has been lawfully acquired over public land under the provisions of this section, a subsequent purchaser or grantee of such land takes it subject to the easement in favor of the public, unless such easement has been extinguished by the operation of the state laws.

Colorado.—Estes Park Toll Road Co. v. Edwards, (1893) 3 Colo. App. 74.

Kansas.—Tholl v. Koles, (1902) 65 Kan. 802.

North Dakota.—Walcott Tp. v. Skauge, (1897) 6 N. Dak. 382.

Oregon.—Wallowa County v. Wade, (1903) 43 Oregon 253.

South Dakota.—Keen v. Fairview Tp., (1896) 8 S. Dak. 558.

Patent unnecessary.—In order for a railroad to acquire the benefit tendered by this section, nothing more is necessary than the construction of its road. No patent is required. The offer and acceptance, taken together, are equivalent to a grant. Estes Park Toll Road Co. v. Edwards, (1893) 3 Colo. App. 74; Flint, etc., R. Co. v. Gordon, (1879) 41 Mich. 420.

Taxation of right of way.—When a part of the public domain is severed therefrom by virtue of an appropriation as a right of way by a toll-road company under the provisions of this section, it is subject to taxation by the county in which it is situated. Estes Park Toll Road Co. v. Edwards, (1893) 3 Colo. App. 74.

Consent of United States to dedication.—It has been held that one who entered on an Indian reservation and attempted to locate a mining claim to which he was given a patent after the treaty opening the reservation, had, prior to such treaty, sufficient right in such mining claim to dedicate a portion thereof as a highway. This section operates to give the consent of the United States to such dedication, and the public acquires a valid title, of which it cannot be deprived by subsequent acts of the patentee or his grantees. Deadwood v. Whittaker, (1900) 12 S. Dak. 515.

SEC. 23. [Reservation of land for public highways in Oklahoma.] That there shall be reserved public highways four rods wide between each section of land in said Territory, the section lines being the center of said highways; but no deduction shall be made, where cash payments are provided for, in the amount to be paid for each quarter section of land by reason of such reservation. But if the said highway shall be vacated by any competent authority, the title to the respective strips shall inure to the then owner of the tract of which it formed a part by the original survey. [26 Stat. L. 92.]

This is from the Act of May 2, 1890, ch. 182. "An Act to provide a temporary government for the Territory of Oklahoma, to enlarge the jurisdiction of the United States Court in the Indian Territory, and for other purposes."

SEC. 6. [Roads, bridges, and ferries on military reservations—driving stock across.] The Secretary of War shall have authority, in his discretion, to permit the extension of State, county, and Territorial roads across military reservations; to permit the landing of ferries, the erection of bridges thereon; and permit cattle, sheep or other stock animals to be driven across such reservation, whenever in his judgment the same can be done without injury to the reservation or inconvenience to the military forces stationed thereon. [23 Stat. L. 104.]

This is from the Act of July 5, 1884, ch. 214, set forth supra, p. 423.

An act granting to railroads the right of way through the public lands of the United States.

[SEC. 1.] [Right of way through public lands, materials, station-grounds, etc., granted to railroads.] That the right of way through the public lands of the United States is hereby granted to any railroad company duly organized under the laws of any State or Territory, except the District of Columbia, or by the Congress of the United States, which shall have filed with the Secretary of the Interior a copy of its articles of incorporation, and due proofs of its organization under the same, to the extent of one hundred feet on each side of the central line of said road; also the right to take, from the public lands adjacent to the line of said road, material, earth, stone, and timber necessary for the construction of said railroad; also ground adjacent to such right of way for station-buildings, depots, machine shops, side-tracks, turn-outs, and water-stations, not to exceed in amount twenty acres for each station, to the extent of one station for each ten miles of its road. [18 Stat. L. 482.]

Amendment of this Act. — See Act of Feb. 27, 1901, ch. 614, infra, p. 507.

"The general nature and purpose of the Act of [March 3] 1875 were manifestly to promote the building of railroads through the immense public domain remaining unsettled and undeveloped at the time of its passage. It was not a mere bounty for the benefit of the railroads that might accept its provisions, but was legislation intended to promote the interests of the government in opening to settlement and in enhancing the value of those public lands through or near which such railroads might be constructed." U. S. v. Denver, etc., R. Co., (1893) 150 U. S. 1, affirmed (1888) 34 Fed. Rep. 838.

Grant is for public, not private, benefit. — The grant made by this Act is intended for railroad companies intending to operate as common carriers for the benefit and convenience of the public, and not for the benefit of the companies solely. Hence, a logging railroad company which has no other intention than that of operating its railroad for the purposes of its own private business, is not entitled to the grant made by the Act. (1890) 19 Op. Atty.-Gen. 546.

Grant in futuro, not in present. — Since an existing grantee is essential to the creation of a present grant, this Act does not operate as an absolute grant in presenti, but instead is simply an offer to all railroad companies, and takes effect as a grant to any particular company only when such company complies with the provisions of the Act by locating its road and filing a profile thereof in the land office. Spokane Falls, etc., R. Co. v. Ziegler, (C. C. A. 1894) 61 Fed. Rep. 392, 15 U. S. App. 472, affirmed (1897) 167 U. S. 65; Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Wilson, (1900) 28 Colo. 6; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Van Cleave, (1894) 52 Kan. 665; Red River, etc., R. Co. v. Sture, (1884) 32 Minn. 95. See also Radke v. Winona, etc., R. Co., (1888) 39 Minn. 262.

This rule, however, is subject to the qualification that the grant becomes fixed definitely by the actual construction of the railroad before the filing of the profile thereof. In other words, the statute enables a railroad company to secure the grant by an actual construction of its road, or in advance of construction, by filing a profile as provided in section 4. Jamestown, etc., R. Co. v. Jones, (1900) 177 U. S. 125, reversing (1898) 7 N. Dak. 619; Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Hanoum, (1893) 19 Colo. 162; Pennsylvania Min., etc., Co. v. Everett, etc., R. Co., (1902) 29 Wash. 102. See also Washington, etc., R. Co. v. Cœur d'Alene R., etc., Co., (1892) 52 Fed. Rep. 765; Rio Grande Western R. Co. v. Telluride Power, etc., Co., (1897) 16 Utah 125, writ of error dismissed (1900) 175 U. S. 639.

Railroad securing right for benefit of another company. — Where the right of a railroad company to claim the benefits of this Act was attacked on the ground that it was not organized in good faith for the purpose of constructing a railroad for itself, but was a mere instrument of another railroad company by which the real work of construction was to be carried on, it was held that these facts could not operate to exclude the first company from the rights granted by the statute. Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Alling, (1878) 99

U. S. 463, reversing (1878) 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,387.

Acquirement of right of way by railroad construction company.—It is the duty of the railroad company and not of the construction company building the road, to do the things required by this Act to secure a right of way over public lands. It is neither lawful nor possible for the construction company to do the things required. Fitzgerald v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., (1891) 45 Fed. Rep. 812.

Land subject to grant.—Lands ceded by Indians to the United States with power of sale and disposal, are public lands over which a railroad company may secure a right of way under the provisions of this Act. Rierson v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., (1898) 59 Kan. 32.

Land previously granted to a railroad by an Act of Congress under which the grantee had acquired a vested interest, is excepted from the operation of this Act so that another railroad cannot subsequently acquire a right of way thereunder over such land. Washington, etc., R. Co. v. Cœur d'Alene R., etc., Co., (1889) 2 Idaho 550.

Grant subject to rights of prior settlers.—Where a person qualified to enter public land under the homestead, pre-emption, or timber culture laws, has acquired a possessory right to public land by the initiation of an entry in the manner prescribed by statute before a railroad company has filed its profile as required by this Act, the railroad company cannot, even before the issuance of a patent to such entryman, acquire a right of way over the land entered without making proper compensation to the entryman in the manner provided by law.

See also Burlington, etc., R. Co. v. Johnson, (1887) 38 Kan. 142.

Compare Kinion v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., (1893) 118 Mo. 571.

But where a pre-emption entryman relinquished his entry before perfecting his title, but after a railroad company had complied with this statute, and on the date of the relinquishment another person made a homestead entry of the same land, it was held that the railroad company's rights were superior to those of the new homestead entryman. Hamilton v. Spokane, etc., R. Co., 3 Idaho 164; Jamestown, etc., R. Co. v. Jones, (1898) 7 N. Dak. 619.

And where a homestead entryman abandoned his entry after having sold a right of way over the land under the provisions of R. S. sec. 2288, to a railroad company which had complied with the requirements of this Act, and the railroad company constructed its road and operated it continuously, it was held that its title to the right of way was good as against the United States and its grantees, so as to invalidate a subsequent homestead entry thereof. Alexander v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., (1897) 138 Mo. 464.

The same rule has been applied to the purchase of a right of way from the locators of a mining claim by a railroad company which had complied with the statutory requirements. On the abandonment of the claim by the locators, the land became part of the public domain, and the railroad company by virtue of this Act immediately acquired an easement which burdened the land in the hands of subsequent locators. Bonner v. Rio Grande Southern R. Co., (1903) 31 Colo. 446.

It has even been held that where a railroad company made a definite location of its line, acquired the right of way and commenced the construction of its road, and within twelve months thereafter made a profile which was duly approved by the secretary of the interior, the secretary's approval perfected the grant of the right of way to the company, and the grant took effect as of the date of the company's location of its line so as to defeat an intervening homestead entry made by one who had knowledge of the location. Kinion v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., (1893) 118 Mo. 577.

This decision, however, is in direct conflict with Enoch v. Spokane Falls, etc., R. Co., (1893) 6 Wash. 393, and Reidt v. Spokane Falls, etc., R. Co., (1893) 6 Wash. 623, and seems to be contrary in principle to Spokane Falls, etc., R. Co. v. Ziegler, (1894) 15 U. S. App. 472, affirmed (1897) 167 U. S. 65; Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Wilson, (1900) 28 Colo. 6; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Van Cleave, (1894) 52 Kan. 665; Red River, etc., R. Co. v. Sture, (1884) 32 Minn. 95. See also Washington, etc., R. Co. v. Cœur d'Alene R., etc., Co., (1895) 160 U. S. 77, (1892) 52 Fed. Rep. 765; Radke v. Winona, etc., R. Co., (1888) 39 Minn. 262.

On the other hand it finds support in Flint, etc., R. Co. v. Gordon, (1879) 41 Mich. 420.

In any event, since the right of a pre-emption settler does not attach until he files his entry, a pre-emption entry made after the railroad company has filed its profile, by one who settled on the land before such filing, is subject to the railroad's right of way. Lewis v. Rio Grande Western R. Co., 17 Utah 504.

A somewhat different rule has been laid down in the case of a homestead settler. In order for a railroad company to acquire a prior right, it seems that it must not only have complied with the requirements of this Act before the initiation of the homestead entry, but also before the date of the homesteader's settlement. Red River, etc., R. Co. v. Sture, (1884) 32 Minn. 96.

Estoppel of prior settler.—Where a pre-emption settler notified a railroad company of his claim and protested against its action in entering on his land and building its road across the same, without compensating him therefor, but the company disregarded such protest and built its road, it was held that the settler was not estopped by the fact that he took no further steps to protect his possession until after he had received a patent for the land, provided he then asserted his legal rights before they were barred by limitation. Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Wilson, (1900) 28 Colo. 6.

Right of way over unsurveyed lands.—The Act does not limit the right of railroad companies to acquire ground for right of way and station purposes to surveyed lands. It plainly contemplates that a railroad may be extended across unsurveyed lands, and it simply requires that after the surveys are made a profile map shall be filed with and approved by the secretary of the interior. If the title has not been perfected by filing a map after survey (the land being yet unsurveyed) the land is not for that reason exposed to be taken under another claim. The appropriation of it for railroad purposes takes it out of the body of the public domain and prevents any settler from going on it and claiming it under any of the other land laws of the United States. Ex p. Davidson, (1893) 57 Fed. Rep. 883. And see section 4 of this Act, infra, p. 500.

Proof of organization condition precedent to acquirement of right of way.—The making of due proof that it is duly organized as a corporation in the manner required by the statute is a condition precedent to the right of a railroad company to acquire a right of way over public lands under the provisions of this statute. The mere making of a survey before making due proof of organization confers no right on the corporation. An attempt to exercise the privilege does not, by relation, become a vested right by the subsequent performance of the required conditions, but the several steps recited in the statute—the organization of the company, the due filing of its articles of incorporation, and due proof of such organization—must be taken by the corporation before it can obtain any claim whatever to a right of way over the public lands; and any of its acts or claims made to procure such right prior to a compliance with the statutory conditions are without authority of law, and can confer no rights as against another corporation which has complied with the law. And where a railroad, after filing its articles of incorporation, filed supplemental articles changing its route, it was held that the earliest date at which it was organized to build its road over the route as changed, was the date of the filing of the supplemental articles, and that due proof thereof was a condition precedent to its right to acquire a right of way over public lands. Washington, etc., R. Co.

r. Cœur d'Alene R., etc., Co., (1895) 160 U. S. 77, (1892) 52 Fed. Rep. 765. See also Larsen r. Oregon R., etc., Co., (1890) 19 Oregon 240.

What is due proof of organization.—Where a statute of a state in which a railroad corporation was incorporated provided that the due incorporation of a company should, without further proof or acts, operate as its organization, it was held that the filing with the secretary of the interior of proof of incorporation operated also as proof of organization. Washington, etc., R. Co. v. Cœur d'Alene R., etc., Co., (1892) 52 Fed. Rep. 765.

Right to take timber without application to land department.—This Act is a license to a railroad company "to take" the timber necessary for the construction of its road, without application to, or consent of, any officer of the land department, and the land department has no authority to make any regulations on the subject of such license. U. S. v. Chaplin, (1887) 31 Fed. Rep. 890.

Taking timber from adjacent public lands—construction of "adjacent."—In order for public lands to be adjacent within the meaning of this Act, they must be "in proximity, contiguous, or near to the line of the road. While 'proximity' or 'nearness' to an object is somewhat uncertain as a measure of distance, yet the use of such words as a definition brings to the mind the idea that lands which are in fact far off or distant are not adjacent." U. S. v. St. Anthony R. Co., (1904) 192 U. S. 524, reversing (C. C. A. 1902) 114 Fed. Rep. 722.

"What is 'adjacent' land, within the meaning of the statute, must depend on the circumstances of each particular case. Where the 'adjacent' ends and the nonadjacent begins may be difficult to determine. On the theory that the material is taken on account of the benefit resulting to the land from the construction of the road, * * * the term 'adjacent' ought not to be construed to include any land save such as by its proximity to the line of the road is directly and materially benefited by its construction." U. S. v. Chaplin, (1887) 31 Fed. Rep. 890, followed in Bachelder v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1897) 83 Fed. Rep. 986.

Without deciding at what point adjacency begins, it has been held that lands twenty miles distant could not be regarded as adjacent within the meaning of the statute. U. S. v. St. Anthony R. Co., (1904) 192 U. S. 524, reversing (1902) 114 Fed. Rep. 722.

And it has also been held that it could not fairly be said under any reasonable construction of the language of this Act that timber was taken from lands "adjacent to the line" of the railroad in the construction of which it was used, where it was taken from public lands about fifty miles distant from such railroad. Stone v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1894) 64 Fed. Rep. 667, affirmed (1897) 167 U. S. 178.

Timber cut from adjacent lands for use at distant point on line.—A railroad company is not restricted in its use of the timber to places on the line of its road adjacent to the locality from which the timber was taken.

While the Act limits the railroad company in respect to the locality from which the timber may be taken, it does not, either by express terms or by any fair or necessary implication, place any limitation as to the place at which such timber may be used. The intention of Congress would be narrowed, if not defeated, if it were held that the timber could be used rightfully only on such portions of the line as are contiguous to the place from which it is taken. U. S. v. Denver, etc., R. Co., (1893) 150 U. S. 1, affirmed (1888) 34 Fed. Rep. 838.

Purposes for which timber may be used.—Section and depot houses, snow-sheds and fences are to be considered a part of a railroad within the purview of this Act, and therefore timber may be taken from public lands for the purpose of constructing such erections. Denver, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1888) 34 Fed. Rep. 838, affirmed (1893) 150 U. S. 1, modifying (1887) 31 Fed. Rep. 886.

Timber may be taken under this Act for the construction of station buildings, depots, machine-shops, sidetracks, turnouts, water-stations, and the like. U. S. v. Chaplin, (1887) 31 Fed. Rep. 890.

In Denver, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1903) 124 Fed. Rep. 156, the court, in modifying a preliminary injunction, reserved the following questions for decision on the final hearing:

Has a railroad company the right to take timber from public lands adjacent to its right of way to change a completed narrow-gauge into a broad-gauge road, or to repair the broad-gauge road after the change?

Has a railroad company the right to take timber from lands adjacent to one of the lines of railway numbered and specified in the original grant of its franchises to its predecessor, and use such timber to repair another of those lines?

Has a railroad company or its agents the right to the surplus lumber arising from logs found inapplicable, on account of rot or other latent defects, and from the side cuts of the logs that are used for railroad purposes?

Timber grant is for construction, not for repairs or improvements.—The grant of the right to use timber is only to aid in the first construction of the railroad, and when it is completed the grant is exhausted, hence it is unlawful to cut timber for the purpose of making repairs or for making additions, extensions, or improvements to a line of road already completed. Denver, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1888) 34 Fed. Rep. 838, affirmed (1893) 150 U. S. 1, modifying (1887) 31 Fed. Rep. 886.

But a branch line authorized by the charter of the company is a part of the original line of railroad and is not a mere addition to a fully completed road. Hence a railroad has the right to take timber for the construction of such a branch though such construction is not commenced until the lapse of several years after the completion of the main line. U. S. v. Price Trading Co., (C. C. A. 1901) 109 Fed. Rep. 239.

Duty of railroad to use timber economically.—It is the duty of a railroad company to use economically and advantageously the timber which it takes, so that the excess arising from the process of developing it into such shape as will make it available for use for construction purposes shall be as small as possible and shall make the loss to the government as slight as it can be made. It has no right to abuse its privilege, recklessly or designedly, by so cutting the timber as to create an unnecessary and valuable surplus of lumber for its own use. Denver, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1903) 124 Fed. Rep. 156.

Cutting timber before complying with requirements of Act.—A railroad company has no right to cut timber under the provisions of this Act until it has accepted the offer made thereby by filing the prescribed papers with the secretary of the interior. Nor does the subsequent filing of its articles of incorporation and proof of organization with the secretary of the interior purge the act of its wrongful character. It has no right to use thereafter timber cut before the acceptance required by the Act, as the Act does not give the right to appropriate timber already cut. U. S. v. Eccles, (1901) 111 Fed. Rep. 490.

Purchase of timber unlawfully cut.—In an action by the United States for unlawful cutting and removal of timber from public lands, it was held that the defendant was not relieved from liability by the fact that the timber was sold to a railroad company which had the right, so long as it was standing, to cut and appropriate it under the provisions of this Act, as the timber remained the property of the United States after its wrongful cutting, and that title could not be divested by an arrangement to which the United States did not give its assent. U. S. v. Price Trading Co., (C. C. A. 1901) 109 Fed. Rep. 239. Compare U. S. v. Chaplin, (1887) 31 Fed. Rep. 890, holding that if a person not in the employment of a railroad company and having no contract therewith, cuts timber off the public lands adjacent to the line of the company's road, and the company acquires the same for the purpose of constructing its road, and so uses it, neither such person nor the company is liable therefor as a wrongdoer.

Burden of proving that cutting was authorized.—In an action brought by the United States to recover damages from a railroad company for the taking of timber from the public lands, the burden is on the defendant to show that the taking of the timber was authorized by this statute. And where the evidence shows that some of the timber was taken before the railroad had complied with the requirements of the Act as to the filing of proof of organization with the secretary of the interior, and there is nothing to show that any of the timber was taken after the company had complied with the Act, it was held that the United States was entitled to a judgment for the entire amount of timber taken. U. S. v. Eccles, (1901) 111 Fed. Rep. 490.

Liability of railroad company for unlawful taking of timber.—A railroad company is liable to the United States as a wrongdoer if it takes timber from public land not adjacent to the line of its road, or takes more than is permitted by the statute, U. S. v. Chaplin, (1887) 31 Fed. Rep. 890; (1890) 19 Op. Atty-Gen. 546; or if it takes timber for construction purposes before having complied with the requirements of the statute which are conditions precedent to its right to do so, (1890) 19 Op. Atty-Gen. 546.

Good faith no defense to unlawful cutting.—A railroad is liable to the United States for the value of timber cut for use in its construction over public lands that are not "adjacent" to its line within the meaning of this Act, though it does so in the belief that the lands are so adjacent, and with no intention of violating any law or doing any wrongful act. U. S. v. St. Anthony R. Co., (1904) 192 U. S. 524, reversing (C. C. A. 1902) 114 Fed. Rep. 722.

Measure of damages for unlawful cutting.—Where a railroad has in good faith, but acting under a mistake, taken timber which it was not authorized to take by the terms of this Act, the measure of damages is the value of the timber at the time when and at the place where it was taken. U. S. v. St. Anthony R. Co., (1904) 192 U. S. 524, reversing (C. C. A. 1902) 114 Fed. Rep. 722; U. S. v. Eccles, (1901) 111 Fed. Rep. 490.

Right to grant for station purposes does not attach until right of way is acquired.—By the terms of the statute, no right to ground for station purposes attaches until the right of way is secured by a compliance on the part of the railroad company with the provisions of the Act, as the grant is of "ground adjacent to such right of way for station buildings," etc. Hence, where a railroad company filed a map of the lands it desired for station purposes before filing the profile of its road required by section 4 of the Act, and thereafter it filed the profile which was approved by the secretary of the interior, but before such filing and approval a person settled on the land desired by the railroad for station purposes and filed his declaratory statement, it was held that the settler acquired a right to the land settled on, which was superior to the claim of the railroad company. Lilienthal v. Southern California R. Co., (1893) 56 Fed. Rep. 701.

SEC. 2. [Rights of several roads through cañon, pass, or defile—grade crossings—effect on wagon roads.] That any railroad company whose right of way, or whose track or road-bed upon such right of way, passes through any canyon, pass, or defile, shall not prevent any other railroad company from the use and occupancy of the said canyon, pass, or defile, for the purposes of its road, in common with the road first located, or the crossing of other railroads at grade. And the location of such right of way through any canyon, pass, or defile shall not cause the disuse of any wagon or other public highway now located therein, nor prevent the location through the same of any such wagon road or highway where such road or highway may be necessary for the public accommodation; and where any change in the location of such wagon road is necessary to permit the passage of such railroad through any canyon, pass, or defile, said railroad company shall before entering upon the ground occupied by such wagon road, cause the same to be reconstructed at its own expense in the most favorable location, and in as perfect a manner as the original road: Provided, That such expenses shall be equitably divided between any number of railroad companies occupying and using the same canyon, pass, or defile. [18 Stat. L. 482.]

Rights of rival railroads through canyon.—Where a railroad company was granted a right of way through the Grand Canyon of the Arkansas in 1872, but had made no actual location of its line through the canyon nor any occupancy thereof, in good faith, for the purpose of constructing its road, prior to the passage of this Act, and in 1877 it was granted an extension of time for the completion of its road, it was held that such extension was granted subject to the terms of this Act. Another railroad company claiming a right of way through the canyon under the provisions of this Act, and the trial court having decided that the second company had, by prior occupancy, secured a right to use the canyon superior to that of the first company, it was held on appeal, that the first company should be allowed to proceed with the construction of its road unobstructed by the second company; that where the canyon was broad enough to enable both companies to proceed without interference with each other in the construction of their respective roads, they should be allowed to do so; that in the narrow portions of the defile where it was impracticable to lay more than one track, the court, by proper orders, should recognize the right of the first company to construct its work, but should, by proper orders, and on such terms as might be just and equitable, establish and secure the right of the second company to use the roadbed and track, after completion, in common with the first company. Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Alling, (1878) 99 U. S. 463, followed in Montana Cent. R. Co. v. Helena, etc., R. Co., (1887) 6 Mont. 416. See also Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Denver, etc., R. Co., (1883) 17 Fed. Rep. 867.

SEC. 3. [Condemnation of private rights.] That the legislature of the proper Territory may provide for the manner in which private lands and possessory claims on the public lands of the United States may be condemned; and where such provision shall not have been made, such condemnation may be made in accordance with section three of the act entitled "An act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes, approved July first, eighteen hundred and sixty-two," approved July second, eighteen hundred and sixty-four. [18 Stat. L. 482.]

The Acts referred to are Acts of July 1, 1862, ch. 120, 12 Stat. L. 489, and July 2, 1864, ch. 216, sec. 3, 13 Stat. L. 357.

SEC. 4. [Profile of road to be filed—patents subject to right of way—forfeiture of rights.] That any railroad-company desiring to secure the benefits of this act, shall, within twelve months after the location of any section of twenty miles of its road, if the same be upon surveyed lands, and, if upon unsurveyed lands, within twelve months after the survey thereof by the United States, file with the register of the land office for the district where such land is located a profile of its road; and upon approval thereof by the Secretary of the Interior the same shall be noted upon the plats in said office; and thereafter all such lands over which such right of way shall pass shall be disposed of subject to such right of way: Provided, That if any section of said road shall not be completed within five years after the location of said section, the rights herein granted shall be forfeited as to any such uncompleted section of said road. [18 Stat. L. 483.]

Filing of profile not required while lands are unsurveyed.—Washington, etc., R. Co. v. Cœur d'Alene R., etc., Co., (1892) 52 Fed. Rep. 765; Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Hanoum, (1893) 19 Colo. 162.

Hence a railroad company which constructed its line of unsurveyed public lands thereby definitely located its right of way and acquired title thereto as against a subsequent locator of a mining claim, though the officers of the land department declined to accept the profile until such lands were surveyed by the government. Pennsylvania Min., etc., Co. v. Everett, etc., R. Co., (1902) 29 Wash. 102.

And when a railroad has filed due proof of its organization and has located its right of way over unsurveyed public lands, it has twelve months after the government survey in which to file the required profile. Rio Grande Western R. Co. v. Telluride Power, etc., Co., (1897) 16 Utah 125. writ of error dismissed (1900) 175 U. S. 639.

Right of secretary of interior to recall approval.—Where a railroad made application to the secretary of the interior with a view of securing the benefits of this Act, and its record of incorporation and map of definite location were approved by the secretary, but it subsequently appeared that the action of the secretary was based on a mistake of fact caused by the representation of the railroad company itself, and that the application was for a purpose not within the intention of the statute, it was held by the attorney-general that it was competent for the secretary to recall and annul his action approving the line of definite location of the road and entering the same on the public plats. (1890) 19 Op. Atty-Gen. 546.

But in a proceeding brought by the railroad company in question to enjoin the secretary from taking such action, it was held that the secretary could not revoke the action of his predecessor in approving the record of incorporation and map of definite location, such action being conclusive as against collateral attack. Noble v. Union River Logging R. Co., (1893) 147 U. S. 165.

Failure to complete road does not revoke grant ipso facto.—Failure to complete the road within the time limited is a condition subsequent, which does not operate ipso facto as a revocation of the grant, but only authorizes the government itself to take advantage of the failure and forfeit the grant by judicial proceeding or by an Act of Congress resuming title to the lands included in the grant. Utah, etc., R. Co. v. Utah, etc., R. Co., (1901) 110 Fed. Rep. 879.

SEC. 5. [Act not to apply to lands in reservations, etc.] That this act shall not apply to any lands within the limits of any military, park, or Indian reservation, or other lands especially reserved from sale, unless such right of way shall be provided for by treaty-stipulation or by act of Congress heretofore passed. [18 Stat. L. 483.]

SEC. 6. [Amendments, etc.] That Congress hereby reserves the right at any time to alter, amend, or repeal this act, or any part thereof. [18 Stat. L. 483.]

An Act To require railroad companies operating railroads in the Territories over a right of way granted by the Government to establish stations and depots at all town sites on the lines of said roads established by the Interior Department.

[Act of Aug. 8, 1894, ch. 236, 28 Stat. L. 263.]

[SEC. 1.] [Railways to have stations at town sites.] That all railroad companies operating railroads through the Territories of the United States over a right of way obtained under any grant or Act of Congress giving to said railroad companies the right of way over the public lands of the United States shall be required to establish and maintain passenger stations and freight depots at or within one-fourth of a mile of the boundary limits of all town sites already established in said Territories on the line of said railroads by authority of the Interior Department. [28 Stat. L. 263.]

SEC. 2. [Time to establish stations, etc. — penalty for failure.] That said railroad companies are hereby required within three months from the passage of this Act to establish at or within one-fourth of a mile of the boundary limits of all town sites provided for in the preceding section, passenger stations, freight depots, and other accommodations necessary for receiving and discharging passengers and freight at such points; and upon failure of said companies to establish such stations and depots within said time said companies shall be liable to a fine of five hundred dollars for each day thereafter until said stations and depots shall be established, which shall be recovered in a suit brought by the United States in the United States courts in any Territory through which said railroads may pass. [28 Stat. L. 263.]

An Act To amend an Act granting to railroads the right of way through the public lands of the United States, approved March third, eighteen hundred and seventy-five.

[Right of way for railroads in Minnesota over lands reserved for reservoirs, etc.] That all lands in the State of Minnesota described in and withdrawn from sale by the proclamations of the President of the United States for the reason that said lands would be required for or subject to flowage in the construction of dams, reservoirs, and other works proposed to be erected for the improvement of the navigation of the Mississippi River and certain of its tributaries, be, and the same are hereby, declared to be, and to have been at all times heretofore, subject to the provisions of a certain Act of Congress entitled "An Act granting to railroads the right of way through the public lands of the United States," approved March third, eighteen hundred and seventy-five, as fully, effectually, and to the same extent as though said lands had not been described in said proclamations, or withdrawn from sale thereby, but had remained with the body of public lands subject to private entry and sale: Provided, however, That any and all parts of said lands acquired by any railroad company under said Act of Congress shall at all times be subject to the right of flowage which at any time may become necessary in the construction or maintenance of dams, reservoirs, or other works which may be constructed or erected by or under the authority of the United States for the improvement of the navigation of the Mississippi River and its tributaries: Provided further, That the railroad companies availing themselves of this Act shall, in addition to filing the maps now required by law to be filed, also file maps of definite location with elevation of rail of their lines of railroad over said water-reserve lands in the office of the Secretary of War; and no location shall be permitted which takes for right of way or stations or interferes with submergence of lands needed for the use of the present reservoir system, or in the construction of dams or other works, or any proposed or probable extension of the same, or which will obstruct or increase the cost of the present or prospective reservoir system: Provided further, That the plan for the location and construction of any such railway, or any part thereof, shall be first submitted to the Secretary of War and approved by him and by the Chief of Engineers of the United States Army. [31 Stat. L. 815.]

 * * * That in all patents for lands hereafter taken up under any of the land laws of the United States or on entries or claims validated by this act west of the one hundredth meridian, it shall be expressed that there is reserved from the lands in said patent described, a right of way thereon for ditches or canals constructed by the authority of the United States. * * * [26 Stat. L. 391.]

This is from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of Aug. 30, 1890, ch. 837.

SEC. 18. [Right of way through public lands and reservations to canal or ditch companies for irrigation.] That the right of way through the public lands and reservations of the United States is hereby granted to any canal or ditch company formed for the purpose of irrigation and duly organized under the laws of any State or Territory, which shall have filed, or may hereafter file, with the Secretary of the Interior a copy of its articles of incorporation, and due proofs of its organization under the same, to the extent of the ground occupied by the water of the reservoir and of the canal and its laterals, and fifty feet on each side of the marginal limits thereof; also the right to take, from the public lands adjacent to the line of the canal or ditch, material, earth, and stone necessary for the construction of such canal or ditch: Provided, That no such right of way shall be so located as to interfere with the proper occupation by the Government of any such reservation, and all maps of location shall be subject to the approval of the Department of the Government having jurisdiction of such reservation, and the privilege herein granted shall not be construed to interfere with the control of water for irrigation and other purposes under authority of the respective States or Territories. [26 Stat. L. 1101.]

This and sections 19-21 following are from the Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 561, "An Act to repeal timber-culture laws, and for other purposes."

Nature and extent of rights granted by Act.—It is obvious that by this Act and the Act of March 3, 1877, ch. 107, 19 Stat. L. 377, "so far as they extended, Congress recognized and assented to the appropriation of water in contravention of the common-law rule as to continuous flow. To infer therefrom that Congress intended to release its control over the navigable streams of the country and to grant in aid of mining industries and the reclamation of arid lands the right to appropriate the waters on the sources of navigable streams to such an extent as to destroy their navigability, is to carry those statutes beyond what their fair import permits. This legislation must be interpreted in the light of existing facts—that all through this mining region in the West were streams, not navigable, whose waters could safely be appropriated for mining and agricultural industries, without serious interference with the navigability of the rivers into which those waters flow. And in reference to all these cases of purely local interest the obvious purpose of Congress was to give its assent, so far as the public lands were concerned, to any system, although in contravention to the common-law rule, which permitted the appropriation of those waters for legitimate industries. To hold that Congress, by these Acts, meant to confer upon any state the right to appropriate all the waters of the tributary streams which unite into a navigable watercourse, and so destroy the navigability of that watercourse in derogation of the interests of all the people of the United States, is a construction which cannot be tolerated. It ignores the spirit of the legislation and carries the statute to the verge of the letter and far beyond what under the circumstances of the case must be held to have been the intent of Congress.” U. S. v. Rio Grande Dam, etc., Co., (1899) 174 U. S. 690.

Territorial legislation regulating use of waters.—It is evident that it was the purpose of Congress to recognize by this Act the legislation of a territory with respect to the regulation of the use of public waters, as well as that of a state. The provisions of the corporation laws of New Mexico in 1897 in regard to the formation, organization, and regulation of irrigation companies are not inconsistent with this Act, nor are they invalid as assuming to dispose of the property of the United States without its consent. Gutierrez v. Albuquerque Land, etc., Co., (1903) 188 U. S. 545.

SEC. 19. [Maps to be filed — grants subject to right of way — damages to settlers.] That any canal or ditch company desiring to secure the benefits of this act shall, within twelve months after the location of ten miles of its canal, if the same be upon surveyed lands, and if upon unsurveyed lands, within twelve months after the survey thereof by the United States, file with the register of the land office for the district where such land is located a map of its canal or ditch and reservoir; and upon the approval thereof by the Secretary of the Interior the same shall be noted upon the plats in said office, and thereafter all such lands over which such rights of way shall pass shall be disposed of subject to such right of way. Whenever any person or corporation, in the construction of any canal, ditch, or reservoir, injures or damages the possession of any settler on the public domain, the party committing such injury or damage shall be liable to the party injured for such injury or damage. [26 Stat. L. 1102.]

See note to section 18, supra.

Lands appropriated before approval of map.—The approval by the secretary of the interior of the map of location of a reservoir site, filed under the provisions of this Act, carries only the right of way over public lands covered by such location which are

Control of navigable rivers not affected.—There is nothing in this Act or its purposes which was intended to affect the control or supervision of the navigable rivers of the United States. Such control and supervision are vested in the secretary of war. Hence the Act confers on the secretary of the interior no power to grant a right to construct dams across the Rio Grande for the purpose of checking the flow of water and distributing it for irrigation purposes. (1897) 21 Op. Atty-Gen. 518.

Purposes for which right of way may be used.—“It is clear that a right of way of this character constitutes but an easement granted for, and limited to, the purpose mentioned in the Act, and it gives the owner of the easement no right to occupy or use the surface of the land embraced within it for any other purpose than that specified. Such owner may enter thereon and construct a canal, ditch, or reservoir, and after constructing, do all things necessary to maintain, care for, and operate the same; but having merely an easement over, and not the fee in, the land, he has no right to occupy or use it for anything not necessary for the protection and operation of that which he has lawfully constructed thereon. After the right to such an easement has been perfected or acquired in accordance with the provisions of the Act, the title to the fee still remains in the United States. Thereafter, upon the land being disposed of by the government, such title passes to the patentee, and he or his grantee may prevent the use of the right of way for any purpose foreign to that for which the easement was granted.” Hence, the erection of a saloon on the right of way by the owner of the easement is a clear infringement of the rights of the owner of the fee. Whitmore v. Pleasant Valley Coal Co., (1904) 27 Utah 284.

vacant and unappropriated at the time of the approval, and in no wise affects other tracts. Hence the locator of such a reservoir acquires no right of way over lands disposed of by the government before the approval of his map. Nippel v. Forker. (1899) 26 Colo. 74.

SEC. 20. [Applicable to existing and future canals, etc. — forfeiture for noncompletion.] That the provisions of this act shall apply to all canals, ditches, or reservoirs, heretofore or hereafter constructed, whether constructed by corporations, individuals, or association of individuals, on the filing of the certificates and maps herein provided for. If such ditch, canal, or reservoir, has been or shall be constructed by an individual or association of individuals, it shall be sufficient for such individual or association of individuals to file with the Secretary of the Interior, and with the register of the land office where said land is located, a map of the line of such canal, ditch, or reservoir, as in case of a corporation, with the name of the individual owner or owners thereof, together with the articles of association, if any there be. Plats heretofore filed shall have the benefits of this act from the date of their filing, as though filed under it: Provided, That if any section of said canal, or ditch, shall not be completed within five years after the location of said section, the rights herein granted shall be forfeited as to any uncompleted section of said canal, ditch, or reservoir, to the extent that the same is not completed at the date of the forfeiture. [26 Stat. L. 1102.]

See note to section 18, supra.

SEC. 21. [Rights granted only for canal use.] That nothing in this act shall authorize such canal or ditch company to occupy such right of way except for the purpose of said canal or ditch, and then only so far as may be necessary for the construction, maintenance, and care of said canal or ditch. [26 Stat. L. 1102.]

An act to permit the use of the right of way through the public lands for tramroads, canals, and reservoirs, and for other purposes.

[SEC. 1.] [Right of way through public lands for tramroads, canals, or reservoirs.] That the Secretary of the Interior be, and hereby is, authorized and empowered, under general regulations to be fixed by him, to permit the use of the right of way through the public lands of the United States, not within the limits of any park, forest, military or Indian reservation, for tramroads, canals or reservoirs to the extent of the ground occupied by the water of the canals and reservoirs and fifty feet on each side of the marginal limits thereof; or fifty feet on each side of the center line of the tramroad, by any citizen or any association of citizens of the United States engaged in the business of mining or quarrying or of cutting timber and manufacturing lumber.

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and hereby is, authorized and empowered, under general regulations to be fixed by him, to permit the use of right of way upon the public lands of the United States, not within limits of any park, forest, military, or Indian reservations, for tramways, canals, or reservoirs, to the extent of the ground occupied by the water of the canals and reservoirs, and fifty feet on each side of the marginal limits thereof, or fifty feet on each side of the center line of the tramroad, by any citizen or association of citizens of the United States, for the purposes of furnishing water for domestic, public, and other beneficial uses. [28 Stat. L. 635, 30 Stat. L. 404.]

This section was amended by the Act of May 11, 1898, ch. 292, sec. 1, by adding the second paragraph above given. See infra, p. 512.

SEC. 2. [Right of way to electric-power companies.] That the Secretary of the Interior be, and hereby is, authorized and empowered, under general regulations to be fixed by him, to permit the use of right of way to the extent of twenty-five feet, together with the use of necessary ground, not exceeding forty acres, upon the public lands and forest reservations of the United States, by any citizen or association of citizens of the United States, for the purposes of generating, manufacturing, or distributing electric power. [29 Stat. L. 120.]

This section was added by Act of May 14, 1896, ch. 179, 29 Stat. L. 120, entitled "An Act To amend the Act approved March third, eighteen hundred and ninety-one, granting the right of way upon the public lands for reservoir and canal purposes," in the following terms: "That the Act entitled 'An Act to permit the use of the right of way through the public lands for tram-roads, canals, and reservoirs, and for other purposes,' approved January twenty-first, eighteen hundred and ninety-five, be, and the same is hereby, amended by adding thereto the following:" giving the section as above set out.

An Act To grant right of way over the public domain for pipe lines in the States of Colorado and Wyoming.

[SEC. 1.] [Right of way for pipe lines in Colorado and Wyoming.] That the right of way through the public lands of the United States situate in the State of Colorado and in the State of Wyoming outside of the boundary lines of the Yellowstone National Park is hereby granted to any pipe line company or corporation formed for the purpose of transporting oils, crude or refined, which shall have filed or may hereafter file with the Secretary of the Interior a copy of its articles of incorporation, and due proofs of its organization under the same, to the extent of the ground occupied by said pipe line and twenty-five feet on each side of the center line of the same; also the right to take from the public lands adjacent to the line of said pipe line material, earth, and stone necessary for the construction of said pipe line. [29 Stat. L. 127.]

SEC. 2. [Applications — approval.] That any company or corporation desiring to secure the benefits of this Act shall, within twelve months after the location of ten miles of the pipe line, if the same be upon surveyed lands and if the same be upon unsurveyed lands, within twelve months after the survey thereof by the United States, file with the register of the land office for the district where such land is located a map of its line, and upon the approval thereof by the Secretary of the Interior the same shall be noted upon the plats in said office, and thereafter all such lands over which such right of way shall pass shall be disposed of subject to such right of way. [29 Stat. L. 127.]

SEC. 3. [Limit of time for completion.] That if any section of said pipe line shall not be completed within five years after the location of said section the right herein granted shall be forfeited, as to any incomplete section of said pipe line, to the extent that the same is not completed at the date of the forfeiture. [29 Stat. L. 127.]

SEC. 4. [Use restricted to pipe line.] That nothing in this Act shall authorize the use of such right of way except for the pipe line, and then only so far as may be necessary for its construction, maintenance, and care. [29 Stat. L. 127.]

An Act Providing for the location and purchase of public lands for reservoir sites.

[SEC. 1.] [Reservoirs for live stock upon unoccupied public land.] That any person, live-stock company, or transportation corporation engaged in breeding, grazing, driving, or transporting live stock may construct reservoirs upon unoccupied public lands of the United States, not mineral or otherwise reserved, for the purpose of furnishing water to such live stock, and shall have control of such reservoir, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior, and the lands upon which the same is constructed, not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres, so long as such reservoir is maintained and water kept therein for such purposes: Provided, That such reservoir shall not be fenced and shall be open to the free use of any person desiring to water animals of any kind. [29 Stat. L. 484.]

SEC. 2. [Declaratory statement.] That any person, live-stock company, or corporation desiring to avail themselves of the provisions of this Act shall file a declaratory statement in the United States land office in the district where the land is situated, which statement shall describe the land where such reservoir is to be or has been constructed; shall state what business such corporation is engaged in; specify the capacity of the reservoir in gallons, and whether such company, person, or corporation has filed upon other reservoir sites within the same county; and if so, how many. [29 Stat. L. 484.]

SEC. 3. [Time for completion — survey — sites reserved.] That at any time after the completion of such reservoir or reservoirs which, if not completed at the date of the passage of this Act, shall be constructed and completed within two years after filing such declaratory statement, such person, company, or corporation shall have the same accurately surveyed, as hereinafter provided, and shall file in the United States land office in the district in which such reservoir is located a map or plat showing the location of such reservoir, which map or plat shall be transmitted by the register and receiver of said United States land office to the Secretary of the Interior and approved by him, and thereafter such land shall be reserved from sale by the Secretary of the Interior so long as such reservoir is kept in repair and water kept therein. [29 Stat. L. 484.]

SEC. 4. [Amendments, etc.] That Congress may at any time amend, alter, or repeal this Act. [29 Stat. L. 484.]

An Act To amend an Act to permit the use of the right of way through public lands for tramroads, canals, and reservoirs, and for other purposes.

[SEC. 1.] [Amends Act of Jan. 21, 1895, ch. 37, sec. 1.] That the Act entitled "An Act to permit the use of the right of way through the public lands for tramroads, canals, and reservoirs, and for other purposes," approved January twenty-first, eighteen hundred and ninety-five, be, and the same is hereby, amended by adding thereto the following: [incorporated in Act amended, supra, p. 510.]

SEC. 2. [Right of way for water transportation, for domestic purposes, or for development of power.] That the rights of way for ditches, canals, or reservoirs heretofore or hereafter approved under the provisions of sections eighteen, nineteen, twenty, and twenty-one of the Act entitled "An Act to repeal timber-culture laws, and for other purposes," approved March third, eighteen hundred and ninety-one, may be used for purposes of a public nature; and said rights of way may be used for purposes of water transportation, for domestic purposes, or for the development of power, and subsidiary to the main purpose of irrigation. [30 Stat. L. 404.]

[SEC. 1.] [Right of way over forest reserves and reservoir sites for wagon roads, railroads, or highway.] * * * That in the form provided by existing law the Secretary of the Interior may file and approve surveys and plats of any right of way for a wagon road, railroad, or other highway over and across any forest reservation or reservoir site when in his judgment the public interests will not be injuriously affected thereby. * * * [30 Stat. L. 1233.]

An Act Relating to rights of way through certain parks, reservations, and other public lands.

[Right of way over public lands, reservations, and public parks, for electric lines, canals, tunnels, etc.] That the Secretary of the Interior be, and hereby is, authorized and empowered, under general regulations to be fixed by him, to permit the use of rights of way through the public lands, forest and other reservations of the United States, and the Yosemite, Sequoia, and General Grant national parks, California, for electrical plants, poles, and lines for the generation and distribution of electrical power, and for telephone and telegraph purposes, and for canals, ditches, pipes and pipe lines, flumes, tunnels, or other water conduits, and for water plants, dams, and reservoirs used to promote irrigation or mining or quarrying, or the manufacturing or cutting of timber or lumber, or the supplying of water for domestic, public, or any other beneficial uses to the extent of the ground occupied by such canals, ditches, flumes, tunnels, reservoirs, or other water conduits or water plants, or electrical or other works permitted hereunder, and not to exceed fifty feet on each side of the marginal limits thereof, or not to exceed fifty feet on each side of the center line of such pipes and pipe lines, electrical, telegraph, and telephone lines and poles, by any citizen, association, or corporation of the United States, where it is intended by such to exercise the use permitted hereunder or any one or more of the purposes herein named: Provided, That such permits shall be allowed within or through any of said parks or any forest, military, Indian, or other reservation only upon the approval of the chief officer of the Department under whose supervision such park or reservation falls and upon a finding by him that the same is not incompatible with the public interest: Provided further, That all permits given hereunder for telegraph and telephone purposes shall be subject to the provision of title sixty-five of the Revised Statutes of the United States, and amendments thereto, regulating rights of way for telegraph companies over the public domain: And provided further, That any permission given by the Secretary of the Interior under the provisions of this Act may be revoked by him or his successor in his discretion, and shall not be held to confer any right, or easement, or interest in, to, or over any public land, reservation, or park. [31 Stat. L. 790.]

[XIX. MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS RELATING TO THE PUBLIC LANDS.]

Sec. 2447. [Patents to issue for claims heretofore confirmed.] In case of any claim to land in any State or Territory which has heretofore been confirmed by law, and in which no provision is made by the confirmatory statute for the issue of a patent, it may be lawful, where surveys for the land have been or may hereafter be made, to issue patents for the claims so confirmed, upon the presentation to the Commissioner of the General Land-Office of plats of survey thereof, duly approved by the surveyor-general of any State or Territory, if the same be found correct by the Commissioner. But such patents shall only operate as a relinquishment of title on the part of the United States, and shall in no manner interfere with any valid adverse right to the same land, nor be construed to preclude a legal investigation and decision by the proper judicial tribunal between adverse claimants to the same land. [R. S.]

Sections 2447-2490 constitute chapter 11 of title 32 of the Revised Statutes entitled as above.

Act directory, not mandatory.—This section does not require the issuance of a patent in any case, but only permits it, makes it lawful, and thereby leaves it to the discretionary judgment of the land department, to be guided by the particular circumstances of each case. (1864) 11 Op. Atty.-Gen. 47.

Act retrospective, not prospective.—This section, in express terms, limits the authority to issue patents to claims to lands theretofore confirmed by law. It makes no provision for claims confirmed at any time thereafter. (1863) 10 Op. Atty.-Gen. 507.

Construction of words "confirmed by law."—The words "confirmed by law" mean confirmation by the Act of that power which under our system enacts law, and not confirmation by mere construction of law, such as may exist at common law. Where by valid enactment the law-making power had declared the title to public land to be in a certain person prior to Dec. 22, 1854, the issuance of a patent therefor was authorized by this Act. It is the fact of a special legislative recognition and declaration of his title, and not the mere form of that recognition and declaration, which confers on the person a right to a patent under this Act. Hence a confirmation by treaty is a confirmation by law within the meaning of this Act, as a treaty is to be regarded as an Act of the legislature whenever it operates without the aid of any legislative provision. (1863) 10 Op. Atty.-Gen. 507.

Confirmation of claims to specific lands.

—This section applies only to the case of a claim to land "which has heretofore been confirmed by law." It has no application where there has been no claim confirmed to any specific tract of land, but only the grant of a right to locate anywhere within a specified territory. Shaw v. Kellogg, (1898) 170 U. S. 312, 342.

Patent for land in excess of quantity confirmed.—Where Congress passed an Act confirming a grant within certain named out-boundaries, and thereafter a patent therefor was issued under this section, pursuant to a survey made by the government, it was held that the United States could maintain a bill to set aside the patent for the fraud of the surveyors in so running the lines as to extend beyond the out-boundaries and include a large quantity of land which Congress did not intend to include in the confirmation of the grant, as no public officials have the right to give away, either directly or indirectly, public lands not granted by Congress. It was also held that purchasers after the issuance of the patent took with notice that Congress only confirmed the grant as originally petitioned for and that officers of the government had no authority to issue a patent for any land outside those boundaries. U. S. v. Maxwell Land-Grant Co., (1884) 21 Fed. Rep. 19.

Patent issued on survey not approved by surveyor-general is void.—Dulles v. Missionary Soc., (1879) 6 Fed. Rep. 356, 6 Sawy. (U. S.) 126, affirmed (1882) 107 U. S. 336.

Patent conveys title of United States only.—If the United States had, at the date of a patent issued under this section, no title to the lands described therein, the patent conveyed none, and is not conclusive of a controversy between conflicting claimants to the land. Missionary Soc. v. Dalles, (1882) 107 U. S. 336, affirming (1879) 6 Fed. Rep. 356, 6 Sawy. (U. S.) 126.

Sec. 2448. [Patents issued to persons who had died before issue, effect of.]

Where patents for public lands have been or may be issued, in pursuance of any law of the United States, to a person who had died, or who hereafter dies, before the date of such patent, the title to the land designated therein shall inure to and become vested in the heirs, devisees, or assignees of such deceased patentee as if the patent had issued to the deceased person during life. [R. S.]

Act of May 20, 1836, ch. 76, 5 Stat. L. 31.

Patent to deceased person inures to heirs.

—By this section Congress provided that a patent issued in the name of a deceased person should inure to the benefit of his heirs, as fully as if the grant had been perfected during the decedent's life, Galloway v. Fin- ley, (1838) 12 Pet. (U. S.) 264; Schedda v. Sawyer, (1846) 4 McLean (U. S.) 181.

"This is undoubtedly a proper statute, as it relieves from a mistake in behalf of heirs" Schedda v. Sawyer, (1846) 4 McLean (U. S.) 181.

Title inures to assignee of equitable title.

—The title inures under this Act to one claiming, not the legal, but the equitable, title existing when the patent issued; and in him the legal title is vested by the patent. Of course, an assignee, by a bona fide conveyance, would come in before a volunteer, such as an heir or devisee. Landes v. Brant (1850) 10 How. (U. S.) 348, 373; Crews v. Burcham, (1861) 1 Black (U. S.) 352.

Thus, as between the grantee of the decedent under a conveyance executed before issuance of the patent and the grantee of the heir under a deed executed after the issuance of the patent, the title of the former must prevail. Crews v. Burcham, (1861) 1 Black (U. S.) 352.

Patent issued under Oregon Donation Act. —If this section can be construed as applying to patents issued under the Act of Sept. 27, 1850 (commonly known as the Donation Act of Oregon), where the person originally entitled to the patent has died before the patent issues, its language must be construed in connection with, and be limited by, the provisions of the Donation Act giving the property of a deceased husband or wife to the survivor and children or heirs of the deceased unless otherwise disposed of by law; and in such case the patent must be held to inure to the persons designated in the Donation Act, instead of to the heirs solely as specified in this section. Davenport v. Lamb, (1871) 13 Wall. (U. S.) 418; Lamb v. Starr, (1867) Deady (U. S.) 447; Traver v. Tribou, (1883) 15 Fed. Rep. 25. See also Hershberger v. Blewett, (1892) 55 Fed. Rep. 170.

This Act has no application "to grants issued by alcaldes in the pueblo of San Francisco, whose authority never extended to the alienation of any public lands, but only to lands belonging to the pueblo." Montgomery v. Bevans, (1871) 1 Sawy. (U. S.) 663, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 9,735.

Sec. 2449. [Fee simple to pass in all grants of land to states and territories.] Where lands have been or may hereafter be granted by any law of Congress to any one of the several States and Territories, and where such law does not convey the fee-simple title of the lands, or require patents to be issued therefor, the list of such lands which have been or may hereafter be certified by the Commissioner of the General Land-Office, under the seal of his office, either as originals or copies of the originals or records shall be regarded as conveying the fee-simple of all the lands embraced in such lists that are of the character contemplated by such act of Congress, and intended to be granted thereby; but where lands embraced in such lists are not of the character embraced by such acts of Congress, and are not intended to be granted thereby, the lists, so far as these lands are concerned, shall be perfectly null and void and no right, title, claim, or interest shall be conveyed thereby. [R. S.]

Nature of grants to which section applies. —This section prescribes the duties of the commissioner of the general land office in regard to legislative grants where the law does not convey the fee-simple title or require patents to be issued for the lands. It does not apply to grants made under statutes vesting the fee-simple title in the states to which the lands are granted. (1857) 9 Op. Atty.-Gen. 41; (1874) 14 Op. Atty.-Gen. 617. Compare Carter v. Ruddy, (1897) 166 U. S. 493.

When granting Act requires issuance of patent. —Though, under some circumstances, a certification of a list of lands to the grantee operates to transfer title under the provisions of this section, whenever the granting Act specifically provides for the issuance of a patent the rule is that the legal title remains in the United States until the patent is issued. Michigan Land, etc., Co. v. Rust, (1897) 168 U. S. 589.

And it seems, notwithstanding the provisions of this section, a patent may, under some circumstances, be necessary to convey the legal title, though the granting statute does not in terms provide for the issuance of a patent. Carter v. Ruddy, (1897) 166 U. S. 493.

Certified list operates as patent. —A certified list issued under and pursuant to this section has the same force and effect as a patent. Leavenworth, etc., R. Co. v. U. S. (1875) 92 U. S. 733; Fraser v. O'Connor, (1885) 115 U. S. 102; Mower v. Fletcher, (1886) 116 U. S. 380; McCreery v. Haskell, (1886) 119 U. S. 327; Hough v. Buchanan, (1886) 27 Fed. Rep. 328; Buena Vista Petroleum Co. v. Tulare Oil etc., Co., (1895) 67 Fed. Rep. 226; Garrard v. Silver Peak Mines, (C. C. A. 1899) 94 Fed. Rep. 983.

The certified list operates on the state's selection as of the date when made and reported to the local land office, and cuts off all intervening claims in the same manner that a patent would. McCreery v. Haskell, (1886) 119 U. S. 327.

Certified list including land not embraced in grant. —The action of the officers of the land department in certifying a list including lands not embraced in the original grant transfers no title to the state, as they cannot enlarge the scope or operation of a grant made by Congress. Leavenworth, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1875) 92 U. S. 733; Weeks v. Bridgman, (1895) 159 U. S. 541, affirming (1889) 41 Minn. 352; Patterson v. Tatum, (1874) 3 Sawy. (U. S.) 164, 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,830; Sutton v. Fassett, (1875) 51

Cal. 12; McLaughlin v. Menotti, (1891) 89 Cal. 354; American Emigrant Co. v. Fuller, (1891) 83 Iowa 599.

Thus, the certified list is ineffectual to pass the title to land which was excluded from the operation of the grant because it had been reserved for the use of the Indians, Leavenworth, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1875) 92 U. S. 733; or had been included in a prior grant to aid in the construction of a railroad, Paterson v. Tatum, (1874) 3 Sawyer. (U. S.) 164, 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,830; McLaughlin v. Menotti, (1891) 89 Cal. 354; or had been entered previously under the pre-emption laws, Weeks v. Bridgman, (1895) 159 U. S. 541, affirming (1889) 41 Minn. 352.

Conclusiveness of certified list.—The certification by the commissioner of the general land office is a determination that the lands listed are of the character included in the grant, and is conclusive as against collateral attack. Buena Vista Petroleum Co. v. Tulare Oil, etc., Co., (1895) 67 Fed. Rep. 226.

List void because of character of land.—The provision that where lands embraced in certified lists are not of the character contemplated by the Act under which the selections were made by the state, the lists shall be null and void, can be made operative only by courts called in due course of law to consider the titles thus created. A succeeding secretary of the interior has no power to reverse the official action of his predecessor in certifying lands under the provisions of this section. (1892) 17 Op. Atty.-Gen. 406. See also Buena Vista Petroleum Co. v. Tulare Oil, etc., Co., (1895) 67 Fed. Rep. 226.

Sec. 2288. [Transfers by settlers before patent for public purposes.] Any bona fide settler under the pre-emption, homestead, or other settlement law shall have the right to transfer, by warranty against his own acts, any portion of his claim for church, cemetery, or school purposes, or for the right of way of railroads, canals, reservoirs, or ditches for irrigation or drainage across it; and the transfer for such public purposes shall in no way vitiate the right to complete and perfect the title to his claim. [R. S.]

This section was amended to read as above by the Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 561, sec. 3, 26 Stat. L. 1097. The section originally read as follows:

"SEC. 2288. [Right of transfer of settlers under homestead or pre-emption laws for certain public purposes.] Any person who has already settled or hereafter may settle on the public lands, either by pre-emption, or by virtue of the homestead law or any amendments thereto, shall have the right to transfer, by warranty against his own acts, any portion of his pre-emption or homestead for church, cemetery, or school purposes, or for the right of way of railroads across such pre-emption or homestead, and the transfer for such public purposes shall in no way vitiate the right to complete and perfect the title to their pre-emptions or homesteads." Act of March 3, 1873, ch. 266, 17 Stat. L. 602.

This section was a part of chapter 4 (entitled "Pre-emptions") of title 32 of the Revised Statutes. Such chapter, with the exception of certain sections expressly mentioned, was repealed by the Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 561, sec. 4. This section was not excepted, but was amended as above by section 3 of the same Act as above set out. See supra, p. 285.

Section applies only to actual occupants.—This section gives a homestead occupant the right to convey to a railroad a right of way across his homestead before his title is perfected, but it can have no application to a case where a person seeking to establish his claim to title under the homestead laws was not a homestead occupant when the railroad company entered and located its road. In such case the railroad is not required to acquire its right of way under the provisions of this section, if it has complied with the Act of March 3, 1875, 18 Stat. L. 482, as its right under that statute is superior to that of the person claiming under the homestead laws. Kinion v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., (1893) 118 Mo. 577. But see supra, div. XVIII. Right of Way Over Public Lands, and notes thereto.

Specific performance of agreement.—An agreement made by a homestead entryman, before the issuance of the patent, to convey to a railway company a right of way through the land entered by him, and also to convey five acres of such land for depot and other railroad purposes whenever he obtains his patent, if it has been acted on by the railway company, will, on the issuance of the patent, be specifically enforced as to the right of way and also as to so much of the five acres specified as was necessary for railroad purposes at the time of the agreement or as would be necessary for such purposes in the immediate future. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Tapp, (1897) 64 Ark. 357, Bunn, C. J., dissenting.

Grant of private way.—An agreement by a homestead entryman, before he has perfected his title, granting to private persons a private way over the land entered, is doubtless within the equity of this section. U. S. v. Reed, (1886) 28 Fed. Rep. 482.

Presumption that alienation was lawful.—When a person claiming adversely to a homestead entryman seeks to establish that the entryman forfeited his entry by conveying a portion of the land entered before issuance of the patent, the complaint must show affirmatively that the land was not conveyed for a purpose authorized by this section. Hays v. Steiger, (1888) 76 Cal. 555.

An act to authorize the issue of duplicate agricultural land scrip where the original has been lost or destroyed.

[Loss or destruction of agricultural college land scrip — new certificates.] That the provisions of the act of Congress of the twenty-third day of June, eighteen hundred and sixty, relating to the reissue of land warrants in certain cases, be, and the same are hereby, extended so as to include the reissue of agricultural-college land scrip lost, cancelled or destroyed without the fault of the owner thereof, under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe. [18 Stat. L. 111.]

The provisions of Act of June 23, 1860, ch. 203, referred to are incorporated into the Revised Statutes as sections 2441, 2442. See supra, p. 389.

An act obviating the necessity of issuing patents for certain private land-claims in the State of Missouri, and other purposes.

[SEC. 1.] [Confirmation of titles to lands in Missouri.] That all of the right, title, and interest of the United States in and to all of the lands in the State of Missouri which have at any time heretofore been confirmed to any person or persons by any act of Congress, or by any officer or officers, or board or boards of commissioners, acting under and by authority of any act of Congress, shall be, and the same are hereby, granted, released, and relinquished by the United States, in fee-simple, to the respective owners of the equitable titles thereto, and to their respective heirs and assigns forever, as fully and as completely, in every respect whatever, as could be done by patents issued therefor according to law. [18 Stat. L. 62.]

Act applies only to persons entitled to patents. — Sections 1 and 2 of this Act must be construed together; and when so construed it will be seen that the Act dispenses with the necessity of issuing patents for the lands referred to in all cases where the persons in interest are entitled by law to patents, but in no other case. Snyder v. Sickles, (1878) 98 U. S. 203.

Act does not apply where patent previously issued. — This Act refers only to those cases in which no patents have been issued previously, and does not cover a case where a patent had been issued and received in entire fulfillment of the obligations of the government. Sweringen v. St. Louis, (1902) 185 U. S. 38 (dictum).

SEC. 2. [Existing rights not affected.] That nothing contained in the first section of this act shall, in any manner, abridge, divest, impair, injure, or prejudice any valid right, title or interest of any person or persons in or to any portion or part of the lands mentioned in said first section; and this act shall in no wise affect any lands or lots heretofore relinquished to the United States. [18 Stat. L. 62.]

SEC. 3. [See supra, p. 257.]

An act defining the manner in which certain land-scrip may be assigned and located, or applied by actual settlers, and providing for the issue of patents in the name of the locator or his legal representatives.

[Act of Jan. 28, 1879, ch. 30, 20 Stat. L. 274.]

[SEC. 1.] [Private land claims in Florida, Louisiana, and Missouri — certificates for, issuance, subdivision, and assignment.] That whenever, in cases prosecuted under the acts of Congress of June twenty-second, eighteen hundred and sixty, March second, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, and the first section of the act of June tenth, eighteen hundred and seventy-two, providing for the adjustment of private land-claims in the States of Florida, Louisiana and Missouri, the validity of the claim has been, or shall be hereafter, recognized by the Supreme Court of the United States, and the court has decreed that the plaintiff or plaintiffs is or are entitled to enter a certain number of acres upon the public lands of the United States, subject to private entry at one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, or to receive certificate of location for as much of the land the title to which has been established as has been disposed of by the United States, certificate of location shall be issued by the Commissioner of the General Land Office attested by the seal of said office, to be located as provided for in the sixth section of the aforesaid act of Congress of June twenty-second, eighteen hundred and sixty, or applied according to the provisions of the second section of this act; and said certificate of location or scrip shall be subdivided according to the request of the confirmer or confirmeres, and, as nearly as practicable, in conformity with the legal divisions and subdivisions of the public lands of the United States, and shall be, and are hereby declared to be, assignable by deed or instrument of writing, according to the form and pursuant to regulations prescribed by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, so as to vest the assignee with all the rights of the original owners of the scrip, including the right to locate the scrip in his own name. [20 Stat. L. 274.]

SEC. 2. [Certificates receivable for pre-emption and homestead claims.] That such scrip shall be received from actual settlers only in payment of pre-emption claims or in commutation of homestead claims, in the same manner and to the same extent as is now authorized by law in the case of military bounty-land warrants. [20 Stat. L. 275.]

SEC. 3. [Location of certificate, entry, and patent.] That the register of the proper land-office, upon any such certificate being located, shall issue, in the name of the party making the location, a certificate of entry, upon which, if it shall appear to the satisfaction of the Commissioner of the General Land Office that such certificate has been fairly obtained, according to the true intent and meaning of this act, a patent shall issue, as in other cases, in the name of the locator or his legal representative. [20 Stat. L. 275.]

Extension of section. — See Act of May 20, 1894, ch. 87, infra.

SEC. 4. [Provisions applicable to indemnity certificates under Act of 1858, ch. 81.] That the provisions of this act respecting the assignment and patenting of scrip and its application to pre-emption and homestead claims shall apply to the indemnity-certificates of location provided for by the act of the second of June, eighteen hundred and fifty-eight, entitled "An act to provide for the location of certain confirmed private land-claims in the State of Missouri, and for other purposes." [20 Stat. L. 275.]

An act supplementary to the Act of Congress approved January twenty-eighth, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, entitled "An Act defining the manner in which certain land scrip may be assigned and located or applied by actual settlers, and providing for the issue of patents in the name of the locator or his legal representatives."

[Patents for certain land-scrip locations.] That it shall be lawful for the Commissioner of the General Land Office to cause patents to be issued, as evidence of title, for all valid locations made with land scrip issued pursuant to decrees of the Supreme Court of the United States, which valid locations were made prior to the approval of the aforesaid Act in the same manner that patents are now issued under the provisions of section three of said Act of January twenty-eighth, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine. [28 Stat. L. 84.]

The Act of Jan. 28, 1879, above mentioned is given supra, p. 517.

Lands in California.—The Act of June 19, 1878, ch. 320, 20 Stat. L. 172, authorized "claimants to lands situated in Santa Barbara county, California, known as the Rancho Las Cruces, who retrain [sic] title through the original Mexican grantee of said rancho * * * to present their claim to said lands to the District Court of the United States for the District of California for examination and adjudication."

An Act To quiet title and possession with respect to certain unconfirmed and located private land claims in the State of Louisiana.

[SEC. 1.] [Certain located private land claims in Louisiana confirmed.] That all the right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the lands situate in the State of Louisiana, known as the located but unconfirmed private land claims therein, aggregating about eighty thousand acres, and specifically described in the list or tabular statement accompanying the report, dated February nineteenth, eighteen hundred and eighty, made by the surveyor-general of Louisiana to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, under a resolution of the United States Senate of December second, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, and which report and list were communicated to the Senate by the Secretary of the Interior on March eighth, eighteen hundred and eighty, as Senate Executive Document Numbered One hundred and eleven, Forty-sixth Congress, second session, shall be, and the same are hereby, directed to be granted, released, and relinquished by the United States, in fee simple, to the respective owners of the equitable titles thereto, and to their respective heirs and assigns forever, as fully and completely, in every respect whatever, as could be done by patents issued therefor according to law. [29 Stat. L. 517.]

SEC. 2. [Only United States title relinquished.] That nothing contained in this Act shall in any manner abridge, divest, impair, injure, or prejudice any valid right, title, or interest of any person or persons in or to any portion or part of the lands mentioned in said first section, the true intent of this Act being to relinquish and abandon, grant, give, and concede any and all right, interest, and estate, in law or equity, which the United States is or is supposed to be entitled to in said lands, in favor of all persons, estates, firms, or corporations who would be the true and lawful owners of the same under the laws of Louisiana, including the laws of prescription, in the absence of the said interest and estate of the United States. [29 Stat. L. 518.]

SEC. 3. [Patents to issue.] That the Department of the Interior shall cause patents to issue for such lands, and such patents shall issue in the name of the original claimant as appears in the list or schedule aforesaid, and when issued shall be held to be for the use and benefit of the true and lawful owners as provided in sections one and two of this Act. [29 Stat. L. 518.]

An act prescribing limitations of time for completion of title to certain lands disposed of under the Act of Congress approved September twenty-seventh, eighteen hundred and fifty, and the Acts amendatory and supplemental thereto, and commonly known as the "Donation Act," and for the protection of purchasers and occupants on said lands.

[SEC. 1.] [Oregon donation lands — extension of time for proving claims — patents — bona fide settlers on abandoned claims.] That in all cases where persons under the provisions of the Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create the office of surveyor-general of the public lands in Oregon, and to provide for the survey and to make donations to settlers of the said public lands," approved September twenty-seventh, eighteen hundred and fifty, or the various Acts amendatory and supplemental thereto, have made proof of settlement on tracts of land in either of the States of Oregon, Washington, or Idaho, and given notice, as required by law, that they claimed such lands as donations, but have failed to execute and file in the proper land offices proof of their continued residence on and cultivation of the lands so settled upon and claimed, so as to entitle them to patents therefor, such claimants, their heirs, devisees and grantees shall have, and they are hereby given, until the first day of January, eighteen hundred and ninety-six, the right to make and file final proofs and fully establish their rights to donations of lands under the aforesaid Act of Congress, and no longer; and all claimants who shall fail to make and file final proof and perfect their claims to lands, as donations under the Acts aforesaid, before the said first day of January, eighteen hundred and ninety-six, shall thereafter be held to have abandoned their claims to the lands embraced in their notices: Provided, That as soon as practicable after the passage of this Act notices shall be published at least once a week for six successive weeks in one newspaper of general circulation published in the land district, in a form to be prescribed by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, requiring such donation claimants, their heirs, devisees, and grantees, and all persons making claim to such donation claims, to appear and make final proof for such claims within the time herein provided, and that in default of such final proof such donation claims will be held to have been abandoned and the lands embraced therein shall be, and are hereby, restored to the public domain and shall be subject to disposal under the then existing laws providing for the disposition of the public lands: Provided further, That where any such donation claims or any part thereof are claimed by descent, devise, judicial sale, grant, or conveyance, in good faith, under the original claimant, and are, at the date of this Act and for twenty years prior thereto have been, in the quiet adverse possession of such heir, devisee, grantee, or purchaser, or those under whom they claim, such heirs, devisees, grantees, or purchasers, upon making proof of their claims and adverse possession as aforesaid, shall be entitled to patents for the land so claimed and occupied by them: Provided further, That where any portion of any such abandoned donation claim shall have been settled upon prior to January first, eighteen hundred and ninety-four, by any person under an erroneous claim of right and has been used as a bona fide residence by such settler where final proof shall not be made by the original claimant, or his heirs, devisees or grantees, as aforesaid, and such settler has exhausted his or her homestead right, such settler may, within ninety days from the first day of January, eighteen hundred and ninety-six, file with the register of the land office of the district within which the lands are situate their affidavit and the affidavits of at least two disinterested witnesses establishing the facts of their bona fide settlement, occupancy, and improvement of said lands, and pay to the receiver of the proper land office one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre for the land so settled upon, occupied, and improved, not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres, and shall thereupon receive patent therefor. [28 Stat. L. 122.]

SEC. 2. [Hearings by Commissioner as to abandonment — expenses.] That nothing in this Act shall be so construed as to deprive the Commissioner of the General Land Office, under the regulations governing contests in land cases, of his right, if such right now exists, to allow or direct hearings to be instituted to show that a donation claimant has abandoned the lands described in his notice, or prevent the Commissioner, when it is proven that such a claim is invalid or abandoned, from canceling the same upon the official records and thereafter disposing of the lands as a part of the public domain: Provided, That where hearings are allowed contestants shall pay the expenses incident thereto in the same manner that costs are paid in other contested land entries; and this Act shall not be construed to affect any case now pending before the Land Department in which final proof has been furnished. [28 Stat. L. 122.]

SEC. 3. [Regulations.] That the Commissioner of the General Land Office, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, shall issue the necessary rules and regulations to give full force and effect to the provisions of this Act. Nothing in this Act contained shall be construed to impair or affect any adverse claims arising under any law of the United States other than said Donation Act, to or in respect of the lands in this Act referred to. [28 Stat. L. 123.]

An Act To confirm certain cash entries of public lands.

[Act of Jan. 30, 1897, ch. 111, 29 Stat. L. 507.]

[SEC. 1.] [Certain entries under Act of Aug. 4, 1854, ch. 244, confirmed.] That all entries of the public lands made under the provisions of the Act entitled "An Act to graduate and reduce the price of the public lands to actual settlers and cultivators," approved August fourth, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, which are illegal and invalid because of the fact that the lands covered thereby had never been offered for sale, be, and the same are hereby, confirmed, if, upon examination by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, the same are found to be otherwise regular and in compliance with said Act and the Acts supplemental thereto. [29 Stat. L. 507.]

"In House Report No. 1526, 54th Cong., 1st sess., the following explanation of the purpose of this Act is given:

"The bill is necessary in order to enable the Commissioner of the General Land Office to pass to patent certain graduation entries which have been suspended as technically invalid because the lands represented in the purchases had never been offered at public sale. So far as the committee has been informed these entries exist in Arkansas, south of the old Louisiana boundary line and north of the new line authorized by the Act of May 19, 1828, but it is general in its application." Compilers' note, 2 Supp. R. S. 545.

SEC. 2. [Repeal.] That all acts or parts of acts in conflict herewith are hereby repealed. [29 Stat. L. 507.]

An Act For relief of occupants of lands included in the Algodones grant, in Arizona.

[Algodones grant in Arizona — Preamble.] Whereas the title to the lands in that section of the country in the county of Yuma and the Territory of Arizona, and included within the boundaries of the old Mexican land grant known as the Algodones grant, was tried by the United States Court of Private Land Claims, created for the settlement of titles to such grants, in the years eighteen hundred and ninety-five and eighteen hundred and ninety-six; and

Whereas in the hearing of said contest before said court the alleged grantees under said grant were successful and their title thereto by said trial court confirmed, and immediately thereafter the said alleged grantees, for large and valuable considerations, sold to numbers of people, citizens and bona fide settlers on said lands, in tracts of less than forty acres to each, and said settlers, then believing that they had a bona fide title to said lands sold, made lasting and valuable improvements and permanent homes thereon; and

Whereas the Government of the United States appealed said cause from the decision of said court below, and on said appeal the said decision of the said court below was reversed, and the title to said grant in said alleged grantees adjudged to be void, and that the said lands included within the boundaries of said grant, and sold as aforesaid, belonged to the United States; and if said settlers, citizens, and occupants of said lands who so purchased the same as aforesaid be not permitted to retain the same, and pay the Government therefor, they will be deprived of their homes, at ruinous consequences to them: Therefore, [31 Stat. L. 729.]

[SEC. 1.] [Rights of purchasers from claimants.] That where such persons in good faith and for valuable considerations purchased from the grant claimants prior to May twenty-third, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, portions of the land covered by the said grant, and have occupied and improved the same, such persons may, within six months from and after the passage of this Act, or within three months after the said lands shall be restored to entry, purchase the same at the price of one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, upon making proof of the facts required by this Act under regulations to be provided by the Commissioner of the General Land Office and approved by the Secretary of the Interior, joint entries being admissible where two or more persons have purchased lands on the same forty-acre tract: Provided, That no one person shall purchase more than forty acres, and no purchase shall be allowed for a less quantity than that contained in the smallest legal subdivision. [31 Stat. L. 730.]

SEC. 2. [Rights of settlers.] That where persons duly qualified to make entry under the homestead or desert-land laws have occupied any of said lands with the intention of entering the same under the homestead or desert-land laws, such persons shall be allowed three months from and after the passage of this Act, or after the said lands shall be restored to entry, within which to make their entries, and the fact that such persons have imp[r]oved or reclaimed such desert lands shall be no bar to their making such entries. [31 Stat. L. 730.]

An act for the benefit of occupying claimants.

[Remedies for improvements where occupying claimant's title adjudged invalid.] That when an occupant of land, having color of title, in good faith has made valuable improvements thereon, and is, in the proper action, found not to be the rightful owner thereof, such occupant shall be entitled in the Federal courts to all the rights and remedies, and, upon instituting the proper proceedings, such relief as may be given or secured to him by the statutes of the State or Territory where the land lies, although the title of the plaintiff in the action may have been granted by the United States after said improvements were so made. [18 Stat. L. 50.]

This Act has no application to land the title of which has not passed from the United States. A homestead filing does not convey "color of title" within the meaning of the Act; nor can a person whose homestead entry has been canceled for fraud in its inception avail himself of the benefits of the Act. Woodruff v. Wallace, (1895) 3 Okla. 355.

Sec. 2450. [Cases of "suspended entries of public lands" and "suspended pre-emption land-claims."] The Commissioner of the General Land-Office is authorized to decide upon principles of equity and justice, as recognized in courts of equity, and in accordance with regulations to be settled by the Secretary of the Interior, the Attorney-General, and the Commissioner, conjointly, consistently with such principles, all cases of suspended entries of public lands and of suspended pre-emption land-claims, and to adjudge in what cases patents shall issue upon the same. [R. S.]

Act of Aug. 3, 1846, ch. 78, 9 Stat. L. 51; Act of March 3, 1853, ch. 152, 10 Stat. L. 258; Act of June 26, 1856, ch. 47, 11 Stat. L. 22.

This and section 2451 following were amended by the Act of Feb. 27, 1877, ch. 69, 19 Stat. L. 244 by inserting the words "Secretary of the Interior," in place of the words "Secretary of the Treasury" appearing in the section as originally enacted.

Construction of R. S. 2450-2457 — effect on ordinary jurisdiction of land officers. — The purpose of R. S. 2450-2457 "is, where the law has been substantially complied with, to authorize the confirmation of entries which otherwise the land officers would be compelled to reject because of errors or informalities which, if satisfactorily explained as arising from ignorance, accident, or mistake, would, in the absence of an adverse claim, be excused by the courts, in administering the principles of equity and justice. The purpose of the legislation was not to limit or restrict the general or ordinary jurisdiction of the land officers. It was rather to supplement that jurisdiction by authorizing them to apply the principles of equity, for the purpose of saving from rejection and cancellation a class of entries deemed meritorious by Congress, but which could not be sustained and carried to patent under existing land laws. There was no necessity for legislation authorizing the rejection or cancellation of irregular entries, but legislation was necessary to save such entries from rejection or cancellation when otherwise meritorious. Primarily the decision and adjudication of suspended entries is, under sections 2450 and 2451, as theretofore, left with the commissioner of the general land office, except that he is to be guided by the principles of equity and justice and by the regulations settled by the secretary of the interior, the attorney-general, and the commissioner conjointly. The only question is whether all decisions of the commissioner upon such suspended entries must be submitted to the secretary of the interior and the attorney-general, acting as a board, for approval. If the matter rested upon section 2450 and the first part of section 2451, it might well be contended that a decision rejecting or canceling a suspended entry should, equally with a decision sustaining such an entry, be submitted to the board for approval. But the latter part of section 2451 does not sustain that view. It is there declared that 'every such adjudication,' if approved by the board, 'shall operate only to divest the United States of the title of the lands embraced thereby.' A decision merely rejecting or canceling the entry could not, with or without the approval of the board, have the effect of divesting the United States of its title. That effect could only flow from a decision sustaining the entry, and since the effect of a decision by the commissioner such as is required to be submitted to the board and of an approval thereof by the board, is to divest the United States of its title, it follows that only decisions sustaining irregular entries are required to be submitted to the board for its approval. Decisions rejecting or canceling such entries have the force and effect otherwise accorded to them by the general land laws, and are subject to the appellate or supervisory authority of the secretary of the interior as in other instances. The reasons for requiring the approval by the secretary of the interior and the attorney-general of decisions of the commissioner sustaining irregular entries, under this exceptional legislation, do not apply to decisions rejecting and canceling such entries. In the one instance claims to public lands are sustained, although acquired in an irregular manner, while in the other such claims are rejected and the public title preserved." Hawley v. Diller, (1900) 178 U. S. 477, affirming (C. C. A. 1897) 81 Fed. Rep. 651, reversing (1896) 15 Fed. Rep. 946. See also California Redwood Co. v. Little, (1897) 79 Fed. Equitable relief against entryman's ignorance or mistake. — "The provisions of sections 2450-2457 Rev. Stat. U. S., creating a board of equitable adjudication, and vesting it with jurisdiction to decide, upon principles of equity and justice, that a patent may issue, notwithstanding the entryman may not have strictly complied with the terms of the statute, if such failure is shown to have resulted from ignorance, accident, or mistake, is in effect a declaration that, so far as the government is concerned, the equitable claim of the entryman, if established to the satisfaction of that board, shall be sufficient answer to any claim on the part of the government that the statute has not been strictly complied with. * * * In these sections Congress has declared that, if there is no adverse claim to the land, the entryman may set up an equitable defense to a claim by the government, or any one on its behalf, that he has failed to comply with the terms of the statute; and if in the opinion of the commissioner such equitable defense is established and his opinion is approved by this board, a patent for the land shall issue, notwithstanding his failure to comply strictly with the requirements of the statute. The entryman is thus given a right to have his equitable claim adjudicated by the commissioner, and, if determined in his favor, he has the further right to have his decision submitted to the board of equitable adjudication, as provided in section 2457, and if that board approves the decision he becomes entitled to a patent." Gage v. Gunther, (1902) 136 Cal. 338.

Statute does not cover mistakes of law.—This Act is intended to relieve against ignorance or mistake in a matter of fact, and not of law. Every man is conclusively presumed to know the law, and a mistake in the law is not a ground of equitable relief. Hence the statute does not authorize the confirmation of an erroneous or informal entry or location, made in ignorance or mistake of matters of law and not of fact. (1860) 9 Op. Atty-Gen. 511.

Land entered or sold without lawful authority.—This Act applies "only to entries or sales suspended on account of error or informality arising from ignorance, accident, or mistake, and where the law has been substantially complied with, but not to cases where there can be no lawful entry or sale, in consequence of the total absence of lawful authority." (1856) 8 Op. Atty-Gen. 16.

Sale of lands withdrawn from private entry.—Where certain lands were withdrawn from private entry, and thereafter the commissioner of the general land office ordered notice to be given, by advertisement, restoring a portion thereof to private entry, and, pending the advertisement, erroneously instructed the register and receiver that certain other lands were included in such notice, whereupon they were entered and paid for, the attorney-general held that the facts were sufficient to give the board of adjudication of suspended entries jurisdiction of the claim of the entrymen to patents for the land entered by them, and that if, on investigation, the board should find that due publicity had been given to the fact of restoration, it might disregard the forms (though adopted inadvertently) by which that publicity was attained. (1874) 14 Op. Atty-Gen. 636.

In a subsequent opinion the attorney-general doubted whether any notice of restoration was necessary to confer jurisdiction on the board. (1874) 14 Op. Atty-Gen. 645.

Sec. 2451. [Adjudications under above, how approved.] Every such adjudication shall be approved by the Secretary of the Interior and the Attorney-General, acting as a board; and shall operate only to divest the United States of the title of the lands embraced thereby, without prejudice to the rights of conflicting claimants. [R. S.]

Act of Aug. 3, 1846, ch. 78, 9 Stat. L. 51. See note under section 2450, supra.

This section was amended to read as above given by the Act of Feb. 27, 1877, ch. 69. The amendment consisted in substituting the words "Secretary of the Interior" for "Secretary of the Treasury."

Conclusiveness of adjudications.—As the board created by this Act is a special tribunal, with full powers to examine and decide the questions submitted to it under the Act, and as there is no provision for an appeal to any other jurisdiction, the adjudications of the board are final within the law. Foley v. Harrison, (1853) 15 How. (U. S.) 433.

Sec. 2452. [Repealed.]

This section was as follows:

"Sec. 2452. [Report of adjudications under preceding sections.] The Commissioner is directed to report to Congress at the first session after any such adjudications have been made a list of the same under the classes prescribed by law, with a statement of the principles upon which each class was determined." Act of Aug. 3, 1846, ch. 78, 9 Stat. L. 51.

It was directly repealed by the Act of March 2, 1895, ch. 177, sec. 3, supra, p. 218.

Sec. 2453. [Decisions to be arranged into classes.] The Commissioner shall arrange his decisions into two classes; the first class to embrace all such cases of equity as may be finally confirmed by the board, and the second class to embrace all such cases as the board reject and decide to be invalid. [R. S.]

Act of Aug. 3, 1846, ch. 78, 9 Stat. L. 51.

Sec. 2454. [Patents to issue for lands in the first class, and lands in second class to revert to the United States.] For all lands covered by claims which are placed in the first class, patents shall issue to the claimants; and all lands embraced by claims placed in the second class shall ipso facto revert to, and become part of, the public domain. [R. S.]

Sec. 2455. [Commissioner to order into market lands of second class.]

It shall be lawful for the Commissioner of the General Land Office to order into market and sell for not less than one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre any isolated or disconnected tract or parcel of the public domain less than one quarter section which in his judgment it would be proper to expose to sale after at least thirty days' notice by the land officers of the district in which such lands may be situated: Provided, That lands shall not become so isolated or disconnected until the same have been subject to homestead entry for a period of three years after the surrounding land has been entered, filed upon, or sold by the Government: Provided, That not more than one hundred and sixty acres shall be sold to any one person. [R. S.]

This section was amended to read as above by the Act of Feb. 26, 1895, ch. 133, 28 Stat. L. 687.

The section originally read as follows:

"Sec. 2455. It may be lawful for the Commissioner of the General Land-Office to order into market, after due notice, without the formality and expense of a proclamation of the President, all lands of the second class, though heretofore unproclaimed and unoffered, and such other isolated or disconnected tracts or parcels of unoffered lands which, in his judgment, it would be proper to expose to sale in like manner. But public notice of at least thirty days shall be given by the land-officers of the district in which such lands may be situated, pursuant to the directions of the Commissioner." Act of Aug. 3, 1846, ch. 78, 9 Stat. L. 51.

Sec. 2456. [Patents surrendered and new ones issued in certain cases.]

Where patents have been already issued on entries which are confirmed by the officers who are constituted the board of adjudication, the Commissioner of the General Land-Office, upon the canceling of the outstanding patent, is authorized to issue a new patent, on such confirmation, to the person who made the entry, his heirs or assigns. [R. S.]

Act of March 3, 1853, ch. 152, 10 Stat. L. 258.

Surrender and cancellation of outstanding patent.—In the case of a voidable entry of public land, on which a patent has been issued, when the action of the board of equitable adjudication is invoked with a view of obtaining the issuance of a new patent under the provisions of this section, a surrender of the outstanding patent should accompany the application or be made before the entry is acted on by the board. The outstanding patent, when surrendered, need not be canceled until after confirmation of the entry; it is sufficient if the cancellation take place prior to the issuance of the new patent. (1888) 19 Op. Atty.-Gen. 188.

Sec. 2457. [Extent of foregoing provisions.]

The preceding provisions from section twenty-four hundred and fifty to section twenty-four hundred and fifty-six, inclusive, shall be applicable to all cases of suspended entries and locations, which have arisen in the General Land-Office since the twenty-sixth day of June, eighteen hundred and fifty-six, as well as to all cases of a similar kind which may hereafter occur, embracing as well locations under bounty-land warrants as ordinary entries or sales, including homestead entries and pre-emption locations or cases; where the law has been substantially complied with, and the error or informality arose from ignorance, accident, or mistake which is satisfactorily explained; and where the rights of no other claimant or pre-emptor are prejudiced, or where there is no adverse claim. [R. S.]

Act of June 26, 1856, ch. 47, 11 Stat. L. 22.

SEC. 7. [Suspension of entry for correction of clerical errors.] That whenever it shall appear to the Commissioner of the General Land Office that a clerical error has been committed in the entry of any of the public lands such entry may be suspended, upon proper notification to the claimant, through the local land office, until the error has been corrected; and all entries made under the preemption, homestead, desert-land, or timber-culture laws, in which final proof and payment may have been made and certificates issued, and to which there are no adverse claims originating prior to final entry and which have been sold or incumbered prior to the first day of March, eighteen hundred and eighty-eight, and after final entry, to bona-fide purchasers, or incumbrancers, for a valuable consideration, shall unless upon an investigation by a Government Agent, fraud on the part of the purchaser has been found, be confirmed and patented upon presentation of satisfactory proof to the Land Department of such sale or incumbrance: Provided, That after the lapse of two years from the date of the issuance of the receiver's receipt upon the final entry of any tract of land under the homestead, timber-culture, desert-land, or pre-emption laws, or under this act, and when there shall be no pending contest or protest against the validity of such entry, the entryman shall be entitled to a patent conveying the land by him entered, and the same shall be issued to him, but this proviso shall not be construed to require the delay of two years from the date of said entry before the issuing of a patent therefor. [26 Stat. L. 1098.]

This and section 8 following are from the Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 561, "An Act to repeal timber-culture laws, and for other purposes."

Act applies to existing entries only.—The provision for the issuance of patents to bona fide purchasers or incumbrancers applies only to entries existing at the time of the passage of the Act and does not apply in a case where the land department canceled the entry before the passage of the Act. Parsons v. Venzke, (1896) 164 U. S. 89; Guaranty Sav. Bank v. Bladow, (1900) 176 U. S. 448; Pfund v. Valley L. & T. Co., (1897) 52 Neb. 473; Caldwell v. Bush, (1896) 6 Wyo. 342.

But where on Feb. 25, 1891, the commissioner of the general land office canceled a pre-emption entry, and on March 26, 1891, the entryman's purchaser applied to the commissioner to have the entry declared confirmed by virtue of this Act on the ground that he was a bona fide purchaser of the land within the meaning of the Act, and thereupon the commissioner granted an order suspending the order of cancellation of Feb. 25, 1891, and staying all proceedings thereunder, and subsequently the commissioner after taking proof decided that the purchaser was a bona fide purchaser, and declared the entry confirmed by virtue of this Act, and this decision was confirmed on appeal by the secretary of the interior and a patent was issued pursuant to the decision, it was held that the entry was never canceled, and that the purchaser was entitled to the benefits of this Act. Graham v. Great Falls Water Power, etc., Co., (Mont. 1904) 76 Pac. Rep. 808.

Act protects bona fide purchasers only.—This Act was a remedial statute—a statute of repose. It was intended to protect bona fide purchasers only. It extended no clemency or protection to the fraudulent entryman. That Congress intended that the Act should cut off pending contests where the lands were in possession of bona fide purchasers is hardly open to question, in view of the language employed. Graham v. Great Falls Water Power, etc., Co., (Mont. 1904) 76 Pac. Rep. 808.

Entry made for benefit of purchaser.—It would seem that a purchaser is not entitled to a patent under the provisions of the second clause of this section, where it is established to the satisfaction of the land office that a desert land entry was made, not for the benefit of the entryman, but for the benefit of such purchaser. Caldwell v. Bush, (1896) 6 Wyo. 342.

SEC. 8. [Suits to annul patents—limitation.] That suits by the United States to vacate and annul any patent heretofore issued shall only be brought within five years from the passage of this act, and suits to vacate and annul patents hereafter issued shall only be brought within six years after the date of the issuance of such patents. * * * [26 Stat. L. 1099, 26 Stat. L. 1093.]

See note under section 7, supra.

The omitted part of the section relates to timber depredations, and is amended by Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 559, 26 Stat. L. 1093, and later Acts. See TIMBER LANDS AND FOREST RESERVES. The amendments do not change that part of the section above given.

Partition suit by entryman's heirs.—This section refers only to suits by the United States to vacate and annul patents, and does not apply to a suit brought by the heirs of one who entered public land to partition the land entered. Holloman v. Bullock, (1903) 82 Miss. 405.

[Secretary of Interior may negotiate with Indians for cession of lands.]

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized, in his discretion, to negotiate, through any United States Indian inspector, agreements with any Indians for the cession to the United States of portions of their respective reservations or surplus unallotted lands, any agreements thus negotiated to be subject to subsequent ratification by Congress. Sec. 2471. [The false making, altering, etc., of any instrument in writing, etc., concerning lands, etc., in California, penalty.] Every person who falsely makes, alters, forges, or counterfeits, or causes or procures to be falsely made, altered, forged, or counterfeited; or willingly aids and assists in the false making, altering, forging, or counterfeiting any petition, certificate, order, report, decree, concession, denouncement, deed, patent, confirmation, diseño, map, expediente or part of an expediente, or any title-paper, or evidence of right, title, or claim to lands, mines, or minerals in California, or any instrument of writing whatever in relation to lands or mines or minerals in the State of California, for the purpose of setting up or establishing against the United States any claim, right, or title to lands, mines, or minerals within the State of California, or for the purpose of enabling any person to set up or establish any such claim; and every person, who, for such purpose, utters or publishes as true and genuine any such false, forged, altered, or counterfeited petition, certificate, order, report, decree, concession, denouncement, deed, patent, confirmation, diseño, map, expediente or part of an expediente, title-paper, evidence of right, title, or claim to lands or mines or minerals in the State of California, or any instrument of writing whatever in relation to lands or mines or minerals in the State of California, shall be punishable by imprisonment at hard labor not less than three years and not more than ten years, and by a fine of not more than ten thousand dollars. Sec. 2472. [Falsely dating any evidence of title under Mexican authority, etc., to lands in California, penalty.] Every person who makes, or causes or procures to be made, or willingly aids and assists in making any falsely dated petition, certificate, order, report, decree, concession, denouncement, deed, patent, confirmation, diseño, map, expediente or part of an expediente, or any title-paper, or written evidence of right, title, or claim, under Mexican authority, to any lands, mines, or minerals in the State of California, or any instrument of writing in relation to lands or mines or minerals in the State of California, having a false date, or falsely purporting to be made by any Mexican officer or authority prior to the seventh day of July, eighteen hundred and forty-six, for the purpose of setting up or establishing any claim against the United States to lands or mines or minerals within the State of California, or of enabling any person to set up or establish any such claim; and every person who signs his name as governor, secretary, or other public officer acting under Mexican authority, to any instrument of writing falsely purporting to be a grant, concession, or denouncement under Mexican authority, and during its existence in California, of lands, mines, or minerals, or falsely purporting to be an informe, report, record, confirmation, or other proceeding on an application for a grant, concession, or denouncement under Mexican authority, during its existence in California, of lands, mines, or minerals, shall be punishable as prescribed in the preceding section. [R. S.]

Act of May 18, 1858, ch. 40, 11 Stat. L. 291.

Sec. 2473. [Presenting false or counterfeited evidences of title, etc., to lands in California, and prosecuting suits thereon, penalty.] Every person who, for the purpose of setting up or establishing any claim against the United States to lands, mines, or minerals within the State of California, presents, or causes or procures to be presented, before any court, judge, commission, or commissioner, or other officer of the United States, any false, forged, altered, or counterfeited petition, certificate, order, report, decree, concession, denouncement, deed, patent, diseño, map, expediente or part of an expediente, title-paper, or written evidence of right, title, or claim to lands, minerals, or mines in the State of California, knowing the same to be false, forged, altered, or counterfeited, or any falsely dated petition, certificate, order, report, decree, concession, denouncement, deed, patent, confirmation, diseño, map, expediente or part of an expediente, title-paper, or written evidence of right, title, or claim to lands, mines, or minerals in California, knowing the same to be falsely dated; and every person who prosecutes in any court of the United States, by appeal or otherwise, any claim against the United States for lands, mines, or minerals in California, which claim is founded upon, or evidenced by, any petition, certificate, order, report, decree, concession, denouncement, deed, patent, confirmation, diseño, map, expediente or part of an expediente, title-paper, or written evidence of right, title, or claim, which has been forged, altered, counterfeited, or falsely dated, knowing the same to be forged, altered, counterfeited, or falsely dated, shall be punishable as prescribed in section twenty-four hundred and seventy-one. [R. S.]

Act of May 18, 1858, ch. 40, 11 Stat. L. 291.

Sec. 5411. [Altering, etc., records in surveyor-general's office in California.] Every person who, without lawful authority, willfully takes from the archives of the surveyor-general's office in California, any expediente, map, diseño, book, paper, writing, record, document, seal, stamp, or die; or willfully alters, defaces, mutilates, injures, or destroys any expediente, book, paper, map, diseño, instrument of writing, document, record, seal, stamp, or die, deposited in such archives; or conceals or unlawfully withholds from the possession of the surveyor-general, or on demand refuses to deliver to him any expediente, map, diseño, official book, paper, writing, document, archive, record, seal, stamp, or die relating to or used in the administration of government in the department of Upper California, and belonging to the government during the existence of Spanish or Mexican authority in that department; or who willfully alters, defaces, mutilates, makes away with, or destroys any such official book, expediente, map, diseño, paper, writing, document, archive, record, seal, stamp, or die, shall pay a fine of not more than ten thousand dollars, and be imprisoned for a term not more than ten years. [R. S.]

Act of May 18, 1858, ch. 39, 11 Stat. L. 290.

Sec. 5412. [Deposit of fraudulent papers in archives.] Every person who secretly or fraudulently places, or causes to be placed, in or among the archives of the surveyor-general's office in California, any expediente, book, paper, diseño, map, draught, record, or any instrument of writing purporting to be a petition, decree, order, report, concession, grant, confirmation, map, diseño, expediente or part of an expediente, denouncement, title-paper, or evidence of right, title, or claim to any land, mine, or mineral, or any book, writing, paper, or document whatever, shall pay a fine of not more than five thousand dollars, or be imprisoned for a term not more than three years; or be both fined and imprisoned within such limits. [R. S.]

Sec. 2476. [Navigable rivers. See RIVERS, HARBORS, AND CANALS.]

Sec. 2477. [See div. XVIII. Right of Way Over Public Lands.]

Sec. 2478. [Power of Commissioner of Land Office to enforce this title.] The Commissioner of the General Land-Office, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, is authorized to enforce and carry into execution, by appropriate regulations, every part of the provisions of this Title not otherwise specially provided for. [R. S.]

Commissioner clothed with large powers.—The commissioner, in the exercise of his superintendence over surveyors-general, and all other subordinate officers of the bureau, is clothed with large powers of control to prevent the consequences of inadvertence, mistakes, irregularity, and fraud in their operations. Cragin v. Powell, (1888) 128 U. S. 691. See also Bell v. Hearne, (1856) 19 How. (U. S.) 252.

Power to establish a uniform practice is given by this section to the officers of the land department. Germania Iron Co. v. James, (C. C. A. 1898) 89 Fed. Rep. 811.

Regulations having force and effect of law.—The rules and regulations adopted by the commissioner of the general land office under this section have all the force and effect of a law of the United States. Peters v. U. S., (1894) 2 Okla. 116.

Judicial notice taken of regulations.—The courts will take judicial notice of the regulations adopted by the commissioner of the several land offices in pursuance of this Act. Cosmos Exploration Co. v. Gray Eagle Oil Co., (1903) 190 U. S. 301; Caha v. U. S., (1894) 152 U. S. 211; Peters v. U. S., (1894) 2 Okla. 116. Contra, U. S. v. Bedgood, (1391) 49 Fed. Rep. 54.

Regulations must be reasonable and legal.—“Under this section the validity of all departmental regulations which are appropriate, and within the limitations of the law, cannot be doubted. This, however, is not a grant of power to legislate; to add to the law; to render its enforcement difficult; to burden the proceedings under it with unnecessary expense or hardship; or to encumber them with onerous and technical conditions. It is designed that the permitted regulations shall simplify and explain, not embarrass, the administration of the law; and certainly they must not only be appropriate, but they must be reasonable, and within the limitations and intent of the statute.” Anchor v. Howe, (1892) 50 Fed. Rep. 366; U. S. v. Murphy, (1887) 32 Fed. Rep. 376; Cosmos Exploration Co. v. Gray Eagle Oil Co., (1900) 104 Fed. Rep. 43, affirmed (C. C. A. 1901) 112 Fed. Rep. 4; U. S. v. Chaplin, (1887) 31 Fed. Rep. 890.

Authority of commissioner over entries and patents.—Until the issuance of a patent for an entry under the pre-emption laws of the United States, the commissioner of the general land office may suspend the entry, and order a re-examination as to the pre-emption claimant's residence upon and improvement of the land for which he holds the final receipt of the register and receiver, and if, on said re-examination, it is shown that the claimant has not complied with the law, the commissioner of the general land office has power to cancel the entry. Pierce v. Frace, (1891) 2 Wash. 81.

Liberal construction given to authority and supervisory powers of land department officers.—“In the determination of jurisdiction and authority, not only the Acts themselves, but subsequent enactments of Congress conferring supervisory powers and authority on the different officers of the land department, must be considered, to the end that a harmonious system may be established; and, to establish harmony in the administration of the land laws, it becomes necessary to construe liberally the Acts granting supervisory powers to the head of the land department; and the courts of the United States and of the different states of the Union have recognized this necessity, and have uniformly sought to aid, instead of hamper, the department in the administration of the law." Lawrence v. Potter, (1900) 22 Wash. 32.

The phrase "under the direction of the secretary of the interior," used in the statute, "is not meaningless, but was intended as an expression in general terms of the power of the secretary to supervise and control the extensive operations of the land department of which he is the head. It means that in the important matters relating to the sale and disposition of the public domain, the surveying of private land claims and the issuing of patents thereon, and the administration of the trusts devolving upon the government by reason of the laws of Congress or under treaty stipulations, respecting the public domain, the secretary of the interior is the supervising agent of the government to do justice to all claimants and preserve the rights of the people of the United States." Such supervision may be exercised by direct orders or by review on appeals. The mode in which the supervision shall be exercised, in the absence of statutory directions, may be prescribed by such rules and regulations as the secretary may adopt. Knight v. U. S. Land Assoc., (1891) 142 U. S. 161; Warner Valley Stock Co. v. Smith, (1897) 165 U. S. 28; Orchard v. Alexander, (1895) 157 U. S. 372; Stoneroad v. Stoneroad, (1895) 158 U. S. 240; Altschul v. Clark, (1901) 39 Oregon 315; In re Pueblo City, 5 Land Dec. Dept. Int. 494. See also Hestres v. Brennan, (1875) 50 Cal. 211.

Illustration.—"For example, if, when a patent is about to issue, the secretary should discover a fatal defect in the proceedings, or that by reason of some newly ascertained fact the patent, if issued, would have to be annulled, and that it would be his duty to ask the attorney-general to institute proceedings for its annulment, it would hardly be seriously contended that the secretary might not interfere and prevent the execution of the patent. He could not be obliged to sit quietly and allow a proceeding to be consummated which it would be immediately his duty to ask the attorney-general to take measures to annul. It would not be a sufficient answer against the exercise of his power that no appeal had been taken to him, and, therefore, he was without authority in the matter." Orchard v. Alexander, (1895) 157 U. S. 372; Knight v. U. S. Land Assoc., (1891) 142 U. S. 161.

Control supervisory rather than appellate.—Both the secretary of the interior and the commissioner of the general land office, in revising the acts of the subordinate officials of the land department, exercise supervisory rather than appellate power in the sense in which the term "appellate" is employed in defining the powers of courts of justice. If, however, this power is to be regarded as appellate power in a legal sense, it will be observed that the statute has not provided the machinery for the taking of an appeal, and consequently that matter is subject to such rules and regulations as the department may prescribe; and if the commissioner of the general land office transmits the papers to the secretary of the interior, the presumption is that they were regularly and properly transmitted. Hestres v. Brennan, (1875) 50 Cal. 211.

Review of commissioner's decisions.—A decision of the commissioner sustaining an entry, which decision is not rendered in pursuance of his special authority conferred by sections 2450-2457 of the Revised Statutes, but by virtue of his general authority given him by this and other sections, is not required to be submitted to the secretary of the interior and the attorney-general, acting as a board, for appraisal, but was subject to the appellate or supervisory authority of the secretary of the interior. Hawley v. Diller, (1900) 178 U. S. 476.

Approval of secretary of interior essential to passing of title.—The title to the lands selected under the grant to Oregon to aid in the construction of a military wagon road (14 Stat. L. 89, ch. 174), and the statute providing for the issuance of patents for such lands to the state or its grantee (13 Stat. L. 80, ch. 305), did not pass from the government until the selection was approved by the secretary of the interior, nor did the statute of limitations begin to run against the state or its grantee until the official approval of the selection by the secretary of the interior. Altschul v. Clark, (1901) 39 Oregon 315.

Regulations respecting swamp lands.—The regulations of June 30 and Sept. 1, 1880, by which the land department of the United States, in conjunction with the state, undertook, by means of agents in the field, to examine the character of the lands claimed by the state under the swamp-land grant thereto, superseded the regulation of March 13, 1875; and thereafter no affidavit could be legally used before the commissioner or secretary of the interior on the consideration of the question whether such lands were swamp or not, other than the affidavits of the agents employed to make such examination in the field, and, therefore, the affidavits alleged in the indictment to have been forged by the defendant could not have been legally used to defraud the United States. U. S. v. Barnhart, (1887) 33 Fed. Rep. 459.

Stratton surveys of San Francisco pueblo lands set aside.—The secretary of the interior had ample power to set aside the Stratton surveys of the San Francisco pueblo lands, although approved by the surveyor-general of California and confirmed by the commissioner of the general land office, with no appeal taken, and to order a new survey; and his action in that respect cannot be attacked collaterally. Knight v. U. S. Land Assoc., (1891) 142 U. S. 161.

Secs. 2479-2484. [See supra, p. 399, div. XII. Swamp and Overflowed Lands.]

Sec. 2485. [Certain lands selected by California confirmed to that State.] All selections of any portion of the public domain, to which no homestead, pre-emption or other right had been acquired by any settler under the laws of the United States, and not being mineral land, nor reserved for naval, military or Indian purposes nor held or claimed under any valid Mexican or Spanish grant, and not included within the limits of any city, town or village or of the county of San Francisco, made prior to the twenty-third day of July, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-six, and theretofore sold to bona-fide purchasers by the State of California are confirmed to the State of California: Provided, however, That said State shall not receive any greater quantity of land for school or improvement purposes than she is entitled to by law. [R. S.]

Act of July 23, 1866, ch. 219, 14 Stat. L. 218.

This section modified by succeeding section.—The provisions of this section are modified by those of R. S. 2480, and the two sections must be read in connection with each other. Hence, the lands confirmed by this section are those selected from lands previously surveyed by authority of the United States, and of which selection notification had been or should thereafter be given to the register of the local land office. McNee v. Donahue, (1892) 142 U. S. 587.

Confirmation inures to state's grantees ex proprio vigore.—The confirmation of the state's title by this Act inured immediately to the benefit of its grantees, without any further action by the land department or by the state. McNee v. Donahue, (1892) 142 U. S. 587.

Certification prerequisite to confirmation.—Under this Act selections theretofore made by the state and disposed of in good faith under the laws of the state were not confirmed, nor did the title pass, until the lands were certified over to the state by the commissioner of the general land office. Hence, where the President of the United States in 1866 and 1867 reserved for lighthouse purposes a piece of land in California which had been previously selected by the authorities of that state under the 12th section of the Act of March 3, 1853, and by them granted to a private person in accordance with the laws of the state, but the selection had never received the approval of the secretary of the interior and the land had never been certified over to the state by the commissioner of the general land office, it was held that the legal title to the premises was still in the United States. (1872) 14 Op. Atty.-Gen. 50.

Lands not definitely located by railroad not excepted.—The Act on which this section is based made no exception of lands which at the date of its passage were withdrawn from pre-emption, private entry, and sale, pursuant to the filing of the map of its general route by a railroad to which Congress had made a land grant in aid of its construction. Hence, where a railroad filed its map of general route prior to the passage of the Act, but did not file its map of definite location until after the Act was passed, it was held that the Act operated to confirm the title of a bona fide purchaser from the state of California of land included within the limits of the general route, and that the title so confirmed was not affected by the subsequent definite location of the line of the railroad, as the railroad accepted the grant subject to the possibility that Congress might, in its discretion, and prior to the definite location of the railroad's line, sell, reserve, or dispose of enumerated sections for purposes other than those originally contemplated. Menotti v. Dillon, (1897) 167 U. S. 703.

Land "claimed" under valid Mexican grant.—This section excepts from confirmation lands "held or claimed" under any valid Mexican grant. Hence it does not confirm the state's title to a selection of land claimed under a Mexican grant, if the grant is subsequently held valid in a proper judicial proceeding, though on final survey it is discovered that the particular land in controversy is without the limits of such Mexican grant. Such land is restored to the public domain, and though a claimant under the state has the right to make a pre-emption entry thereof, a third person may acquire a superior right by making a prior pre-emption entry. Aurrecoechea v. Bangs, (1885) 114 U. S. 381.

But the Act operates to confirm the state's selection made after it had been determined in a proper proceeding that the land claimed under the Mexican grant was not in fact within its limits. Huff v. Doyle, (1876) 93 U. S. 558. See also Pratt v. Crane, (1881) 58 Cal. 533.

Title to "lieu lands" confirmed.—By the operation of this section as modified by R. S. 2486, the lieu lands selected in place of school sections covered by Mexican grants, after the survey of the townships, were confirmed, and the title of the state thereto was perfected, from the date of the Act of March 3, 1853, granting the right to select such lieu lands. McNee v. Donahue, (1892) 142 U. S. 587.

But "the lieu lands confirmed to the state were such as had not only been selected by the state, but had also been sold by the state to purchasers, in good faith, under the laws of the state. It became necessary for the defendant to prove that fact — that the lands had been sold by the state to a purchaser in good faith prior to the passage of the Act of Congress." Laughlin v. McGarvey, (1875) 50 Cal. 169.

Coal land is "mineral land" within the meaning of this section. Mullan v. U. S., (1886) 118 U. S. 271.

Confirmation of portion of selection. — Where a selection was made in 1861 in accordance with the laws of the state of California then in force, and the register of the land office was in the same year notified of such selection, but before the passage of this Act the amount of land included in the selection was reduced below one hundred and sixty acres by reason of a grant to a railroad and of the allotment of certain other portions of the land to pre-emption claimants, it was held that this section and R. S. 2486 operated to confirm to the state the title to such portion of the original selection as was not included in the railroad grant or the pre-emption allotments. Mastick v. Cave, (1877) 52 Cal. 67.

Confirmation of invalid location does not affect valid location. — While this Act confirms certain invalid locations, it cannot so operate as to confirm an invalid location as against a subsequent valid location made prior to the passage of the Act. People v. Jackson, (1881) 62 Cal. 548.

Decision by land department as to validity of selection. — Under this Act it was for the land department to determine, first, whether the state had selected the land in controversy in part satisfaction of any grant made to the state by any Act of Congress; second, whether the state had disposed of the land to a purchaser in good faith under her laws; third, whether the land was within any of the exceptions by which lands were reserved from the validating effect of the Act; fourth, whether the defendant had proved up his claim before the register and receiver in the manner and within the time required by the Act. The decision of the land department on these questions in favor of an applicant claiming as a purchaser from the state, and the certification of the lands claimed, to the state, for the benefit of the purchaser, before the intervention of the rights of third persons, are conclusive as against the United States and third persons who subsequently attempt to acquire title from the state. Wilkinson v. Merrill, (1877) 52 Cal. 424.

The State courts have jurisdiction of actions concerning the rights of conflicting claimants under the state. Congress contented itself with confirmation of the state's title and left all who claimed under that title to their remedies in the courts or other tribunals provided by law for that purpose. Hastings v. Jackson, (1884) 112 U. S. 233.

This section does not refer to lands claimed as swamp and overflowed. — Wright v. Roseberry, (1887) 121 U. S. 488; Kile v. Tubbs, (1881) 59 Cal. 191; Sutton v. Fassett, (1875) 51 Cal. 12.

Sec. 2486. [Where selections are on lands already surveyed.] When selections named in the foregoing section have been made upon lands already surveyed by authority of the United States, the authorities of said States, where the same has not been already done, shall notify the register of the land-office, for the district in which the land is situated, which notice shall be regarded as the date of the State selection; and the said registers of the several land-offices, after investigation and decision, shall, under the instruction of the Commissioner of the General Land-Office, forward all such selections to the General Land-Office, and the Commissioner of the General Land-Office shall certify the same over to the State in the usual manner. [R. S.]

Act of July 23, 1866, ch. 219, 14 Stat. L. 219.

Sec. 2487. [Where selections are upon land surveyed only by State authority.] When the State of California has made such selections from the lands not surveyed by the authority of the United States, but which selections have been surveyed by the authority of said State, and the land sold to purchasers in good faith, under the laws of the State, such selections, from said twenty-third of July, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, when marked off and designated in the field, shall have the same force and effect as the pre-emption rights of a settler upon unsurveyed public lands; and if upon a survey of such lands by the United States, the lines of the two surveys shall be found not to agree, the selection shall be so changed as to include those legal subdivisions which nearest conform to the identical land included in the State survey and selection. Upon filing with the register of the proper United States land-office of the township plat, in which any such selection of unsurveyed land is located, the holder of the State title shall be allowed the same time to present and prove up his purchase and claim as is allowed pre-emptors under existing laws — and if found in accordance with the law the land embraced therein shall be certified over to the State by the Commissioner of the General Land-Office. [R. S.]

Secs. 2488–2490. [See supra, p. 399, div. XII. Swamp and Overflowed Lands.]

An act to prevent unlawful occupancy of the public lands.

[SEC. 1.] [Inclosure of or assertion of right to public lands without title unlawful.] That all inclosures of any public lands in any State or Territory of the United States, heretofore or to be hereafter made, erected, or constructed by any person, party, association, or corporation, to any of which land included within the inclosure the person, party, association, or corporation making or controlling the inclosure had no claim or color of title made or acquired in good faith, or an asserted right thereto by or under claim, made in good faith with a view to entry thereof at the proper land-office under the general laws of the United States at the time any such inclosure was or shall be made, are hereby declared to be unlawful, and the maintenance, erection, construction, or control of any such inclosure is hereby forbidden and prohibited; and the assertion of a right to the exclusive use and occupancy of any part of the public lands of the United States in any State or any of the Territories of the United States, without claim, color of title, or asserted right as above specified as to inclosure, is likewise declared unlawful, and hereby prohibited. [23 Stat. L. 321.]

Act constitutional.—It was within the constitutional power of Congress to pass this law. It is not invalid as invading the right of private property. Camfield v. U. S., (1897) 167 U. S. 518, affirming (C. C. A. 1895) 66 Fed. Rep. 101.

Purpose of statute.—This Act “was passed in view of a practice which had become common in the western territories of inclosing large areas of lands of the United States by associations of cattle raisers, who were mere trespassers, without shadow of title to such lands, and surrounding them by barbed wire fences, by which persons desiring to become settlers upon such lands were driven or frightened away, in some cases by threats or violence. The law was, however, never intended to operate upon persons who had taken possession under a bona fide claim or color of title; nor was it intended that, in a proceeding to abate a fence erected in good faith, the legal validity of the defendant's title to the land should be put in issue.” Cameron v. U. S., (1893) 148 U. S. 301. See also U. S. v. Cleveland, etc., Cattle Co., (1888) 33 Fed. Rep. 323.

Control of government within limits of state.—The United States has the same rights as an ordinary proprietor to maintain its possession of its own lands within the limits of a state and may pass suitable legislation for their protection, although such legislation may involve the exercise of the police power. It may properly take action to prevent the acts of individuals in fencing its lands, even though the fencing was done for the purpose of irrigation and pasturing. Camfield v. U. S., (1897) 167 U. S. 518.

Two things are forbidden by this Act: “(1) The inclosure referred to; and (2) the assertion of a right to the exclusive use of public land without right or color of right. The actual use, as distinguished from the assertion of the right to use, is not forbidden. In a civil proceeding for the violation of this Act there is no penalty prescribed, either for the use or for the assertion of the right to use. The only judgment which can, under this Act, be rendered in a civil suit, is for the destruction of the fence and an injunction against its rebuilding.” U. S. v. Douglas-Willan-Sartoris Co., (1889) 3 Wyo. 288.

Statute general in terms and without exceptions.—This statute is general in its terms and it contains no exceptions. Where the defendants had caused an inclosure to be made which embraced within its limits more than two hundred thousand acres of the public domain their acts are within the inhibitions of the law, and the defendants cannot justify the erection of the fences in question on the ground that they own all the odd-numbered sections in two specified townships, and that they were engaged in building two large reservoirs for the purpose of irrigating the land owned by them and much other land in that vicinity. Camfield v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1895) 66 Fed. Rep. 101, affirmed (1897) 167 U. S. 518.

Inclosure erected in good faith.—An inclosure erected by the owner of the land in good faith for the purpose of inclosing his own land is not in violation of the Act, although in connecting the fence with that of other landowners he has cut off the government land from access to the country road. Potts v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1902) 114 Fed. Rep. 52. See also Cameron v. U. S., (1893) 148 U. S. 301.

The inclosure and occupancy of lands in an odd-numbered section, and within the limits of a grant to a railroad company, where the entry was made after the same had been withdrawn from sale or entry, and before completion of the railroad, or any declaration of forfeiture of the grant, by a person who, in good faith, intended to acquire title to it by purchase from the railroad company, is not made unlawful by this Act. U. S. v. Osborn, (1890) 44 Fed. Rep. 29. See also U. S. v. Brandestein, (1887) 32 Fed. Rep. 738.

Fence entirely on owner's land.—The fact that the alleged unlawful inclosure stands entirely upon the land of the owner is no defense to the prosecution, where such fence inclosed a portion of the public land of the United States so as to exclude the public from free access thereto. U. S. v. Buford, (1892) 8 Utah 173, dismissed (1893) 154 U. S. 496.

But in U. S. v. Douglas-Willan-Sartoris Co., (1889) 3 Wyo. 287, it was held that this statute, in so far as it authorizes the destruction of a fence located entirely on the locator's land, is unconstitutional and void, and that the Act, although apparently prohibiting such a fence under some circumstances, was not intended to do so.

After a section of land has passed to the state under a grant to the state for the support of common schools, the inclosure maintained thereon is no longer unlawful under the Act of Feb. 25, 1885, because the lands are not then "public," and the statute applies only to "public lands." Hence a bill under the Act for the removal of such inclosure will be dismissed. U. S. v. Elliott, (1896) 74 Fed. Rep. 92.

Impounding cattle turned into unlawful inclosure.—Persons who have constructed an inclosure which is prohibited by this section have no right to impound cattle which have been turned into such inclosure by the owners. Taylor v. Buford, (1892) 8 Utah 113, dismissed (1893) 154 U. S. 496.

Sufficiency of occupancy and adverse possession.—The fact that a party has pastured public lands of the United States without a claim of title, or connecting himself therewith under any of the possessory acts, will not give a legal or equitable right to the pasture grown thereon. Such an occupancy is within the meaning of this statute providing that the assertion of a right to the exclusive use and occupancy of any part of the public lands of the United States without claim, color of title, or asserted right, is unlawful and prohibited. McGinnis v. Friedman, (1888) 2 Idaho 393.

Color of title.—One who has been in possession of lands under sanction of a judicial decree for twenty-five years has a claim made in good faith and under color of title, and is entitled to recover in ejectment against trespassers. Los Angeles Farming, etc., Co. v. Hoff, (Cal. 1893) 34 Pac. Rep. 518, following Cameron v. U. S., (1893) 148 U. S. 301.

Entry upon claimed lands not authorized.—This statute by forbidding the fencing of public lands does not authorize an entry upon inclosed and improved land. Tidwell v. Chiricahua Cattle Co., (Ariz. 1898) 53 Pac. Rep. 192; Laurendeau v. Tugelli, (1889) 1 Wash. 559; Laurendeau v. Tugelli, (1893) 5 Wash. 632.

Homestead entry notwithstanding unlawful inclosure.—A person who has shown no capacity in himself to acquire the government title to the lands, nor any effort or intention to do so, stands in the position of a mere trespasser upon the public domain, and cannot, by an inclosure erected and maintained contrary to the provision of this Act, prevent a homestead entry of land by a citizen of the United States who goes peaceably upon a portion of the tract and in other respects complies with the law. Kitts v. Austin, (1890) 83 Cal. 167; Haven v. Haws, (1883) 63 Cal. 514; Whittaker v. Pendola, (1889) 78 Cal. 296. See also Caldwell v. Bush, (1896) 6 Wyo. 342.

That inclosure is unlawful, good defense to suit for pasturage.—In a suit to recover compensation for the pasturage of cattle under a contract which is alleged by the plaintiffs to provide for the defendant's turning his cattle into the one hundred and seventy-five thousand acre pasture of the plaintiffs, to be kept and cared for, and held by the plaintiffs therein, and which pasture, it is alleged, is inclosed by a post and wire fence, paragraphs of the answer which state that this inclosure is maintained upon government land, to which the plaintiffs have no right or title, and which allege that they are holding exclusive possession of such land for rental and speculation, to the exclusion of the defendant and other persons, thereby requiring the defendant to pay for the use thereof, and that the plaintiff's said pasture is an unlawful inclosure of public lands, in violation of the provisions of the Act of Congress of Feb. 25, 1885, state a good defense, and it is error to sustain a demurrer thereto. Garst v. Love, (1898) 7 Okla. 666.

No beneficial possession prior to survey.—It seems that an occupant is excluded by this Act from the beneficial use and enjoyment of unsurveyed lands, because prior to the survey it is all a part of the public domain. State v. Central Pac. R. Co., (1890) 21 Nev. 94.

A criminal intent in erecting an inclosure made unlawful by this statute is unnecessary. It is only necessary, in order to complete the crime, that the act which the law declares to be a crime shall have been intentionally done. U. S. v. Buford, (1892) 8 Utah 173, dismissed (1893) 154 U. S. 496.

Indictment in language of statute.—An indictment is fatally defective which does not charge that at the time the alleged unlawful inclosure was made or erected the defendants and other persons who constructed the same had no claim or color of title to any of the public lands inclosed, "made or acquired in good faith, or an asserted right thereto by or under claim, made in good faith, with a view to entry thereof at the proper land office under the general laws of the United States." U. S. v. Churchill, (1900) 101 Fed. Rep. 443.

Indictment must negative exceptions permitting inclosure.—Where a statute declares an act done in the absence of certain circumstances to be a crime, an indictment charging the commission of such a crime must negative the existence of such circumstances, and so an indictment under this Act for unlawfully inclosing a portion of the public lands must show that the defendant is not within any of the exceptions permitting such inclosure. U. S. v. Felderward, (1888) 36 Fed. Rep. 490. Contra, U. S. v. Cook, (1888) 36 Fed. Rep. 896.

SEC. 2. [Suits for violation of preceding section — jurisdiction and procedure.] That it shall be the duty of the district attorney of the United States for the proper district, on affidavit filed with him by any citizen of the United States that section one of this act is being violated showing a description of the land inclosed with reasonable certainty, not necessarily by metes and bounds nor by Governmental sub-divisions of surveyed lands, but only so that the inclosure may be identified, and the persons guilty of the violation as nearly as may be, and by description, if the name cannot on reasonable inquiry be ascertained, to institute a civil suit in the proper United States district or circuit court, or territorial district court, in the name of the United States, and against the parties named or described who shall be in charge of or controlling the inclosure complained of as defendants; and jurisdiction is also hereby conferred on any United States district or circuit court or territorial district court having jurisdiction over the locality where the land inclosed, or any part thereof, shall be situated, to hear and determine proceedings in equity, by writ of injunction, to restrain violations of the provisions of this act; and it shall be sufficient to give the court jurisdiction if service of original process be had in any civil proceeding on any agent or employee having charge or control of the inclosure; and any suit brought under the provisions of this section shall have precedence for hearing and trial over other cases on the civil docket of the court, and shall be tried and determined at the earliest practicable day. In any case if the inclosure shall be found to be unlawful, the court shall make the proper order, judgment, or decree for the destruction of the inclosure, in a summary way, unless the inclosure shall be removed by the defendant within five days after the order of the court. [23 Stat. L. 321.]

Appellate jurisdiction of decree for removal of fences.—The Supreme Court of the United States has no jurisdiction of an appeal from a decree rendered by a United States court, or the Supreme Court of a territory, directing the removal of a fence and inclosure, and in default of such removal decreeing that the fence shall be destroyed by the marshal of the district. The allegation supported by affidavits that the value of the property is more than five thousand dollars does not bring the case within the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court. Cameron v. U. S., (1892) 146 U. S. 533; Abadie v. U. S., (1893) 149 U. S. 261.

Admissibility in evidence of copy of lost record.—In an action under this statute, a book prepared under the direction of the commissioner of the general land office as a substitute for an original tract book destroyed by fire, and which was transmitted by him in the regular course of his official duty to the register and receiver of the local land office for use in disposing of public lands in that district, is prima facie evidence that the lands therein shown to be public were in fact such, and it was not necessary to attach to the book a certificate of its correctness in order to justify its use by the officers of the local land office, and to make it admissible in evidence as an official book. Jesse D. Carr Land, etc., Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1902) 118 Fed. Rep. 821.

Findings of lower court on questions of fact.—Where on appeal from a decree of the Circuit Court of Oregon that a portion of a fence used in making an inclosure situate in California shall be destroyed, the plaintiff insists that the evidence shows that the fence described in the bill formed, in connection with a division fence not referred to therein, two separate inclosures, one of which is wholly within the state of California, the question whether the land described in the bill was so fenced as to constitute two separate inclosures, or only one general inclosure, which, for the convenience of the plaintiff in separating stock, was divided by a fence having gates and openings therein, is one of fact, and the Circuit Court of Appeals cannot say from the evidence appearing in the record that the court below erred in finding that there was only one inclosure which included all the land described in the bill. Jesse D. Carr Land, etc., Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1902) 118 Fed. Rep. 821.

SEC. 3. [Obstruction of settlements on, and transit over, public lands.] That no person, by force, threats, intimidation, or by any fencing or inclosing, or any other unlawful means, shall prevent or obstruct, or shall combine and confederate with others to prevent or obstruct, any person from peaceably entering upon or establishing a settlement or residence on any tract of public land subject to settlement or entry under the public land laws of the United States, or shall prevent or obstruct free passage or transit over or through the public lands: Provided, This section shall not be held to affect the right or title of persons, who have gone upon, improved or occupied said lands under the land laws of the United States, claiming title thereto, in good faith. [23 Stat. L. 322.]

Policy of government to keep lands open. — "The policy of the government has been from the first to hold the unappropriated public lands as a great free common for all the settlers of the country where they lie, and for the exclusive use of no one." Taylor v. Buford, (1892) 8 Utah 113, dismissed (1893) 154 U. S. 496.

Sufficiency of indictment. — A count in an indictment for the offense described in this section which fails to state any of the acts which constitute the conspiracy, and does not describe the lands of which the defendant is alleged to have prevented an entry, nor state that they were public lands, is clearly bad; but a count which sets out fully all the acts which the defendants conspired to do to prevent the complainant, a citizen of the United States, from free exercise and enjoyment of a certain right and privilege secured to him by the laws of the United States, to wit, the right to then and there peaceably enter upon, prospect for minerals, initiate, locate, and establish and protect a mining claim upon the public lands of the United States under the public land laws of the United States — describing the land and charging that it was public land of the United States — is sufficient. Haynes v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1900) 101 Fed. Rep. 817.

SEC. 4. [Violators of act, how punished.] That any person violating any of the provisions hereof, whether as owner, part owner, agent, or who shall aid, abet, counsel, advise, or assist in any violation hereof, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and fined in a sum not exceeding one thousand dollars and be imprisoned not exceeding one year for each offense. [23 Stat. L. 322.]

SEC. 5. [Removal of unlawful structures.] That the President is hereby authorized to take such measures as shall be necessary to remove and destroy any unlawful inclosure of any of said lands, and to employ civil or military force as may be necessary for that purpose. [23 Stat. L. 322.]

SEC. 6. [Authority for bringing suits.] That where the alleged unlawful inclosure includes less than one hundred and sixty acres of land, no suit shall be brought under the provisions of this act without authority from the Secretary of the Interior. [23 Stat. L. 322.]

SEC. 7. [Pending suits.] That nothing herein shall affect any pending suits to work their discontinuance, but as to them hereafter they shall be prosecuted and determined under the provisions of this act. [23 Stat. L. 322.]

 Sections 3591-3659 constitute title 40 of the Revised Statutes, entitled "The Public Moneys."

What constitutes U. S. treasury.—The United States treasury proper, as constituted by what is commonly known as the "Independent Treasury Act," first passed July 4, 1840 (5 Stat. L. 385), repealed Aug. 13, 1841, and again re-enacted with additional provisions Aug. 6, 1846 (9 Stat. L. 59, ch. 90), is a depository of public money where the actual money of the government—gold, silver, bullion, notes, and currency—is kept in kind as received from the public revenues, or deposited there by express authority of law, and where it remains the specific property of the government and cannot be intermingled with other funds, as the treasurer is not authorized to permit other money to be deposited therein except in special cases expressly provided for by statute. And the "sub-treasuries," commonly so called, under the charge of assistant treasurers, where the public money is received and kept under like relations, as well as the mints and perhaps other like places of deposit, may, in a general sense, be considered as part of the United States treasury. Branch's Case, (1876) 12 Ct. Cl. 281.

Duties of secretary.—In this department the secretary represents the government. His acts and his omissions, within the line of his official duties, are the acts or omissions of the government itself; and in all commercial transactions his official negligence will be deemed to be the negligence of the government. He is specially charged with the duty of retiring these treasury notes by exchange, payment, or purchase; and he is the only agent authorized to act for the government in that behalf. All who deal with the government with respect to these notes are presumed to know his exclusive authority; for it is a public law. Until such time, therefore, as he has acted, or in due course of business ought to have acted, there can have been no such laches as will charge the government. He is presumed to act officially only in his department. His attention can only be demanded after the presentation of the notes at that place. It was there that the accounts and records of the issues and redemptions under the early laws were by statute required to be kept, and that is the appropriate place for keeping such similar records as the secretary of the treasury may by regulation prescribe, under the later laws, to protect against fraud and loss. Cooke v. U. S., (1875) 91 U. S. 389.

Sec. 3592. [Certain mints and assay offices to be depositories.] The mints at Carson City, and at Denver, and the assay-office at Boisé City, shall be places of deposit for such public moneys as the Secretary of the Treasury may direct. [R. S.]

An Act To provide better facilities for the safe-keeping and disbursement of public moneys in the Philippine Islands and in the islands of Cuba and Porto Rico.

[Depositories in Cuba, Porto Rico and Philippine Islands.] That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to designate one or more banks or bankers in the Philippine Islands and in the islands of Cuba and Porto Rico in which public moneys may be deposited: Provided, That the banks or bankers thus designated shall give satisfactory security for the safe-keeping and prompt payment of the public moneys so deposited by depositing in the Treasury, United States bonds to an amount not less than the aggregate sum at any time on deposit with such banks or bankers: And provided further, That this act shall apply to Cuba only while occupied by the United States. [31 Stat. L. 658.]

Depositories of public moneys in island possessions.—See further R. S. sec. 5153, as amended by Act of March 3, 1901, ch. 871, NATIONAL BANKS, vol. 5, p. 109.

Sec. 3593. [Public moneys subject to draft of the Treasurer.] All public moneys paid into any depository shall be subject to the draft of the Treasurer of the United States, drawn agreeably to appropriations made by law. [R. S.]

Act of Aug. 6, 1846, ch. 90, 9 Stat. L. 59.

Sec. 3594. [Superintendent of mint at Carson and assay office at Boisé City to be assistant treasurers.] The superintendent of the mint at Carson City, and the superintendent of the assay-office at Boisé City, shall be assistant treasurers of the United States, and shall respectively have the custody and care of all public moneys deposited therein, and shall perform all the duties required of them in reference to the receipt, safe keeping, transfer, and disbursement of all such moneys, as provided by law. [R. S.]

Sec. 3595. [Appointment, etc., of assistant treasurers.] There shall be assistant treasurers of the United States, appointed from time to time by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to serve for the term of four years, as follows:

One at Boston.
 One at New York.
 One at Philadelphia.
 One at Baltimore.
 One at Charleston.
 One at New Orleans.
 One at Saint Louis.
 One at San Francisco.
 One at Cincinnati.
 One at Chicago. [R. S.]

Partial repeal.—So much of this section as provides for an assistant treasurer at Charleston was repealed by the provisions in the following text.

When assistant treasurer may pay out money.—The assistant treasurer in New York is a custodian of the public money, which he may pay out or transfer upon the order of the proper department or officer; but he has no authority to settle and adjust, that is to say, to determine upon the validity of any claim against the government. He can pay only after the adjustment has been made "in the treasury department," and then upon drafts drawn for that purpose by the treasurer. Cooke v. U. S., (1875) 91 U. S. 389.

[SEC. 1.] [Assistant treasurer at Charleston abolished — depositories abolished.] * * * And so much of section thirty-five hundred and ninety-five of the Revised Statutes as provides for the appointment of an assistant treasurer of the United States at Charleston is hereby repealed from and after September, thirtieth, eighteen hundred and seventy-six; and the secretary of the Treasury is directed to discontinue, from said date, the depositories at Buffalo, New York Santa Fe, New Mexico, and Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. * * * [19 Stat. Assistant treasurer at Charleston.—See preceding text.

The salaries above named have not been uniformly followed in the appropriation acts. The Act of Feb. 25, 1903, ch. 755, 32 Stat. L. 877, allows $4,500 to the assistant treasurers at Cincinnati, Philadelphia, St. Louis, San Francisco, and Baltimore.

Sec. 3597. [Receipt of commissions and perquisites forbidden.] The salaries named in the preceding section shall be in full for the services of the respective officers, and none of them shall charge or receive any commission, pay, or perquisite, for any official service of any character or description whatsoever. Every such officer who makes any such charge, or receives any such compensation, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be fined or imprisoned, or both. [R. S.]

Act of Aug. 6, 1846, ch. 90, 9 Stat. L. 65.

Sec. 3598. [Rooms for use of assistant treasurers.] The rooms assigned by law to be occupied by the assistant treasurers, together with the fire-proof vaults therein, or connected therewith, shall be appropriated to the use of the assistant treasurers, and for the safe-keeping of the public moneys deposited with them, respectively. [R. S.]

Act of Aug. 6, 1846, ch. 90, 9 Stat. L. 59; Act of June 15, 1870, ch. 129, 16 Stat. L. 152.

Sec. 3599. [Their care and the use of the rooms.] The assistant treasurers shall have the charge and care of the rooms, vaults, and safes assigned to them, respectively, and shall there perform the duties required of them relating to the receipt, safe-keeping, transfer, and disbursement of the public moneys. [R. S.]

Act of Aug. 6, 1846, ch. 90, 9 Stat. L. 59; Act of June 15, 1870, ch. 129, 16 Stat. L. 152.

Sec. 3600. [Bonds of assistant treasurers.] All assistant treasurers, and all officers in any mint, or assay-office, authorized by law to act as assistant treasurers, shall, respectively, give bonds to the United States for the faithful discharge of the duties of their respective offices as assistant treasurers, according to law, and for such amounts as shall be directed by the Secretary of the Treasury, with sureties to the satisfaction of the Solicitor of the Treasury; and shall, from time to time, renew, strengthen, and increase their official bonds as the Secretary of the Treasury may direct. [R. S.]

The form of the bond required to be given by assistant treasurers under this section—whether the parties thereto are to be jointly and severally, or may be only jointly bound, and whether each security is to bind himself for the full amount of the penalty, or may restrict his liability to a less amount—is not made the subject of statutory regulation but is left to the determination of the officers by whom the bond is to be approved. But the form ordinarily made use of in practice is that wherein the principal and sureties are jointly and severally bound for the full amount of the penalty. This form being preferable to any other and its use sanctioned by long practice, the adoption of a different form (though it might not be inconsistent with the terms of the statute so to do) would not be warranted unless the circumstances of the particular case were such that the public interests could not otherwise be served. (1835) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 274.

The official bond given by the principal of the office shall be held to cover and apply to the acts of the person appointed to act in his place in such cases. Such acting officer shall moreover, for the time being, be subject to all the liabilities and penalties prescribed by law for the official misconduct, in like cases, of the assistant treasurer or depositary, respectively, for whom he acts. [R. S.]

Act of Feb. 13, 1865, ch. 32, 13 Stat. L. 427.

Sec. 3614. [Bond of special agents.] Whenever it becomes necessary for the head of any Department or office to employ special agents, other than officers of the Army or Navy, who may be charged with the disbursement of public moneys, such agents shall, before entering upon duty, give bond in such form and with such security as the head of the Department or office employing them may approve. [R. S.]

Act of Aug. 4, 1854, ch. 242, 10 Stat. L. 573.

Authority of head of department. — "The head of a department of the government is authorized in the administration of the duties of the office, to employ agents and determine when an exigency arises demanding their employment." U. S. v. Potter, (1879) 7 Reporter 675, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,076.

Nature of contract of bond. — "The contract in an official bond for the accounting of moneys is not a contract of bailment in which liability depends on the question of reasonable and ordinary care, but it is an absolute contract to pay the money in any event." (1891) 20 Op. Atty-Gen. 24.

Sec. 3615. [Collectors of public moneys to pay over.] All collectors and receivers of public money of every description, within the District of Columbia, shall, as often as they may be directed by the Secretary of the Treasury or the Postmaster-General so to do, pay over to the Treasurer of the United States, at the Treasury, all public moneys collected by them or in their hands. All such collectors and receivers of public moneys within the cities of New York, Boston, Philadelphia, New Orleans, San Francisco, Baltimore, Charleston, and Saint Louis shall, upon the same direction, pay over to the assistant treasurers in their respective cities, at their offices, respectively, all the public moneys collected by them, or in their hands; to be safely kept by the respective depositaries, until otherwise disposed of according to law. It shall be the duty of the Secretary and Postmaster-General, respectively, to direct such payments by the collectors and receivers at all the said places, at least as often as once in each week, and as much oftener as they may think proper. [R. S.]

Extent of liability. — Such collector or receiver is a bailee of the government and by the common law is only bound to due diligence and only liable for negligence or dishonesty; but by the policy of the Acts of Congress on the subject a more stringent accountability is exacted. U. S. v. Thomas, (1872) 15 Wall. (U. S.) 337.

The measure of this enhanced accountability is particularly to be found in the official bond required by these officers, the condition of which requires the payment of the moneys that come to their hands as and when directed; the performance of which condition can only be excused by an overruling necessity. U. S. v. Thomas, (1872) 15 Wall. (U. S.) 337.

Payment prevented by Act of God, etc. — A collector or receiver of public money under bond to keep it safely and pay it when required, is not bound to render the money at all events, but is excused if prevented from rendering it by the act of God or the public enemy without any neglect or fault on his part. U. S. v. Thomas, (1872) 15 Wall. (U. S.) 337.

Seizure by rebels. — The late rebellion being a public war, the forcible seizure by the rebel authorities of public moneys in the hands of loyal government agents against their will and without their fault or negligence was a sufficient discharge from their obligations in reference to said moneys. U. S. v. Thomas, (1872) 15 Wall. (U. S.) 337.

Sec. 3616. [How marshals and district attorneys may pay into Treasury.] All marshals, district attorneys, and other persons than those mentioned in the preceding section, having public money to pay to the United States, may pay the same to any depositary constituted by or in pursuance of law, which may be designated by the Secretary of the Treasury. [R. S.]

Act of Aug. 6, 1846, ch. 90, 9 Stat. L. 62; Act of July 8, 1870, ch. 230, 16 Stat. L. 216. See also MONEY PAID INTO COURT, vol. 5, p. 70.

Public moneys only.—“It is obvious from these provisions that it was only public money of the United States of which national banks could be made depositaries, and it was therefore only public money which an officer could deposit in them, whether he received it originally, or received it to disburse.” Coudert v. U. S., (1899) 175 U. S. 178.

Fund held pending litigation.—“The designated depositories are intended as places for the deposit of the public moneys of the United States; that is to say, moneys belonging to the United States. No officer of the United States can charge the government with liability for moneys in his hands not public moneys, by depositing them to his own credit in a bank designated as a depositary. In this case the money deposited belonged for the time being to the court, and was held as a trust fund pending the litigation. The United States claimed it, but their claim was contested. So long as this contest remained undecided the officers of the treasury could not control the fund. Although deposited with a bank that was a designated depositary it was not paid into the treasury. No one could withdraw it except the court or the clerk, and it was held for the benefit of whomsoever in the end it should be found to belong.” Branch v. U. S., (1879) 100 U. S. 673; Coudert v. U. S., (1899) 175 U. S. 178, affirming (C. C. A. 1896) 73 Fed. Rep. 505.

Proceeds of sale of prize.—Money deposited by a marshal in a designated depositary as the proceeds of the sale of a prize, there to await the decree of the prize court, is not public money, and the United States will not be responsible for such amount on failure of the bank. Coudert v. U. S., (1899) 175 U. S. 178, affirming (C. C. A. 1896) 73 Fed. Rep. 505.

Sec. 3617. [Moneys to be deposited without deduction.] The gross amount of all moneys received from whatever source for the use of the United States, except as otherwise provided in the next section, shall be paid by the officer or agent receiving the same into the Treasury, at as early a day as practicable, without any abatement or deduction on account of salary, fees, costs, charges, expenses, or claim of any description whatever. But nothing herein shall affect any provision relating to the revenues of the Post-Office Department. [R. S.]

Act of March 3, 1849, ch. 110, 9 Stat. L. 398; Act of Sept. 28, 1850, ch. 78, 9 Stat. L. 507.

Receipts from government telegraph lines.—See TELEGRAPH AND CABLE LINES.

Since the year 1831, it has become the general policy of the United States to require that all moneys collected in behalf of the United States shall be paid into the treasury. Some exceptions thereto, not depending upon any special reasons, which here and there have escaped attention, are gradually disappearing. (1883) 17 Op. Atty-Gen. 592.

Intent of Act.—“This Act was intended to take away all excuse from collectors to withhold payments into the treasury, under the pretense that they were responsible as collectors, on various grounds, to individuals for services rendered, etc. This was the evil which the law was intended to remedy. And it was a regulation in civil cases and can have no direct application to” an indictment for embezzlement under section 5490. U. S. v. Forsythe, (1855) 6 McLean (U. S.) 584, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 15,133.

The fees of marshals, district attorneys, and clerks of the United States courts, in government suits, taxed and recovered as costs from the defendant therein, should be turned into the treasury and not paid to the officers: they being entitled to payment (by force of section 856 R. S.), only on settling their accounts at the treasury and from the proper appropriation. (1877) 15 Op. Atty-Gen. 386.

Proceeds of sale of manifests and clearances.—The amount received by the customs officers on the northern frontier for each blank manifest or clearance sold under section 2648 is a fee intended for the use of the officer and does not come within the provisions of this section requiring “the gross sum of all moneys received from whatever source for the use of the United States,” etc., to be paid into the treasury. (1877) 15 Op. Atty-Gen. 654.

Proceeds of lumber of Indians.—The lumber made at a mill, on an Indian reservation, belonging to the Indians, is not the property of the United States, and the proceeds thereof received by the Indian agent are not money received “for the use of the United States” within the meaning of this section. U. S. v. Sinnott, (1886) 26 Fed. Rep. 84.

Recovery of fees paid into treasury.—A collector of customs who, pursuant to the peremptory order of the commissioner of customs, pays into the treasury moneys to which he is lawfully entitled as a part of the fees and emoluments of his office, is not precluded from recovering them in a suit against the United States. U. S. v. Ellsworth, (1879) 101 U. S. 170.

Sec. 3618. [Proceeds of sales of material.] All proceeds of sales of old material, condemned stores, supplies, or other public property of any kind, except the proceeds of the sale or leasing of marine hospitals, or of the sales of revenue-cutters, or of the sales of commissary stores to the officers and enlisted men of the Army, or of materials, stores, or supplies sold to officers and soldiers of the Army or of the sale of condemned Navy clothing, or of sales of materials, stores, or supplies to any exploring or surveying expedition authorized by law, shall be deposited and covered into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts, on account of "proceeds of Government property," and shall not be withdrawn or applied, except in consequence of a subsequent appropriation made by law. [R. S.]

Act of March 3, 1847, ch. 48, 9 Stat. L. 171; Act of April 20, 1866, ch. 63, 14 Stat. L. 40; Act of July 28, 1866, ch. 299, 14 Stat. L. 336; Act of May 3, 1872, ch. 140, 17 Stat. L. 83; Act of June 8, 1872, ch. 348, 17 Stat. L. 337.

This section was amended by the Act of Feb. 27, 1877, ch. 69, 19 Stat. L. 249, by inserting after the word "Army," where it first appears in the section, the words "or of materials, stores, or supplies sold to officers and soldiers of the Army," as above given.

Other provisions for the sale of old materials or property not required and the disposition of the proceeds of sale are found elsewhere in this work as follows:

Army, old ordnance materials. See WAR DEPARTMENT AND MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT.

Indians, property on reservations. See INDIANS, vol. 3, p. 371.

Life-saving stations, condemned articles. See LIFE SAVING, vol. 4, p. 811.

Military academy, sale of gas. See MILITARY ACADEMY, vol. 4, p. 888.

Militia, equipment. See MILITIA, vol. 4, p. 899.

Public printing, condemned or unserviceable machinery and materials. See PUBLIC PRINTING.

Public property, unproductive or not required. See PUBLIC PROPERTY.

Revenue cutters.—See REVENUE MARINE, post.

Authority of officers.—This section and section 1541 confer upon the secretary of the navy the only authority by which he can dispose of the materials of the United States navy. When in the judgment of the secretary they can be advantageously used, they must be used; when they cannot be so used, they must be sold at public sale and the proceeds covered into the treasury. No officer of the navy department had any authority, therefore, to deliver to the appellant the materials of the navy, to be sold by him, and to allow him to put the proceeds into his own pocket. Steele v. U. S., (1885) 113 U. S. 128, affirming (1884) 19 Ct. Cl. 181.

Relation to appropriations.—It was said by Attorney-General Benjamin Harris Brewster, in (1882) 17 Op. Atty.-Gen. 480, that "This section provides how moneys derived from sales of public property, with certain exceptions, shall be disposed of. Funds thus derived, where it is not otherwise provided by law, remain subject to future appropriation by Congress. They cannot be placed to the credit of existing appropriations or be applied to objects of expenditures within the same, thus enlarging such appropriations. But where articles are manufactured or purchased by one branch of the public service under an appropriation made for that purpose and are afterwards, on grounds of administrative expediency, transferred to another branch of the service, the latter thereupon reimbursing the appropriation of the former with the cost of the articles out of an appropriation applicable to the manufacture or purchase thereof, this transaction is not a sale either according to the ordinary or the legal significance of that term. It is nothing more than a transfer of the custody and use of the property and consequent accountability for the same accompanied by a transfer of the costs thereof from one appropriation to another within the scope of either of which the expenditure may properly come. The ownership (a transfer of which is an inseparable element in a sale of property) remains unchanged. Section 3618 extends only to such cases as relate to 'proceeds of sales,' receipts which are in the nature of revenue, belonging to no appropriation and not available for expenditure without authority from Congress."

Method of sale.—"These sections [3618, 3672] contemplate that there will be sales of old material necessarily made in the various departments of the government other than those included within the exceptions. For the mode in which such sales shall be conducted, whether by advertisement, at public auction, or otherwise, no specific provision is made. In these respects the sales are left to the discretion of the officer having charge of such old material. But it is required that when such sales are made the proceeds shall be covered into the treasury on account of 'proceeds of government property,' and that a detailed statement of them shall be thereafter made." (1877) 15 Op. Atty.-Gen. 322.

Sales included by exceptions.—"The sales which are included within the exceptions in this section are controlled by other sections which regulate the mode in which the sales of such property shall be made and the proceeds thereof applied." (1877) 15 Op. Atty.-Gen. 322.

Old material used as payment.—“The effect of those two comprehensive provisions [3618 and 1541], in our opinion, is to forbid in the strongest terms the use of old material in payment for work to be done or in exchange for other material or work. If old material can be advantageously used, it must be used by the proper officers for government purposes; if it cannot be advantageously used, then it must be sold at public sale, and the proceeds of the sale must not be ‘applied’ in payment for other material or for work, or for any other purpose, but be covered into the treasury.” Steele v. U. S., (1884) 19 Ct. Cl. 181, affirmed (1885) 113 U. S. 128.

Exchanging articles.—The chief of the bureau of engraving and printing cannot be authorized by the secretary of the treasury to exchange certain old presses for a new press with the manufacturers so that but a small amount of money in addition will have to be paid to them therefor; yet the secretary may authorize a sale of the old presses to the manufacturers, the proceeds to be covered into the treasury, and at the same time a purchase of a new press can be made from them, paying for the same out of the appropriation available for that purpose. (1877) 15 Op. Atty.-Gen. 322.

Earnings of Indian training schools.—“Section 1, part 1, of the Act of May 11, 1880 (Richardson’s Supplement 525), authorizes the secretary of the interior to purchase for the Indian service articles manufactured in the schools, and provides that accounts of such transactions shall be kept in the Indian bureau and in the training schools and reports thereof made from time to time. * * *

This Act, as respects the earnings of these schools, supersedes section 3618 of the Revised Statutes.” (1883) 17 Op. Atty.-Gen. 531.

The proceeds of sales of articles manufactured in Indian manual and training schools should not be turned into the treasury, but be received by the Indian bureau and used for the benefit of the Indian children in the schools. (1883) 17 Op. Atty.-Gen. 531.

Lumber made at a mill owned by the Indians is not the property of the United States, and the proceeds of any sale thereof need not be conveyed into the treasury, but may be used by the agent for the benefit of the Indians. U. S. v. Sinnott, (1886) 26 Fed. Rep. 84.

Improvements on Mexican grant land.—With regard to the disposal of buildings and improvements on a military post established on land which was subsequently discovered to cover a Mexican grant, it was said by Attorney-General W. H. H. Miller, in (1891) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 284: “I am not able to say that section 3618, R. S., is a source of authority or anything more than a law regulating the disposition of the proceeds of ‘old material and condemned stores, supplies, or other public property,’ nor do I find any provision of law, either in the statutes proper or in the army regulations in force in 1863 and adopted by Congress by the Act of July 28, 1866 (14 Stat. 332), which seems to authorize the President or the secretary of war to dispose of property such as that in question.”

[Expenses of sale of condemned property, etc., to be paid from proceeds.]

* * * Treasury Department. That from the proceeds of sales of old material, condemned stores, supplies, or other public property of any kind, before being deposited into the Treasury, either as miscellaneous receipts on account of “proceeds of Government property” or to the credit of the appropriations to which such proceeds are by law authorized to be made, there may be paid the expenses of such sales, as approved by the accounting officers of the Treasury, so as to require only the net proceeds of such sales to be deposited into the Treasury, either as miscellaneous receipts or to the credit of such appropriations, as the case may be. * * * [29 Stat. L. 268.]

This is from the Deficiencies Appropriation Act of June 8, 1896, ch. 373.

Sec. 3619. [Penalty for withholding money.] Every officer or agent who neglects or refuses to comply with the provisions of section thirty-six hundred and seventeen shall be subject to be removed from office, and to forfeit to the United States any share or part of the moneys withheld, to which he might otherwise be entitled. [R. S.]

Act of July 18, 1866, ch. 201, 14 Stat. L. 187.

Recovery of involuntary payment.—“Viewed in the light of these penal provisions, the payments made under the peremptory order of the commissioner cannot be regarded as voluntary in the sense that the party making them is thereby precluded from maintaining an action to recover back so much of the money paid as he was entitled to retain.” U. S. v. Ellsworth, (1879) 101 U. S. 170.

Sec. 3620. [Duty of disbursing officers.] It shall be the duty of every disbursing officer having any public money intrusted to him for disbursement, to deposit the same with the Treasurer or some one of the assistant treasurers of the United States, and to draw for the same only as it may be required for payments to be made by him in pursuance of law and draw for the same only in favor of the persons to whom payment is made; and all transfers from the Treasurer of the United States to a disbursing officer shall be by draft or warrant on the Treasury or an assistant treasurer of the United States. In places, however, where there is no treasurer or assistant treasurer, the Secretary of the Treasury may, when he deems it essential to the public interest, specially authorize in writing the deposit of such public money in any other public depository, or, in writing, authorize the same to be kept in any other manner, and under such rules and regulations as he may deem most safe and effectual to facilitate the payments to public creditors. [R. S.]

This section was amended by the Act of Feb. 27, 1877, ch. 69, 19 Stat. L. 249, by inserting after the words "in pursuance of law," the words "and draw for the same only in favor of the persons to whom payment is made," as given in the text.

Effect of amendment.—"This amendment restores the law in this respect to the condition in which it was before the revision of the statutes." (1877) 15 Op. Atty.-Gen. 288.

The immediate object of [the amendment] is that the books or vouchers of the assistant treasurers of the United States, public depositaries, or other persons or institutions with whom the disbursing officer might be authorized by the secretary of the treasury to deposit the public moneys should show upon whose account and upon what claims or demands such moneys were paid out by the check of the disbursing officer. These checks would thus when compared with the vouchers of the disbursing officer tend to show in what mode the public moneys had been disposed of by him, and would afford a means of testing the accuracy of his accounts." (1877) 15 Op. Atty.-Gen. 288.

Drawn for authorized purpose only.—Each sum placed to the credit of a disbursing officer under warrants drawn by the secretary of the treasury, upon the treasury of the United States, directing certain amounts appropriated to be placed to the credit of the disbursing officer, constitutes a specific fund which cannot be legally appropriated to any other purpose than that authorized by law. U. S. v. Morgan, (1886) 28 Fed. Rep. 48.

Under specific appropriation.—A disbursing agent is not authorized to draw nor the treasurer to pay from appropriations for specific purposes or credits, any sums other than those authorized by law on account of the appropriations respectively. U. S. v. Morgan, (1886) 28 Fed. Rep. 48.

Moneys deposited are United States moneys.—The moneys of the United States placed in the hands of an assistant quartermaster in the United States army for disbursement by him as a disbursing officer of the United States and deposited by him with an assistant treasurer of the United States, continue still to be moneys of the United States. Morgan v. Van Dyck, (1870) 7 Blatchf. (U. S.) 147, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 9,810.

Form of checks.—Under this section, as amended, the treasurers and assistant treasurers of the United States may be authorized to pay the checks of disbursing officers, where the same are drawn in favor of the persons to whom payment is made, but are payable to order or bearer. Whether such checks shall be made payable only to the persons entitled to payment, or to bearer, or to order, is a matter to be regulated entirely by the discretion of the secretary of the treasury. (1877) 15 Op. Atty.-Gen. 288.

Check as evidence of claim.—"If the evidence of the claim upon which the public money is paid is afforded by the check, all that is required by law has been complied with." (1877) 15 Op. Atty.-Gen. 288.

Transfer of claim.—"The treasury department has uniformly construed the words ['and to draw for the same only in favor of the persons to whom payment is made'] as meaning merely that such checks must be drawn in favor of the person to whom the disbursing officer is required to make payment, and not in favor of any other person, thus prohibiting the transfer of the claim to any other person before its settlement, and not as forbidding any words of negotiability." (1899) 22 Op. Atty.-Gen. 637.

Obligation of treasurer to pay drafts.—An assistant treasurer is not responsible to a disbursing agent for a breach of duty in not paying genuine drafts by the disbursing agent for moneys deposited. He is responsible only to the United States. The obligation of the assistant treasurer is an obligation to the United States and not to the disbursing agent, and there is nothing in the nature of a contract or agreement between the assistant treasurer and the disbursing agent which could be broken, so as to lay a foundation for an action of assumpsit. Morgan v. Van Dyck, (1870) 7 Blatchf. (U. S.) 147, 7 Fed. Cas. No. 9,810.

Sec. 3621. [Moneys to be deposited in public depositaries — receipts to be given — postal revenues.] Every person who shall have moneys of the United States in his hands or possession, and disbursing officers having moneys in their possession not required for current expenditure, shall pay the same to the Treasurer, an Assistant Treasurer, or some public depository of the United States, without delay, and in all cases within thirty days of their receipt. And the Treasurer, the Assistant Treasurer, or the public depository shall issue duplicate receipts for the moneys so paid, transmitting forthwith the original to the Secretary of the Treasury, and delivering the duplicate to the depositor: Provided, That postal revenues and debts due to the Post-Office Department shall be paid into the Treasury in the manner now required by law. [R. S.]

This section was amended to read as above by the Act of May 28, 1896, ch. 252, sec. 5, 29 Stat. L. 179. The section originally read as follows:

"SEC. 3621. Every person who shall have moneys of the United States in his hands or possession shall pay the same to the Treasurer, an assistant treasurer, or some public depository of the United States, and take his receipt for the same, in duplicate, and forward one of them forthwith to the Secretary of the Treasury." Act of March 3, 1857, ch. 114, 11 Stat. L. 249.

Postal revenues.—See POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT, ante, p. 1.

Effect of requests and regulations to pay.—Though statutes oblige receivers to pay over when required by the secretary of the treasury, a declaration stating that the receiver has been often requested to pay, is enough after verdict, there having been general regulations in force at the time the bond here sued on was given, requiring receivers to pay at stated times. Boyden v. U. S., (1871) 13 Wall. (U. S.) 17.

Loss by failure of bank.—If a disbursing officer in good faith, without knowledge or suspicion of a bank's insolvency, and without the expectation of gain, or other private motive, withdrew public moneys from the treasury and deposited them with the bank, it being a designated depository and the deposit being at that time authorized by law, the loss of the moneys through the failure of the bank cannot be imputed to the fault or negligence of the officer within the meaning of the Disbursing Officers Act (R. S. sec. 1059). Hobbs's Case, (1881) 17 Ct. Cl. 189.

Money not promptly paid over, seized by rebels.—Where a receiver of public money has such moneys in his hands, which would not have been in his possession if he had paid them over with the promptness that the Acts of Congress and the treasury regulations made in pursuance of them, prescribing the duties of receivers in this respect, made it his duty to use, and which therefore, inasmuch as the duties of receivers under their official bonds are defined by those acts and treasury regulations, it was also his duty under his official bond to use, evidence that the moneys were forcibly taken from him by the agent of the so-called Confederate government, usurping the authority of the rightful government and compelling obedience to itself exclusively throughout the state in which the receiver was, was held to have been rightly refused in a suit by the government on the official bond of such receiver, as short of meeting the necessity of the case; it having been owing to the default of the receiver in not paying over promptly and at right times, that the moneys were exposed to seizure, at all, by the usurping government. Bevans v. U. S., (1871) 13 Wall. (U. S.) 56.

Sec. 3622. [Accounts.] Every officer or agent of the United States who receives public money which he is not authorized to retain as salary, pay, or emolument, shall render his accounts monthly. Such accounts, with the vouchers necessary to the correct and prompt settlement thereof, shall be sent by mail, or otherwise, to the Bureau to which they pertain, within ten days after the expiration of each successive month, and, after examination there, shall be passed to the proper accounting officer of the Treasury for settlement. Disbursing officers of the Navy shall, however, render their accounts and vouchers direct to the proper accounting officer of the Treasury. In case of the non-receipt at the Treasury, or proper Bureau, of any accounts within a reasonable and proper time thereafter, the officer whose accounts are in default shall be required to furnish satisfactory evidence of having complied with the provisions of this section. Nothing herein contained shall, however, be construed to restrain the heads of any of the Departments from requiring such other returns or reports from the officer or agent, subject to the control of such heads of Departments, as the public interest may require. [R. S.]

This section was amended by the Act of Feb. 27, 1877, ch. 69, 19 Stat. L. 249, by striking out the word "Department" where it last appears in such section and inserting in place thereof the word "Departments" as above given. It was again amended by the Act of July 31, 1894, ch. 174, sec. 12, 28 Stat. L. 209, by striking out, after the words "complied with the provisions of this section," the words "The Secretary of the Treasury may, if in his opinion the circumstances of the case justify and require it, extend the time hereinbefore prescribed for the rendition of accounts," appearing in the section as originally enacted.

For substitute for parts of this section, sec Act of July 31, 1894, ch. 174, sec. 12, given in TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

See also following text.

To whom applicable. — The first clause of this section requires "the rendition of monthly accounts by every officer or agent who receives advances of public money from the treasury to be disbursed under appropriations made by Congress and also by every officer or agent who collects and receives fees and revenues which he is by law required to account for and pay into the treasury." (1890) 19 Op. Atty.-Gen. 557.

Purpose of ten days' extension. — "An examination of the language of the original statute shows that the ten days allowed after the expiration of each month is an extension of time given the officer for the purpose of enabling him to prepare his accounts, such language explicitly stating that it was the time within which the officer should mail or otherwise forward his accounts." (1878) 16 Op. Atty.-Gen. 222.

Effect of last clause. — "The provision that no construction is to be given to the statute that shall restrain the head of any department from requiring such other returns or reports from the officer or agent subject to the control of such head as the public interest may require * * * is intended to enable the head of the department to require, where he may think the circumstances demand it, more frequent accounts, and is also a provision exceptional in its character." (1878) 16 Op. Atty.-Gen. 222.

The property accounts of quartermasters in the army should be transmitted from the war department to the proper accounting officers of the treasury for settlement — such settlement to be made by them, however, under the direction of the secretary of war. (1871) 13 Op. Atty.-Gen. 482.

SEC. 4. [Accounts of disbursing officers.] That hereafter all disbursing officers of the United States shall render their accounts quarterly; and the Secretary of the Senate shall render his accounts as heretofore; but the Secretary of the Treasury may direct any or all such accounts to be rendered more frequently when in his judgment the public interests may require. [26 Stat. L. 413.]

This is from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of Aug. 30, 1890, ch. 837.

Sec. 3623. [Distinct accounts required.] All officers, agents, or other persons, receiving public moneys, shall render distinct accounts of the application thereof, according to the appropriation under which the same may have been advanced to them. [R. S.]

Act of March 3, 1809, ch. 28, 2 Stat. L. 535.

Effect of other Acts. — Section 4 of the Act of June 11, 1878, chapter 180, requires the commissioners of the District of Columbia to render accounts for their disbursements thereunder to the accounting officers of the treasury for adjustment and settlement, which by implication may be in accordance with the laws and regulations and usages by which these officers are governed so far as the same are applicable to such accounts. (1883) 17 Op. Atty.-Gen. 574.

Commissioners of District of Columbia. — The provisions of sections 3623 and 3678 R. S., are applicable to the commissioners of the District of Columbia, and they and their bondsmen are liable to suit on their bond for the recovery of balances found due from them on the settlement of their accounts. (1883) 17 Op. Atty.-Gen. 574.

Temporary disbursing officer. — The responsibility of a temporary disbursing officer is precisely the same as that of the regularly appointed officer who has given his official bond with surety, and if his account has been erroneously settled it may be opened and any balance remaining due from him to the United States may be recovered in a regular course of legal proceedings. Ex p. Randolph, (1833) 2 Brock. (U. S.) 447, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,558.

Moneys applied to accounts of another term. — By no act of the officer or of the treasury department or of both combined can official moneys collected by the officer and paid into the treasury department during one term of office be appropriated to the accounts of the other term to the prejudice of the sureties for the respective terms. (Citing U. S. v. January, (1813) 7 Cranch (U. S.) 572; U. S. v. Irving, (1843) 1 How. (U. S.) 250; Jones v. U. S., (1849) 7 How. (U. S.) 681; State v. Middleton, (1882) 57 Tex. 185). U. S. v. Morgan, (1886) 28 Fed. Rep. 48.

Discharge of private claims. — "This enactment plainly makes it unlawful for the persons embraced within its purview to ap-appropriate the public money to the discharge of their own claims, unless a distinct appropriation for that purpose shall have been made by law." (1834) 2 Op. Atty.-Gen. 663.

Appropriating disbursing account for independent obligation. — Where a disbursing officer undertook to appropriate by his drafts on the treasurer a part of the disbursing account to the discharge of his independent obligation for passport moneys, and the treasurer concurred in the act with full knowledge of the fact, but parted with no money and only made the corresponding entries in the books, the act was a fraud on the sureties and illegal as respects all who concurred in it. The United States having parted with nothing cannot claim in making up its account of the balance due on the disbursing agents' account the benefit of those illegal debits to the prejudice of the sureties, but the latter are entitled to have the disbursing accounts restated and the illegal debits canceled. U. S. v. Morgan, (1886) 28 Fed. Rep. 48.

The use of moneys received from the issuing of passports in the possession of a disbursing agent to pay legal demands upon other funds in the treasury, and the subsequent drawing of checks upon the specific appropriations account for the purpose of paying into the treasury the passport moneys which he was bound to turn over to the government, is a course of procedure which is unauthorized and illegal. U. S. v. Morgan, (1886) 28 Fed. Rep. 48.

[Account of disbursements under army appropriation acts.] * * *

That hereafter all officers, agents, or other persons receiving public moneys appropriated by this or any subsequent Army appropriation act shall account for the disbursement thereof according to the several and distinct items of appropriation expressed in such act. [23 Stat. L. 113.]

This is from the Army Appropriation Act of July 5, 1884, ch. 217.

[SEC. 1.] [Books, etc., of disbursing officers open to inspection.] * * *

All books, papers, and other matters relating to the office or accounts of disbursing officers of the Executive Departments, and commissions, boards, and establishments of the Government in the District of Columbia shall at all times be subject to inspection and examination by the Comptroller of the Treasury and the Auditor of the Treasury authorized to settle such accounts, or by the duly authorized agents of either of said officials. * * * [29 Stat. L. 550.]

This is from the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Appropriation Act of Feb. 19, 1897, ch. 265.

Sec. 3624. [Suits to recover money from officers, regulated.] Whenever any person accountable for public money, neglects or refuses to pay into the Treasury the sum or balance reported to be due to the United States, upon the adjustment of his account, the First Comptroller of the Treasury shall institute suit for the recovery of the same, adding to the sum stated to be due on such account, the commissions of the delinquent, which shall be forfeited in every instance where suit is commenced and judgment obtained thereon, and an interest of six per centum per annum, from the time of receiving the money until it shall be repaid into the Treasury. [B. S.]

Act of March 3, 1797, ch. 20, 1 Stat. L. 512.

First comptroller of the treasury is now designated Comptroller of the Treasury, see TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

Nature of Acts. — "This section, and also sections 3625 and 3217, R. S. (the latter applying solely to collectors of internal revenue), have for their object the enforcement of the liabilities of officers who are accountable for public money; but though they extend to revenue officers they cannot properly be regarded as revenue laws." (1878) 16 Op. Atty.-Gen. 143.

Effect on sureties. — "This statute is mandatory, and the sureties on the bond must be held to have signed it in view of the requirement as to the date from which interest should be computed." Smythe v. U. S., (1903) 188 U. S. 156, affirming (C. C. A. 1901) 107 Fed. Rep. 376.

Liability of officers and sureties. — "The government in accepting bonds from an officer does not become an insurer to protect the sureties thereon against loss. The fact that a deputy steals or embezzles the public money or stamps, which are the equivalent of money, under the charge of the collector is wholly immaterial. The principal and his sureties are liable if the principal does not properly account therefor, no matter in what way or by whom the same may have been taken, unless it be by the act of God or the public enemy. The general rule upon this subject is to the effect that public officers who are intrusted with public funds and required to give bonds for the faithful discharge of their official duties are not mere bailees of the money to be exonerated by the exercise of ordinary care and diligence. Their liability is fixed by their bond. The fact that money is taken, embezzled, or stolen from them without any fault or negligence upon their part does not release them from liability on their official bonds." (Citing Boshyshell v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1896) 77 Fed. Rep. 945; U. S. v. Bryan, (1897) 82 Fed. Rep. 290; Bryan v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1898) 90 Fed. Rep. 473; U. S. v. Zabriskie, (1898) 87 Fed. Rep. 718; Smythe v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1901) 107 Fed. Rep. 376, and authorities there cited; State v. Nevin, (1885) 19 Nev. 162, and authorities there cited. Pond v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1901) 111 Fed. Rep. 989.

Ground of right of recovery.—In an action on the bond of an officer receiving public funds, the right of the government to recover does not rest on an implied contract of bailment, but on the express contract of the bond to pay over the funds. Smythe v. U. S., (1903) 189 U. S. 156, affirming (C. C. A. 1901) 107 Fed. Rep. 376; Bevans v. U. S., (1871) 13 Wall. (U. S.) 56; Boyden v. U. S., (1871) 13 Wall. (U. S.) 17; U. S. v. Keebler, (1869) 9 Wall. (U. S.) 83; U. S. v. Dashiell, (1866) 4 Wall. (U. S.) 182; U. S. v. Morgan, (1850) 11 How. (U. S.) 156; U. S. v. Prescott, (1845) 3 How. (U. S.) 578.

In U. S. v. Morgan, (1850) 11 How. (U. S.) 154, in an action upon the bond of a collector of customs on the ground that the conditions of the bond had been broken by not paying over large sums of money collected for the United States and by not making seasonable returns of his accounts, the court characterized as an erroneous impression that the collector "was acting as a bailee, and under the responsibilities of only the ordinary diligence of a depositary as to the canceled notes, when in truth he was acting under his commission and duties by law, as collector, and under the conditions of his bond. The collector is no more to be treated as a bailee in this case than he would be if the notes were still considered for all purposes as money. He did not receive them as a bailee, but as a collecting officer. He is liable for them on his bond and not on any original bailment or lending. And if the case can be likened to any species of bailment in forwarding them, by which they were lost, it is that of a common carrier to transmit them to the treasury, and in doing which he is not exonerated by ordinary diligence but must answer for losses by larceny, and even robbery."

In Boyden v. U. S., (1871) 13 Wall. (U. S.) 17, which was an action upon a bond of a receiver of public money—the defense being that the receiver had been by irresistible force robbed of the money sued for—the court said: "Were a receiver of public moneys, who has given bond for the faithful performance of his duties as required by law, a mere ordinary bailee, it might be that he would be relieved by proof that the money had been destroyed by fire or stolen from him or taken by irresistible force. He would then be bound only to the exercise of ordinary care, even though a bailee for hire. The contract of bailment implies no more except in the case of common carriers, and the duty of a receiver, virtute officii, is to bring to the discharge of his trust that prudence, caution, and attention which careful men usually bring to the conduct of their own affairs. He is to pay over the money in his hands as required by law, but he is not an insurer. He may, however, make himself an insurer by express contract, and this he does when he binds himself in a penal bond to perform the duties of his office without exception. There is an established difference between a duty created merely by law, and one to which is added the obligation of an express undertaking. The law does not compel to impossibilities, but it is a settled rule that if performance of an express engagement becomes impossible, by reason of anything occurring after the contract was made though unforeseen by the contracting party and not within his control, he will not be excused. * * * If, as we have seen, his liability is to be measured by his bond, and that binds him to pay the money, then the cause which renders it impossible for him to pay is of no importance, for he has assumed the risk of it."

Accountability is ground for suit.—"The true construction of section 3624 is that when a collector of internal revenue is sued upon his bond, he is sued as a person accountable for public money, and it is his accountability to the United States as a recipient of public money that renders him liable to suit, although in point of fact the money was received by him as a collector." (1878) 16 Op. Atty-Gen. 143.

Treasury notes destroyed by fire.—A superintendent of a mint is liable on his bond for the destruction of treasury notes in his custody, and it is no defense in an action therefor that such notes were destroyed by fire without any fault or negligence on his part, where his bond required him to keep safely such moneys as came into his hands and to account therefor. Nor can such action be met by the suggestion that the government if it so elects can replace the notes destroyed by other notes and thus make itself whole less the cost of printing new notes. Smythe v. U. S., (1903) 188 U. S. 156, affirming (C. C. A. 1901) 107 Fed. Rep. 376.

Money stolen.—It is not a good defense to an action on the bond of a paymaster in the army for not paying over or accounting for public moneys that came into his hands, that, without any want of proper care and diligence on his part, a certain part of the money had been stolen from him. U. S. v. Dashiell, (1866) 4 Wall. (U. S.) 182.

A bond of a receiver of public moneys conditioned for the faithful performance of his duties and that he shall keep safely and pay over all public money fixes an absolute liability to pay over such moneys, and he is not excused by the fact that such moneys are stolen from him without fault or negligence on his part and notwithstanding the fact that he had used ordinary care and diligence in keeping it. U. S. v. Prescott, (1845) 3 How. (U. S.) 578.

Money taken by rebels.—In U. S. v. Keebler, (1869) 9 Wall. (U. S.) 83, in an action upon a bond of a postmaster conditioned for the safe-keeping of public money at any time in his custody, the court said: "We cannot concede that a man who as a citizen owes allegiance to the United States and as an officer of the government holds its money or property, is at liberty to turn over the latter to an insurrectionary government which only demands it by ordinances and drafts drawn on the bailee, but which exercises no force or threat of personal violence to himself or property in the enforcement of its illegal orders."

Money received in advance.—"A public officer who receives money in advance for the contingencies of his office is a receiver of public money within the meaning of this Act." U. S. v. Lee, (1824) 2 Cranch (C. C.) 462, 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,585.

Manufacturer receiving stamps on credit.

—"A manufacturer to whom, pursuant to section 3425 of the Revised Statutes, the commissioner of internal revenue sells proprietary stamps on credit is not, in default of payment therefor, accountable for public money, and does not forfeit the commissions to which he is under that section entitled." U. S. v. Goldback, (1880) 102 U. S. 623.

Commissions forfeited on unsettled account only.—"Where an officer of the United States accountable for public money refuses to pay into the treasury the sum or balance reported to be due upon the adjustment of his account, the accounting officers of the treasury are authorized to add to such sum only the commissions due the officer on such unsettled account. The statute does not contemplate the forfeiture of all commissions paid such officer upon settled accounts during the whole term of his previous service." U. S. v. Wendell, (1864) 2 Cliff. (U. S.) 340, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,666.

Interest on refusal to pay only.—"The imposition of interest is made by the statute dependent on the refusal of the delinquent to pay into the treasury the sum or balance reported to be due." U. S. v. Collier, (1855) 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 325, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 14,833.

"Commissions on customs were intended as a compensation for a faithful performance of the duty of the officer collecting the revenue, and are not due to an officer who has not collected nor received such revenue, but who, in violation of his duty, devolved its collection on his successor." (1850) 5 Op. Atty-Gen. 278.

Sec. 3625. [Distress warrant.] Whenever any collector of the revenue, receiver of public money, or other officer who has received the public money before it is paid into the Treasury of the United States, fails to render his account, or pay over the same in the manner or within the time required by law, it shall be the duty of the proper Auditor to cause to be stated the account of such officer, exhibiting truly the amount due to the United States, and to certify the same to the Solicitor of the Treasury, who shall issue a warrant of distress against the delinquent officer and his sureties, directed to the marshal of the district in which such officer and his sureties reside. Where the officer and his sureties reside in different districts, or where they, or either of them, reside in a district other than that in which the estate of either may be, which it is intended to take and sell, then such warrant shall be directed to the marshals of such districts, respectively. [R. S.]

Act of May 15, 1820, ch. 107, 3 Stat. L. 592; Act of May 29, 1830, ch. 153, 4 Stat. L. 414.

As originally enacted, after the words "within the time required by law," the section read "it shall be the duty of the First Comptroller of the Treasury," etc. It was amended by Act of Feb. 27, 1874, ch. 69, 19 Stat. L. 249, by adding after such last quoted words, the words "or the commissioner of customs, as the case may be." It was again amended by Act of July 31, 1894, ch. 174, sec. 4, 28 Stat. L. 206, by substituting the words "proper Auditor" for the words "First Comptroller of the Treasury or the Commissioner of Customs, as the case may be," so as to make the section read as above given.

The constitutional principles were discussed and settled in Murray v. Hoboken Land, etc. Co., (1855) 18 How. (U. S.) 272. Under the Act of 1820 (3 Stat. L. 592) authorizing the secretary of the treasury to issue a distress warrant against defaulting collectors land had been sold. The proceeding was attacked as unconstitutional because no hearing was given the defendant and no trial by jury. It was said to be conferring judicial power upon other than the courts. The law, after the most full consideration, was held to be valid. It was shown that like proceedings had immemorially existed in England and since Magna Charta. The distinction was between proceedings to collect public dues and suits for enforcing private rights.

This Act is not inconsistent with that part of the Constitution which prohibits a citizen from being deprived of his liberty or property without due process of law. Murray v. Hoboken Land, etc., Co., (1855) 18 How. (U. S.) 272.

Tested by English and state law.—"Tested by the common and statute law of England prior to the emigration of our ancestors and by the laws of many of the states at the time of the adoption of this amendment, the proceedings authorized by the Act of 1820 cannot be denied to be due process of law when applied to the ascertainment and recovery of balances due to the government from a collector of customs unless there exists in the Constitution some other provision which restrains Congress from authorizing such proceedings." Murray v. Hoboken Land, etc., Co., (1855) 18 How. (U. S.) 272.

Purpose of and remedy against Act.—"The summary proceedings authorized by the recited Act were designed to secure the interests of the government in cases where the ordinary process of law would be inadequate. To provide for such emergencies the treasury department is vested with extraordinary and responsible powers; and to guard the rights of citizens from any abuse by the exercise of these powers a special authority is given to a district judge of the United States or one of the judges of this court to arrest the proceedings by granting an injunction." U. S. v. Nourse, (1832) 6 Pet. (U. S.) 470.

Executive not judicial power.—"It was an exercise of executive and not of judicial power according to the meaning of those words in the Constitution; and the privilege allowed to a collector to bring the question of his indebtedness before the courts of the United States is merely the consent of Congress to the suit, which is given in other classes of cases also." Murray v. Hoboken Land, etc., Co., (1855) 18 How. (U. S.) 272.

The authority vested by this law in certain agents of the treasury, and all acts done in pursuance thereof, are purely ministerial. The statement or certificate authorized by the Act is not a judgment, and the warrant which coerces payment is not judicial process. They are ministerial acts (for otherwise they could not be sustained), and the general principles of construction require that the authority vested by the Act shall be strictly and literally pursued. Ex p. Randolph, (1833) 2 Brock. (U. S.) 447, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,558.

In U. S. v. Taylor, (1845) 3 McLean (U. S.) 539, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,440, it was said that "the statement of an account is a ministerial duty and also the issuing of a warrant, but the exercise of a judgment whether the case comes within the statute can scarcely be held a ministerial act. There are indeed many acts required to be done by treasury officers which partake more of a judicial than a ministerial character. Treasury officers of necessity decide on claims on the evidence produced. * * * Practically the treasury officers who act upon these exercise judicial powers—not in form but in substance."

In effect judgment and execution.—"On the certificate of the balance due being given the United States may issue their warrant of distress, which is, in fact, an execution and levy for the amount certified on the person, goods, and the lands of the debtor. It has then all the effect of a judgment and the party indebted must get rid of it by showing that none or only a portion of the sum is due. Armstrong v. U. S., (1833) Gilp. (U. S.) 399, 1 Fed. Cas. No. 548.

Necessary compliance with statute.—"Summary proceedings, being statutory, in derogation of the common-law mode of procedure, must conform strictly to the statute and the record must affirmatively disclose a compliance with the requisitions of the statute." U. S. v. Ingate, (1891) 48 Fed. Rep. 251.

Extent of power.—"A warrant is authorized to be issued against the defaulter without notice and without investigation, except merely turning to the books of the treasury and ascertaining the amount charged. And under the warrant the goods and chattels, lands and tenements, of the defaulter are taken and sold on short notice; and if the sale of these be insufficient to pay the amount due, his body is taken and imprisoned. And this warrant also authorizes the marshal to take the goods and chattels, lands and tenements, of the surety and sell them on short notice. Here is no inquiry as to the due execution of the bond by the surety or the amount which his principal owes. He may have claims of set-off against a part or the whole of the sum claimed." U. S. v. Taylor, (1845) 3 McLean (U. S.) 539, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,440.

Justification of levy.—"Though a suit may be brought against the marshal for seizing property under such a warrant of distress and he may be put to show his justification, yet the action of the executive power in issuing the warrant, pursuant to the Act passed under the powers to collect and disburse the revenue granted by the Constitution, is conclusive evidence of the facts recited in it, and of the authority to make the levy." Murray v. Hoboken Land, etc., Co., (1855) 18 How. (U. S.) 272.

The decision of the proper auditor is conclusive upon the executive branch of the government and the President does not possess the power to enter into the examination of the correctness of the account for the purposes of taking any measures to repair the errors which the accounting officers appointed by law may have committed. The party who supposes that justice has been done to him must seek relief in court when a suit is brought against him or may bring his claims to the consideration of Congress. (1832) 2 Op. Atty-Gen. 507.

Real estate taken on judgment.—"Where real estate is acquired by the United States by virtue of proceedings under their provisions against a collector of internal revenue, such real estate is not to be understood as acquired 'in payment of debts arising under the laws relating to internal revenue,' within the meaning of section 3208." (1878) 16 Op. Atty.-Gen. 146.

Sec. 3626. [Contents of warrant.] The warrant of distress shall specify the amount with which such delinquent is chargeable, and the sums, if any, which have been paid. [R. S.]

Act of May 15, 1820, ch. 107, 3 Stat. L. 592; Act of May 29, 1830, ch. 153, 4 Stat. L. 414.

Sec. 3627. [Execution against officer.] The marshal authorized to execute any warrant of distress shall, by himself or by his deputy, proceed to levy and collect the sum remaining due, by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of such delinquent officer; having given ten days' previous notice of such intended sale, by affixing an advertisement of the articles to be sold at two or more public places in the town and county where the goods or chattels were taken, or in the town or county where the owner of such goods or chattels may reside. If the goods and chattels be not sufficient to satisfy the warrant, the same may be levied upon the person of such officer, who may be committed to prison, there to remain until discharged by due course of law. [R. S.]

Act of May 15, 1820, ch. 107, 3 Stat. L. 593.

Constitutional oath.—"The article of the Constitution requiring an oath or affirmation for a warrant, has no application to proceedings for the recovery of debts, where no search warrant is used." Murray v. Hoboken Land, etc., Co., (1855) 18 How. (U. S.) 272.

Habeas corpus.—"The Act of Congress authorizing the writ of habeas corpus to be issued 'for the purpose of inquiring into the cause of commitment,' applies" to cases of commitment under this Act. Ex p. Randolph, (1833) 2 Brock. (U. S.) 447, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,558.

Sec. 3628. [Execution against surety.] If the delinquent officer absconds, or if goods and chattels belonging to him cannot be found sufficient to satisfy the warrant, the marshal or his deputy shall proceed, notwithstanding the commitment of the delinquent officer, to levy and collect the sum which remains due by such delinquent, by the distress and sale of the goods and chattels of his sureties; having given ten days' previous notice of such intended sale, by affixing an advertisement of the articles to be sold at two or more public places in the town or county where the goods or chattels were taken, or in the town or county where the owner resides. [R. S.]

Act of May 15, 1820, ch. 107, 3 Stat. L. 593.

Effect on sureties.—When the surety signed an officer's bond he did so in contemplation of the statute providing for these extraordinary remedies and thus consented to the government employing the remedies therein provided for collecting any debt to it arising from the officer's default. U. S. v. Ingate, (1891) 48 Fed. Rep. 251.

Return of marshal as evidence.—"The return of the marshal that he had levied on lands by virtue of such warrant is at least prima facie evidence that the levy was not irregular by reason of the existence of goods and chattels of the collector subject to his process." Murray v. Hoboken Land, etc., Co., (1855) 18 How. (U. S.) 272.

Sec. 3629. [Levy to be a lien.] The amount due by any delinquent officer is declared to be a lien upon the lands, tenements, and hereditaments of such officer and his sureties, from the date of a levy in pursuance of the warrant of distress issued against him or them, and a record thereof made in the office of the clerk of the district court of the proper district, until the same is discharged according to law. [R. S.]

Act of May 15, 1820, ch. 107, 3 Stat. L. 593.

Sec. 3630. [Sale of lands regulated.] For want of goods and chattels of a delinquent officer, or his sureties, sufficient to satisfy any warrant of distress issued pursuant to the foregoing provisions, the lands, tenements, and hereditaments of such officer and his sureties, or so much thereof as may be necessary for that purpose, after being advertised for at least three weeks in not less than three public places in the county or district where such real estate is situate, before the time of sale, shall be sold by the marshal of such district or his deputy. [R. S.]

Act of May 15, 1820, ch. 107, 3 Stat. L. 593.

Sec. 3631. [Conveyance of lands.] For all lands, tenements, or hereditaments sold in pursuance of the preceding section, the conveyance of the marshal or his deputy, executed in due form of law, shall give a valid title against all persons claiming under such delinquent officer or his sureties. [R. S.]

Act of May 15, 1820, ch. 107, 3 Stat. L. 593.

Sec. 3632. [Disposal of surplus.] All moneys which may remain of the proceeds of sales, after satisfying the warrant of distress, and paying the reasonable costs and charges of the sale, shall be returned to such delinquent officer or surety, as the case may be. [R. S.]

Act of May 15, 1820, ch. 107, 3 Stat. L. 593.

Sec. 3633. [Failure of disbursing officer to account — penalty.] Whenever any officer employed in the civil, military, or naval service of the Government, to disburse the public money appropriated for those branches of the public service, respectively, fails to render his accounts, or to pay over, in the manner and in the times required by law, or by the regulations of the Department to which he is accountable, any sum of money remaining in his hands, it shall be the duty of the proper Auditor, as the case may be, who shall be charged with the revision of the accounts of such officer, to cause to be stated and certified the account of such delinquent officer to the Solicitor of the Treasury, who is hereby authorized and required immediately to proceed against such delinquent officer, in the manner directed in the six preceding sections. [R. S.]

Act of May 15, 1820, ch. 107, 3 Stat. L. 594; Act of May 29, 1830, ch. 153, 4 Stat. L. 414.

This section was amended by the Act of July 31, 1894, ch. 174, sec. 4, 28 Stat. L. 206, by substituting the words "proper Auditor" for the words "First or Second Comptroller of the Treasury," appearing in the section as originally enacted.

To whom applicable. — "The Act does not apply in sound construction to every commissioned officer of the army or navy of the United States, to whose hands any public money may be intrusted, but only to those regularly appointed disbursing officers, who have given official bonds with sureties for the faithful discharge of the duties of their office; it does not embrace a mere acting purser in the navy." Ex p. Randolph, (1833) 2 Brock. (U. S.) 447, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,558.

Bill in equity. — No such remedies as are herein provided can be pursued in a bill in equity for a discovery and to set aside fraudulent conveyances. U. S. v. Ingate, (1891) 48 Fed. Rep. 251.

Accounts settled. — "The account of an acting purser having been once stated and settled at the treasury department, the law invests the auditor with no power to open and resettle it of his own mere authority. The Act creates a special and limited jurisdiction, and after the accounts of any of the class of officers on whom it was intended to act have been adjusted, however erroneously, that special jurisdiction is functus officio, and any process issued upon a resettlement of such accounts is absolutely null and void." Ex p. Randolph, (1833) 2 Brock. (U. S.) 447, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,558.

"In case of an erroneous settlement a bill in equity would lie to surcharge and falsify as in the case of a settled account between individuals." Ex p. Randolph, (1833) 2 Brock. (U. S.) 447, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,558.

Sec. 3634. [Extent of application of provision for distress warrants.] All the provisions relating to the issuing of a warrant of distress against a delinquent officer shall extend to every officer of the Government charged with the disbursement of the public money, and to their sureties, in the same manner and to the same extent as if they were herein described and enumerated. [R. S.]

Act of May 15, 1820, ch. 107, 3 Stat. L. 594.

Sec. 3635. [Postponement of proceedings for non-accounting allowed.] With the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, the institution of proceedings by a warrant of distress may be postponed, for a reasonable time, in cases where, in his opinion, the public interest will sustain no injury by such postponement. [R. S.]

Act of May 15, 1820, ch. 107, 3 Stat. L. 594.

Sec. 3636. [Injunction to stay distress warrant.] Any person who considers himself aggrieved by any warrant of distress issued under the foregoing provisions may prefer a bill of complaint to any district judge of the United States, setting forth therein the nature and extent of the injury of which he complains; and thereupon the judge may grant an injunction to stay proceedings on such warrant altogether, or for so much thereof as the nature of the case requires. But no injunction shall issue till the party applying for it gives bond, with sufficient security, in a sum to be prescribed by the judge, for the performance of such judgment as may be awarded against him; nor shall the issuing of such injunction in any manner impair the lien produced by the issuing of the warrant. And the same proceedings shall be had on such injunction as in other cases, except that no answer shall be necessary on the part of the United States; and if, upon dissolving the injunction, it appears to the satisfaction of the judge that the application for the injunction was merely for delay, the judge may add to the lawful interest assessed on all sums found due against the complainant such damages as, with such lawful interest, shall not exceed the rate of ten per centum a year. Such injunction may be granted or dissolved by the district judge either in or out of court. [R. S.]

Act of May 15, 1820, ch. 107, 3 Stat. 595.

Power of Congress to allow suit.— Though no suit can be brought against the United States without the consent of Congress, yet Congress may consent to have a suit brought to try the question whether the collector be indebted, that being a subject capable of judicial determination and may empower a court to act on that determination and restrain the levy of the warrant of distress within the limits of the debt judicially found to exist. Murray v. Hoboken Land, etc., Co., (1855) 18 How. (U. S.) 272.

Who may prefer bill of complaint.— "The sections which regulate the proceedings of the treasury department on the warrant, contemplate the officer against whom it may be issued and confine it to him; but when the legislature turns its attention to the individual against whom it may issue, the language of the law is immediately changed. The word person is substituted for officer. * * * The character of the individual against whom the warrant may be issued is entirely disregarded by this part of the Act. Be he whom he may, an officer or not an officer, a debtor or not a debtor; if the warrant be levied on his person or property, he is permitted to appeal to the laws of his country and to bring his case before the district judge to be adjudicated by him." U. S. v. Nourse, (1835) 9 Pet. (U. S.) 8.

Jurisdiction limited by Act.— "As the proceedings on this injunction in regard to the merits of the case are to be the same as in other cases of injunction and may be had before the judge out of court, and as the District Court possesses no chancery powers, the jurisdiction given by this Act must be limited by it." U. S. v. Nourse, (1832) 6 Pet. (U. S.) 470.

Power in court, not judge.— "The Act of Congress prescribing the mode of relief against a treasury warrant of distress confers a power upon the court and not upon the judge as an individual." Porter v. U. S., 2 Paine (U. S.) 313, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,290.

Powers of district judge.— The Act "gives to the district judge a special jurisdiction which he may exercise at his discretion— while holding the District Court or at any other time. Ordinarily, as district judge, he has no chancery powers; but in proceeding under this statute, he is governed by the rules of chancery which apply to injunctions, except no answer to the bill is required by the government." U. S. v. Cox, (1837) 11 Pet. (U. S.) 182.

President's power to interfere.—Where proceedings on a claim by the government have been vexatious and oppressive and the suit repeatedly dismissed and again renewed, and where the defendant has been harassed by tedious and expensive litigation until he has been deprived of important testimony by the death of important witnesses, the President may unquestionably interfere and compel the officer of the government in charge of the suit to prepare for and proceed to trial without delay; but it is not in the power of the executive to afford other relief to the defendant, such as a dismissal of the suit. (1832) 2 Op. Atty.-Gen. 507.

Extent of injunction and effect of decision.—The District Court has jurisdiction to enjoin, in whole or in part, the execution of a treasury warrant of distress whether the person complaining was or was not an officer against whom such a warrant might lawfully be issued; its decision is final and bars an action on the account which formed the subject-matter of the warrant and of the bill of complaint. U. S. v. Nourse, (1835) 9 Pet. (U. S.) 8.

Whole or part of demand.—"The judge who allows the injunction may extend it to the whole or a part of the demand of the government as the equity of the case may require." U. S. v. Nourse, (1832) 6 Pet. (U. S.) 470.

What must be shown by complainant.—The bill of complaint of a debtor against whom a warrant of distress has been issued is in the nature of a motion to stay execution on a judgment, and the beginning and conclusion of the argument are with the debtor. The district attorney has nothing to show but his warrant of distress, which is prima facie evidence of the debt and is already in possession of the court, being in the hands of its officer. The question before the court relates only to the continuance or removal of this warrant, not to the final settlement of the debt or balance between the parties. It is incumbent on the complainant to show that there are sufficient grounds for its removal in whole or in part. In this he is the actor. Armstrong v. U. S., (1833) Gilp. (U. S.) 399, 1 Fed. Cas. No. 548.

Subsequent suit for same demand.—Judgment in favor of the proceedings under the treasury warrant of distress is a conclusive bar to a subsequent suit by the United States for the same demand on the general principle that the judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction, while unreversed, concludes the subject-matter as between the same parties. They cannot bring it again into litigation. U. S. v. Nourse, (1835) 9 Pet. (U. S.) 8.

Appeal or writ of error.—The general law allowing appeals cannot be so construed as to enable the Supreme Court by appeal or writ of error to revise the proceedings of the district judge under this statute. U. S. v. Cox, (1837) 11 Pet. (U. S.) 182.

In Porter v. U. S., 2 Paine (U. S.) 313, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,290, however, it was held that the decision of the district judge awarding a perpetual injunction against a treasury warrant of distress is a final decree within the Act of Congress which allows an appeal from all final judgments or decrees of a District Court to the Circuit Court.

Bill of review.—On the hearing of this case a certain amount was adjudged to be due the United States, which was paid by the defendant. The United States subsequently filed their petition for leave to file a bill of review, alleging that new and other evidence had been discovered since the hearing which it was not in their power to produce at that time. This application was refused because, as stated in the statement of the case, the Act did not vest in the District Court general and unlimited equity powers but merely gave a special authority which having been executed could not be reviewed by that court. U. S. v. Bullock, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 486, note.

Sec. 3637. [Proceedings on distress in circuit court.] When the district judge refuses to grant an injunction to stay proceedings on a distress-warrant, as aforesaid, or dissolves such injunction after it is granted, any person who considers himself aggrieved by the decision in the premises may lay before the circuit justice, or circuit judge of the circuit within which such district lies, a copy of the proceeding had before the district judge; and thereupon the circuit justice or circuit judge may grant an injunction, or permit an appeal, as the case may be, if, in his opinion, the equity of the case requires it. The same proceedings, subject to the same conditions, shall be had upon such injunction in the circuit court as are prescribed in the district court. [R. S.]

Act of May 15, 1820, ch. 107, 3 Stat. L. 595; Act of April 10, 1869, ch. 22, 16 Stat. L. 44.

Only manner of appeal.—"As this special mode is pointed out by which an appeal from the decision of the district judge to the Circuit Court may be taken, it negatives the right to an appeal in any other manner." U. S. v. Nourse, (1832) 6 Pet. (U. S.) 470, reversing (1831) 4 Cranch (C. C.) 151, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 15,901.

Right of government to appeal.—"The government consents to have the summary proceedings instituted by its officers arrested on certain conditions and gives a right to the aggrieved party to carry his complaint to the Circuit Court, but no appeal is provided for or seems to be contemplated in behalf of the government. Having submitted itself to the special jurisdiction created by the Act, it is as much bound by the decision of the judge as an individual, and can claim no exemption from the decision, by appeal or otherwise, which does not belong equally to the other party, independent of any special provision." U. S. v. Nourse, (1832) 6 Pet.

(U. S.) 470, reversing (1831) 4 Cranch (C. C.) 151, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 15,901.

"As no appeal is given to the government in the statute by writ of error or otherwise, either to the Circuit or the Supreme Court, the decree of the district judge in favor of the defendant must be held final." U. S. v. Cox, (1837) 11 Pet. (U. S.) 162.

Sec. 3638. [Rights of United States reserved.] Nothing contained in the provisions of this Title relating to distress-warrants shall be construed to take away or impair any right or remedy which the United States might have, by law, for the recovery of taxes, debts, or demands. [R. S.]

Act of May 15, 1820, ch. 107, 3 Stat. L. 596:

Sec. 3639. [Duties of officers as custodians of public moneys.] The Treasurer of the United States, all assistant treasurers, and those performing the duties of assistant treasurer, all collectors of the customs, all surveyors of the customs, acting also as collectors, all receivers of public moneys at the several land-offices, all postmasters, and all public officers of whatsoever character, are required to keep safely, without loaning, using, depositing in banks, or exchanging for other funds than as specially allowed by law, all the public money collected by them, or otherwise at any time placed in their possession and custody, till the same is ordered, by the proper Department or officer of the Government, to be transferred or paid out; and when such orders for transfer or payment are received, faithfully and promptly to make the same as directed, and to do and perform all other duties as fiscal agents of the Government which may be imposed by any law, or by any regulation of the Treasury Department made in conformity to law. The President is authorized, if in his opinion the interest of the United States requires the same, to regulate and increase the sums for which bonds are, or may be, required by law, of all district attorneys, collectors of customs, naval officers, and surveyors of customs, navy agents, receivers and registers of public lands, paymasters in the Army, commissary-general, and by all other officers employed in the disbursement of the public moneys, under the direction of the War or Navy Departments. [R. S.]

Act of Aug. 6, 1846, ch. 90, 9 Stat. L. 60; Act of July 3, 1852, ch. 54, 10 Stat. L. 12; Act of March 3, 1857, ch. 114, 11 Stat. L. 249; Act of April 21, 1862, ch. 59, 12 Stat. L. 382; Act of March 3, 1863, ch. 96, 12 Stat. L. 770; Act of July 4, 1864, ch. 224, 13 Stat. L. 383; Act of Feb. 19, 1869, ch. 33, 15 Stat. L. 271.

What duties included.—This statute intended to include such duties as naturally and ordinarily belong to the particular officer giving the bond, or have some obvious relation to such duty, and such as the sureties acquainted with the duties which are usually devolved by law upon the various public officers might reasonably be expected to contemplate at the time of executing the bond, as likely to be imposed upon their principal in case the exigencies of the government should require it; and not those duties which are usually imposed upon and more appropriately belong to an entirely different class of officers. U. S. v. Cheeseman, (1875) 3 Sawy. (U. S.) 424, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 14,790.

Officers of United States only.—"A clerk of the collector is not an officer of the United States within the provisions of this section; and it is only to persons of that rank that the term public officer as there used applies. An officer of the United States can only be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, or by a court of law, or the head of a department. A person in the service of the government who does not derive his position from one of these sources is not an officer of the United States, in the sense of the Constitution." U. S. v. Smith, (1888) 124 U. S. 525.

Fiscal agents only.—"The officers specially designated in section 3639 are all charged by some Act of Congress with duties connected with the collection, disbursement, or keeping of the public moneys, or to perform other duties as fiscal agents of the government." U. S. v. Smith, (1888) 124 U. S. 525.

Postmasters included.—"This section designates postmasters as one class of fiscal agents of the government by whom public money may be collected, or into whose possession and custody it may otherwise be placed. It provides for the safe-keeping of the public money and provides the mode for transferring or paying out the same." U. S. v. Mayers, (1896) 81 Fed. Rep. 150.

Additional duties or assistant treasurer.—It can hardly be supposed that Congress intended that the words "all other duties as fiscal agents of the government which may be imposed by this or any other Act" should include the duties of collectors of customs, receivers of land offices and postmasters in case Congress should after giving the bond see fit to impose the duties of such officers on the assistant treasurer. U. S. v. Cheeseman, (1875) 3 Sawy. (U. S.) 424, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 14,790.

Collector transporting money.—This statute does not require a collector to act as agent for the transporting of money without some law directly imposing such duty upon him, or authorizing the secretary to do so in his discretion. The collector acting as such agent is only a private carrier responsible for ordinary care and diligence. U. S. v. Adams, (1885) 24 Fed. Rep. 351.

"A clerk of a collector holding his position at the will of the latter, discharging only such duties as may be assigned to him by that officer, comes neither within the letter nor the purview of the statute." U. S. v. Smith, (1888) 124 U. S. 525.

"No clerk of a collector of customs is by section 3639 of the Revised Statutes charged with the safe keeping of the public moneys." U. S. v. Smith, (1888) 124 U. S. 525.

Money lost.—The assistant treasurer at New York and his sureties are liable on their bond for money lost although such money was lost without any wrongful conduct or neglect on the part of the assistant treasurer. U. S. v. Butterfield, (1874) 7 Ben. (U. S.) 412, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 14,703.

Liability of sureties.—"Subsequent to the passage of the Act of Congress of June 30, 1864, to provide internal revenue, etc. (13 Stat. L. 223), the assistant treasurer of the United States and treasurer of the branch mint at San Francisco gave an official bond in pursuance of sections 6 and 7 of the Act of Aug. 6, 1846, to provide for the reorganization of the treasury, etc. (9 Stat. L. 60), and conditioned in the language of said sections; also referring to the Act of May 23, 1850, providing for a bullion fund (9 Stat. L. 436), but not containing the conditions prescribed for stamp agent's bonds by section 170 of said Act of June 30, 1864, and not making any reference to said Act or duties. * * * Held that the sureties on said bond given as assistant treasurer and treasurer of 'he branch mint are not liable for any default of their principal occurring in the performance of the duties of stamp agent in pursuance of the provisions of said section 170 of said Act of June 30, 1864." U. S. v. Cheeseman, (1875) 3 Sawy. (U. S.) 424, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 14,790.

Sureties on a collector's bond are not responsible for moneys lost or stolen, while being transported by the collector. U. S. v. Adams, (1885) 24 Fed. Rep. 351.

Payment of checks of army paymasters.—"If the paymaster-general should neglect or refuse to place adequate funds to the credit of the proper paymasters, or, after so doing, should withdraw the funds, the United States would be released from obligation to pay their officers and soldiers." "The obligation created by checks issued in pursuance of this enactment is, therefore, a public and not a private obligation." (1865) 11 Op. Atty.-Gen. 216.

Sec. 3640. [Transfer of moneys from depositaries to Treasury authorized.]

The Secretary of the Treasury may, except as provided in the next section, transfer the moneys in the hands of any depositary of public moneys to the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the Treasurer; and he may transfer moneys in the hands of one depositary to any other depositary, as the safety of the public moneys and the convenience of the public service shall seem to him to require. [R. S.]

Act of Aug. 6, 1846, ch. 90, 9 Stat. L. 61.

Contracts for transportation of moneys.—See PUBLIC CONTRACTS. ante. p. 90.

Bank's relation to United States.—When public money is deposited with a designated depository national bank, it is not there retained in kind as the property of the United States, of which the bank is made the custodian, but it becomes at once the property of the bank, is mingled with its other funds, is loaned or otherwise employed in the ordinary business of the corporation, and the bank instead of being a custodian of public money becomes a debtor to the United States as it does to other depositors on credit of individual deposits. Branch's Case, (1876) 12 Ct. Cl. 281.

It is manifest that designated depository banks are not made part of the treasury of the United States proper, rendering the government liable for the safe keeping or payment of the money deposited therein to the credit of the customers of those institutions. As to its own public money intrusted thereto it relies upon the credit of the corporations and the securities taken as collateral, of which the one is subject to the vicissitudes of the institutions and the other to the care and vigilance of the public officers. Such money, or the credits therefor, when under the control of the treasurer of the United States and subject to his draft, may be considered as public money, although not in the treasury. Branch's Case, (1876) 12 Ct. Cl. 281.

Sec. 3641. [Transfer of postal deposits.] The Postmaster-General may transfer money belonging to the postal service between the Treasurer, assistant treasurers, and designated depositories, at his discretion, and as the safety of the public money and the convenience of the service may require. [R. S.]

Act of June 8, 1872, ch. 335, 17 Stat. L. 292.

Sec. 3642. [Accounts of postal deposits.] Every depository shall keep his account of the money paid to or deposited with him, belonging to the Post Office Department, separate and distinct from the account kept by him of other public moneys so paid or deposited. [R. S.]

Act of Aug. 6, 1846, ch. 90, 9 Stat. L. 61.

Sec. 3643. [Entry of each deposit, transfer, and payment.] All persons charged by law with the safe-keeping, transfer, and disbursement of the public moneys, other than those connected with the Post-Office Department, are required to keep an accurate entry of each sum received and of each payment or transfer. [R. S.]

Act of Aug. 6, 1846, ch. 90, 9 Stat. L. 63.

Sec. 3644. [Public moneys in Treasury and depositories subject to draft of Treasurer.] All moneys paid into the Treasury of the United States shall be subject to the draft of the Treasurer. And for the purpose of payments on the public account the Treasurer is authorized to draw upon any of the depositories, as he may think most conducive to the public interest and to the convenience of the public creditors. Each depository so drawn upon shall make returns to the Treasury and Post-Office Departments of all moneys received and paid by him, at such times and in such forms as shall be directed by the Secretary of the Treasury or the Postmaster-General. [R. S.]

Act of Aug. 6, 1846, ch. 90, 9 Stat. L. 61.

Sec. 3645. [Regulations for presentment of drafts.] It shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to issue and publish regulations to enforce the speedy presentation of all Government drafts, for payment, at the place where payable, and to prescribe the time, according to the different distances of the depositories from the seat of Government, within which all drafts upon them, respectively, shall be presented for payment; and, in default of such presentation, to direct any other mode and place of payment which he may deem proper; but, in all these regulations and directions, it shall be his duty to guard, as far as may be, against those drafts being used or thrown into circulation as a paper currency or a medium of exchange. [R. S.]

Act of Aug. 6, 1846, ch. 90, 9 Stat. L. 65.

Sec. 3646. [Duplicates for lost or stolen checks authorized.] Whenever any original check is lost, stolen, or destroyed, disbursing officers and agents of the United States are authorized, after the expiration of six months, and within three years from the date of such check, to issue a duplicate check; and the Treasurer, assistant treasurers, and designated depositories of the United States are directed to pay such duplicate checks, upon notice and proof of the loss of the original checks, under such regulations in regard to their issue and payment, and upon the execution of such bonds, with sureties, to indemnify the United States, as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe. This section shall not apply to any check exceeding in amount the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars. [R. S.]

Act of Feb. 2, 1872, ch. 12, 17 Stat. L. 29.

This section was amended by the Act of Feb. 16, 1885, ch. 123, 23 Stat. L. 306, by substituting in place of the words "one thousand," appearing in the section as originally enacted, the words "twenty-five hundred," as above given.

Extent of power. — The power given to an accounting officer to duplicate lost checks is not exclusive, nor does it affect the jurisdiction of the Court of Claims. Becker v. U. S., (1891) 26 Ct. Cl. 172.

When payment is made — Where a government check is lost or stolen the Revised Statutes do not require that payment must be postponed for three years or preclude a suit. They simply authorize disbursing officers to duplicate small checks in certain cases. Becker v. U. S., (1891) 26 Ct. Cl. 172.

Sec. 3647. [Duplicate check when officer who issued is dead.] In case the disbursing officer or agent by whom such lost, destroyed, or stolen original check was issued, is dead, or no longer in the service of the United States, it shall be the duty of the proper accounting officer, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe, to state an account in favor of the owner of such original check for the amount thereof, and to charge such amount to the account of such officer or agent. [R. S.]

Act of Feb. 7, 1872, ch. 12, 17 Stat. L. 29.

Sec. 3648. [Advances of public moneys prohibited.] No advance of public money shall be made in any case whatever. And in all cases of contracts for the performance of any service, or the delivery of articles of any description, for the use of the United States, payment shall not exceed the value of the service rendered, or of the articles delivered previously to such payment. It shall, however, be lawful, under the special direction of the President, to make such advances to the disbursing officers of the Government as may be necessary to the faithful and prompt discharge of their respective duties, and to the fulfillment of the public engagements. The President may also direct such advances as he may deem necessary and proper, to persons in the military and naval service employed on distant stations, where the discharge of the pay and emoluments to which they may be entitled cannot be regularly effected. [R. S.]

Advances to persons in naval service on distant stations. See NAVY, vol. 5, p. 326.

"The object of that section is not to preclude a payment in any case where the money has been actually earned and the government has received an equivalent therefor, but to prevent payments being made to contractors in advance of the performance of their contracts, whether for services or the supply of articles of any kind." (1885) 18 Op. Atty-Gen. 105.

Complete performance of contract. — This statute was intended to prevent a department from anticipating the performance of an agreement, by keeping the payment within the "value of the service," and does not apply when there is a complete performance although the government may not have received any benefit in consequence of the destruction of the subject-matter of the agreement. McClure v. U. S., (1884) 19 Ct. Cl. 173.

But in (1894) 20 Op. Atty-Gen. 746, it was said that "the intent of this provision is that the United States shall not pay for any work or materials until it had received their benefit. It matters not that the work for which pay is asked has already been done."

President's right to delegate power. —

The power vested to make advances for the public service is one appertaining to the office of President, but is not an authority strictly personal and ministerial, to be exercised in every instance only by the person himself, by his own hand, and never in any respect to be delegated. Williams v. U. S., (1843) 1 How. (U. S.) 290.

Advances by head of department. — As the President speaks and acts through the heads of departments in reference to the business committed to them, if money is advanced by the direction of the head of the proper department, in the absence of evidence, the direction of the President will be presumed. U. S. v. Cutter, (1856) 2 Curt. (U. S.) 617, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 14,911.

Expenses incident to the courts. — "Average estimates may be formed of the expenses incident to the courts, and instructions may be given by the President to the secretary of the treasury to make advances from time to time, either upon the basis of those estimates or upon statements or requisitions made by the marshals themselves, showing the necessity of advances to meet the public service." Williams v. U. S., (1843) 1 How. (U. S.) 290.

Advances to contractors. — "It is the plain meaning of this law that no money shall be advanced to contractors; that is, that no money shall be paid to them on account of their contracts before the actual performance of the service or the delivery of the articles stipulated for. And this not only forbids the contracting officer of the government to pay the money in advance but forbids him also to contract for such payment." (1862) 10 Op. Atty-Gen. 288.

Advances to public ministers.—"I think it is very clear from the terms of the Act," said Attorney-General Berrien, construing the prior Act, "that advances to foreign ministers were not in the contemplation of the legislature at the time of framing it. It is true that it forbids in general terms the advance of public money in any case whatever; but the subsequent specifications of the Act seem to me to restrict and qualify the generality of this inhibition. These authorize advances under the direction of the President of the United States to disbursing officers of the government when such advances are necessary to the prompt and faithful discharge of their public duties; and to persons in the military and naval service, who may be employed on distant stations, where the discharge of the pay and emoluments to which they are entitled cannot be regularly effected. Now, if the compensation to be made to the diplomatic agents of the government had been supposed to be embraced within the inhibitory provisions of this Act, it is difficult to conceive that Congress should have omitted to invest the President with a similar discretion in relation to these agents. Many cases will certainly occur in which it will be more difficult for the government to fulfil its engagements on the score of compensation to this latter class of agents than any which can be selected among the other. * * * If the Act we have been considering had been deemed applicable to the foreign intercourse fund, a corresponding provision would have been made, extending the executive discretion to this class of cases also." (1829) 2 Op. Atty-Gen. 204.

"The President being intrusted with the subject of the diplomatic intercourse of the United States with foreign nations, may in his discretion advance money to a minister going abroad over and above his outfit." (1829) 2 Op. Atty-Gen. 204.

"The President of the United States having the foreign intercourse fund under his direction may advance, to a minister going from the United States to a foreign country such part of his salary as he shall deem necessary to the proper fulfilment of public engagements in respect to him." (1823) 1 Op. Atty-Gen. 620.

Advances to marshal of District of Columbia.—"The President of the United States has authority to order advances of money to be made by the secretary of the treasury to the marshal of the District of Columbia; and such advances may be presumed to have been made under the special direction of the President, and the sureties of the marshal are liable therefor." U. S. v. Williams, (1839) 5 Cranch (C. C.) 619, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,715, affirmed in (1843) 1 How. (U. S.) 290.

Acceptance of drafts before service rendered.—"The acceptance of a draft by the secretary of war drawn on him by army contractors before services contracted for were received or supplies to be furnished were delivered were mere accommodation loans of the credit of the United States without authority and therefore void. "But if these acceptances can be considered as payments," said Mr. Justice Miller, "they were payments in advance of the service rendered and supplies furnished—payments made before anything was due. They are in that view not only without authority of law, but are expressly forbidden." The Floyd Acceptances, (1868) 7 Wall. (U. S.) 666.

Part payments cannot be made upon government contracts unless the United States thereupon becomes the owner of the work paid for. (1894) 20 Op. Atty-Gen. 746.

Payment in full for the vessel in advance of its completion and acceptance is forbidden by this section, and hence a modification of the contract to this extent would be beyond the power of the secretary. (1885) 18 Op. Atty-Gen. 101.

Expenses of detecting counterfeiting.—"The President may allow the payment out of the judicial fund of extraordinary expenses incurred by the United States marshals, in executing the laws, by detecting and bringing to punishment persons engaged in counterfeiting treasury notes after such expenses have been specially taxed by the court in whose district the work has been done, yet * * * the secretary of the interior has no authority to make requisitions upon that fund for money to be advanced to marshals to be used in efforts to detect counterfeiters of that kind." (1862) 10 Op. Atty-Gen. 225.

Liability of sureties.—"The section requiring the especial direction of the President to authorize the advance of public moneys to disbursing officers is merely directory to the officers of the government and is not a qualification of the contract of the surety for such officer; and the surety is liable for the misappropriation of public money by his principal, though it was advanced to him contrary to this Act. U. S. v. Cutter, (1856) 2 Curt. (U. S.) 617, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 14,911.

Joint resolution providing for partial payments for work, and so forth, for vessels constructed under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury.

[Res. No. 24, of May 5, 1894, 28 Stat. L. 582.]

[Partial payments on contracts for construction of vessels for Treasury Department—lien.] That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he hereby is, authorized to make partial payments, from time to time, upon existing contracts and all contracts hereafter made for the construction of vessels for the Treasury Department, but not in excess of seventy-five per cent of the amount of the value of the work already done; and that the contracts hereafter made shall provide for a lien upon such vessels for all advances so made: Provided, That nothing in this Joint Resolution shall be construed to hereafter authorize any partial payments, except on contracts stipulating for the same and then only in accordance with such contract stipulation. [28 Stat. L. 582.]

SEC. 11. [Requisition for advances — warrants.] Every requisition for an advance of money, before being acted on by the Secretary of the Treasury, shall be sent to the proper Auditor for action thereon as required by section twelve of this Act.

All warrants, when authorized by law and signed by the Secretary of the Treasury, shall be countersigned by the Comptroller of the Treasury, and all warrants for the payment of money shall be accompanied either by the Auditor's certificate, mentioned in section seven of this Act, or by the requisition for advance of money, which certificate or requisition shall specify the particular appropriation to which the same should be charged, instead of being specified on the warrant, as now provided by section thirty-six hundred and seventy-five of the Revised Statutes; and shall also go with the warrant to the Treasurer, who shall return the certificate or requisition to the proper Auditor, with the date and amount of the draft issued indorsed thereon. Requisitions for the payment of money on all audited accounts, or for covering money into the Treasury, shall not hereafter be required. And requisitions for advances of money shall not be countersigned by the Comptroller of the Treasury. * * * [28 Stat. L. 209.]

See further ESTIMATES, APPROPRIATIONS, AND REPORTS, vol. 2, p. 894; TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

Sec. 3649. [Examination of depositaries.] The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to cause examinations to be made of the books, accounts, and money on hand, of the several depositaries; and for that purpose to appoint special agents, as occasion may require, with such compensation, not exceeding six dollars per day and traveling expenses, as he may think reasonable, to be fixed and declared at the time of each appointment. The agent selected to make these examinations shall be instructed to examine as well the books, accounts, and returns of the officer, as the money on hand, and the manner of its being kept, to the end that uniformity and accuracy in the accounts, as well as safety to the public moneys, may be secured thereby. [R. S.]

Act of Aug. 6, 1846, ch. 90, 9 Stat. L. 62.

Sale of public lands. — "The expenses incurred in the examination of the books, accounts, etc., of the receivers of public moneys, arising from the sale of the public lands by designated agents of the treasury department, under the sub-treasury law, are chargeable to the appropriations for special agents to examine books, accounts, and money on hand in the several depositories under that law." (1851) 5 Op. Atty.-Gen. 377.

Sec. 3650. [Examination of accounts of custodians of public moneys.] In addition to the examinations provided for in the preceding section, it shall be the duty of each naval officer and surveyor, as a check upon the assistant treasurers, or the collector of the customs, of their respective districts; of each register of a land-office, as a check upon the receiver of his land-office; and of the director and superintendent of each mint and branch-mint, when separate officers, as a check upon the treasurers, respectively, of the mints, or the persons acting as such, at the close of each quarter of the year, and as much oftener as they are directed by the Secretary of the Treasury to do so, to examine the books, accounts, returns, and money on hand, of the assistant treasurers, collectors, receivers of land-offices, treasurers of the Mint and each branch-mint, and persons acting as such, and to make a full, accurate, and faithful return of their condition to the Secretary of the Treasury. [R. S.]

Sec. 3651. [Exchange of funds restricted.] No exchange of funds shall be made by any disbursing officer or agent of the Government, of any grade or denomination whatsoever, or connected with any branch of the public service, other than an exchange for gold, silver, United States notes, and national-bank notes; and every such disbursing officer, when the means for his disbursements are furnished to him in gold, silver, United States notes, or national-bank notes, shall make his payments in the moneys so furnished; or when they are furnished to him in drafts, shall cause those drafts to be presented at their place of payment, and properly paid according to law, and shall make his payments in the money so received for the drafts furnished, unless, in either case, he can exchange the means in his hands for gold and silver at par. And it shall be the duty of the head of the proper Department immediately to suspend from duty any disbursing officer or agent who violates the provisions of this section, and forthwith to report the name of the officer or agent to the President, with the fact of the violation, and all the circumstances accompanying the same, and within the knowledge of the Secretary, to the end that such officer or agent may be promptly removed from office, or restored to his trust and the performance of his duties, as the President may deem just and proper. [R. S.]

Act of Aug. 6, 1846, ch. 90, 9 Stat. L. 64; Act of Feb. 22, 1862, ch. 33, 12 Stat. L. 345; Act of July 11, 1862, ch. 142, 12 Stat. L. 532; Act of March 3, 1863, ch. 73, 12 Stat. L. 710; Act of June 3, 1864, ch. 106, 13 Stat. L. 106.

The term "public money," as used in the statutes of the United States, ordinarily means the money of the government, received from the public revenues, or intrusted to its officers charged with the duty of receiving, keeping, or disbursing the same wherever it may be. It does not include the money of states, counties, cities, and towns, although with reference to those governments and municipalities such funds in other connections would be deemed public money. Nor does it include money in the hands of the marshals, clerks, and other officers of court held by them under authority of law to await the judgment of the court in relation to the ownership thereof. Branch's Case, (1876) 12 Ct. Cl. 281.

Exchanging one medium for another.—"The first of these clauses forbids any exchange of funds by disbursing officers or agents of the government other than an exchange of them for gold, silver, United States notes, and national bank notes, but gives no authority for the exchange of either of these moneys for the others." (1879) 16 Op. Atty-Gen. 381.

Disbursing officer as bailor.—"The second clause * * * treats every disbursing officer not as a debtor to the United States, but as a bailor of the funds of the United States, who is required to pay them out and necessarily to keep them in the precise form in which he receives them." (1879) 16 Op. Atty-Gen. 381.

Exchange of gold and silver for U. S. notes.—"In view of the fact that the second clause makes it the imperative duty of every disbursing officer to make payments in the moneys which he receives, and that no provision is found permitting him to exchange gold and silver for other moneys, I am of opinion," said Attorney-General Chas. Devens, "that the clause in question presents an obstacle to your wish to exchange gold and silver coin for United States notes through the depositaries of the United States, which cannot be avoided under the present legislation." (1879) 16 Op. Atty-Gen. 381.

Exchange of drafts.—"The third clause contemplates that under certain circumstances (as where drafts are furnished the disbursing officer) he may exchange the means in his hands for gold and silver at par; but no authority is given to make any other exchange." (1879) 16 Op. Atty-Gen. 381.

Sec. 3652. [Premium on sales of public moneys to be accounted for.] No officer of the United States shall, either directly or indirectly, sell or dispose of to any person, for a premium, any Treasury note, draft, warrant, or other public security, not his private property, or sell or dispose of the avails or proceeds of such note, draft, warrant, or security, in his hands for disbursement, without making return of such premium, and accounting therefor by charging the same in his accounts to the credit of the United States; and any officer violating this section shall be forthwith dismissed from office. [R. S.]

Sec. 3653. [Expenses of fiscal agents.] The officers, respectively, whose duty it is made by this Title to receive, keep, or disburse the public moneys, as the fiscal agents of the Government, may be allowed any necessary additional expenses for clerks, fire-proof chests or vaults, or other necessary expenses of safe-keeping, transferring, or disbursing the moneys; but all such expenses of every character shall be first expressly authorized by the Secretary of the Treasury, whose directions upon all the above subjects, by way of regulation and otherwise, so far as authorized by law, shall be strictly followed by all the officers. [R. S.]

Act of Aug. 6, 1846, ch. 90, 9 Stat. L. 62.

[SEC. 1.] [Expenses of fiscal agents—appropriation, how expended.] * * * For contingent expenses under the requirements of section thirty-six hundred and fifty-three of the Revised Statutes of the United States, for the collection, safe-keeping, transfer, and disbursement of the public money, and for transportation of notes, bonds, and other securities of the United States, * * * . And hereafter no part of the money appropriated for the purposes mentioned in this paragraph shall be expended for clerical services or payment of employees of any nature or grade. * * * [22 Stat. L. 312.]

Sec. 3654. [Limit upon extra compensation for making disbursements.] No extra compensation exceeding one-eighth of one per centum shall in any case be allowed or paid to any officer, person, or corporation for disbursing moneys appropriated to the construction of any public building. [R. S.]

Act of March 3, 1869, ch. 123, 15 Stat. L. 312.

See, however, following text.

As a limit to compensation only.—“This Act does not assume to fix the compensation to be allowed to disbursing agents, but only to indicate the limits beyond which compensation should not go.” (1889) 19 Op. Atty.-Gen. 425.

Extra compensation.—This section does not authorize the payment of extra compensation to an officer of the engineer department for disbursement of public moneys while superintending public works. Compensation for such services is forbidden by R. S. sec. 1153. (1889) 19 Op. Atty.-Gen. 425.

Discretion of secretary.—“The Act of March 3, 1869 (sec. 3654, R. S.), while limiting the compensation to be allowed for the disbursement of moneys to an amount not exceeding one-eighth of one per centum, left it discretionary with the secretary to allow any amount within that limit. The Act of March 3, 1875, extended the limit to three-eighths of one per centum. Its effect is not to fix the amount of compensation to be allowed for disbursing moneys, but to ‘limit’ it. It enlarges the discretion of the secretary by enabling him to allow as compensation for such services any amount not exceeding the increased per centum therein designated. He may under this Act, as he might have done under the former Act, allow a less per centum than that specified in the statute, but not a greater.” (1881) 17 Op. Atty.-Gen. 219.

Increased maximum compensation.—Where at the time a person received his appointment as disbursing agent the maximum compensation allowable by law for his services in that capacity was one-eighth of one per centum, "his letter of appointment must be deemed to contemplate that (viz., one-eighth of one per centum) as the measure of his compensation. When afterwards the maximum was increased, it was discretionary with the secretary to allow an increase of compensation either up to the new limit imposed or at any intermediate rate." (1881) 17 Op. Atty.-Gen. 219.

SEC. 4. [Compensation for disbursements for public buildings.] * * *
That the provisions contained in the act approved March third eighteen hundred and sixty-nine, entitled "An act making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the service of the Government for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-nine, and for other purposes," limiting the compensation to be allowed for the disbursement of moneys appropriated for the construction of any public building was intended and shall be deemed and held to limit the compensation to be allowed to any disbursing officer who disburses moneys appropriated for and expended in the construction of any public building as aforesaid to three-eighths of one per centum for said services. * * * [18 Stat. L. 415.]

This is from the Deficiencies Appropriation Act of March 3, 1875, ch. 131. The provisions of the Act of March 3, 1869, ch. 123, 15

Stat. L. 312, here referred to were incorporated into Revised Statutes as section 3654.

[SEC. 1.] [Compensation for disbursements for public buildings and grounds outside Washington, D. C.] * * * Any disbursing agent who has been or may be appointed to disburse any appropriation for any United States court-house and post-office, or other building or grounds, not located within the city of Washington, shall be entitled to the compensation allowed by law to collectors of customs for such amounts as have been or may be disbursed. * * * [22 Stat. L. 306.]

Extent of Act.—This provision probably was not intended as general legislation or to extend beyond the appropriations authorized by the Act itself, and certainly was not intended to be so far retroactive as to fix the compensation of former disbursing officers in all past transactions of the government. Meriwether v. U. S., (1887) 22 Ct. Cl. 332.

Officers included.—This Act does not extend to one of the disbursing clerks in the office of the secretary of the treasury. Bartlet v. U. S., (1890) 25 Ct. Cl. 389.

Sec. 3655. [Compensation of depositaries.] The depositaries which have been or may be designated by the Secretary of the Treasury to receive payments and give receipts or certificates of deposit for public money from miscellaneous sources, other than the transactions of the respective offices for which they are or may be commissioned, may be paid in full compensation for receiving, safely keeping, and paying out such public money, at the rate of one-half of one per centum for the first one hundred thousand dollars; one-fourth of one per centum for the second one hundred thousand dollars; and one-eighth of one per centum for all sums over two hundred thousand dollars. Any sum which may have been allowed to such depositary for rent or any other contingent expenses in respect to the custody of such public money shall be deducted from such compensation, before any payment shall be made therefor. [R. S.]

Act of March 2, 1853, ch. 89, 10 Stat. L. 172.

Commissions on transfer deposits.—A designated depositary of public moneys is not entitled to commissions on transfer deposits. McLean's Case, (1872) 8 Ct. Cl. 217. See also Luce's Case, (1874) 10 Ct. Cl. 229.

A surveyor of customs acting as designated depository of public moneys is not entitled to commissions upon "transfer deposits," i. e., upon moneys transferred to him by other departments of the treasury as distinguished from moneys paid to him as the representative of the treasury. Neff's Case, (1872) 8 Ct. Cl. 233. See also Luce's Case, (1874) 10 Ct. Cl. 229.

Sec. 3656. [Limit upon compensation.] No compensation shall be allowed for the services mentioned in the preceding section, when the emoluments of the office of which the designated depository is in commission amount to the maximum compensation fixed by law; nor shall the amount allowed to any of the designated depositaries for such services, when added to the emoluments of the office of which he is in commission, be more than sufficient to make the maximum compensation fixed by law. [R. S.]

Act of March 2, 1853, ch. 89, 10 Stat. L. 172.

When compensation is allowed. — If the depository receives from the office for which he is commissioned its maximum compensation, he is to be allowed nothing for his service as depository. But if he receives from the office for which he is commissioned less than its maximum compensation, he is to be allowed for his services as depository so much of $1,500 as will make up such maximum compensation. McLean's Case, (1872) 8 Ct. Cl. 217. See also Luce's Case, (1874) 10 Ct. Cl. 229.

[SEC. 1.] [Limit upon compensation of certain designated depositaries.]
* * * For compensation to designated depositaries at Buffalo, New York; Louisville, Kentucky; and Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, for receiving, safely keeping, and paying out public money, * * * Provided, That no compensation shall be allowed for the above services when the emoluments of the office of which said designated depository is in commission amounts to the maximum compensation fixed by law; nor shall the amount allowed to any of said designated depositaries for such services, when added to the emoluments of the office of which he is in commission, be more than sufficient to make the maximum compensation fixed by law: And provided further, That the whole allowance to any designated depository for such service shall not exceed one thousand five hundred dollars per annum. * * * [18 Stat. L. 96.]

This is from the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Appropriation Act of June 20, 1874, ch. 328. This limitation is repeated in the Act of March 3, 1875, ch. 129, 18 Stat. L. 355.

The discontinuance of the depositories at Buffalo, Santa Fé, and Pittsburgh was directed by Act of Aug. 15, 1876, ch. 287, sec. 1. See ante, p. 541.

Sec. 3657. [Collectors to act as disbursing agents.] The collectors of customs in the several collection-districts are required to act as disbursing agents for the payment of all moneys that are or may hereafter be appropriated for the construction of custom-houses, court-houses, post-offices, and marine hospitals; with such compensation, not exceeding one-quarter of one per centum, as the Secretary of the Treasury may deem equitable and just. [R. S.]

Act of June 12, 1858, ch. 154, 11 Stat. L. 327.

Relation to other statutes. — "The statute first quoted" (R. S. 3657), said Attorney-General W. H. H. Miller, "seems to make it obligatory that such moneys should be disbursed by the collector of the district in which the public building was being erected. Such a rule would sometimes involve great inconvenience. Accordingly, some years later, by section 3658, R. S., it was provided that in case the building was being erected at a place where there was no collector, the secretary of the treasury might appoint some other disbursing agent, no limitation being made as to the person. It will be observed that under the first section no appointment by the secretary was necessary; the law fixed upon the collector as the disbursing agent, without any special designation by the secretary. Three years after the enactment of this second statute a new statute was enacted (R. S. 255), giving to the secretary of the treasury the authority to designate any bonded officer of the United States to be disbursing agent in such case. This law is general and without limitation as to place. It applies to 'all moneys appropriated for the construction of public buildings authorized by law, within the district of such officer.' This law is not inconsistent with either of the two preceding provisions in any such sense that all of them cannot stand together. It modified the first provision (sec 3657) to this extent, that it is no longer imperative that the collector shall be the disbursing agent for a building, even at the place of his location." (1889) 19 Op. Atty-Gen. 393.

"In the absence of any special designation the collector would act as such disbursing agent." (1889) 19 Op. Atty-Gen. 393.

Commissions as set-off. — "Sums charged by a collector as commissions on sums disbursed for the erection of a marine hospital cannot, when they have not been disallowed by the accounting officers of the treasury, be allowed in set-off against a suit by the United States against such collector for sums alleged to be due from him." U. S. v. Austin, (1864) 2 Cliff. (U. S.) 325, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,480.

Sec. 3658. [Appointment of special disbursing agents, where no collector is authorized.] Where there is no collector at the place of location of any public work specified in the preceding section, the Secretary of the Treasury may appoint a disbursing agent for the payment of all moneys appropriated for the construction of any such public work, with such compensation as he may deem equitable and just. [R. S.]

Act of July 28, 1866, ch. 302, 14 Stat. L. 341.

Collectors of internal revenue as disbursing agents. See INTERNAL REVENUE, vol. 3, p. 559.

Postmasters as disbursing agents. See POSTAL SERVICE, vol. 5, p. 780.

Who may be appointed. — "It is competent for the secretary to designate the collector or any other bonded officer to act as such disbursing agent in any case." (1889) 19 Op. Atty-Gen. 393.

Appointment of person not under bond. — Where one not holding any office under the United States requiring him to give bond was appointed an agent to disburse funds appropriated to build the custom house and post-office building, in the city of Philadelphia, it was held that in view of the provisions of sections 3657, 3658, and 255, R. S., the appointment was improvidently made; that he was not lawfully empowered to receive or disburse the public funds placed in his hands, and that under existing legislation he is not entitled to any compensation for his services as such disbursing agent. (1881) 17 Op. Atty-Gen. 124.

Sec. 255. [Appointment of disbursing agent for construction of public buildings.] The Secretary of the Treasury may designate any officer of the United States, who has given bonds for the faithful performance of his duties, to be disbursing agent for the payment of all moneys appropriated for the construction of public buildings authorized by law within the district of such officer. [R. S.]

Act of March 3, 1869, ch. 122, 15 Stat. L. 301, 306.

When secretary may designate. — The secretary of the treasury cannot designate an officer in the city of Washington to be a disbursing agent in another place under this section, nor where there is a collector of customs under section 3658. Bartlett v. U. S., (1890) 25 Ct. Cl. 389.

Direction of secretary. — A disbursing officer holding an office created by statute having an annual salary but no prescribed specific duties is bound to disburse such money and in such manner as the secretary may direct. Bartlett v. U. S., (1890) 25 Ct. Cl. 389.

[SEC. 1.] [Disbursements for Botanic Garden and for joint committee on library.] * * * Botanic Garden: The Superintendent of the Library building and grounds shall hereafter disburse all appropriations made for and on account of the Botanic Garden, and shall also disburse all appropriations authorized to be expended by the Joint Committee on the Library. Sec. 3659. [Investment of trust funds.] All funds held in trust by the United States, and the annual interest accruing thereon, when not otherwise required by treaty, shall be invested in stocks of the United States, bearing a rate of interest not less than five per centum per annum. [R. S.]

Act of Sept. 11, 1841, ch. 25, 5 Stat. L. 465.

Funds received from foreign governments, in trust for citizens of the United States. See CLAIMS, vol. 2, p. 52.

What trusts included.—The requirements of this statute relate only to a class of trusts which cannot be interfered with or disposed of by the executive power without further legislation. U. S. v. Bayard, (1885) 4 Mackey (D. C.) 311.

Custody of securities.—Under this section trust moneys must be invested by the secretary of the treasury, and in all cases under the statute the securities therefor are to be retained by the secretary, as he is to reinvest the interest. They cannot be sold and proceeds paid out without further authority of law. U. S. v. Bayard, (1885) 4 Mackey (D. C.) 311.

Proceeds of Indian lands.—“In making the investment of the proceeds of the sale of Indian lands (which sales were provided for by treaty stipulations) the President was required to make all such investments in United States stocks bearing interest at not less than five per cent. per annum.” (1878) 16 Op. Atty-Gen. 31. See also (1857) 9 Op. Atty-Gen. 44.

Sec. 5488. [Disbursing officer unlawfully depositing, converting, loaning, or transferring public money.] Every disbursing officer of the United States who deposits any public money intrusted to him in any place or in any manner, except as authorized by law, or converts to his own use in any way whatever, or loans with or without interest, or for any purpose not prescribed by law withdraws from the Treasurer or any assistant treasurer, or any authorized depository, or for any purpose not prescribed by law transfers or applies any portion of the public money intrusted to him, is, in every such act, deemed guilty of an embezzlement of the money so deposited, converted, loaned, withdrawn, transferred, or applied; and shall be punished by imprisonment with hard labor for a term not less than one year nor more than ten years, or by a fine of not more than the amount embezzled or less than one thousand dollars, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [R. S.]

“Knowingly or wilfully misappropriating money of the United States appropriated for—‘furnished or intended for’—the improvement of rivers and harbors” is an offense falling clearly within the language of section 5488. In re Carter, (1899) 97 Fed. Rep. 496.

“Obviously this is a crime, made so by this very section.” In re Carter, (1899) 97 Fed. Rep. 496.

Withdrawing money by checks on false accounts.—“A disbursing officer of the United States applied to a purpose not prescribed by law large sums of public money intrusted to him for river and harbor purposes, by causing them to be paid out by checks on false accounts, the payment being accomplished by the drawing and delivery of the checks directing payment to be made of moneys of the United States, and thus withdrew by means of checks from the authorized depository, moneys for an unauthorized purpose and applied them to unlawful purposes. The application, coupled with the payment and withdrawal of the funds by checks, constituted the embezzlement defined in section 5488.” Carter v. McClaghry, (1902) 183 U. S. 366, affirming (1900) 105 Fed. Rep. 614.

“The fact that the vouchers purported to be issued as against [certain appropriations], if these vouchers were false and falsely certified to, and if the accounts on which the moneys were paid were false, the moneys not being due or owing from the United States to the parties paid, or to any one else, and he well knowing this to be the case, as stated in the specification,—could not make the application of the money by that payment an application prescribed by law.” Carter v. McClaghry, (1902) 183 U. S. 366, affirming (1900) 105 Fed. Rep. 614.

Compared with embezzlement under articles of war.—It is a species of embezzlement different from that defined in the ninth paragraph of the sixtieth article of war, since the money which is the subject of embezzlement under the latter article is “money furnished for military service,” whereas, under section 5488, the term “money” comprehends any public money, whether appropriated for the military service or for other purposes. The offense denounced in section 5488 is much broader and more comprehensive than the other; the former being the application by the disbursing officer of money to any unauthorized purpose, while under the ninth paragraph mentioned the money which is the subject of the embezzlement is money appropriated specifically for the military service. Carter v. McClaghry, (1900) 105 Fed. Rep. 614, affirmed (1902) 183 U. S. 365.

Sufficient indictment.—A specification setting forth that defendant was a disbursing officer of the United States and that as such officer he was intrusted with certain public money, which he wilfully and knowingly caused to be paid on false accounts, the amount paid not being due or owing from the United States to the parties to whom the payments were made, which defendant well knew, charges the application of public money to "a purpose not prescribed by law," and with the details which the specifications supply constitutes a sufficient indictment under section 5488. Carter v. McClaughry, (1900) 105 Fed. Rep. 614, affirmed (1902) 183 U. S. 365.

Sec. 5489. [Failure of Treasurer, etc., to safely keep public moneys.] If the Treasurer of the United States, or any assistant treasurer, or any public depositary, fails safely to keep all moneys deposited by any disbursing officer or disbursing agent, as well as all moneys deposited by any receiver, collector, or other person having moneys of the United States, he shall be deemed guilty of embezzlement of the moneys not so safely kept, and shall be imprisoned not less than six months nor more than ten years, and fined in a sum equal to the amount of money so embezzled. [R. S.]

Act of March 3, 1857, ch. 114, 11 Stat. L. 249.

Sec. 5490. [Custodians of public money failing to safely keep, without loaning, etc.] Every officer or other person charged by any act of Congress with the safe-keeping of the public moneys, who fails to safely keep the same, without loaning, using, converting to his own use, depositing in banks, or exchanging for other funds than as specially allowed by law, shall be guilty of embezzlement of the moneys so loaned, used, converted, deposited, or exchanged; and shall be imprisoned not less than six months nor more than ten years, and fined in a sum equal to the amount of money so embezzled. [R. S.]

Act of Aug. 6, 1846, ch. 90, 9 Stat. L. 63.
What officers included.—The terms employed in these Acts to designate the persons made liable under them are not restrained and limited to principal officers. U. S. v. Hartwell, (1867) 6 Wall. (U. S.) 385.

The secretary of a territory having been charged in his official capacity with the disbursement of public money under an appropriation for legislative expenses for the territory and having absconded with the funds thus placed in his hands, is guilty of embezzlement within the meaning of this section. Gilson's Case, (1867) 12 Op. Atty.-Gen. 326.

Clerk of assistant treasurer.—A person in the public service of the United States appointed pursuant to statute authorizing an assistant treasurer of the United States to appoint a clerk, with a salary prescribed, whose tenure of place will not be affected by the vacation of office of his superior and whose duties (though such as his superior in office should prescribe) are continuing and permanent—is an officer within the meaning of these sections, and as such subject to the penalties prescribed therein for the misconduct of officers. U. S. v. Hartwell, (1867) 6 Wall. (U. S.) 385.

A clerk in a post office acting as a cashier is a public officer within the meaning of this penal clause and liable to prosecution under it for embezzling funds intrusted to him. (1853) 5 Op. Atty.-Gen. 685.

A deputy collector is an officer who comes under this Act. U. S. v. Bowerman, (1871) 14 Int. Rev. Rec. 122, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,630.

Moneys received by deputy collector.—When any sum or sums of money are paid by the inspectors of hulls and engines as money by them received from engineers and pilots, and proceeds of the sale of goods forfeited to the government under the revenue laws are paid at the custom house to the deputy collector, the said sums are public moneys within the meaning of the Act. U. S. v. Bowerman, (1871) 14 Int. Rev. Rec. 122, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,630.

"Consuls not duly accounting for fees collected for consular service are subject to indictment for the statute crime of embezzlement." (1855) 7 Op. Atty.-Gen. 242.

Naval officer overpaid.—An officer of the navy in command of a naval vessel who requires the purser to pay him more money than is due to him, and fails to account, is not guilty of embezzlement. The fact that he was an officer when he received the money does not constitute the receiving or retaining an offense within the meaning of these provisions. In this respect he stands upon the same footing as any other person who may have received public money. (1855) 7 Op. Atty.-Gen. 82.

Attorney and special agent for Indian claims.—A person having been constituted attorney for certain Indians to collect from the government claims for back pay and bounty due them for military services, was also, upon executing a bond to the United States conditioned for the faithful performance of his duties as such attorney, and filing the same in the interior department, empowered as a special agent of that department, without compensation (except such fees as were then or might thereafter be authorized by said department), to collect and pay over to the said Indians their claims. The appointment as such special agent was not made in pursuance of any law of Congress. It was held, that he did not become

This section was amended by the Act of Feb. 16, 1885, ch. 123, 23 Stat. L. 306, by substituting in place of the words "one thousand," appearing in the section as originally enacted, the words "twenty-five hundred," as above given.

Extent of power. — The power given to an accounting officer to duplicate lost checks is not exclusive, nor does it affect the jurisdiction of the Court of Claims. Becker v. U. S., (1891) 26 Ct. Cl. 172.

When payment is made. — Where a government check is lost or stolen the Revised Statutes do not require that payment must be postponed for three years or preclude a suit. They simply authorize disbursing officers to duplicate small checks in certain cases. Becker v. U. S., (1891) 26 Ct. Cl. 172.

Sec. 3647. [Duplicate check when officer who issued is dead.] In case the disbursing officer or agent by whom such lost, destroyed, or stolen original check was issued, is dead, or no longer in the service of the United States, it shall be the duty of the proper accounting officer, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe, to state an account in favor of the owner of such original check for the amount thereof, and to charge such amount to the account of such officer or agent. [R. S.]

Sec. 3648. [Advances of public moneys prohibited.] No advance of public money shall be made in any case whatever. And in all cases of contracts for the performance of any service, or the delivery of articles of any description, for the use of the United States, payment shall not exceed the value of the service rendered, or of the articles delivered previously to such payment. It shall, however, be lawful, under the special direction of the President, to make such advances to the disbursing officers of the Government as may be necessary to the faithful and prompt discharge of their respective duties, and to the fulfillment of the public engagements. The President may also direct such advances as he may deem necessary and proper, to persons in the military and naval service employed on distant stations, where the discharge of the pay and emoluments to which they may be entitled cannot be regularly effected. [R. S.]

Advances to persons in naval service on distant stations. See NAVY, vol. 5, p. 326.

"The object of that section is not to preclude a payment in any case where the money has been actually earned and the government has received an equivalent therefor, but to prevent payments being made to contractors in advance of the performance of their contracts, whether for services or the supply of articles of any kind." (1885) 18 Op. Atty-Gen. 105.

Complete performance of contract. — This statute was intended to prevent a department from anticipating the performance of an agreement, by keeping the payment within the "value of the service," and does not apply when there is a complete performance although the government may not have received any benefit in consequence of the destruction of the subject-matter of the agreement. McClure v. U. S., (1884) 19 Ct. Cl. 173.

But in (1894) 20 Op. Atty-Gen. 746, it was said that "the intent of this provision is that the United States shall not pay for any work or materials until it had received their benefit. It matters not that the work for which pay is asked has already been done."

President's right to delegate power. —

The power vested to make advances for the public service is one appertaining to the office of President, but is not an authority strictly personal and ministerial, to be exercised in every instance only by the person himself, by his own hand, and never in any respect to be delegated. Williams v. U. S., (1843) 1 How. (U. S.) 290.

Advances by head of department. — As the President speaks and acts through the heads of departments in reference to the business committed to them, if money is advanced by the direction of the head of the proper department, in the absence of evidence, the direction of the President will be presumed. U. S. v. Cutter, (1856) 2 Curt. (U. S.) 617, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 14,911.

Expenses incident to the courts. — "Average estimates may be formed of the expenses incident to the courts, and instructions may be given by the President to the secretary of the treasury to make advances from time to time, either upon the basis of those estimates or upon statements or requisitions made by the marshals themselves, showing the necessity of advances to meet the public service." Williams v. U. S., (1843) 1 How. (U. S.) 290.

Advances to contractors. — "It is the plain meaning of this law that no money shall be advanced to contractors; that is, that no money shall be paid to them on account of their contracts before the actual performance of the service or the delivery of the articles stipulated for. And this not only forbids the contracting officer of the government to pay the money in advance but forbids him also to contract for such payment." (1862) 10 Op. Atty.-Gen. 288.

Advances to public ministers.—"I think it is very clear from the terms of the Act," said Attorney-General Berrien, construing the prior Act, "that advances to foreign ministers were not in the contemplation of the legislature at the time of framing it. It is true that it forbids in general terms the advance of public money in any case whatever; but the subsequent specifications of the Act seem to me to restrict and qualify the generality of this inhibition. These authorize advances under the direction of the President of the United States to disbursing officers of the government when such advances are necessary to the prompt and faithful discharge of their public duties; and to persons in the military and naval service, who may be employed on distant stations, where the discharge of the pay and emoluments to which they are entitled cannot be regularly effected. Now, if the compensation to be made to the diplomatic agents of the government had been supposed to be embraced within the inhibitory provisions of this Act, it is difficult to conceive that Congress should have omitted to invest the President with a similar discretion in relation to these agents. Many cases will certainly occur in which it will be more difficult for the government to fulfil its engagements on the score of compensation to this latter class of agents than any which can be selected among the other. * * * If the Act we have been considering had been deemed applicable to the foreign intercourse fund, a corresponding provision would have been made, extending the executive discretion to this class of cases also." (1829) 2 Op. Atty.-Gen. 204.

"The President being intrusted with the subject of the diplomatic intercourse of the United States with foreign nations, may in his discretion advance money to a minister going abroad over and above his outfit." (1829) 2 Op. Atty.-Gen. 204.

"The President of the United States having the foreign intercourse fund under his direction may advance to a minister going from the United States to a foreign country such part of his salary as he shall deem necessary to the proper fulfilment of public engagements in respect to him." (1823) 1 Op. Atty.-Gen. 620.

Advances to marshal of District of Columbia.—"The President of the United States has authority to order advances of money to be made by the secretary of the treasury to the marshal of the District of Columbia; and such advances may be presumed to have been made under the special direction of the President, and the sureties of the marshal are liable therefor." U. S. v. Williams, (1839) 5 Cranch (C. C.) 619, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,715, affirmed in (1843) 1 How. (U. S.) 290.

Acceptance of drafts before service rendered.—The acceptance of a draft by the secretary of war drawn on him by army contractors before services contracted for were received or supplies to be furnished were delivered were mere accommodation loans of the credit of the United States without authority and therefore void. "But if these acceptances can be considered as payments," said Mr. Justice Miller, "they were payments in advance of the service rendered and supplies furnished—payments made before anything was due. They are in that view not only without authority of law, but are expressly forbidden." The Floyd Acceptances, (1868) 7 Wall. (U. S.) 666.

Part payments cannot be made upon government contracts unless the United States thereupon becomes the owner of the work paid for." (1894) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 746.

Payment in full for the vessel in advance of its completion and acceptance is forbidden by this section, and hence a modification of the contract to this extent would be beyond the power of the secretary." (1885) 18 Op. Atty.-Gen. 101.

Expenses of detecting counterfeiting.—The President may allow the payment out of the judicial fund of extraordinary expenses incurred by the United States marshals, in executing the laws, by detecting and bringing to punishment persons engaged in counterfeiting treasury notes after such expenses have been specially taxed by the court in whose district the work has been done, yet * * * the secretary of the interior has no authority to make requisitions upon that fund for money to be advanced to marshals to be used in efforts to detect counterfeiters of that kind." (1862) 10 Op. Atty.-Gen. 225.

Liability of sureties.—The section requiring the especial direction of the President to authorize the advance of public moneys to disbursing officers is merely directory to the officers of the government and is not a qualification of the contract of the surety for such officer; and the surety is liable for the misappropriation of public money by his principal, though it was advanced to him contrary to this Act. U. S. v. Cutter, (1856) 2 Curt. (U. S.) 617, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 14,911.

Joint resolution providing for partial payments for work, and so forth, for vessels constructed under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury.

[Res. No. 24, of May 5, 1894, 28 Stat. L. 582.]

[Partial payments on contracts for construction of vessels for Treasury Department—lien.] That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he hereby is, authorized to make partial payments, from time to time, upon existing con-

Sec. 5495. [Prima-facie evidence.] The refusal of any person, whether in or out of office, charged with the safe-keeping, transfer, or disbursement of the public money, to pay any draft, order, or warrant, drawn upon him by the proper accounting officer of the Treasury, for any public money in his hands belonging to the United States, no matter in what capacity the same may have been received, or may be held, or to transfer or disburse any such money promptly, upon the legal requirement of any authorized officer, shall be deemed, upon the trial of any indictment against such person for embezzlement, as prima-facie evidence of such embezzlement. [R. S.]

Effect of section.—“This provision concerning evidence does not create the offense of embezzlement but simply declares what proof shall be sufficient. The offense is created by the previous sections and is confined to persons who receive public money to keep, transfer, or disburse, and those who advise or participate in the accepting, receiving, or transmission of certain vouchers. Those guilty of these offenses may be indicted for embezzlement and convicted upon the production of certain specified evidence. This evidence can only be used against persons who are previously declared to be guilty of embezzlement.” (1855) 7 Op. Atty.-Gen. 82.

Hearsay evidence.—A duly certified transcript from the treasury is made evidence and declared to be prima facie evidence of embezzlement; but where the items of such evidence have been estimated and made up from hearsay, they are not admissible. U. S. v. Forsythe, (1855) 6 McLean (U. S.) 584, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 15,133.

Sec. 5496. [Evidence of conversion.] If any officer charged with the disbursement of the public moneys, accepts, receives, or transmits to the Treasury Department to be allowed in his favor, any receipt or voucher from a creditor of the United States, without having paid to such creditor in such funds as the officer received for disbursement, or in such funds as he may be authorized by law to take in exchange, the full amount specified in such receipt or voucher, every such act is an act of conversion, by such officer to his own use, of the amount specified in such receipt or voucher. [R. S.]

Sec. 5497. [Unlawfully receiving, etc., to be embezzlement — embezzlement by internal revenue officers and their assistants.] Every banker, broker, or other person not an authorized depository of public moneys, who knowingly receives from any disbursing officer, or collector of internal revenue, or other agent of the United States, any public money on deposit, or by way of loan or accommodation, with or without interest, or otherwise than in payment of a debt against the United States, or who uses, transfers, converts, appropriates, or applies any portion of the public money for any purpose not prescribed by law, and every president, cashier, teller, director, or other officer of any bank or banking association, who violates any of the provisions of this section, is guilty of an act of embezzlement of the public money so deposited, loaned, transferred, used, converted, appropriated, or applied, and shall be punished as prescribed in section fifty-four hundred and eighty-eight. And any officer connected with, or employed in, the internal-revenue service of the United States, and any assistant of such officer, who shall embezzle or wrongfully convert to his own use any money or other property of the United States, and any officer of the United States, or any assistant of such officer, who shall embezzle or wrongfully convert to his own use any money or property which may have come into his possession or under his control in the execution of such office or employment, or under color or claim of authority as such officer or assistant, whether the same shall be the money or property of the United States or of some other person or party, shall, where the offense is not otherwise punishable by some statute of the United States, be punished by a fine equal to the value of the money and property thus embezzled or converted, or by imprisonment not less than three months nor more than ten years, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [R. S.]

Act of June 14, 1866, ch. 122, 14 Stat. L. 65. This section was amended by the Act of Feb. 3, 1879, ch. 42, 20 Stat. L. 280, by adding at the end of the section as originally enacted, the provisions beginning with the words "And any officer connected with," etc.

What officers included.—Prior to the amendment of this section it was held in U. S. v. Hartwell, (1867) 6 Wall. (U. S.) 386 that this section "is limited in its terms to the officers named in it. There is nothing which extends it beyond them. It cannot by construction be made to include any others. It is confined to officers of banks and banking associations." The Act does not affect a clerk in the office of the assistant treasurer.

Secs. 1753-1755. [See CIVIL SERVICE, vol. 1, pp. 827, 828.]

Sections 1753-1790 constitute title 19 of the Revised Statutes, entitled "Provisions Applicable to Several Classes of Officers."

Sec. 1756. [Form of oath of office.] [Repealed.]

This section was as follows:

"Sec. 1756. Every person elected or appointed to any office of honor or profit, either in the civil, military, or naval service, excepting the President and the persons embraced by the section following, shall, before entering upon the duties of such office, and before being entitled to any part of the salary or other emoluments thereof, take and subscribe the following oath: "I, A B, do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I have never voluntarily borne arms against the United States since I have been a citizen thereof; that I have voluntarily given no aid, countenance, counsel, or encouragement to persons engaged in armed hostility thereto; that I have neither sought, nor accepted, nor attempted to exercise the functions of any office whatever, under any authority, or pretended authority, in hostility to the United States; that I have not yielded a voluntary support to any pretended government, authority, power, or constitution within the United States, hostile or inimical thereto. And I do further swear (or affirm) that, to the best of my knowledge and ability, I will support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic; that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same; that I take this obligation freely, without any mental reservation or purpose of evasion, and that I will well and faithfully discharge the duties of the office on which I am about to enter, so help me God." Act of July 2, 1862, ch. 128, 12 Stat. L. 502.

It was directly repealed by Act of May 13, 1884, ch. 46, sec. 2, set forth below.

An act amending the Revised Statutes of the United States in respect of official oaths, and for other purposes.

SEC. 2. [Form of oath of office.] That section seventeen hundred and fifty-six of the Revised Statutes be, and the same is hereby, repealed; and hereafter the oath to be taken by any person elected or appointed to any office of honor or profit either in the civil, military, or naval service, except the President of the United States, shall be as prescribed in section seventeen hundred and fifty-seven of the Revised Statutes. But this repeal shall not affect the oaths prescribed by existing statutes in relation to the performance of duties in special or particular sub-ordinate offices and employments. [23 Stat. L. 22.]

R. S. sec. 1756, above repealed, is set forth in the note, supra.

R. S. sec. 1757, above mentioned, is given infra.

SEC. 3. [Effect of act on existing rights, etc.] That the provisions of this act shall in no manner affect any right, duty, claim, obligation, or penalty now existing or already incurred; and all and every such right, duty, claim, obligation, and penalty shall be heard, tried, and determined, and effect shall be given thereto, in the same manner as if this act had not been passed. [23 Stat. L. 22.]

SEC. 4. [Repeals R. S. secs. 820, 821. See JURIES, vol. 4, pp. 747, 748.]

Sec. 1757. [Oath for certain persons.] Whenever any person who is not rendered ineligible to office by the provisions of the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution is elected or appointed to any office of honor or trust under the Government of the United States, and is not able, on account of his participation in the late rebellion, to take the oath prescribed in the preceding section, he shall, before entering upon the duties of his office, take and subscribe in lieu of that oath the following oath: "I, A B, do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic; that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same; that I take this obligation freely, without any mental reservation or purpose of evasion; and that I will well and faithfully discharge the duties of the office on which I am about to enter. So help me God." [R. S.]

Act of July 11, 1868, ch. 139, 15 Stat. L. 85; Act of Feb. 15, 1871, ch. 53, 16 Stat. L. 412.

Removal of disability.—See Act of June 6, 1898, ch. 389, infra, p. 583.

Purpose of oath.—"This oath is wisely framed for the purpose of upholding the paramount authority of the national government, and recognizes allegiance to the United States as the highest political duty. It emphatically repels the deadly heresy of a paramount state allegiance." Charge to Grand Jury, (1861) 2 Sprague (U. S.) 285, 30 Fed. Cas. No. 18,277.

Competency of Indian to take oath.—"The condition of an Indian who is a member of a tribe, and especially one who dwells within the territory and jurisdiction of his tribe, is peculiar. He is regarded and treated by our government as belonging to a separate though dependent political community, the members of which owe immediate allegiance thereto and are not ordinarily dealt with by the government individually, so long as their tribal relation is preserved. The obligation imposed by the oath does not seem to be consistent with the duty of obedience to tribal authority which springs from such relation, and the existence of which is distinctly recognized by our government, and its effect would obviously be to greatly weaken if not destroy that relation. Unless clearly warranted by the provisions of some treaty or statute, an Act which thus interferes with the tribal relation and is productive of consequences so discordant and in such direct conflict with the authority of the tribe over its members and their allegiance thereto, must be deemed to have no sanction in our laws." Therefore, "an Indian while a member of a tribe and subject to tribal jurisdiction is not in legal contemplation competent to take the oath." (1885) 18 Op. Atty-Gen. 181.

Application to foreign subjects. — However broad the language of any general statute requiring an oath of allegiance as a qualification for office, it can have no application to foreign subjects appointed to office abroad. (1902) 23 Op. Atty-Gen. 608.

Before authorized officer. — The Act requiring an oath is not complied with unless the oath is taken before an officer authorized by the laws of the United States to administer oaths. A foreign consul residing in Mexico has no such authority. Otterbourg's Case, (1869) 5 Ct. Cl. 432.

Oaths of postmasters. — "While postmasters, in common with all other officers of the United States, except the President, are now required to take the oath of office prescribed in section 1757, R. S., they are not exempted from taking the oath prescribed by the Act of March 5, 1874, ch. 46, relative to the performance of duties in the postal service, but must take this also." (1885) 18 Op. Atty-Gen. 181.

Indian as postmaster. — "An Indian residing in the Indian Territory, who is a member of one of the tribes there, and subject to tribal jurisdiction, is not eligible to appointment as a postmaster; he being incompetent in contemplation of law to take the required oath of office." (1885) 18 Op. Atty-Gen. 181.

Members of Congress included. — In (1882) 17 Op. Atty-Gen. 419, it was held, under R. S. sec. 1756, that the words "every person elected or appointed to any office of honor or profit, either in the civil, military, or naval service," include members of Congress.

Clerks in the executive departments are officers, and required to take the oath prescribed. (1868) 12 Op. Atty-Gen. 521.

Clerk of supervisor of internal revenue. — The statute requiring every person elected or appointed to any office, whether of honor or profit, to take a prescribed oath, does not extend to the clerk of a supervisor of internal revenue. He is not an officer. Hedrick's Case, (1880) 16 Ct. Cl. 38.

Mail contractors. — The provisions of the Act of July 2, 1862 (R. S. 1756), having been taken by Congress to include mail contractors, they are to be regarded as also included in the provisions of the Act of Feb. 15, 1871 (R. S. 1757). (1871) 13 Op. Atty-Gen. 390.

Marshals of consular courts. — Subjects of a foreign nation may be appointed marshals of the consular courts, and when so appointed need not, under the laws and regulations, take the oath prescribed by the Revised Statutes. All such officers should be required to take an oath or affirmation to faithfully perform the duties of their offices, and similar to that prescribed, except as to allegiance and support of the Constitution of the United States. Even if the statutes applied to such officers abroad, who are foreign subjects, it might well be held that this being so far a compliance therewith as is lawful, was a sufficient compliance. (1902) 23 Op. Atty-Gen. 608.

Consular agents are not regarded as officers within the meaning of this section, and are not required to take the oath of office and give a bond, but are accountable to the consul under whom they act. Sampson v. U. S., (1895) 30 Ct. Cl. 365.

Oath does not constitute officer de jure. — "An official oath is an incident to the discharge of the duties imposed and does not in itself constitute him who takes it an officer de jure." Glavey v. U. S., (1900) 35 Ct. Cl. 242.

Oath as acceptance of office. — Where, under the Act of Feb. 14, 1889, ch. 166, one was appointed from civil life to the position of major of engineers in the army, and thereupon was placed on the retired list of the army as of that grade, he must take the oath required by the Revised Statutes, and this act would be in law a legal acceptance of the office and as such a sufficient formal acceptance. Smith's Case, (1889) 19 Op. Atty-Gen. 283.

Effect of taking oath for different office. — Whatever form of oath is taken, the taking of the oath is a prerequisite to the entering upon the official duties or drawing salary therefor. That a minister prior to his appointment had taken the oath and entered upon the duty of a different office does not relieve him from the requirements of the statute. (1889) 19 Op. Atty-Gen. 219.

Oath of officer succeeding himself. — The statute provides that the appointee shall take the oath before he enters upon the duties of such office as he may be appointed to. That a person was his own successor does not relieve him from the provisions of the section, for it contemplates that the oath shall be taken at every new appointment before entering upon the duty. (1889) 19 Op. Atty-Gen. 219.

When compensation begins. — The title of a collector of internal revenue to receive, or retain, or hold, or appropriate commissions as compensation does not arise until he takes and subscribes the oath or affirmation, but when he does so his compensation is to be computed on moneys collected by him from the time when under his appointment he began to perform services as collector, which the government accepted, provided he has paid over and accounted for such moneys. U. S. v. Flanders, (1884) 112 U. S. 88.

Compensation when oath not taken. — In (1870) 13 Op. Atty.-Gen. 300, it was held that where a person was appointed an assistant assessor of internal revenue in Texas, and served as such during the years 1865 and 1866, but did not take the oath of office prescribed by the Act of July 2, 1862, he is entitled to compensation for the services so rendered under the provisions of section 11 of the Act of July 15, 1870.

An Act To remove the disability imposed by section three of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

[Act of June 6, 1898, ch. 389, 30 Stat. L. 432.]

[Disability imposed for engaging in rebellion, removed.] That the disability imposed by section three of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States heretofore incurred is hereby removed. [30 Stat. L. 432.]

Section 3, referred to, provides that no person shall be a senator, representative, or hold any office, etc., who, having previously taken an oath as a member of Congress or as an officer of the United States, etc., to support the Constitution of the United States, shall have engaged in insurrection or rebellion against the same, etc.

Sec. 1758. [Who may administer oath.] The oath of office required by either of the two preceding sections may be taken before any officer who is authorized either by the laws of the United States, or by the local municipal law, to administer oaths, in the State, Territory, or District where such oath may be administered. [R. S.]

Act of Aug. 6, 1861, ch. 64, 12 Stat. L. 326.
To customs officers. — See CUSTOMS DUTIES, vol. 2, p. 579.

What oaths included. — "While the section is in terms permissive only, it is in effect much more, for as it says that all oaths which are required may be taken here, it is implied of course that none are intended but such as it was contemplated might be thus taken, and as it was not contemplated that all the various officers of the diplomatic and consular service would either be qualified here and go to those far-off countries on the small salaries allowed, or come here to be qualified, it would seem that they were not within the intended purview of those sections." (1902) 23 Op. Atty.-Gen. 608.

Territorial limitation. — "This means a state, territory, or district within the United States, and refers to a district in the United States just as certainly as it does to a state or territory within that limit, and refers to the District of Columbia. All the oaths, then, that are thus required to be taken may be taken in the United States. This would seem to operate, as many other provisions do operate, to limit the otherwise universal application of section 1756, so that the requirement may be no broader than the permitted performance, and so that no oaths are intended except such as may be taken in the only mode prescribed." (1902) 23 Op. Atty.-Gen. 608.

[SEC. 1.] [Chief clerks of departments and bureaus to administer oaths of office — no department officer to charge fee.] * * * And no officer, clerk, or employee of any executive department who is also a notary public or other officer authorized to administer oaths, shall charge or receive any fee or compensation for administering oaths of office to employees of such department required to be taken on appointment or promotion therein.

And the Chief Clerks of the several Executive Departments and of the various bureaus and offices thereof in Washington, District of Columbia, are hereby authorized and directed, on application and without compensation therefor, to administer oaths of office to employees required to be taken on their appointment or promotion. [26 Stat. L. 370.]

This is from the Act of Aug. 29, 1890, ch. 820, "An act making appropriations for additional clerical force and other expenses to carry into effect the act entitled 'An act granting pensions to soldiers and sailors who are incapacitated for the performance of manual labor, and providing for pensions to widows, minor children, and dependent parents,' from September first, eighteen hundred and ninety, for the balance of the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and ninety-one."

Sec. 1759. [Custody of oath.] The oath of office taken by any person pursuant to the requirements of section seventeen hundred and fifty-six, or of section seventeen hundred and fifty-seven, shall be delivered in by him to be preserved among the files of the House of Congress, Department, or court to which the office in respect to which the oath is made may appertain. [R. S.]

Act of July 2, 1862, ch. 128, 12 Stat. L. 502.

SEC. 5. [Official bonds to be filed with Secretary of the Treasury.] * * * Hereafter all bonds of the Treasurer of the United States, collectors of internal revenue, collectors, naval officers, surveyors, and other officers of the customs, either as such officers or as disbursing officers of the Treasury, bonds of the Secretary of the Senate, Clerk of the House of Representatives, and the Sergeant-at-Arms of the House of Representatives, and all such bonds now on file in the office of the Comptroller of the Treasury, shall be transmitted to the Secretary of the Treasury and filed as he may direct; and the duties now required by law of the Comptroller of the Treasury in regard to such bonds, as the successor of the Commissioner of Customs and First Comptroller of the Treasury, shall hereafter be performed by the Secretary of the Treasury. [28 Stat. L. 807.]

[Official bonds to be examined every two years.] Hereafter every officer required by law to take and approve official bonds shall cause the same to be examined at least once every two years for the purpose of ascertaining the sufficiency of the sureties thereon; and every officer having power to fix the amount of an official bond shall examine it to ascertain the sufficiency of the amount thereof and approve or fix said amount at least once in two years and as much oftener as he may deem it necessary. [28 Stat. L. 807.]

[Renewal of official bonds.] Hereafter every officer whose duty it is to take and approve official bonds shall cause all such bonds to be renewed every four years after their dates, but he may require such bonds to be renewed or strengthened oftener if he deem such action necessary. In the discretion of such officer the requirement of a new bond may be waived for the period of service of a bonded officer after the expiration of a four-year term of service pending the appointment and qualification of his successor: Provided, That the nonperformance of any requirement of this section on the part of any official of the Government shall not be held to affect in any respect the liability of principal or sureties on any bond made or to be made to the United States: Provided further, That the liability of the principal and sureties on all official bonds shall continue and cover the period of service ensuing until the appointment and qualification of the successor of the principal: And provided further, That nothing in this section shall be construed to repeal or modify section thirty-eight hundred and thirty-six of the Revised Statutes of the United States. [28 Stat. L. 807.]

The above provisions are from the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Appropriation Act of March 2, 1895, ch. 177.

The office of commissioner of customs was abolished by Act of July 31, 1894, ch. 174, sec. 4.

An act requiring notice of deficiency in accounts of principals to be given to sureties upon bonds of United States officials, and fixing a limitation of time within which suits shall be brought against said sureties upon said bonds.

[SEC. 1.] [Notice to sureties on bond of deficiency in accounts of officers.] That hereafter, whenever any deficiency shall be discovered in the accounts of any official of the United States, or of any officer disbursing or chargeable with public money, it shall be the duty of the accounting officers making such discovery to at once notify the head of the Department having control over the affairs of said officer of the nature and amount of said deficiency, and it shall be the immediate duty of said head of Department to at once notify all obligors upon the bond or bonds of such official of the nature of such deficiency and the amount thereof. Said notification shall be deemed sufficient if mailed at the post-office in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, addressed to said sureties respectively, and directed to the respective post-offices where said obligors may reside, if known; but a failure to give or mail such notice shall not discharge the surety or sureties upon such bond. [25 Stat. L. 387.]

When notification should be given. — It was not intended that the accounting officer should delay this notice until it has become certain that there is a deficiency; nor on the other hand should he always report a deficiency whenever from the account of a disbursing officer it may appear prima facie that there is one. This may be from insufficient vouchers or evidence, or from clerical error or omission, or one or more of the various ways not inconsistent with a proper disbursement of the moneys in his hands. Whenever in the exercise of a sound judgment and after a reasonable time allowed for explanation and correction it appears to the accounting officer that there is a probable deficiency he should notify the head of the department as herein provided. (1899) 22 Op. Atty-Gen. 611.

Effect of failure to notify sureties. — The fact that the United States, through its officers, neglected and failed to notify the sureties on the bond of a collector of internal revenue of his failure to account for and pay over moneys received, until long after his failure, and long after he became insolvent and unable to pay any of his debts and liabilities, and the fact that by failure to give the sureties such information they had lost the opportunity to protect themselves as sureties, will not release them from their obligation as sureties, as it is expressly stated in the above statute that failure to give such notice shall not discharge the sureties on the bond. Pond v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1901) 111 Fed. Rep. 989.

SEC. 2. [If suit be not instituted within five years sureties released.] That if, upon the statement of the account of any official of the United States, or of any officer disbursing or chargeable with public money, by the accounting officers of the Treasury, it shall thereby appear that he is indebted to the United States, and suit therefor shall not be instituted within five years after such statement of said account, the sureties on his bond shall not be liable for such indebtedness. [25 Stat. L. 387.]

Not retrospective. — This Act clearly manifests the intention of Congress that upon the adjustment by the treasury officials of the accounts of the various officers, all indebtedness to the United States thereby shown shall, if not paid, be sued for by the government within a reasonable time; otherwise the sureties upon such official bonds shall not be liable for such indebtedness. The Act, however, shows upon its face that it applies to the future only. The improbability that Congress in prescribing the period of five years as a limitation to such suits would, if its attention had been called to the matter, have excluded from its provisions indebtedness evidenced by accounts adjusted more than thirty years theretofore, does not justify the court in giving to the Act the retrospective effect when such intention cannot be derived from the Act itself. Harvey v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1899) 97 Fed. Rep. 452.

The statute is absolute in its discharge of the sureties if suit on the bond be not instituted "within five years after such statement of said account" by the accounting officer of the treasury. And it makes no exception in case the accounting officer does not make such statement as early as he should or when a deficiency is discovered by him. (1899) 22 Op. Atty-Gen. 611.

When limitation begins to run. — Whether the accounting officer makes the statement showing an indebtedness to the United States as early as he should, or does not, the limitation fixed by this section begins to run only from the time that the accounting officer of the treasury makes the statement of account showing an indebtedness to the United States as provided in that section. (1899) 22 Op. Atty.-Gen. 611.

Sec. 1760. [Unauthorized office, no salary for.] No money shall be paid from the Treasury to any person acting or assuming to act as an officer, civil, military, or naval, as salary, in any office when the office is not authorized by some previously existing law, unless such office is subsequently sanctioned by law. [R. S.]

of law. See CIVIL SERVICE, vol. 1, pp. 822, 823.

Sec. 1761. [No salaries to certain appointees to fill vacancies during recess of Senate.] No money shall be paid from the Treasury, as salary, to any person appointed during the recess of the Senate, to fill a vacancy in any existing office, if the vacancy existed while the Senate was in session and was by law required to be filled by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, until such appointee has been confirmed by the Senate. [R. S.]

Act of Feb. 9, 1863, ch. 25, 12 Stat. L. 646.
Power of President to appoint.—This legislation in assuming to act upon the salary of officers appointed during the recess of the Senate, when the vacancies actually existed while the Senate was in session, must be deemed a recognition by Congress of the invariable construction given by the Presidents to the power of appointment conferred upon them by the Constitution. In postponing the payment of the salary of the appointee until the Senate has given its assent to the appointment, it concedes the right of the President to appoint, although it undoubtedly embarrasses the exercise of that right by subjecting the appointee to conditions which are somewhat onerous. (1880) 16 Op. Atty.-Gen. 522.

Vacancy during session.—An office which has become vacant during a session of the Senate may be filled during the next ensuing recess of the Senate by a temporary appointment by the President; but payment of the salary of the appointee in such cases is postponed until he has been confirmed by the Senate. (1883) 17 Op. Atty.-Gen. 521.

Sec. 1762. [Salaries to officers improperly holding over.] No money shall be paid or received from the Treasury, or paid or received from or retained out of any public moneys or funds of the United States, whether in the Treasury or not, to or by or for the benefit of any person appointed to or authorized to act in or holding or exercising the duties or functions of any office contrary to sections seventeen hundred and sixty-seven to seventeen hundred and seventy, inclusive; nor shall any claim, account, voucher, order, certificate, warrant, or other instrument providing for or relating to such payment, receipt, or retention, be presented, passed, allowed, approved, certified, or paid by any officer, or by any person exercising the functions or performing the duties of any office or place of trust under the United States, for or in respect to such office, or the exercising or performing the functions or duties thereof. Every person who violates any of the provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a high misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not more than ten years, or fined not more than ten thousand dollars, or both. [R. S.]

Section inoperative.—By the repeal of R. S. secs. 1767-1770, above mentioned, by Act of March 3, 1887, ch. 353, sec. 1, 24 Stat. L. 500—see note, p. 604, this section is inoperative.

Salaries to treasury officers holding over.—

See provision from the Act of March 2, 1895, ch. 187, under title TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

Sec. 1763. [Double salaries.] No person who holds an office, the salary or annual compensation attached to which amounts to the sum of two thousand five hundred dollars, shall receive compensation for discharging the duties of any other office, unless expressly authorized by law. [R. S.]

General application of sections. — "We are of the opinion," said Justice Miller, in U. S. v. Saunders, (1887) 120 U. S. 126, "that taking these sections altogether, the purpose of this legislation was to prevent a person holding an office or appointment, for which the law provides a definite compensation by way of salary or otherwise, which is intended to cover all the services which as such officer he may be called upon to render, from receiving extra compensation, additional allowances, or pay for other services which may be required of him, either by Act of Congress or by order of the head of his department, or in any other mode, added to or connected with the regular duties of the place which he holds; but that they have no application to the case of two distinct offices, places, or employments, each of which has its own duties and its own compensation, which offices may both be held by one person at the same time. In the latter case, he is, in the eye of the law, two officers, or holds two places or appointments, the functions of which are separate and distinct, and, according to all the decisions, he is in such case entitled to recover the two compensations. In the former case, he performs the added duties under his appointment to a single place, and the statute has provided that he shall receive no additional compensation for that class of duties unless it is so provided by special legislation."

Compensation for extra services, where no certain sum is fixed by law, cannot be allowed by the head of a department to any officer who has by law fixed a certain compensation for his services in the office he holds, unless such head of a department is thereto authorized by an Act of Congress; nor can any compensation for extra services be allowed by the court or jury as a set-off, in a suit brought by the United States against any officer for public money in his hands, unless it appears that the head of the department was authorized by an Act of Congress to appoint an agent to perform the extra service, that the compensation to be paid for the service was fixed by law, that the service to be performed had respect to matters wholly outside of the duties appertaining to the office held by the agent, and that the money to pay for the extra services had been appropriated by Congress. Hall v. U. S., (1875) 91 U. S. 559.

These provisions prohibiting an officer from receiving more than one salary could not by "fair interpretation be held to embrace an employment which has no affinity or connection, either in its character or by law or usage, with the line of his official duty, and where the service to be performed is of a different character and for a different place, and the amount of compensation regulated by law." U. S. v. Brindle, (1884) 110 U. S. 688. See, to same effect, Converse v. U. S., (1858) 21 How. (U. S.) 463; U. S. v. McCandless, (1893) 147 U. S. 692; U. S. v. Harsha, (C. C. A. 1893) 56 Fed. Rep. 953; Webster v. U. S., (1892) 28 Ct. Cl. 25; Collins's Case, (1879) 15 Ct. Cl. 37; (1868) 12 Op. Atty.-Gen. 460; Brown's Case, (1860) 9 Op. Atty.-Gen. 507; Hardin's Case, (1853) 6 Op. Atty.-Gen. 84; (1857) 8 Op. Atty.-Gen. 325; (1851) 5 Op. Atty.-Gen. 765; Crosthwaite v. U. S., (1895) 30 Ct. Cl. 308.

The evil intended to be guarded against by these statutes was not so much plurality of office as it was additional pay or compensation to an officer holding but one office for performing additional duties or the duties properly belonging to another. If he actually holds two commissions and does the duties of two distinct offices he may receive the salary which has been appropriated to each office. (1878) 16 Op. Atty.-Gen. 7; (1877) 15 Op. Atty.-Gen. 306.

In (1839) 3 Op. Atty.-Gen. 422; (1839) 3 Op. Atty.-Gen. 473; (1841) 3 Op. Atty.-Gen. 621; (1842) 4 Op. Atty.-Gen. 126; (1842) 4 Op. Atty.-Gen. 139; (1845) 4 Op. Atty.-Gen. 432; (1846) 4 Op. Atty.-Gen. 464; (1849) 5 Op. Atty.-Gen. 74, and (1857) 9 Op. Atty.-Gen. 123, it is said that the Acts are intended not only to destroy double or extra compensation, but to prevent the holding of more than one office or employment under the government by one person at the same time, without explicit authority of law.

Two offices are incompatible when the performance of the duties of one will prevent or conflict with the performance of the duties of the other, or when the holding of the two is contrary to the policy of the law. Crosthwaite v. U. S., (1895) 30 Ct. Cl. 308.

Method of statutory construction. — In construing statutes restraining the executive from giving dual or extra compensation, courts have aimed to carry out the legislative intent, by giving them sufficient flexibility not to injure the public service, and sufficient rigidity to prevent executive abuse. Landram's Case, (1880) 16 Ct. Cl. 74.

The traditions and usages of the United States recognize the policy and propriety of employing, when necessary, the same person at the same time in two distinct capacities. Landram's Case, (1880) 16 Ct. Cl. 74.

Purpose of laws respecting salaries. — It is the undoubted aim of general legislation respecting salaries to gauge the work so as to give full employment to the capacities of the man likely to be appointed to do it, and to measure the pay according to the work. Landram's Case, (1880) 16 Ct. Cl. 74.

Salary for incompatible offices.—Where two incompatible offices are held by the same person, to which are attached different salaries, he is entitled to the larger. Winchell v. U. S., (1892) 28 Ct. Cl. 30; Webster v. U. S. (1892) 28 Ct. Cl. 25.

Salary of temporary appointee.—When a salary has once been paid to the legal incumbent it cannot again be drawn from the treasury and paid to another acting under a temporary appointment, and performing the duties for which that incumbent had been legally paid, unless there be a new, distinct, specific appropriation for that purpose. (1849) 5 Op. Atty-Gen. 74.

"Office" defined.—An office is a public station or employment conferred by the appointment of government. The term embraces the idea of tenure, duration, emolument, and duties. U. S. v. Hartwell, (1867) 6 Wall. (U. S.) 393.

An internal revenue collector is undoubtedly an officer in a branch of the public service, with a salary fixed by law. Landram's Case, (1880) 16 Ct. Cl. 74.

A deputy collector of internal revenue, not being an employee of the government (i. e., not in privity with it so as to be able to maintain an action for his pay), does not come within the provisions of the Revised Statutes, sections 1763, 1764, prohibiting officers and employees of the government from receiving dual or extra compensation. Landram's Case, (1880) 16 Ct. Cl. 74.

A special deputy marshal is not a public officer within the constitutional limitation as to appointment (Const., art. II., sec. 2), and so can claim nothing by reason of this section. (1884) 17 Op. Atty-Gen. 684.

Acting paymaster.—An acting paymaster appointed by the senior officer present, under R. S. secs. 1381, 1584, is not an officer. He is not appointed as required by the Constitution, takes no oath of office, and gives no bond as paymaster. Webster v. U. S., (1892) 28 Ct. Cl. 25.

Clerks of District of Columbia.—The provisions of the Revised Statutes which forbid compensation for extra or dual services refer to officers and clerks of the United States, and do not extend to those of the District of Columbia. Donovan v. U. S., (1886) 21 Ct. Cl. 120.

Circuit judge as commissioner under treaty.—“The circuit judge appointed as a commissioner under the convention of Feb. 8, 1896, with Great Britain, is entitled to compensation additional to that of his salary, notwithstanding R. S. secs. 1763 and 1765 and the Act of July 31, 1894, sec. 2.” (1898) 22 Op. Atty-Gen. 184.

Clerk of two courts.—Where one lawfully holds the offices of clerk of Circuit Court and clerk of Circuit Court of Appeals, the fact that he has received the salary of three thousand dollars attached to the office of clerk of the Circuit Court of Appeals does not prevent his lawful right to receive compensation as circuit clerk. U. S. v. Harsha, (C. C. A. 1893) 56 Fed. Rep. 953.

Offices of clerk and commissioner.—There is no legal objection to the same person holding the offices of clerk and commissioner, and the person so holding them is entitled to the fees and emoluments of both. U. S. v. McCandless, (1893) 147 U. S. 692.

Duties of referee and clerk compatible.—The duties of a referee have no affinity or connection, either in character or by law or usage, with the duties of a clerk in a municipal corporation. Donovan v. U. S., (1886) 21 Ct. Cl. 120.

Special appointment of assistant district attorney.—An assistant district attorney employed at a salary, and also appointed by the attorney-general as a special assistant to a district attorney, pursuant to R. S. secs. 363-366, must be regarded as an officer in the public service. Cole v. U. S., (1893) 28 Ct. Cl. 501.

Deputy marshal as marshal and bailiff.—A deputy marshal cannot represent the marshal in court and earn for him the fees of five dollars, and at the same time be allowed payment for services as bailiff. Swift v. U. S., (1904) 128 Fed. Rep. 767.

Deputy surveyor of customs acting as surveyor.—A deputy surveyor of customs whose appointment was confirmed by Congress, and who received a salary of over two thousand five hundred dollars, does not vacate his office on being authorized to act temporarily in place of the surveyor, by the collector, under R. S. sec. 2629, nor can he receive the compensation of the surveyor, but only that attached to the office of deputy surveyor. Dinsmore's Case, (1880) 16 Op. Atty-Gen. 565.

Customs clerk as deputy collector.—In Jackson's Case, (1872) 8 Ct. Cl. 354, it was held that where the temporary appointment of a clerk in a custom house to act as a deputy collector expressly states that it is made “without increase of his compensation as clerk,” and he receives his pay as clerk for the period during which he acts as deputy collector, he cannot subsequently recover the difference between his own salary and that of a deputy collector. No official can receive compensation for two offices at the same time, and his acceptance of the one precludes him from seeking a recovery of the other.

A deputy auditor of the treasury detailed to disburse an appropriation for defraying the expenses of a commission which acts under the direction of the secretary of the navy does not hold two distinct offices if the statute making the appropriation does not create the office of disbursing agent. Whitaker v. U. S., (1892) 27 Ct. Cl. 524.

Receiver of land office disposing of Indian lands.—Where a receiver of public moneys for a district of lands subject to sale was appointed as a special receiver and superintendent to assist in disposing of certain lands held in trust for Indians, no new duty was imposed on him as receiver of the land office, and the latter appointment was in effect to an agency for the sale of lands for the Indians, with an implied understanding that a reasonable compensation would be paid for the services rendered. The provisions of this section and the two following sections do not apply to such a case, nor do they prevent the recovery of compensation for such service with regard to those trust lands by reason of his being a receiver of the land office, as the moneys paid for the Indian lands were trust moneys and not public moneys. U. S. v. Brindle, (1884) 110 U. S. 688.

Gauger as supervisor's clerk.—Although an officer of the United States while acting as gauger, a person was not an officer while acting as supervisor's clerk. Therefore, the provisions of section 1763 of the Revised Statutes, which refer to the discharge of the duties of two offices by the same person, do not refer to his case. Hedrick's Case, (1880) 16 Ct. Cl. 88.

Plurality of offices.—The offices of register of wills for Washington county and commissioner of police, or the offices of member of the Levy Court, commissioner of police, and collector of internal revenue for the District of Columbia, may be held, and the emoluments thereof may be received by one person at the same time. (1863) 10 Op. Atty-Gen. 446.

A naval officer acting as paymaster, if appointed to discharge the duties of an office which he does not hold, is prohibited from receiving dual compensation. Webster v. U. S., (1892) 28 Ct. Cl. 25.

The offices of engineer and paymaster in the navy are incompatible, and he who holds them is not entitled to the compensation of both, but is entitled to the larger of the two. Webster v. U. S., (1892) 28 Ct. Cl. 25.

Naval cadet as draftsman.—A cadet engineer in the navy is not entitled to the salary of a draftsman in the hydrographic office in addition to his own, though he hold both offices, such offices being incompatible. Winchell v. U. S., (1892) 28 Ct. Cl. 30.

Midshipman appointed acting master.—Prior to the passage of this Act it was held by Attorney-General Coffey, in Pay of a Midshipman appointed Acting Master, (1861) 10 Op. Atty-Gen. 111, that a midshipman appointed as acting master may hold such office in addition to his regular naval rank. And upon the authority of Converse v. U. S., (1858) 21 How. (U. S.) 463, if appointed thereto, he is entitled to receive the pay of that grade.

Assistant medical referee as examining surgeon.—The duties of assistant medical referee in the pension bureau are not compatible with those of examining surgeon, and therefore payment to one person for both offices is not permissible. Graham v. U. S., (1894) 29 Ct. Cl. 404.

Navy agent as pension agent.—The payment of navy and privateer pensions, under the orders of the secretary of the navy, does not constitute the person paying them an officer of the United States; and if the person thus disbursing public money at the same time holds the office of navy agent, he cannot be allowed any extra pay or emolument for making such disbursement. Browne v. U. S., (1851) 1 Curt. (U. S.) 15, 4 Fed. Cas. No. 2,036.

Retired officer holding civil office.—"A retired officer is not precluded from holding a civil office under the United States government unless in the consular or diplomatic service." (1877) 15 Op. Atty-Gen. 306. See to same effect Smith's Case, (1889) 19 Op. Atty-Gen. 283.

"A retired officer may draw his pay as such and may also draw the salary of any civil office which he may hold under the government, assuming always that the duties of the civil office are performed under and by virtue of a commission appointing him to that office which he holds in addition to his rank as a retired officer." (1877) 15 Op. Atty-Gen. 306. The interpretation is sustained by the Court of Claims in Meigs v. U. S., (1884) 19 Ct. Cl. 497, and by the Supreme Court in Converse v. U. S., (1858) 21 How. (U. S.) 464; U. S. v. Brindle, (1884) 110 U. S. 688.

Retired officers in diplomatic service.—Under the Act of March 3, 1875, retired officers situated as therein described are so far taken out of the operation of the Act of 1868 as not to be held, if they accept or hold diplomatic or consular appointment, to have resigned their places in the army; but this does not change the general policy of the law, and does not entitle them to pay as army officers during the period of time when they are absent from their country in the discharge of continuous official duties inconsistent with subjection to the rules and articles of war and other incidents of military service. Notwithstanding section 1223 such officers when in the diplomatic or consular service may still be borne on the retired list, but cannot receive double compensation. Badeau v. U. S., (1889) 130 U. S. 439.

Retired army officer in executive department.—A retired army officer is not prohibited by law from holding an office in an executive department, nor from receiving the salary thereof in addition to his retired pay. Collins's Case, (1879) 15 Ct. Cl. 27.

Retired officer as departmental clerk.—The office of chief clerk of a department and that of an officer on the retired list are not incompatible, and a person may hold two such offices and receive the salaries of both. Geddes v. U. S., (1903) 38 Ct. Cl. 428.

Retired naval officer appointed meteorologist.—A retired naval officer serving in time of war upon the active list and appointed meteorologist by the secretary of the navy under the statute providing an emergency fund for the war is entitled to his salary as a meteorologist, notwithstanding the fact that he is an officer on the retired list; and he is entitled to the pay of an officer on the retired list, but not to the pay of an officer on the active list. Hayden v. U. S., (1903) 38 Ct. Cl. 39.

Retired officer supervising work.—A retired army officer may be employed by the war department to supervise work where he could not have been assigned to that duty, notwithstanding the provisions of Revised Statutes (secs. 1763, 1764, 1765) relating to double pay. Yates v. U. S., (1890) 25 Ct. Cl. 296.

SEC. 2. [Holding more than one office.] * * * No person who holds an office the salary or annual compensation attached to which amounts to the sum of two thousand five hundred dollars shall be appointed to or hold any other office to which compensation is attached unless specially heretofore or hereafter specially authorized thereto by law; but this shall not apply to retired officers of the Army or Navy whenever they may be elected to public office or whenever the President shall appoint them to office by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. [28 Stat. L. 205.]

See also notes under preceding text as to retired officers.

Fixed compensation necessary.—The phrase, "an office the salary or annual compensation attached to which amounts to the sum of two thousand five hundred dollars," plainly imports a fixed compensation of at least that amount. The annual compensation must be determinate and not merely matter of speculation. U. S. v. Durlacher, (1894) 63 Fed. Rep. 672.

Certain special employment or additional service is not incompatible with an office under the United States and does not even preclude the payment of compensation for the special employment under the prohibitions of sections 1763-1765, R. S., and section 2 of this Act. (1902) 24 Op. Atty.-Gen. 12.

Commissioners under treaties.—This Act, passed anterior to the treaty with Great Britain, Feb. 6, 1896, as a supplement to a series of Acts which first concerned only collectors of customs, naval officers, and surveyors, and was afterwards extended to other officers, should be regarded as not intended by Congress to invade the domain of the treaty-making authority and establish restrictions upon future occasional and temporary commissionership created by international agreement, the nature and functions of which neither Congress nor the framers of article 2, section 2, of the Constitution could wisely have undertaken to foresee. The treaty might have provided for the appointment of an identical commissioner by our ambassador to Great Britain, or by the President of France, instead of by the President of the United States, and might, for reasons important to the two treaty-making authorities, have expressly required one of the judges of the Supreme Court to be appointed. With such matters Congress, by this Act, had no intention of interfering. If within the letter such an employment seems to be beyond the intent of that law. (1898) 22 Op. Atty.-Gen. 184.

The word "office," as used in section 2 of this Act, is to be presumed, in the absence of indications to the contrary, not to embrace a commissionership under a treaty, because it is not what is called a constitutional office. (1898) 22 Op. Atty.-Gen. 184.

Clerk as commissioner.—This Act has not changed the law, and a clerk of the Circuit Court is not barred from holding the office of commissioner of the Circuit Court, as to neither office is there a salary attached, and it is impossible to determine that the clerk is disqualified for the reason that he at that time holds an office to which a salary is attached of $2,500. U. S. v. Durlacher, (1894) 63 Fed. Rep. 672.

Retired officer.—The secretary of the navy is not precluded by section 2 of the Act of July 31, 1894, from employing one retired under the Act of Feb. 19, 1897, to supervise the completion of certain tables of planets. (1897) 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 507.

No office created.—The Act of Congress, Feb. 19, 1897, authorizing the expenditure of money for the employment of a competent mathematician to supervise the completion of certain tables of planets, providing no permanency to the term, no requirement that the person employed shall either take an official oath or receive a commission and no formalities in the selection of such an employee, does not create an office. (1897) 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 507.

SEC. 7. [Employment of retired army and navy officers, on river and harbor improvement.] That section two of the Act making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and ninety-five, and for other purposes, approved July thirty-first, eighteen hundred and ninety-four, shall not be so construed as to prevent the employment of any retired officer of the Army or Navy to do work under the direction of the Chief of Engineers of the United States Army in connection with the improvement of rivers and harbors of the United States, or the payment by the proper officer of the Treasury of any amounts agreed upon as compensation for such employment. [29 Stat. L. 235.]

This is from the Act of June 3, 1896, ch. 314, "An Act making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes."

Section 2 of the Act of July 31, 1894, above referred to, is set out in the preceding text.

[SEC. 1.] [Compensation for clerks or secretaries of retired officials.]
 * * * That hereafter no allowance or compensation for clerks or secretaries of officials of the United States retired from active service shall be authorized.
 * * * [30 Stat. L. 644.]

This is from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of July 1, 1898, ch. 546, and follows a provision for payment for services of a clerk to a retired justice of the Supreme Court.

Sec. 1764. [Extra services.] No allowance or compensation shall be made to any officer or clerk, by reason of the discharge of duties which belong to any other officer or clerk in the same or any other Department; and no allowance or compensation shall be made for any extra services whatever, which any officer or clerk may be required to perform, unless expressly authorized by law.

Before the Acts of 1835, 1839, etc., the executive exercised a very large discretion in these matters. That discretion is now, so far as salaried officers are concerned, taken away. If there be a really strong, equitable claim to extraordinary allowances it must be addressed to the discretion and indulgence of Congress. (1842) 4 Op. Atty.-Gen. 128.

The purpose of Congress in the enactment was not absolutely and in all cases to prohibit the employment of any class of officers in the discharge of extra services, or the disbursement of public money, or to deny them a just compensation when so employed, but only to apply the prohibition to cases in which no extra allowance or compensation had been authorized by law. The object in view was to guard against the exercise of executive discretion on the one hand and the claims arising by implication, and thus asserted by public officers on the other. It was not so much to prescribe disabilities as against public agents, as to guard and protect the treasury against unforeseen demands. (1843) 4 Op. Atty.-Gen. 249.

General construction. — "We are of opinion," said Harlan, J., "that Congress intended, by sections 1764 and 1765, to uproot the practice under which, in the absence of any statute expressly authorizing it, extra allowances or special compensation were made to public officers for services which they were required to render in consideration only of the fixed salary and emoluments established for them by law. Our duty is to give effect to the legislation of Congress, and not to defeat it by an interpretation plainly inconsistent with the words used." U. S. v. Johnson, (1899) 173 U. S. 363.

"It is impossible," said Mr. Justice Nelson, "to misunderstand this language or the purpose and intent of the enactment. It cuts up by the roots these claims by public officers for extra compensation on the ground of extra services. There is no discretion left in any officer or tribunal to make the allowance unless it is authorized by some law of Congress. The prohibition is general and applies to all public officers or quasi-public officers who have a fixed compensation." Hoyt v. U. S., (1850) 10 How. (U. S.) 109. See also U. S. v. Shoemaker, (1868) 7 Wall. (U. S.) 338.

In Mullett v. U. S., (1893) 150 U. S. 566, it was said that "obviously the purpose of Congress, as disclosed by these sections, was that every officer or regular employee of the government should be limited in his compensation to such salary or fees as were by law specifically attached to his office or employment. 'Extras,' which are such a fruitful subject of disputes in private contracts, were to be eliminated from the public service."

The elements necessary to justify the payment of compensation to an officer for additional services are, that they shall be performed by virtue of a separate and distinct appointment authorized by law; that such services shall not be services added to or connected with the regular duties of the place he holds, and that a compensation whose amount is fixed by law or regulation shall be provided for their payment. (1888) 19 Op. Atty-Gen. 121.

Not upon contracts.—The law acts, not upon matters of right, of contract, of stipulation; if it did, it would be violative of all principle to give it a construction that would render it retroactive; but it is designed to limit the exercise of executive discretion. (1843) 4 Op. Atty-Gen. 191.

The term "authorized by law," as used in this Act, must be construed as equivalent to the expression "authorized by Act of Congress;" and in looking for the authority of law to warrant these payments, researches are to be limited to the provisions which Congress has made upon this subject; and to bring a case within the exception contained in this section not only must the money be appropriated by an Act of Congress, but it must be expressly appropriated for the particular service for the rendition of which it is claimed as a compensation. (1839) 3 Op. Atty-Gen. 439.

Extra official services.—The statutes do not preclude an officer from receiving compensation other than his salary for services rendered the government in an employment which has no affinity or connection with his official duty. Meigs v. U. S. (1884) 19 Ct. Cl. 497.

Compensation for what extra services.—No allowance beyond his fixed compensation can be made except for the performance of certain duties required by law to be performed, for which the law grants a certain compensation to be paid, and which have no connection with the duties of the office he holds. Converse v. U. S., (1858) 21 How. (U. S.) 463.

What extra service implied.—The various provisions of law forbidding extra allowance, or additional pay for extra service, imply extra service, pay, or allowance in the same office, not distinct service in distinct offices. (1857) 8 Op. Atty-Gen. 325.

It was held in (1854) 6 Op. Atty-Gen. 583, that to enable a salaried officer to recover extra compensation for services rendered to the government, it must be made to appear that the services for which extra compensation is claimed "were not such as were ordinarily attached to the duties of the office held," but were performed under "a special authority not connected with his regular official duties; or under such circumstances as rendered the extra labor and responsibility assumed by the officer in performing it necessary." See U. S. v. Nourse, (1832) 6 Pet. (U. S.) 470; U. S. v. Macdaniel, (1833) 7 Pet. (U. S.) 1; U. S. v. Ripley, (1833) 7 Pet. (U. S.) 18; U. S. v. Filibrown, (1833) 7 Pet. (U. S.) 44; Gratiot v. U. S., (1846) 4 How. (U. S.) 80; U. S. v. Buchanan, (1850) 8 How. (U. S.) 83; Brown v. U. S., (1850) 9 How. (U. S.) 487.

Allowance by head of department.—A compensation for extra services where no certain compensation is fixed by law, cannot be allowed by the head of a department to any officer of the government who has by law a fixed and certain compensation for his services in the office he holds. Nor can it be allowed by the court or jury as a set-off in a suit brought by the United States against an officer for public money in his hands. Converse v. U. S., (1858) 21 How. (U. S.) 463. See also Whiting's Case, (1863) 10 Op. Atty-Gen. 435; Stubbs's Case, (1861) 10 Op. Atty-Gen. 31; Shirley's Claim, (1872) 14 Op. Atty-Gen. 101.

Extra duties constituting an office.—It is immaterial so far as compensation is concerned whether an employment constitutes an office as defined in the Constitution provided the appointment was made lawfully. Saunders v. U. S., (1886) 21 Ct. Cl. 408.

Dual offices.—This statute does not prohibit the holding and receiving of the salaries of two offices by one person at the same time provided the duties are not incompatible. Saunders v. U. S., (1886) 21 Ct. Cl. 408; Collins's Case, (1879) 15 Ct. Cl. 22.

Allowance of personal expenses.—It would be a clear violation of these laws to allow an officer of the government whose compensation is specifically designated by law, in addition to that compensation, the ordinary personal expenses incurred in the performance of his official duties. (1862) 10 Op. Atty-Gen. 216.

Renunciation of pay.—Where the compensation of an officer or employee of the government is by statute fixed and certain, other officers of the government can neither increase it nor diminish it, nor take it away; and a so-called renunciation by a retired officer of his pay, exacted by the accounting officers as a condition to his receiving the salary of another office, is inoperative as a defense. Geddes v. U. S., (1903) 38 Ct. Cl. 428.

Fraudulent claim for extra compensation.—"Where an office is accepted in connection with the duties of another office under an appointment which states that it carries no compensation, and is held for some years without protest, thereby misleading the appointing authority, and subsequently salary is demanded, it will be deemed a fraud in fact and in law." Glavey v. U. S., (1900) 35 Ct. Cl. 242.

What persons included.—This and the following section both include in their prohibition, officers, clerks, and other persons. U. S. v. Saunders, (1837) 120 U. S. 126.

Extra official service of district attorney.—If a district attorney by direction of the attorney-general performs duties germane to his office, he must perform them without extra compensation; but if he is employed by the attorney-general to render services not incidental to his official duties, he may be compensated for them. U. S. v. Garter, (1898) 170 U. S. 527, affirming (1896) 31 Ct. Cl. 344.

Extra services of district attorney.—A district attorney may not receive in addition to his salary the reasonable value of his services in examining the titles to sites for public buildings, in taking a deposition in his district in an action pending in another dis-strict, in defending officers of the army in suits against them for acts done in the line of their duties, or in preparing briefs or arguing cases in this court in which the United States is a party. U. S. v. Ady, (C. C. A. 1896) 76 Fed. Rep. 359.

Services of district attorneys prosecuting offenders.—District attorneys are not entitled to any compensation over and above their annual salary and stated fees for any services whatever rendered by them as such officers in the prosecution of offenders. (1840) 3 Op. Atty-Gen. 515.

Services of district attorney in post-office cases.—The district attorney of the eastern district of Pennsylvania is not entitled to extra compensation for services rendered in prosecuting for violations of the law respecting post offices. (1844) 4 Op. Atty-Gen. 347.

Services of district attorney in national bank suits.—It is not expressly provided by law that a district attorney shall receive compensation for services performed by him in conducting suits arising out of the provisions of the national banking law in which the United States or any of its officers or agents are parties. Without such express provision, compensation for services of that character cannot be taxed, allowed, or paid. Nor can the expenses of the receivership be held to include compensation to the district attorney for conducting a suit in which the receiver is a party, for the obvious reason that the statute does not expressly provide compensation for such services. Congress evidently intended to require the performance by a district attorney of all the duties imposed upon him by law, without any other remuneration than that coming from his salary, from the compensation or fees authorized to be taxed and allowed, and from such other compensation as is expressly allowed by law specifically on account of services named. Gibson v. Peters, (1893) 150 U. S. 342.

Services of district attorney in flowage damage cases.—It is the duty of an attorney-general under the direction of the department of justice to represent the interests of the United States in flowage damage cases, and extra compensation therefor is prohibited by this and the following section. Colman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1895) 66 Fed. Rep. 695.

What clerks included.—It may be inferred from the context that the clerks who are forbidden by this section to receive compensation for extra services are the clerks in the executive departments—that large class of clerks who are specially recognized by statute and whose compensation and duties are specially marked out. Landram's Case, (1880) 16 Ct. Cl. 74.

A clerk of a department is not entitled to extra compensation for any service which may be required of him in the line of his duty. Stubbs's Case, (1861) 10 Op. Atty-Gen. 31; Shirley's Claim, (1872) 14 Op. Atty-Gen. 101.

The separate duties of the several clerks in the departments, except where they are specifically designated in particular cases by statute, are assigned to such clerks by the head of the department; and no posterior claim to extra compensation can be founded on the official acts done by a clerk, provided those acts constituted any part of the lawful general duties of the department. (1854) 6 Op. Atty-Gen. 583.

A deputy auditor of the treasury detailed to disburse a fund under the administration of the navy department and performing that service in Washington is prohibited from receiving additional compensation "unless such employment is authorized and payment therefor specifically provided in the law granting the appropriation." Whitaker v. U. S., (1892) 27 Ct. Cl. 524.

Pension clerk as secretary to Indian commissioners.—A clerk in the pension office, ordered to perform the duties of secretary to commissioners appointed to treat with a delegation of Indians, is not entitled to extra compensation therefor, but must be limited to the compensation provided by law for his services as clerk in the pension office. (1846) 4 Op. Atty-Gen. 463.

Clerk signing land patents.—A clerk in the general land office receiving a salary is not legally entitled to additional compensation or allowance for services in signing land patents. White's Case, (1863) 10 Op. Atty-Gen. 442.

Executive clerk serving as clerk to House committee.—This does not extend to an executive clerk who is at the same time the clerk of a standing committee of the House. Each position being authorized by law and having a salary affixed to it, the pay of the one cannot be considered as additional to that of the other. Saunders v. U. S., (1886) 21 Ct. Cl. 408.

Clerks of supervisors of internal revenue.—The provisions of this section prohibiting extra compensation to departmental clerks do not extend to the clerk of a supervisor of internal revenue. Hedrick's Case, (1880) 16 Ct. Cl. 88.

Clerks of supervisors of internal revenue. lands.—Clerks and others holding regular appointments and receiving specific salaries thereto by law are not entitled to additional allowances for services rendered the government as agents for surveying and selling Indian land. (1839) 3 Op. Atty-Gen. 422.

Filing papers of Circuit Court commissioners.—The statute of May 28, 1896, 29 Stat. L. 184, which directed the deposit of papers of the Circuit Court commissioner, not having authorized the filing of such papers, and no provision having been made for compensating the clerk for services of receiving and retaining them in his custody, he may not recover therefor. U. S. v. Van Duzee, (1902) 185 U. S. 278, reversing (1900) 35 Ct. Cl. 214.

The service by the clerk in entering orders approving the marshal's accounts is strictly in the line of his duty as clerk; his per folio fees for such orders are expressly allowed by section 828 and are not "additional pay, extra allowance, or compensation in any form whatever." U. S. v. Jones, (1893) 147 U. S. 672.

Clerk's services drawing juries. — Construction given to this section is conclusive against the claim of the clerk for per diem services in the drawing of juries, or for such services as are not taxable, as orders, certificates, or the like, under section 828, fixing compensation of clerks. These services are not rendered in a distinct capacity as jury commissioner, but are incidental and germane to his regular duties as clerk. U. S. v. King, (1893) 147 U. S. 681.

Where collectors, naval officers, and surveyors are required by the secretary of the treasury to perform services which are unconnected with their official duties, the necessary expenses actually incurred in the performance of those extra duties may be allowed them. (1840) 3 Op. Atty-Gen. 563.

Services by collector outside district. — In case of extra services performed by a collector under the direction of the department, beyond the limits of his district, and which have in character no affinity or connection with the duties of his office, he may be allowed compensation therefor, although it exceeds the maximum for extra services of the opposite nature. U. S. v. Austin, (1864) 2 Cliff. (U. S.) 325, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,480.

Overtime of inspector of customs. — The fact that a night inspector of customs was required to work overtime, and was not excused from other duty on account of such overwork as was prescribed by the treasury regulations, will not entitle him to a claim for extra compensation, especially where he has received payment through a considerable period of time without objection or protest, and where there is no pretense of fraud or of circumstances constituting a duress. U. S. v. Garlinger, (1898) 169 U. S. 316, reversing (1895) 30 Ct. Cl. 208.

Post-office agent serving as deputy marshal. — Where a special agent of the post-office department in receipt of a fixed compensation performs services as a deputy marshal, he cannot be allowed in respect of such services anything beyond actual expenses incurred. (1876) 15 Op. Atty-Gen. 71.

Cadet engineer serving in hydrographic office. — The secretary of the navy may detail a cadet engineer for service in the hydrographic office, but the detail will not entitle the officer to additional pay. Winchell v. U. S., (1892) 28 Ct. Cl. 30.

Navy agents employed to make purchases, or to perform any service for a department other than the navy department, are not entitled to extra compensation, unless compensation for the extra services is expressly authorized by law. (1840) 3 Op. Atty-Gen. 588.

A commodore's secretary cannot lawfully receive any extra allowance or compensation in any form whatever, for any service which it is possible for him to render, either within the line of his duty or outside of it. (1858) 9 Op. Atty-Gen. 260.

Officers at West Point. — The executive has no authority for allowing extra compensation to the officers at West Point, the same not being authorized by any law. (1842) 4 Op. Atty-Gen. 138.

Extra services by post-office carriers. — The eight-hour law was not intended as a door of evasion whereby a postmaster can bring into his office additional clerks for additional pay; but where the necessities of an office require the services of the carriers after their own work is done, they will be entitled to additional compensation for all in excess of eight hours, notwithstanding the provision of the Revised Statutes (sec. 1764), that no compensation "shall be made for any extra services whatever." Letter-Carrier Cases, (1892) 27 Ct. Cl. 244, affirmed (1893) 148 U. S. 124.

Under the eight-hour law the carrier is entitled to eight hours' pay whether eight hours' work be given him or not. For any excess of work on any day he is entitled to extra pay. The department cannot give him a deficit of work one day and an excess another, and make a monthly average of the number of hours employed. Letter-Carrier Cases, (1892) 27 Ct. Cl. 244, affirmed (1893) 148 U. S. 124.

A supervising architect of the treasury in the regular employ of the government at a stated salary of five thousand dollars may not recover extra compensation for rendering services not strictly appertaining to his office or position, but of the same general character and performed at the same place; there being no express promise of payment made, nor Act of Congress authorizing such payment. Mullett v. U. S., (1893) 150 U. S. 566.

The chief messenger in the treasury department is not entitled to compensation over and above his salary for carrying the mails of the several offices occupying the northeast executive building, to and from the post office; but if he be required to furnish a horse for that duty, a reasonable compensation for that should be allowed. (1839) 3 Op. Atty-Gen. 473.

Watchmen are not entitled to extra compensation for labor performed in the offices during the day. (1839) 3 Op. Atty-Gen. 473.

Division of day's service. — "We are unable to accept the contention," said Mr. Justice Shiras, "that it was competent for the secretary of the treasury by passing regulations dividing a day's service into parts, to attach to each part the pay for a full day's work. By the word 'day,' in section 2733, Congress evidently meant the calendar day; and the purpose of Congress in prescribing the pay of three dollars for every day, and in forbidding any allowance or compensation for extra services, would be defeated if the regulation in question were to be construed as providing that a period of twenty-four hours might be so divided as to justify two or more payments to the same person of the amount fixed for the daily compensation." U. S. v. Garlinger, (1898) 169 U. S. 316.

Commissions for selling stamps. — "An assistant treasurer of the United States, to whom, without prepayment therefor, the commissioner of internal revenue furnishes for sale and distribution sealed packages of adhesive stamps, is not entitled to commissions or extra compensation for selling them."

Folger v. U. S., (1880) 103 U. S. 30, affirming (1877) 13 Ct. Cl. 91.

Waiver of right to extra compensation. — Where a contractor renders extra service to the government during a period of more than six years without notice that he regards it as extra, and without demanding extra compensation, he will be held to have waived his right to it. Whitsell v. U. S., (1898) 34 Ct. Cl. 5.

Sec. 1765. [Extra allowances.] No officer in any branch of the public service, or any other person whose salary, pay, or emoluments are fixed by law or regulations, shall receive any additional pay, extra allowance, or compensation, in any form whatever, for the disbursement of public money, or for any other service or duty whatever, unless the same is authorized by law, and the appropriation therefor explicitly states that it is for such additional pay, extra allowance, or compensation. [R. S.]

Act of March 3, 1839, ch. 82, 5 Stat. L. 349; Act of Aug. 23, 1842, ch. 183, 5 Stat. L. 510.

See notes under preceding sections.

Since the Act of 1842 no officer whose pay is fixed by law or regulation is lawfully entitled to any additional pay, extra allowance, or compensation in any form whatever, for any other duty or service, unless the same shall be authorized by law, and the prohibition therefor, explicitly set forth, that it is for additional pay or extra compensation. (1849) 5 Op. Atty.-Gen. 74.

When applicable. — This section applies only to cases where regular and extra compensation are given for discharge of duties or rendition of services incompatible with each other. U. S. v. Evans, (1885) 4 Mackey (D. C.) 281.

Conditions necessary to recover extra pay. — "It would be difficult," said Sanborn, J., "to state more clearly than these provisions of the Acts of Congress do the rule that the compensation which they prescribed for the discharge of the duties of the office of district attorney shall be his only compensation, or to prohibit more positively the allowance of any additional compensation 'for any other service or duty whatever, unless the same is authorized by law, and the appropriation therefor explicitly states that it is for such additional pay, extra allowance, or compensation.' They impose three conditions precedent to the recovery by a district attorney of any compensation beyond that prescribed by these statutes, namely: the services must have been such as he was not required to perform in the discharge of the duties of his office; the extra compensation for his services must have been authorized by law; and there must have been an appropriation therefor which explicitly stated that it was for such extra compensation." U. S. v. Ady, (C. C. A. 1896) 76 Fed. Rep. 359.

Nature of appropriation necessary. — It is not enough to find an Act of Congress authorizing a service and making an appropriation to pay for it. This would be sufficient providing the person rendering the service were not an officer or other person entitled to a fixed compensation. If he is, and he claims an extra compensation for an extra service, he must produce an appropriation which explicitly sets forth that it is made for such additional compensation; that is, he must show not only that Congress contemplated and provided for a service and payment therefor, but that they contemplated and explicitly provided that if it should be rendered by one already entitled to a fixed compensation he should nevertheless receive in addition thereto the compensation provided for such service. And the addition of such compensation to a fixed compensation is not to be inferred from any equitable considerations, but must be found explicitly declared in the law itself. U. S. v. Converse, (1858) 21 Law Rep. 593, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 14,848. This case was reversed on somewhat different grounds, 21 How. (U. S.) 463.

General appropriation for particular object. — In case of a general appropriation of a sum of money for the accomplishment of a particular object, no part of it can be paid to a person receiving an annual salary, or pay and emoluments fixed by law, for any services he might render in relation to it, which services are not directed to be paid by the Act. (1839) 3 Op. Atty.-Gen. 439.

Appropriation for particular service. — Extra compensation to persons entitled to salary may be allowed only where money shall have been appropriated for the particular service for the rendition of which it is claimed as a compensation. (1839) 3 Op. Atty.-Gen. 439.

Applying contingent fund. — No portion of the contingent fund of a department can be applied to the payment of extra services rendered by any person receiving an annual salary, or whose pay or emoluments are fixed by law; because no particular services are designated in the Acts making such appropriations, to which the money or any part of it is to be applied. (1839) 3 Op. Atty.-Gen. 439.

When extra compensation is authorized. — Where the service in question is one required by law, but not of any particular official, and compensation therefor is fixed by competent authority and is appropriated, the officer who, under due authorization, performs the service is entitled to the compensation. (1877) 15 Op. Atty.-Gen. 608. See also Eveleth's Case, (1882) 17 Op. Atty.-Gen. 321.

Services connected with official duties. — This legislation prohibits an officer of any branch of the government from receiving additional or extra compensation for any service rendered by him if the service so rendered have any affinity or connection with the duty of his office, unless such compensation is "authorized by law and the appropriation therefor explicitly states that it is for such additional pay, extra allowance, or compensation." (1891) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 221.

It is only when extra and additional duties are imposed upon an officer as a part of his duty, and he is bound to obey and perform them, that such officer is not entitled to and cannot receive extra pay unless it is fixed by law, and "the appropriation therefor explicitly states that it is for such additional pay." U. S. v. Stowe, (1884) 19 Fed. Rep. 807.

The phrase "any other service whatever" seems to be construed by the context "disbursement of public money, or for any other service or duty whatsoever," which implies that reference is intended to service of an officer in the line of his duty, and under his particular appointment, not specific service appertaining to another and a distinct commission. (1857) 8 Op. Atty.-Gen. 325.

Where a service which cannot legally be required of an officer is rendered with the consent of his superior for another department having no official control of him, and is a service within the lawful discretion of the department employing him, he may receive additional pay therefor, notwithstanding the Revised Statutes (sec. 1765). Collier v. U. S., (1887) 22 Ct. Cl. 125.

Disbursement not required by office. — Extra compensation cannot be allowed to an officer because he has disbursed public money which his office did not require him to disburse. Browne v. U. S., (1851) 1 Curt. (U. S.) 15, 4 Fed. Cas. No. 2,036.

When salary, etc., are fixed. — The "salary," "pay," or "emoluments" of such "officer" or "person" must be "fixed by law or regulation," in order to bring him within the provisions of this section. A "salary" is "fixed" when it is at a stipulated rate for a definite period of time. A "pay" or "emolument" is "fixed" when the amount of it is agreed upon and the service for which it is to be given defined. A salary, pay, or emolument is fixed by law when the amount is named in a general order, promulgated under provisions of law, and applicable to a class or classes of persons. Hedrick's Case, (1880) 16 Ct. Cl. 88.

Pay fixed by order. — If the pay of a person in the public service is not fixed by "law or regulations," but is specially fixed by the order or instruction of the secretary of the treasury, the person is not within the prohibition of this statute. Landram's Case, (1880) 16 Ct. Cl. 74.

"Regulations" and "instructions" distinguished. — A "regulation" affects a class or classes of officers; an "instruction" is a direction to govern the conduct of the particular officer to whom it is addressed. Landram's Case, (1880) 16 Ct. Cl. 74.

It was open to the secretary of the treasury to prescribe the allowances to collectors or the payment of distillery surveyors in the form of a regulation or in the form of an instruction. In the former case it would have brought them within the terms of section 1765; in the latter case they would have been outside those terms. Landram's Case, (1880) 16 Ct. Cl. 74.

The appointments issued by the commissioner of internal revenue to distillery surveyors, though they practically had the same executive operation as "regulations," were not regulations but "instructions," and consequently do not bring the case of a distillery surveyor within the statutory prohibition against dual or extra compensation. Landram's Case, (1880) 16 Ct. Cl. 74.

A deputy marshal is not an officer, "or any other person whose salary, pay, or emoluments are fixed by law or regulation." Matthews v. U. S., (1897) 32 Ct. Cl. 123, affirmed on other grounds in (1899) 173 U. S. 381.

Collectors are "officers" or persons "whose salaries or whose pay or emoluments are fixed by law and regulations." (1843) 4 Op. Atty.-Gen. 249.

Services of district attorney in condemnation proceedings. — It is the duty of the district attorney to represent the United States in proceedings for the condemnation of land, and his attendance in court on such proceedings is on the business of the United States as prescribed by R. S. sec. 824. And where no statute provides for extra or special compensation for services of that character, he is not entitled to any additional pay, extra allowance, or compensation therefor except under express appropriation for that purpose. U. S. v. Johnson, (1899) 173 U. S. 363.

District attorney of District of Columbia. — The district attorney and the assistant district attorney of the District of Columbia are officers whose "salary, pay, or emoluments are fixed by law," and they are not entitled to additional compensation for professional services rendered for the Rock Creek park commissioners. Cole v. U. S., (1893) 28 Ct. Cl. 501.

Marshal sent to foreign country. — If a United States marshal was appointed an agent, in pursuance of section 5276, to go to a foreign country to take the delivery of a criminal, his services performed in pursuance of such an appointment would not be a duty added to or connected with the regular duties of his office as marshal. The appropriation bills provide for the payment of compensation for these services, but they do not specify the amount to be paid to such agent. But if the amount of compensation to be paid the agent was fixed by regulation of the department before his appointment, he is entitled to receive the amount so established; if the amount was not fixed by regulation, he is not entitled to compensation beyond his expenses. (1888) 19 Op. Atty.-Gen. 121.

Department clerk serving abroad. — In Stansbury v. U. S., (1868) 8 Wall. (U. S.) 33, under the Act of Aug. 23, 1842, declaring that no officer of the government drawing a fixed salary shall receive additional compensation for any service unless it is authorized by law, and a specific appropriation made to pay it, an agreement by the secretary of the interior to pay a clerk in his department for services rendered to the government by labors abroad — the clerk still holding his place and drawing his pay as clerk in the interior — was held void. See also Stansbury's Case, (1864) 1 Ct. Cl. 123; Harvey's Case, (1867) 3 Ct. Cl. 39; Wilson's Case, (1865) 1 Ct. Cl. 206.

Pay of clerk suspended during compensation for other work. — Where the secretary of war designates a clerk as his agent to superintend a construction authorized by Congress under an appropriation therefor, and suspends his pay as clerk and fixes a certain amount as compensation to him as such agent, he having accepted the terms of his employment as agent has no claim upon the government for compensation as clerk, but is entitled to receive pay for service as the agent, and such pay is not additional to any other compensation nor an extra allowance, nor does such a case fall within the prohibition of this section. Eveleth's Case, (1882) 17 Op. Atty-Gen. 321.

Treasury clerk making customs disbursements. — "A disbursing clerk in the office of the secretary of the treasury, who makes payments by direction of the secretary which should be made by a collector of customs or local disbursing agents comes within the prohibition as to extra compensation of the Revised Statutes, secs. 1763, 1764, 1765, and the Act of 20th June, 1874." Bartlett v. U. S., (1890) 25 Ct. Cl. 389.

Collectors accepting and paying drafts. — The collectors of customs are prevented by these Acts from obtaining any allowance for accepting and paying drafts by the secretary of the treasury, even if such service could be considered beyond the pale of their official duties. Hoyt v. U. S., (1850) 10 How. (U. S.) 109.

Disbursements by collector for customs building. — Construing this statute it was held in U. S. v. Shoemaker, (1868) 7 Wall. (U. S.) 338, that a collector of customs was not entitled to offset, in a suit against him by the United States, compensation for disbursements made for building a custom house and marine hospital at the port where he was collector.

Disbursing money for topographical purposes. — The secretary of war in the ordinary execution of his public duties cannot employ and compensate collectors, etc., in the revenue service for disbursing moneys appropriated for topographical purposes. (1845) 4 Op. Atty-Gen. 401.

Duties of superintendent of lighthouses outside district. — The secretary of the treasury under the Acts of Congress was authorized to appoint an agent to purchase all the supplies necessary for the lighthouse service throughout the United States, and to make the necessary disbursements therefor, and such agent was entitled to a compensation of two and a half per cent. on the amount disbursed, and the money was appropriated to pay it. The secretary had a right, under these laws, to select as agent any one already holding office, if he supposed him to be best qualified for the duty. But he had no right to order a collector of the revenue, or any other officer of the government, to perform this duty without compensation outside of the lighthouse district of which he was superintendent, or outside of and alien to the office he held. Converse v. U. S., (1858) 21 How. (U. S.) 463.

In (1843) 4 Op. Atty-Gen. 272, it was held that collectors of customs who are made superintendents of lighthouses may receive commissions on their disbursements.

Extra pay to gauger. — A gauger's pay being fixed by a general regulation, his case comes within the prohibition of this statute, and he cannot receive pay for another service rendered at the same time. Hedrick's Case, (1880) 16 Ct. Cl. 88.

A commissioner for the exploration and survey of the northeastern boundary cannot be allowed extra compensation by the accounting officer unless there shall be legislative action authorizing it. (1843) 4 Op. Atty-Gen. 269.

Reward for services connected with official duties. — The payment of a reward to an officer for services within the scope of his official duties is contrary to public policy. Matthews v. U. S., (1897) 32 Ct. Cl. 123, affirmed on other grounds in (1899) 173 U. S. 381.

Reward for arrest. — Where a statute vests a discretion in the attorney-general to include or not to include, when he exercises the power to offer a reward for the arrest of certain persons, particular persons within the offer by him made, and that discretion is so availed of as not to exclude deputy marshals from taking the reward offered, it is not a case within the provisions of the above statute, and such deputy marshal is not forbidden to take such reward. U. S. v. Matthews, (1899) 173 U. S. 381, affirming (1897) 32 Ct. Cl. 123.

Sheriff in charge of U. S. prisoners. — Even if the fact that a county sheriff may possibly be constituted a United States officer by reason of his having charge of United States prisoners, still he is prohibited from receiving extra compensation for the care of such prisoners by the provisions of this section. Avery v. Pima County, (Ariz. 1900) 60 Pac. Rep. 702.

Extra pay for postal publication. — The Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 540, appropriating money for a new edition of the postal laws and regulations, does not authorize the postmaster-general to make an allowance to an officer of his department whom he may designate for that purpose. (1891) 20 Op. Atty-Gen. 221.

Pay of secretary ad interim. — The person appointed secretary of the treasury ad interim has a claim upon the government for the usual — or, if there be no usual, for a reasonable — compensation for his services in that capacity, but an appropriation is necessary. (1842) 4 Op. Atty-Gen. 122.

SEC. 3. [Extra compensation or perquisites forbidden — exceptions.] That no civil officer of the Government shall hereafter receive any compensation or perquisites, directly or indirectly, from the treasury or property of the United States beyond his salary or compensation allowed by law: Provided, That this shall not be construed to prevent the employment and payment by the Department of Justice of district attorneys as now allowed by law for the performance of services not covered by their salaries or fees. [18 Stat. L. 109.]

See notes under preceding sections.

Extent of section. — This statute must be confined to "compensation or perquisites" claimed officially. The words "compensation and perquisites" import this. This provision was no doubt intended to give exactness, and confine the remuneration of officers to the fees and compensation expressly allowed by the various and appropriate statutes. U. S. v. Winston, (C. C. A. 1896) 73 Fed. Rep. 149.

The word "payment," as here used, signifies to fix or determine the compensation for the services referred to. (1887) 19 Op. Atty.-Gen. 63.

Applicable to salaried officers only. — This Act does not apply to officers paid by fees, but is confined to civil officers who receive salaries or compensation from the public treasury. Hartson v. U. S., (1886) 21 Ct. Cl. 451.

Civil officers only. — This Act relates only to "civil officers." It does not extend to the clerk of a supervisor of internal revenue; it does extend to the compensation of a gauger. Hedrick's Case, (1880) 16 Ct. Cl. 88.

A deputy marshal is not a civil officer receiving "a salary and compensation allowed by law." Matthews v. U. S., (1897) 32 Ct. Cl. 123, affirmed on other grounds in (1899) 173 U. S. 381.

Customs inspector as deputy marshal. — Where an inspector of customs while holding that office renders services as a special deputy marshal under section 2031, R. S., he is prohibited by the third section of this Act from receiving any compensation for such service beyond his salary as inspector of customs. (1884) 17 Op. Atty.-Gen. 684.

Effect of proviso. — This section, however, clearly enacts a general stringent rule against any compensation, beyond the salary and fees specifically authorized by law as belonging to the office, and the proviso simply saved from repeal by implication any existing law which allowed the department of justice to pay district attorneys for services not covered by the salary and fees belonging to the office. The proviso occurs in a restrictive Act and affirmatively authorizes nothing. The question is left to depend on the existence of other laws under which the department of justice may act. Ruhm v. U. S., (1895) 66 Fed. Rep. 531.

Compensation allowed by law. — Compensation

tion to district attorneys for special services duly allowed to them under a statute which authorizes their employment is "compensation allowed by law." (1885) 18 Op. Atty.-Gen. 121.

Extra services of United States attorneys. — The authority of the attorney-general or department of justice to employ and pay United States attorneys for services not covered by their salaries and fees is expressly recognized by Congress in section 3 of this Act, and R. S. sec. 299, and the annual appropriations made by Congress for that purpose. (1891) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 49.

This Act was passed subsequent to section 770, R. S. It was evidently contemplated at that time that there were services which a district attorney might be called upon to perform which were not covered by fees named in the statute or the salary provided for in that section. Weed v. U. S., (1897) 82 Fed. Rep. 414.

That there are services in the view of Congress required by law of district attorneys and not covered by any legislation as to the compensation of district attorneys, is shown clearly by this third section. (1888) 19 Op. Atty.-Gen. 152.

District attorney defending secretary of treasury. — The secretary of the treasury being an officer of the revenue within the meaning of R. S. 827, a fee to a district attorney for defending him in a suit brought because of goods seized under his order, when duly allowed by court, is strictly compensation allowed by law within the meaning of this section. (1885) 18 Op. Atty.-Gen. 121.

Examination of land titles. — A district attorney directed and employed by the attorney-general of the United States is entitled to extra compensation for services performed and expenses incurred in investigating titles to land authorized to be acquired for the United States. Weed v. U. S., (1897) 82 Fed. Rep. 414. See also (1855) 7 Op. Atty.-Gen. 46; (1866) 11 Op. Atty.-Gen. 431; (1868) 12 Op. Atty.-Gen. 416; (1887) 19 Op. Atty.-Gen. 63. These cases, however, would seem to be overruled by the decisions in U. S. v. Johnson, (1899) 173 U. S. 363. See JUDICIAL OFFICERS, vol. 4, p. 156.

Authority of attorney-general. — The proviso herein is a virtual recognition of the practical construction given to R. S. sec. 189, which in effect is construed to invest the attorney-general with sole authority thereafter to employ and fix the compensation of district attorneys where the performance of services in examining titles to land purchased by the United States is called for. (1887) 19 Op. Atty.-Gen. 63.

[SEC. 1.] [Actual traveling expenses only to be allowed.] * * * That hereafter only actual travelling expenses shall be allowed to any person holding employment or appointment under the United States, except marshals, district attorneys, and clerks of the courts of the United States and their deputies; and all allowances for mileages and transportation in excess of the amount actually paid, except as above excepted, are hereby declared illegal; and no credit shall be allowed to any of the disbursing-officers of the United States for payment or allowances in violation of this provision. * * * [18 Stat. L. 462.]

This is from the Act of March 3, 1875, ch. 133, "An act making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and seventy-six, and for other purposes." The same provision, without the word "hereafter" and without the exception appearing in the above text, first appeared in the similar Appropriation Act of June 16, 1874, ch. 285 (18 Stat. L. 72), to which reference is made in the following text, and which provision is superseded by the above text.

It was provided by the Act of Feb. 22, 1875, ch. 95, sec. 7, that this provision of the Act of June 16, 1874, ch. 285, should not be construed "to apply or to have applied to attorneys, marshals, or clerks of courts of the United States, their assistants, or deputies." See JUDICIAL OFFICERS, vol. 4, p. 130.

Mileage to board of visitors of Military Academy. See MILITARY ACADEMY, vol. 4, p. 884.

Mileage to board of visitors of Naval Academy. See NAVAL ACADEMY, vol. 5, p. 214.

Mileage to officers of the navy. See NAVY, vol. 5, p. 225.

Mileage to officers of army. See WAR DEPARTMENT AND MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT.

To whom applicable.—This in its terms is applicable to every person holding employment or appointment under the United States and seems to be one of those frequent cases in which Congress in a general appropriation bill has intentionally enacted some law reaching far beyond the general scope of the bill itself. Its obvious purpose was to abolish all payments for traveling expenses in which a specific allowance per mile was made by law, and to establish the more equitable principle of paying the actual expenses of persons traveling in the service of the government. And it is to be observed that the universality of this principle is secured by the use of the two words "employment or appointment" in reference to persons serving under the government of the United States. U. S. v. Mouat, (1888) 124 U. S. 303.

An Indian agent is entitled under this Act and R. S. sec. 2077 to all of his traveling expenses including board while actually in transit from one station to another, but is not allowed credit for disbursements on account of board after his arrival at his destination. U. S. v. Smith, (1888) 35 Fed. Rep. 490.

[SEC. 1.] [Mileage to officers—exception in favor of naval officers.] * * * And so much of the act of June sixteenth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four, making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-five, and for other purposes, as provides that only actual traveling expenses shall be allowed to any person holding employment or appointment under the United States while engaged on public business, as is applicable to officers of the Navy so engaged, is hereby repealed; and the sum of eight cents per mile shall be allowed such officers while so engaged, in lieu of their actual expenses. * * * [19 Stat. L. 65.]

This is from the Naval Appropriation Act of June 30, 1876, ch. 159. See note under preceding text, and see later Acts under NAVY, vol. 5, pp. 327–329.

Nature of allowance.—The eight cents per mile provided for by this Act was intended to be in lieu of actual expenses when traveling on public business, and is in the nature of indemnity for actual expenses incurred and not an allowance for services rendered. Lemly v. U. S., (1893) 28 Ct. Cl. 468.

To what persons applicable.—The class of persons thus relieved from the effect of the Act of 1874 is designated as "officers of the navy." No other person holding an employment or appointment under the United States, although in the navy, was thus relieved from the effect of that Act. As this is a special statute exempting for particular reasons a certain class of persons from the operation of the general law, which was left to include all other persons in the employment of or holding appointment under the government of the United States, it is obviously proper to confine that class to those who are, properly speaking, officers of the navy. There is nothing in the context nor in the reason which may have been supposed to influence Congress in making this exception out of the general law justifying its application to any other persons than those who are, strictly speaking, officers of the navy. U. S. v. Mouat, (1888) 124 U. S. 303, reversing (1887) 22 Ct. Cl. 293.

Officers and enlisted men distinguished.—It is generally understood that the words "officers and enlisted men" include the whole personnel of the navy; those who sign the shipping articles being regarded as enlisted men, and those who take the oath of office prescribed by R. S. sec. 1757 as officers. Mouat v. U. S., (1887) 22 Ct. Cl. 293.

Petty officers are not included as officers within the meaning of this Act. Baxter v. U. S., (1897) 32 Ct. Cl. 78.

A mate in the navy is not an officer of the United States within the decision of U. S. v. Mouat, (1888) 124 U. S. 303, and is not entitled to mileage. Money paid him for mileage is in violation of law, and may be recovered by the United States on a counterclaim. Baxter v. U. S., (1897) 32 Ct. Cl. 78.

A paymaster's clerk is not an officer of the navy either by the naval regulations or by the statutes, or by any constitutional provision, and therefore he is not entitled to compensation for travel in excess of his actual traveling expenses. U. S. v. Mouat, (1888) 124 U. S. 303, reversing (1887) 22 Ct. Cl. 293.

When travel is abroad.—The question whether travel is abroad or within the United States should be determined by the termini of the journey rather than by the route actually taken. U. S. v. Hutchins, (1894) 151 U. S. 542.

An officer is to be understood as traveling abroad when he goes to a foreign port or place, under orders to proceed to that place, or from one foreign port to another, or from a foreign port to a home port. But where he is ordered to proceed from one place in the United States to another, and the government for its own purpose requires him to proceed by sea rather than by land, he ought not thereby to be disentitled to his mileage by the nearest traveled route. U. S. v. Hutchins, (1894) 151 U. S. 542.

Where the point of departure and the point of destination are both within this country a naval officer is entitled to mileage though a portion of the route is on the high seas or through a foreign country. Where the route prescribed by superior authority is complex in character, the officer may elect to take his actual expenses by the route prescribed or his mileage by the ordinary direct route. Hutchins v. U. S., (1892) 27 Ct. Cl. 137.

Travel by sea or land.—In U. S. v. Graham, (1884) 110 U. S. 219, affirming (1883) 18 Ct. Cl. 83, it was held that all traveling expenses are to be paid by mileage, and there is not in either of the Acts any indication of an intention of Congress to make a distinction between travel by sea or on land.

In U. S. v. Temple, (1881) 105 U. S. 97, it was decided that an officer of the navy who, while engaged in public business, traveled under orders by land or sea, the travel by sea not being in a public vessel of the United States, was entitled under this Act to mileage at the rate of eight cents a mile for the whole distance traveled, whether by sea or land.

Choice of route left to officer.—When only the terminus of the journey is specified in the orders, leaving to the discretion of the officer the choice of route, his mileage should be calculated by the shortest usually traveled route, regardless of the distance actually traveled, unless some good reason is shown for the deviation. Crosby v. U. S., (1887) 22 Ct. Cl. 131.

Earlier departure to avoid extra travel.—An order requiring an officer to leave for his station before a designated day does not authorize him to travel by a circuitous route if other means offer prior to the appointed day. Crosby v. U. S., (1887) 22 Ct. Cl. 131.

Travel without United States.—In (1877) 15 Op. Atty.-Gen. 309, it was held, that under the Act of June 30, 1876, ch. 159, mileage is allowable to officers of the navy only when traveling on public business within the United States. For travel without the United States their actual expenses alone can be allowed. Accordingly, where a naval officer was ordered home from Hong Kong and furnished with a through ticket (such ticket being assumed to have covered his actual expenses), he is not entitled to the difference between the cost of that ticket and the mileage established by that Act.

Special service during leave of absence.—Where an officer at his home on leave of absence is ordered to a new station for special service and then back to his home before the expiration of his leave, it is traveling "when under orders" within the intent of the statute, and he is entitled to mileage therefor. Fitzpatrick v. U. S., (1902) 37 Ct. Cl. 332.

Permitted return home.—When the commander of a squadron on the high seas decides that there are no habitable quarters for certain warrant officers on their ship, and that he has no alternative save that of detaching them, "with permission" to return home, he not feeling at liberty "to order" them home because their quarters have been assigned by the department, the cause of travel was public business. Barker v. U. S., (1884) 19 Ct. Cl. 288.

Duties in two places.—An order of the secretary of the navy which does not relieve an officer from duty at a navy yard, but imposes upon him additional duties at another place and requires his personal attention at both places, entitles him to mileage for travel between the two places and invests him with discretion to determine when his presence is necessary at either place. Steele v. U. S., (1894) 30 Ct. Cl. 7.

Sec. 1766. [Officer in arrears.] No money shall be paid to any person for his compensation who is in arrears to the United States, until he has accounted for and paid into the Treasury all sums for which he may be liable. In all cases where the pay or salary of any person is withheld in pursuance of this section, the accounting officers of the Treasury, if required to do so by the party, his agent or attorney, shall report forthwith to the Solicitor of the Treasury the balance due; and the Solicitor shall, within sixty days thereafter, order suit to be commenced against such delinquent and his sureties. [R. S.]

Act of Jan. 25, 1828, ch. 2, 4 Stat. L. 246; Act of May 20, 1836, ch. 77, 5 Stat. L. 31.

Army officers, withholding pay of. See Act of July 16, 1892, ch. 195, sec. 1, under WAR DEPARTMENT AND MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT.

Right of set-off founded on what sections.—The right of set-off, where the government is both debtor and creditor, is established and provided for by this section and by the Act of March 3, 1875, ch. 149, 18 Stat. L. 481, but it exists independently of those enactments and is founded upon R. S. sec. 236. Taggart's Case, (1881) 17 Ct. Cl. 322.

Where a person is both debtor and creditor of the government in any form, the accounting officers are required by law to set off the one indebtedness against the other and certify only the balance. Taggart's Case, (1881) 17 Ct. Cl. 322.

The word "compensation" is equivalent to the words "salary or pay" and does not include the "rations" nor "extra expenses" which are not pay proper. (1834) 2 Op. Atty.-Gen. 593.

Prior suit unnecessary.—The statute does not require that before payment is withheld the officer shall be adjudged in arrears in a suit brought against him. (1881) 17 Op. Atty.-Gen. 30.

"Forthwith" is equivalent to "without unnecessary delay." It means that there shall be no discretion to sue, or not to sue, on an account stated. As soon as the account is ready to be reported, it shall "forthwith" be reported; if not to be reported, it shall be got ready as soon as possible, consistent with the course of the accounting officers. (1842) 4 Op. Atty.-Gen. 33.

Regulations of the treasury allowing attorneys practicing before the department the percentage of claims for their preparation, prosecution, and remittance, do not control this statute or provision. Pennebaker v. U. S., (1894) 29 Ct. Cl. 35.

Necessity of immediate statement.—It is not incumbent on the executive government to pay an acknowledged defaulter his salary because his accounts cannot be immediately stated, as the Act requires they should be, for the purpose of suit, or to drive the government to a suit before it is prepared for carrying it on under that Act. (1842) 4 Op. Atty.-Gen. 33.

After time for accounting only.—The officers of the treasury are authorized to withhold the pay of officers of the government who are ascertained to be in default to the government, where the time for accounting has actually passed, but not otherwise. (1842) 4 Op. Atty.-Gen. 33.

Duties of treasury department.—"It is among the general duties of the treasury department through the accounting officers to settle all claims and demands by and against the United States, and in proper cases to set off one against the other when the government is both debtor and creditor of the same party." Howes v. U. S., (1899) 24 Ct. Cl. 170.

Power of treasury to offset claims.—The treasury is in the possession of adequate power to guard the United States against the payment of judgments or claims, where there exists in the department a demand against the claimant which is a proper subject of set-off. The Schooner Henry and Gustavus, (1900) 35 Ct. Cl. 393; Labadie v. U. S., (1898) 33 Ct. Cl. 476.

Government interests only.—The duty of the accounting officer in the matter of set-off does not extend beyond the interests of the government. Taggart's Case, (1881) 17 Ct. Cl. 322.

Private debts and collateral securities.—No public officer can make the government either agent or trustee for the collection of private debts; nor enter into contracts relating to collateral securities for the payment of debts; nor make the government liable for neglect to collect such collaterals. Taggart's Case, (1881) 17 Ct. Cl. 322.

Parties liable to United States only.—This section applies only to cases where the party is liable to the United States, and cannot be extended to a case of payment in good faith for a service rendered, made in mistake of law. Hedrick's Case, (1880) 16 Ct. Cl. 88.

Effect on sureties.—This section, authorizing the salary of an officer in arrears to be withheld, forms no part of the contract with the sureties. This statute was passed to secure and protect the government and insure punctuality on the part of public officers, and although it in strong language inhibits the payment of salaries to any person in arrears, yet if an unauthorized payment is made by the proper officer whose duty it is to pass upon and allow salaries, the government is not responsible for the misconduct of such officer and the sureties are not charged on that account. (Citing Gibbons v. U. S., (1868) 8 Wall. (U. S.) 274; U. S. v. Curry, (1848) 6 How. (U. S.) 106; U. S. v. Vanzandt, (1828) 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 184.) U. S. v. Potter, (1879) 7 Reporter 675, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,076.

The sections of the Revised Statutes (300, 307, 308) relating to the payment of warrants, after three years from issuance, do not form any part of the contract with the sureties of an officer appointed under this section. U. S. v. Potter, (1879) 7 Reporter 675, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,076.

Principal debtor, not surety.—The delinquent here spoken of is the "party" and the "person" against whom the prior provisions of the law are leveled; and this clause shows that in the contemplation of the lawmakers, the delinquent, whoever he might be, whether a disbursing officer or not, was at all events to be a principal debtor and not a mere surety. Sureties of Debtors Not Liable to Detention of Their Pay, (1836) 3 Op. Atty-Gen. 52.

Sureties of a delinquent or defaulting principal obligor in a custom-house bond are not liable to detention of moneys then due them—the phrase, “who is in arrears to the United States,” applying only to persons who having previous transactions of a pecuniary nature with the government are found upon the settlement of those transactions to be in arrears. Sureties of Debtors Not Liable to Detention of Their Pay, (1836) 3 Op. Atty-Gen. 52.

Stoppage of pay of military officers.—As the payments made by military officers are frequently made under orders which they cannot disobey and amid circumstances in which the public welfare does not admit of investigation or delay, a stoppage of their pay cannot be compelled by the accounting officers of the treasury, but only by their official head, the secretary of war. Matter of Smith, (1889) 24 Ct. Cl. 209.

Discretion of secretary of war.—When the second comptroller reports an officer indebted to the United States, it is a matter wholly within the discretion of the secretary of war under the army regulation (article 2445) and under this section whether to order a stoppage of pay or not. Matter of Billings, (1888) 23 Ct. Cl. 166.

Act in obedience to orders.—The power given to the secretary of war is a reasonable one and it is to be reasonably exercised, and that it may be it is placed entirely within his discretion. That discretion requires that while the power of summarily stopping an officer's pay may be asserted against a delinquent officer or against one who, without being delinquent, has acted upon his own responsibility, it is not to be asserted against one who has acted in obedience to orders, and whose act was really the act of his military superior, which he was bound to obey and as to which he is expressly relieved from personal liability. Matter of Smith, (1889) 24 Ct. Cl. 209.

Effect of refusal to stop pay.—The refusal of the secretary of war to stop an officer's pay is not a decision upon the merits; it will not bind the government nor preclude the comptroller from causing a suit to be brought against the officer; it merely determines that the officer is so far without fault that the harsh and summary remedy of stopping his pay should not be resorted to. Matter of Smith, (1889) 24 Ct. Cl. 209.

An acting collector of internal revenue is liable for whatever public money he personally took and appropriated to his own use. Hiland v. U. S., (1885) 20 Ct. Cl. 410.

Set-off against widow.—A debt of the husband to the government is not a subject of set-off against the widow, and where the debt was not an overpayment of pay, it cannot be pleaded as a payment. Temple v. U. S., (1889) 24 Ct. Cl. 422.

The employment of experts in a trial before a court-martial is a matter within the legal and proper discretion of the secretary of war; and his order to employ and pay them is official authority to the officer, who in the ordinary discharge of his duty makes the payment and protects him from the summary remedy authorized by the Revised Statutes and army regulations. Matter of Smith, (1889) 24 Ct. Cl. 209.

Set-off against payment authorized by Congress.—A person to whom Congress has authorized the payment of a certain sum, in satisfaction of an acknowledged debt, has an absolute title to the money which no executive officer has authority to resist, and against a claim so allowed by Congress the secretary of the treasury cannot set off a debt alleged to be due by the claimant to the United States, upon which no suit has ever been brought or judgment recovered and the justice of which is denied by the party. (1858) 9 Op. Atty-Gen. 197.

The United States like other creditors must establish their rights against a citizen by due course of law and before the proper tribunals, there being no law which gives to the secretary of the treasury the power to adjudicate upon disputed claims of the government against individuals. (1858) 9 Op. Atty-Gen. 197.

Refusal to pay assigned accounts.—Where an army officer assigned his pay account in payment of certain indebtedness, which accounts the paymaster-general declined to pay for the reason that on the maturity thereof the officer was in arrears to the United States, the refusal of the paymaster-general was in accordance with this section. (1881) 17 Op. Atty-Gen. 30.

Officer not party to compromise.—A compromise between a defaulting officer and the government will not be construed so as to shield another officer not a party to it. Hiland v. U. S., (1885) 20 Ct. Cl. 410.

An officer whose indebtedness to the government is apparently covered by a compromise to which he was not a party cannot adopt so much of it as releases him from liability and reject the part which releases the government from liability to him. Hiland v. U. S., (1885) 20 Ct. Cl. 410.

Officer's account twice paid.—Where an officer's account for the same month was paid twice by different paymasters—one payment being made in November and the other in December—the paymaster who made the last payment is chargeable with the overpayment. In such case the government may hold liable for the overpayment both the officer who made and the officer who received the payment. (1882) 17 Op. Atty-Gen. 425.

Loss charged to another officer.—The liability of a public officer for money taken and appropriated is not discharged by the treasury department charging the loss to another officer. The liability of a public officer is neither created nor released by bookkeeping. Hiland v. U. S., (1885) 20 Ct. Cl. 410.

Settlement under mistake of law.—Where a settlement is made at the treasury between the government and a private party, in good faith, though under a mistaken construction of a statute, for services actually rendered at an honest valuation, the settlement cannot be reopened by one party without the consent of the other, and the government cannot recover back the money so paid. Hedrick's Case, (1880) 16 Ct. Cl. 88.

Payment by mistake to one subsequently an official.—Where money was paid by a United States marshal under a mistake of fact to a person who subsequently became an officer in the postal service, the latter being in arrears to the United States for the amount so paid, it may be set off against his compensation as such officer. (1884) 17 Op. Atty-Gen. 677.

Accounts settled for years.—Where the accounts of a mail contractor have been fully settled and no attempt has been made to disturb them for many years, they are conclusive, and no charge can be made against him which ought to have been settled then. (1858) 9 Op. Atty-Gen. 197.

Money granted to one contractor charged to another.—An Act of Congress granting money to one mail contractor or ordering the same amount to be charged upon the account of another, whose accounts have been long since settled, is void and of no effect as against the latter. (1858) 9 Op. Atty-Gen. 197.

These sections were expressly repealed by the Act of March 3, 1887, ch. 353, 24 Stat. L. 500, "An act to repeal certain sections of the Revised Statutes of the United States relating to the appointment of civil officers," as follows:

[Sec. 1.] "That sections seventeen hundred and sixty-seven, seventeen hundred and sixty-eight, seventeen hundred and sixty-nine, seventeen hundred and seventy, seventeen hundred and seventy-one, and seventeen hundred and seventy-two of the Revised Statutes of the United States are hereby repealed.

"SEC. 2. This repeal shall not affect any officer heretofore suspended under the provisions of said sections, or any designation, nomination, or appointment heretofore made by virtue of the provisions thereof."

The intention of Congress in the repeal of the tenure of office sections of the Revised Statutes was again to concede to the President the power of removal, if taken from him by the original Tenure of Office Act, and by reason of the repeal to enable him thereby to remove an officer when in his discretion he regards it for the public good, although the term of office may have been limited by the words of the statute creating the office. Parsons v. U. S., (1897) 167 U. S. 327.

[SEC. 1.] [Allows persons named to accept presents from foreign governments.]

SEC. 2. [Foreign decorations of United States officers.] That no decoration, or other thing, the acceptance of which is authorized by this act, and no decoration heretofore accepted, or which may hereafter be accepted, by consent of Congress, by any officer of the United States, from any foreign government, shall be publicly shown or exposed upon the person of the officer so receiving the same. [21 Stat. L. 604.]

SEC. 3. [Foreign decorations to be delivered only through department of state.] That hereafter any present, decoration, or other thing, which shall be conferred or presented by any foreign government to any officer of the United States, civil, naval, or military, shall be tendered through the Department of State, and not to the individual in person, but such present, decoration, or other thing shall not be delivered by the Department of State unless so authorized by act of Congress. [21 Stat. L. 604.]

Sec. 183. [Oaths, when administered by officers, etc.] Any officer or clerk of any of the departments lawfully detailed to investigate frauds on, or attempts to defraud, the Government, or any irregularity or misconduct of any officer or agent of the United States, and any officer of the Army detailed to conduct an investigation, and the recorder, and, if there be none, the presiding officer of any military board appointed for such purpose, shall have authority to administer an oath to any witness attending to testify or depose in the course of such investigation. [R. S.]

This section was amended "so as to read as" above given by the Act of March 2, 1901, ch. 809, 31 Stat. L. 951. The section originally read as follows:

"SEC. 183. Any officer or clerk of any of the Departments lawfully detailed to investigate frauds or attempts to defraud on the Government, or any irregularity or misconduct of any officer or agent of the United States, shall have authority to administer an oath to any witness attending to testify or depose in the course of such investigation." Res. of April 10, 1869, No. 15, 16 Stat. L. 55; Act of March 7, 1870, ch. 23, 16 Stat. L. 75.

Sec. 1779. [Restriction upon payments for newspapers, etc.] No executive officer, other than the heads of Departments, shall apply more than thirty dollars, annually, out of the contingent fund under his control, to pay for newspapers, pamphlets, periodicals, or other books or prints not necessary for the business of his office. Sec. 1780. [Failure to make returns or reports.] Every officer who neglects or refuses to make any return or report which he is required to make at stated times by any act of Congress or regulation of the Department of the Treasury, other than his accounts, within the time prescribed by such act or regulation, shall be fined not more than one thousand dollars and not less than one hundred. See also PUBLIC CONTRACTS, ante, p. 90.

Sec. 1782. [Upon taking compensation in matters to which United States is a party.] No Senator, Representative, or Delegate, after his election and during his continuance in office, and no head of a Department, or other officer or clerk in the employ of the Government, shall receive or agree to receive any compensation whatever, directly or indirectly, for any services rendered, or to be rendered, to any person, either by himself or another, in relation to any proceeding, contract, claim, controversy, charge, accusation, arrest, or other matter or thing in which the United States is a party, or directly or indirectly interested, before any Department, court-martial, Bureau, officer, or any civil, military, or naval commission whatever. Every person offending against this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not more than two years, and fined not more than ten thousand dollars, and shall, moreover, by conviction therefor, be rendered forever thereafter incapable of holding any office of honor, trust, or profit under the Government of the United States. [R. S.]

General construction.—It is illegal for an officer of the United States to have that sort of connection with a government contract which an agent, attorney, or solicitor assumes when he procures or aids to procure such contract for another, and when he prosecutes for another against the government any claim founded upon a government contract. These laws forbid also the receiving by officers for such services any compensation including that of an interest in the contract. But there is not in the statutes any general prohibition which prevents executive officers from contracting directly with the government as principals, in matters entirely separate from their offices and in no way connected with the performance of their duties as officers of the government, after they are procured by acquiring an interest in them. (1874) 14 Op. Atty-Gen. 482.

A member elect of Congress is, previous to as well as after taking the oath of office, debarred from acting as counsel for parties and from prosecuting claims against the government, before any department, court-martial, bureau, officer, or any civil, naval, or military commission, if he has received or has agreed to receive any compensation whatever, directly or indirectly therefor. (1872) 14 Op. Atty-Gen. 133.

A receiver of a national bank appointed under the thirty-first section of the National Banking Act (13 Stat. L. 99) is an officer of the United States. Platt v. Beach, (1868) 2 Ben. (U. S.) 303, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,215.

Assistant attorney of District of Columbia. — Semble, that an assistant attorney of the District of Columbia is not within the prohibition of this section. (1885) 18 Op. Atty-Gen. 161.

The words "or other matter or thing" were intended to cover kindred subjects like preliminary examinations and inquiries to enable the government, acting through its departments, bureaus, officers, etc., to determine whether a proceeding should be instituted, a charge or accusation or an arrest made, or whether a contract or claim should be made. U. S. v. Burton, (1904) 131 Fed. Rep. 555.

An inquiry by the postmaster-general as to whether a certain company should be forbidden the use of the mails because of its fraudulent practices is comprehended by the general wording of this Act. U. S. v. Burton, (1904) 131 Fed. Rep. 555.

The United States is "interested" in an inquiry pending before the post-office department to determine the question whether a company should be forbidden the use of the mails by reason of fraudulent practices, and a United States senator receiving compensation in such a proceeding in violation of this section may be indicted. U. S. v. Burton, (1904) 131 Fed. Rep. 555.

Sufficient indictment. — An indictment charging that the accused rendered services before the post-office department, and that he received compensation therefor (naming parties, amounts, and times of payment), the United States being interested in the matter, is a sufficient indictment, and other averments may be treated as surplusage. U. S. v. Burton, (1904) 131 Fed. Rep. 555.

Sec. 243. [Restrictions upon officers of the treasury department.] No person appointed to the office of Secretary of the Treasury, or First Comptroller, or First Auditor, or Treasurer, or Register, shall directly or indirectly be concerned or interested in carrying on the business of trade or commerce, or be owner in whole or in part of any sea-vessel, or purchase by himself, or another in trust for him, any public lands or other public property, or be concerned in the purchase or disposal of any public securities of any State, or of the United States, or take or apply to his own use any emolument or gain for negotiating or transacting any business in the Treasury Department other than what shall be allowed by law; and every person who offends against any of the prohibitions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a high misdemeanor and forfeit to the United States the penalty of three thousand dollars and shall upon conviction be removed from office, and forever thereafter be incapable of holding any office under the United States; and if any other person than a public prosecutor shall give information of any such offense, upon which a prosecution and conviction shall be had, one-half the aforesaid penalty of three thousand dollars, when recovered, shall be for the use of the person giving such information. Sec. 1783. [Persons interested not to act as agents of the government.] No officer or agent of any banking or other commercial corporation, and no member of any mercantile or trading firm, or person directly or indirectly interested in the pecuniary profits or contracts of such corporation or firm, shall be employed or shall act as an officer or agent of the United States for the transaction of business with such corporation or firm; and every such officer, agent, or member, or person, so interested, who so acts, shall be imprisoned not more than two years, and fined not more than two thousand dollars nor less than five hundred dollars. [R. S.]

Purchasing claims against United States prohibited. See CLAIMS, vol. 2, p. 15.

Officer as member of contracting firm.—This section does not prevent the awarding of a contract by the postmaster-general for furnishing coal for his department to a firm, it being the lowest bidder and one of the members thereof being an officer of that department, if the officer does not act as an officer or agent of the United States with reference to the purchase of the coal. (1903) 24 Op. Atty.-Gen. 557.

Sec. 1784. [Prohibition of contributions, presents, etc., to superiors.] No officer, clerk, or employé in the United States Government employ shall at any time solicit contributions from other officers, clerks, or employés in the Government service for a gift or present to those in a superior official position; nor shall any such officials or clerical superiors receive any gift or present offered or presented to them as a contribution from persons in Government employ receiving a less salary than themselves; nor shall any officer or clerk make any donation as a gift or present to any official superior. Every person who violates this section shall be summarily discharged from the Government employ. [R. S.]

Purpose of Act.—The evident purpose of Congress in all this class of enactments has been to promote efficiency and integrity in the discharge of official duties and to maintain proper discipline in the public service. Clearly such a purpose is within the just scope of legislative power. Ex p. Curtis, (1882) 106 U. S. 371.

Sec. 1785. [Punishment for aiding, etc., in importing or trading in obscene literature.] Whoever, being an officer, agent, or employé of the Government of the United States, shall knowingly aid or abet any person engaged in any violation of any of the provisions of law prohibiting importing, advertising, dealing in, exhibiting, or sending or receiving by mail, obscene or indecent publications, or representations, or means for preventing conception or procuring abortion, or other articles of indecent or immoral use or tendency, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall for every offense be punishable by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars and not more than five thousand, or by imprisonment at hard labor for not less than one year nor more than ten, or both. [R. S.]

Obscene, etc., literature.—See IMPORTS AND EXPORTS, vol. 3, p. 317; OBSCENITY, vol. 5, p. 381; POSTAL SERVICE, vol. 5, p. 839.

Publications only.—The language of this section shows that the provisions of law prohibiting sending or receiving by mail written or printed matter relates to publications. U. S. v. Williams, (1880) 3 Fed. Rep. 484.

Sec. 1786. [Proceedings against persons illegally holding office.] Whenever any person holds office, except as a member of Congress or of some State legislature, contrary to the provisions of the third section of the fourteenth article of amendment of the Constitution, the district attorney for the district in which such person holds office shall proceed against him by writ of quo warranto, returnable to the circuit or district court of the United States in such district, and prosecute the same to the removal of such person from office. Sec. 1787. [Penalty for illegally holding office.] Every person who knowingly accepts or holds any office under the United States, or any State, to which he is ineligible under the third section of the fourteenth article of amendment of the Constitution, or who attempts to hold or exercise the duties of any such office, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not more than one year, or fined not more than one thousand dollars, or both. [R. S.]

Act of May 31, 1870, ch. 114, 16 Stat. L. 143.

The disability imposed by section 3 of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution was removed by Act of June 6, 1898, ch. 389, supra, p. 583. This section and section 1786, supra, are therefore inoperative.

Sec. 1788. [Disbursing officers forbidden to trade in public funds or property.] Every officer of the United States concerned in the disbursement of the revenues thereof who carries on any trade or business in the funds or debts of the United States, or of any State, or in any public property of either, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and punished by a fine of three thousand dollars, and shall, upon conviction, be removed from office, and forever thereafter be incapable of holding any office under the United States. [R. S.]

Act of May 8, 1792, ch. 37, 1 Stat. L. 281;
Act of March 2 1799, ch. 22, 1 Stat. L. 695.

Purpose of section.—One of the principal objects of the restriction was to withdraw from the accounting officers of the treasury every motive of private interest in the performance of their public duties, and to guard the nation from the consequences frequently to be apprehended when the business affairs of public officers are suffered to lie commingled with the financial concerns of the country. (1847) 4 Op. Atty.-Gen. 555.

Lands sold for taxes.—In (1873) 14 Op. Atty.-Gen. 352, it was held that the purchase of lands sold by the tax commissioners for taxes, under the direct tax law, is not within the prohibition of the eighth section of the Act of Sept. 2, 1789, ch. 12, which forbids the purchase by certain officers of "public lands or other public property."

Comptroller and auditors of treasury.—In (1847) 4 Op. Atty.-Gen. 555, it was held that the comptroller and auditors of the treasury, whose appointments were authorized by the third section of the Act of March, 3, 1817, are officers in the treasury department previously established by law and are embraced in the restrictions imposed upon certain public officers by the eighth section of the Act of 1789.

Sec. 1789. [Collecting officers forbidden to trade in public property.] Every officer concerned in the collection of the revenues of the United States who carries on any trade or business in any public property of the United States, or of any State, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and punished by a fine of three thousand dollars, and shall, upon conviction, be removed from office, and forever thereafter be incapable of holding any office under the United States. Sec. 1790. [Restriction on payment for services.] No officer or clerk whose duty it is to make payments on account of the salary or wages of any officer or person employed in connection with the customs or the internal-revenue service, shall make any payment to any officer or person so employed on account of services rendered, or of salary, unless such officer or person so to be paid has made and subscribed an oath that, during the period for which he is to receive pay, neither he, nor any member of his family, has received, either personally or by the intervention of another party, any money or compensation of any description whatever, nor any promises for the same, either directly or indirectly, for services rendered or to be rendered, or acts performed or to be performed, in connection with the customs or internal revenue; or has purchased, for like services or acts, from any importer, if affiant is connected with the customs, or manufacturer, if affiant is connected with the internal-revenue service, consignee, agent, or custom-house broker, or other person whomsoever, any merchandise, at less than regular retail market prices therefor. [R. S.]

Act of July 18, 1866, ch. 201, 14 Stat. L. 185.

Regulation as to taking oath.—The secretary of the treasury has power under section 161, R. S., to make a regulation which prescribes that the oaths to be taken by an officer of the revenue marine service or an officer or employee in any branch of the customs service to the correctness of his account for pay or salary, as required by this section and R. S. sec. 2693, shall be taken before some person authorized to administer oaths generally. (1889) 19 Op. Atty-Gen. 401.

Fee for administering oath.—The fee paid by the officer or employe for administering this oath does not constitute a proper charge against the United States, and if charged in his account, should not be allowed in the settlement thereof. (1889) 19 Op. Atty-Gen. 401.

Sec. 5481. [Officer of the United States guilty of extortion.] Every officer of the United States who is guilty of extortion under color of his office shall be punished by a fine of not more than five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment not more than one year, except those officers or agents of the United States otherwise differently and specially provided for in subsequent sections of this chapter. [R. S.]

Act of March 3, 1825, ch. 65, 4 Stat. L. 118.
Sections 5481-5505 constitute chapter 6 (entitled "Official Misconduct, etc.") of title 70 (entitled "Crimes") of the Revised Statutes.

"Extortion" defined.—Extortion is the unlawful taking by an officer by color of his office of any money or thing of value that is not due him, or the taking of any money or thing of value by color of his office in excess of what is due him. U. S. v. Waitz, (1876) 3 Sawy. (U. S.) 473, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,631.

The word "extortion" implies that the money paid was extorted on the part of the one who received it, and was paid unwillingly by the party paying the same. U. S. v. Harned, (1890) 43 Fed. Rep. 376.

Taking illegal fees as extortion.—Congress has indicated very clearly in the Revised Statutes that it does not regard the mere taking of illegal fees as being synonymous with extortion. U. S. v. Harned, (1890) 43 Fed. Rep. 376.

Applicable to Alaska.—This section being passed June 22, 1874, after the cession of Alaska, is in force there from the time of its passage. U. S. v. Carr, (1875) 3 Sawy. (U. S.) 302, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 14,730.

Extortion by register of land office.—If a register of a land office undertakes to act as attorney for an applicant in procuring a patent, and receives from him a gross sum, and this sum is taken as well for the execution of his official duties as doing some other things relating to procuring the patent, and no specified portion of it is taken as compensation for the one or the other, and the sum so taken is in excess of the fees allowed him by law, such taking of the money is extortion. U. S. v. Waitz, (1876) 3 Sawy. (U. S.) 473, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,631.

Civil surgeons appointed by the commissioner of pensions under R. S. sec. 4777 are not officers of the United States, as the commissioner of pensions is not the head of a department within the meaning of sec. 2, art. 2, of the Constitution prescribing by whom officers of the United States shall be appointed, and so are not punishable under this section for extortion in taking fees from pensioners to which they are not entitled. U. S. v. Germaine, (1878) 99 U. S. 508.

Extortion by Chinese inspector.—Where a Chinese inspector is guilty of extortion under color of his office in taking from certain Chinese persons sums in consideration of their being permitted to come into and remain within the United States, he can be prosecuted and subjected to fine and imprisonment under the provisions of this section. Williams v. U. S., (1897) 168 U. S. 382.

Sufficient evidence for conviction.—In a trial upon an indictment founded upon this section, evidence that money in excess of legal fees was received by an officer of the United States, and that in receiving the money he acted in an official capacity and corruptly, is not sufficient to warrant a conviction without evidence tending to prove that the excess was exacted by the defendant and not paid voluntarily. U. S. v. Harned, (1890) 43 Fed. Rep. 376.

Sec. 5482. [Inspectors of steamboats receiving illegal fees. See STEAM VESSELS.]

Sec. 5483. [Receipting for larger sums than are paid.] Every officer charged with the payment of any of the appropriations made by any act of Congress, who pays to any clerk, or other employé of the United States, a sum less than that provided by law, and requires such employé to receipt or give a voucher for an amount greater than that actually paid to and received by him, is guilty of embezzlement, and shall be fined in double the amount so withheld from any employé of the Government, and shall be imprisoned at hard labor for the term of two years. [R. S.]

Act of March 3, 1853, ch. 104, 10 Stat. L. 239.

Underpayment of letter carriers.—A postmaster is indictable under the provisions of this section, if when charged with payment of letter carriers he pays them a sum less than that provided by law, and requires them to give vouchers for an amount greater than that actually paid to and received by them. This was so held in the case of a postmaster empowered to employ letter carriers for experimental free delivery service and to pay them therefor in accordance with the provisions of the joint resolution passed by Congress on Oct. 1, 1890. U. S. v. Mayers, (1896) 81 Fed. Rep. 159.

Secs. 5488–5497. [Relate to public moneys. See PUBLIC MONEYS, ante, p. 537.]

Sec. 5498. [Officers, etc., interested in claims.] Every officer of the United States, or person holding any place of trust or profit, or discharging any official function under, or in connection with, any Executive Department of the Government of the United States, or under the Senate or House of Representatives of the United States, who acts as an agent or attorney for prosecuting any claim against the United States, or in any manner, or by any means, otherwise than in discharge of his proper official duties, aids or assists in the prosecution or support of any such claim, or receives any gratuity, or any share of or interest in any claim from any claimant against the United States, with intent to aid or assist, or in consideration of having aided or assisted, in the prosecution of such claim, shall pay a fine of not more than five thousand dollars, or suffer imprisonment not more than one year, or both. [R. S.]

Act of Feb. 26, 1853, ch. 81, 10 Stat. L. 170.

Exception from this section, see following text.

Purchase and prosecution of claims by officers.—See CLAIMS, vol. 2, p. 1.

Extent of section.—In so far as the claims prosecuted are founded upon contract with the government, this statute forbids officers as agents and attorneys from having connection with government contracts. (1874) 14 Op. Atty.-Gen. 482.

Offering argument for claims.—He who offers an argument in favor of claims against the United States "supports" the claims not only in the "manner," but by "means," and is therefore within the plain terms of the Act; and so doing he violates a penal statute and subjects himself to fine or imprisonment, or both, unless he do the act "in the discharge of his proper official duties." And it is the duty of the court not to permit any such violation in its presence, and still more not to give its sanction to it. Tyler's Case, (1883) 18 Ct. Cl. 25.

Accepting office by one prosecuting claims.—This section imposes no penalty for the accepting of an office or place by one who is engaged in the prosecution of claims against the United States. (1901) 23 Op. Atty.-Gen. 533.

The acceptance of an appointment as counsel for the delegates of the United States to the Pan-American conference by a person who is engaged as an attorney in prosecuting claims before the Spanish treaty claims commission, would not subject such person to the penalties prescribed by section 5498, R. S. The penalties therein prescribed are for the prosecution of claims against the United States by one who holds an office or place such as is described in that section. While the appointee would be subject to no penalty for accepting such appointment, yet if, while holding the place of such counsel, he should engage in the prosecution of claims against the United States before that commission or other tribunal, he would be subject to the penalties therein prescribed; such person would not be an officer, but he would come within the description of a person holding a place of trust or profit under the government of the United States. (1901) 23 Op. Atty.-Gen. 533.

Compensation for legislative influence.—All contracts for a contingent compensation for obtaining legislation or to use personal or any secret or sinister influence on legislators is void by the policy of the law. Marshall v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., (1853) 16 How. (U. S.) 314.

An officer of the bureau of military justice cannot lawfully act as counsel for a claimant in the Court of Claims in the prosecution of the claim of another army officer against the United States. (1880) 16 Op. Atty-Gen. 478.

A retired officer of the army is "an officer of the United States," within the meaning of this section, and so cannot be an attorney for claimants in the Court of Claims. Capt. Tyler's Case, (1883) 18 Ct. Cl. 25. See also In re Winthrop, (1895) 31 Ct. Cl. 36.

Assistant attorney of District of Columbia. — This section in no part affects an assistant attorney of the District of Columbia. (1885) 18 Op. Atty-Gen. 161. See also U. S. v. Germaine, (1878) 99 U. S. 508.

[SEC. 1.] [Exception of members of National Guard of District of Columbia.] * * * Members of the National Guard of the District of Columbia, who receive compensation for their services as such shall not be held or construed to be officers of the United States, or persons holding any place of trust or profit, or discharging any official function under or in connection with any Executive Department of the Government of the United States within the provision of section fifty-four hundred and ninety-eight of the Revised Statutes of the United States. [31 Stat. L. 577.]

Sec. 5505. [Receiving loan or deposit from officer of court. See MONEY PAID INTO COURT, vol. 5, p. 72.]

SEC. 23. [Laws imposing penalties, to what officers applicable.] That all acts and parts of acts imposing fines, penalties, or other punishment for offenses committed by an internal revenue officer or other officer of the Department of the Treasury of the United States, or under any bureau thereof, shall be, and are hereby, applied to all persons whomsoever, employed, appointed, or acting under the authority of any internal revenue or customs law, or any revenue provision of any law of the United States, when such persons are designated or acting as officers or deputies, or persons having the custody or disposition of any public money. [18 Stat. L. 312.]

This is from the Act of Feb. 8, 1875, ch. 36, "An act to amend existing customs and internal-revenue laws, and for other purposes."

Extent of Act. — This section does nothing more than subject persons employed, appointed, or acting under the authority "of any internal revenue or customs law, or any revenue provision of any law of the United States," to the same fines, penalties, or punishment for offenses committed by an internal-revenue officer of the treasury or under any bureau thereof. Williams v. U. S., (1897) 168 U. S. 382.

To what persons applicable. — This Act in effect reaches all persons appointed, employed, or acting under the authority of any revenue or customs law when acting officially in the performance of duties imposed upon them by law, whether such duties are strictly of a revenue character or pertain to some other branch of public service, but which Congress for convenience or the economy of administration has seen fit to impose upon such officers. U. S. v. Williams, (1896) 76 Fed. Rep. 223.

The words "internal revenue or custom law" do not include the statutes providing for the exclusion of Chinese persons from this country. Williams v. U. S., (1897) 168 U. S. 382.

Chinese inspectors proceeding under the Acts providing for their appointment have no connection with the revenue system of the government, although the execution of the Acts referred to is committed to the treasury department. Williams v. U. S., (1897) 168 U. S. 382.

Customs inspector as Chinese inspector.—Where a person appointed an inspector under the customs laws was designated and acting as an officer under the laws relating to Chinese emigration, he is a revenue officer required to perform duty not strictly of a revenue character, but duties of an official character imposed upon him by law, and this is sufficient to bring him within the provisions of this section. U. S. v. Williams, (1896) 76 Fed. Rep. 223.

Sec. 5518. [Conspiracy to prevent accepting or holding office under United States, etc.] If two or more persons in any State or Territory conspire to prevent, by force, intimidation, or threat, any person from accepting or holding any office, trust, or place of confidence under the United States, or from discharging any duties thereof; or to induce by like means any officer of the United States to leave any State, district, or place, where his duties as an officer are required to be performed, or to injure him in his person or property on account of his lawful discharge of the duties of his office, or while engaged in the lawful discharge thereof, or to injure his property so as to molest, interrupt, hinder, or impede him in the discharge of his official duties; each of such persons shall be punished by a fine of not less than five hundred nor more than five thousand dollars, or by imprisonment, with or without hard labor, not less than six months nor more than six years, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [R. S.]

See CONSPIRACY, vol. 2, p. 247; OBSTRUCTING JUSTICE, vol. 5, p. 383.

Nature of section.—This statute is in perfect harmony with sections 5508 and 5509, and instead of showing that Congress did not intend by said sections to include the case of a citizen in the exercise of a right or privilege appertaining to official station or function, it tends strongly in the other direction. U. S. v. Patrick, (1893) 54 Fed. Rep. 338.

The word "conspire" is used by Congress as being sufficient to show combination or confederacy, as equivalent to "agree among themselves." Wright v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1901) 108 Fed. Rep. 805.

"Conspiracy" defined.—A conspiracy is the corrupt agreeing together of two or more persons to do, by concerted action, something unlawful, either as a means or an end. The word "corrupt," in the sense used, means "unlawful." The intentment of this definition is that to conspire to do an unlawful act, or to conspire to accomplish a result which may in itself be lawful, but to do it in an unlawful manner, or an unlawful agreement to accomplish an unlawful result, is a conspiracy. U. S. v. Johnson, (1885) 26 Fed. Rep. 682.

Who is a conspirator.—A mere presence on the occasion of the conspiracy is not sufficient to make a person guilty, but there must be some word or act; the person charged must incite, procure, or encourage the act. If one join the conspiracy at any time after the formation of the conspiracy, he becomes a conspirator and the acts of the others become his adoption. U. S. v. Johnson, (1885) 26 Fed. Rep. 682.

Search for illicit distillery.—A deputy collector of the internal revenue has the right under the law to proceed to search for a distillery which he supposed to be illicit, and if any one with others conspires to injure him by force, or threaten him or intimidate him, on account of the discharge of his duty, or to prevent him from its further discharge, he would be obnoxious to the provisions of this statute. U. S. v. Johnson, (1885) 26 Fed. Rep. 682.

SEC. 8. [District attorneys to appear for and defend suits against officers of Congress.] That in any action now pending, or which may be brought against any person for or on account of anything done by him while an officer of either House of Congress in the discharge of his official duty, in executing any order of such House, the district attorney for the district within which the action is brought, on being thereto requested by the officer sued, shall enter an appearance in behalf of such officer; and all provisions of the eighth section of the act of July twenty-eighth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, entitled "An act to protect the revenue, and for other purposes," and also all provisions of the sections of former acts therein referred to, so far as the same relate to the removal of suits the withholding of executions, and the paying of judgments against revenue or other officers of the United States, shall become applicable to such action and to all proceedings and matters whatsoever connected therewith, and the defense of such action shall thenceforth be conducted under the supervision and direction of the Attorney General. [18 Stat. L. 401.]

This is from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of March 3, 1875, ch. 130. Section 8 of the Act of July 28, 1866, ch. 298, 14 Stat. L. 329, is not in terms found in the Revised Statutes, but the provisions to which it refers, and to which reference seems to be made in this Act, are incorporated into the Revised Statutes as sections 629, par. 12, 643, 645, 646, 827, 834, 989. See EXECUTION, vol. 3, p. 46; JUDICIAL OFFICERS, vol. 4, pp. 94, 121; JUDICIARY, vol. 4, pp. 248, 260, 264.

An Act To prevent the abatement of certain actions.

[Suits against public officers — not to abate by death, resignation, etc.] That no suit, action, or other proceeding lawfully commenced by or against the head of any Department or Bureau or other officer of the United States in his official capacity, or in relation to the discharge of his official duties, shall abate by reason of his death, or the expiration of his term of office, or his retirement, or resignation, or removal from office, but, in such event, the Court, on motion or supplemental petition filed, at any time within twelve months thereafter, showing a necessity for the survival thereof to obtain a settlement of the questions involved, may allow the same to be maintained by or against his successor in office, and the Court may make such order as shall be equitable for the payment of costs. [30 Stat. L. 822]

"In proceedings against officers of the United States for either mandamus or injunction it was held that the death, resignation, or removal of the defendant abated the proceedings, and that relief against his successor could be sought only by a new suit. In a decision of the Supreme Court, rendered March 21, 1898, the cases are reviewed, and the court concludes: 'In view of the inconvenience, of which the present case is a striking instance, occasioned by this state of the law, it would seem desirable that Congress should provide for the difficulty by enacting that, in the case of suits against the heads of departments abating by death or resignation, it should be lawful for the successor in office to be brought into the case by petition, or some other appropriate method.' (169 U. S. 604, 605.) The Act in the text conforms to this suggestion." Compilers' note, 2 Supp. R. S. 940.

A change in the personnel of the loan commission of Arizona will not abate proceedings brought against such commission in their official capacity as loan commissioners, nor against the individuals as such. Murphy v. Utter, (1902) 186 U. S. 95.

All fugitives from justice taking refuge in said park shall be subject to the same laws as refugees from justice found in the State of Wyoming. [28 Stat. L. 73.]

SEC. 4. [Hunting and fishing prohibited — regulations.] That all hunting, or the killing, wounding, or capturing at any time of any bird or wild animal, except dangerous animals, when it is necessary to prevent them from destroying human life or inflicting an injury, is prohibited within the limits of said park; nor shall any fish be taken out of the waters of the park by means of seines, nets, traps, or by the use of drugs or any explosive substances or compounds, or in any other way than by hook and line, and then only at such seasons and in such times and manner as may be directed by the Secretary of the Interior. That all guns, traps, teams, horses, or means of transportation of every nature or description used by any person or persons within said park limits when engaged in killing, trapping, ensnaring, or capturing such wild beasts, birds, or wild animals shall be forfeited to the United States, and may be seized by the officers in said park and held pending the prosecution of any person or persons arrested under charge of violating the provisions of this Act, and upon conviction under this Act of such person or persons using said guns, traps, teams, horses, or other means of transportation such forfeiture shall be adjudicated as a penalty in addition to the other punishment provided in this Act. Such forfeited property shall be disposed of and accounted for by and under the authority of the Secretary of the Interior. [28 Stat. L. 73.]

On Aug. 1, 1894, the secretary of the interior promulgated the following:

The following rules and regulations for the government of the Yellowstone National Park are hereby established and made public pursuant to authority conferred by section 2475, Rev. Stat. U. S., and the Act of Congress approved May 7, 1894:

1. It is forbidden to remove or injure the sediments or incrustations around the geysers, hot springs, or steam vents;

Or to deface the same by written inscription or otherwise;

Or to throw any substance into the springs or geyser vents;

Or to injure or disturb, in any manner, or to carry off any of the mineral deposits, specimens, natural curiosities, or wonders within the park.

2. It is forbidden to ride or drive upon any of the geyser or hot spring formations or to turn loose stock to graze in their vicinity.

3. It is forbidden to cut or injure any growing timber.

Camping parties will be allowed to use dead or fallen timber for fuel.

4. Fires shall be lighted only when necessary, and completely extinguished when not longer required.

The utmost care should be exercised at all times to avoid setting fire to the timber and grass, and any one failing to comply therewith shall be peremptorily removed from the park.

5. Hunting or killing, wounding or capturing of any bird or wild animal, except dangerous animals, when necessary to prevent them from destroying life or inflicting an injury, is prohibited.

The outfits, including guns, traps, teams, horses, or means of transportation used by persons engaged in hunting, killing, trapping, ensnaring, or capturing such birds or wild animals, or in possession of game killed in the park under other circumstances than prescribed above, will be forfeited to the United States, except in cases where it is shown by satisfactory evidence that the outfit is not the property of the person or persons violating this regulation, and the actual owner thereof was not a party to such violation.

Firearms will only be permitted in the park on written permission of the superintendent thereof. On arrival at the first station of the park guard, parties having firearms will turn them over to the sergeant in charge of the station, taking his receipt for them. They will be returned to the owners on leaving the park.

6. Fishing with nets, seines, traps, or by the use of drugs or explosives, or in any other way than with hook and line is prohibited. Fishing for purposes of merchandise or profit is forbidden by law. Fishing may be prohibited by order of the superintendent of the park in any of the waters of the park, or limited therein to any specified season of the year, until otherwise ordered by the Secretary of the Interior.

7. No person will be permitted to reside permanently or to engage in any business in the park without permission, in writing, from the Department of the Interior.

The superintendent may grant authority to competent persons to act as guides and revoke the same in his discretion.

And no pack trains shall be allowed in the park unless in charge of a duly registered guide.

8. The herding or grazing of loose stock or cattle of any kind within the park, as well as the driving of such stock or cattle over the roads of the park, is strictly forbidden, except in such cases where authority therefor is granted by the Secretary of the Interior.

9. No drinking saloon or barroom will be permitted within the limits of the park.

10. Private notices or advertisements shall not be posted or displayed within the park, except such as may be necessary for the convenience and guidance of the public, upon buildings on leased ground.

11. Persons who render themselves obnoxious by disorderly conduct or bad behavior, or who violate any of the foregoing rules, will be summarily removed from the park.

Any person who violates any of the foregoing regulations will be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and be subjected to a fine, as provided by the Act of Congress approved May 7, 1894, "To protect the birds and animals in Yellowstone National Park and to punish crimes in said park, and for other purposes," of not more than one thousand dollars or imprisonment not exceeding two years, or both, and be adjudged to pay all costs of the proceedings.

SEC. 5. [Commissioner for park — jurisdiction — powers and duties.] That the United States circuit court in said district shall appoint a commissioner, who shall reside in the park, who shall have jurisdiction to hear and act upon all complaints made, of any and all violations of the law, or of the rules and regulations made by the Secretary of the Interior for the government of the park, and for the protection of the animals, birds, and fish and objects of interest therein, and for other purposes authorized by this Act. Such commissioner shall have power, upon sworn information, to issue process in the name of the United States for the arrest of any person charged with the commission of any misdemeanor, or charged with the violation of the rules and regulations, or with the violation of any provision of this Act prescribed for the government of said park, and for the protection of the animals, birds, and fish in the said park, and to try the person so charged, and, if found guilty, to impose the punishment and adjudge the forfeiture prescribed. In all cases of conviction an appeal shall lie from the judgment of said commissioner to the United States district court for the district of Wyoming, said appeal to be governed by the laws of the State of Wyoming providing for appeals in cases of misdemeanor from justices of the peace to the district court of said State; but the United States circuit court in said district may prescribe rules of procedure and practice for said commissioner in the trial of cases and for appeal to said United States district court. Said commissioner shall also have power to issue process as hereinbefore provided for the arrest of any person charged with the commission of any felony within the park, and to summarily hear the evidence introduced, and, if he shall determine that probable cause is shown for holding the person so charged for trial, shall cause such person to be safely conveyed to a secure place for confinement, within the jurisdiction of the United States district court in said State of Wyoming, and shall certify a transcript of the record of his proceedings and the testimony in the case to the said court, which court shall have jurisdiction of the case: Provided, That the said commissioner shall grant bail in all cases bailable under the laws of the United States or of said State. All process issued by the commissioner shall be directed to the marshal of the United States for the district of Wyoming; but nothing herein contained shall be construed as preventing the arrest by any officer of the Government or employee of the United States in the park without process of any person taken in the act of violating the law or any regulation of the Secretary of the Interior: Provided, That the said commissioner shall only exercise such authority and powers as are conferred by this Act. [28 Stat. L. 74.]

SEC. 6. [Deputy marshals — sessions of court.] That the marshal of the United States for the district of Wyoming may appoint one or more deputy marshals for said park, who shall reside in said park, and the said United States district and circuit courts shall hold one session of said courts annually at the town of Sheridan in the State of Wyoming, and may also hold other sessions at any other place in said State of Wyoming or in said National Park at such dates as the said courts may order. [28 Stat. L. 75.]

SEC. 7. [Pay of commissioner, marshal, attorney, and assistants.] That the commissioner provided for in this Act shall, in addition to the fees allowed by law to commissioners of the circuit courts of the United States, be paid an annual salary of one thousand dollars, payable quarterly, and the marshal of the United States and his deputies, and the attorney of the United States and his assistants in said district, shall be paid the same compensation and fees as are now provided by law for like services in said district. [28 Stat. L. 75.]

See amendment as to salary of commissioner, Act of April 17, 1900, ch. 192, infra, p. 622.

SEC. 8. [Costs and expenses, how paid.] That all costs and expenses arising in cases under this Act, and properly chargeable to the United States, shall be certified, approved, and paid as like costs and expenses in the courts of the United States are certified, approved, and paid under the laws of the United States. [28 Stat. L. 75.]

SEC. 9. [28 Stat. L. 601.]

SEC. 3. [Standards of paper — advertisements for proposals — samples.] The Joint Committee on Printing shall fix upon standards of paper for the different descriptions of public printing and binding, and the Public Printer shall, under their direction, advertise in two newspapers, published in each of the cities of Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Cincinnati, Saint Louis, Louisville, Omaha, Denver, San Francisco, and Chicago, for sealed proposals to furnish the Government with paper, as specified in the schedule to be furnished to applicants by the Public Printer, setting forth in detail the quality and quantities required for the public printing. And the Public Printer shall furnish samples of the standard of papers fixed upon to applicants therefor who shall desire to bid. [28 Stat. L. 601.]

SEC. 4. [Specifications in advertisements for paper.] The advertisements shall specify the minimum portion of each quality of paper required for either three months, six months, or one year, as the Joint Committee on Printing may determine; but when the minimum portion so specified exceeds, in any case, one thousand reams, it shall state that proposals will be received for one thousand reams or more. [28 Stat. L. 601.]

SEC. 5. [Opening bids and awarding contracts for paper — bonds.] The sealed proposals to furnish paper shall be opened in the presence of the Joint Committee on Printing, and the contracts shall be awarded by them to the lowest and best bidder for the interest of the Government; but they shall not consider any proposal which is not accompanied by a bond approved by a judge or clerk of a court of record in the penalty of five thousand dollars that the bidder or bidders, if his or their proposal is accepted, shall enter into a contract to furnish the articles proposed for and by satisfactory evidence that the person making it is a manufacturer of or dealer in the description of paper which he proposes to furnish. [28 Stat. L. 602.]

SEC. 6. [Approval of contracts for paper — time of performance — bonds.] No contract for furnishing paper shall be valid until it has been approved by the Joint Committee on Printing, if made under their direction, or by the Secretary of the Interior, if made under his direction, according to the provisions of section nine of this Act. The award of each contract for furnishing paper shall designate a reasonable time for its performance. The contractor shall give bond in such amount as may be fixed by, and to the approval of, the Joint Committee on Printing. [28 Stat. L. 602.]

SEC. 7. [Paper to conform to standard.] The Public Printer shall compare every lot of paper delivered by any contractor with the standard of quality fixed upon by the Joint Committee on Printing, and shall not accept any paper which does not conform to it in every particular. [28 Stat. L. 602.]

SEC. 8. [Determination of quality of paper.] In case of difference of opinion between the Public Printer and any contractor for paper respecting its quality, the matter of difference shall be determined by the Joint Committee on Printing or by the Secretary of the Interior when Congress is not in session, and the decision of said Joint Committee or of the Secretary of the Interior shall be final as to the United States. [28 Stat. L. 602.]

SEC. 9. [Procedure on default of contractor for paper.] If any contractor shall fail to comply with his contract, the Public Printer shall report such default to the Joint Committee on Printing, when Congress is in session, or to the Secretary of the Interior when Congress is not in session; and he shall, under the direction of the Committee, or of the Secretary of the Interior, as the case may be, enter into a new contract with the lowest, best and most responsible bidder for the interest of the Government among those whose proposals were rejected at the last opening of bids, or he shall advertise for new proposals, under the regulations hereinbefore stated; and during the interval which may thus occur he shall, under the direction of the Joint Committee on Printing, or of the Secretary of the Interior, purchase in open market, at the lowest market price, all paper necessary for the public printing. [28 Stat. L. 602.]

SEC. 10. [Liability of defaulting contractor — suit on bond.] In case of the default of any contractor to furnish paper, he and his sureties shall be responsible for any increase of cost to the Government in procuring a supply of such paper which may be consequent upon such default. The Public Printer shall report every such default, with a full statement of all the facts in the case, to the Solicitor of the Treasury, who shall prosecute the defaulting contractor and his sureties upon their bond, in the circuit court of the United States in the district in which such defaulting contractors reside. [28 Stat. L. 602.]

SEC. 11. [Open-market purchases of paper.] The Joint Committee on Printing, or during the recess of Congress the Secretary of the Interior, may authorize the Public Printer to make purchase of paper in open market whenever they may deem the quantity required so small or the want so immediate as not to justify advertisement for proposals. [28 Stat. L. 602.]

SEC. 12. [Purchase of other material in open market.] The Joint Committee is authorized to give permission to the Public Printer to purchase material other than paper in open market, whenever in their opinion it would not promote the public interest to advertise for proposals and to make contracts for the same: Provided, however, That the purchases authorized by this Act shall not in any term of six months exceed the sum of fifty dollars for any particular article required. [28 Stat. L. 602.]

This section superseded the provisions of Act of Feb. 1, 1878, ch. 10, "An act to further regulate the purchase of material for the public printing and binding," as follows:

"That the Joint Committee on the Public Printing be and hereby is authorized to give permission to the Public Printer to purchase material in open market, whenever in their opinion, it would not promote the public interest to advertise for proposals and to make contracts for the same: Provided, however, That the purchases authorized by this act shall not in any term of six months, exceed the sum of fifty dollars for any particular article required." [20 Stat. L. 22.]

SEC. 13. [Congressional Record — contents, index, etc.] The Joint Committee shall have control of the arrangement and style of the Congressional Record, and while providing that it shall be substantially a verbatim report of proceedings, shall take all needed action for the reduction of unnecessary bulk, and shall provide for the publication of an index of the Congressional Record semimonthly during the sessions of Congress and at the close thereof. [28 Stat. L. 603.]

This and the following section 14 supersede the provisions of the Act of March 31, 1884, ch. 18, "An act to limit the cost of indexing the Congressional Record," as follows:

"[SEC. 1.] That the Joint Committee on Printing be, and they are hereby, authorized and directed to make the necessary provisions and arrangements for issuing the index of the Congressional Record semi-monthly during the sessions of Congress; that the Public Printer be, and he is hereby, directed to print and distribute the same number of copies of said semi-monthly index as he prints and distributes of the daily issue of the Record, and to the same persons and in the same manner; that the Public Printer shall employ such person to prepare said index as shall be designated by the Joint Committee on Printing who shall also fix and regulate the compensation to be paid by the Public Printer for the said work, and direct the form and manner of its publication: Provided, however, That the rate of compensation allowed for preparing the said semi-monthly indexes, including also their compilation into a complete session index, shall not exceed, for each page of the printed Congressional Record, the average that it cost per page of the Congressional Record for compiling the session index of the Forty-sixth Congress: And provided further, That there may be employed and paid on said work, at times not interfering with their ordinary employment, persons who are also employed and paid in any other office or employment under the Government. [23 Stat. L. 6.]

"SEC. 2. [Repeals Res. of Feb. 8, 1881, No. 9, 21 Stat. L. 516.]"

SEC. 14. [Preparation of indexes to Congressional Record.] The Joint Committee shall designate to the Public Printer a competent person to prepare the semimonthly and session index to the Congressional Record, and shall fix and regulate the compensation to be paid by the Public Printer for the said work and direct the form and manner of its publication and distribution. [28 Stat. L. 603.]

See note to section 13, supra.

SEC. 15. [Lithographing and engraving — contracts with or without advertising for bids.] When the probable total cost of the maps or plates accompanying one work or document exceeds twelve hundred dollars, the lithographing or engraving thereof shall be awarded to the lowest and best bidder, after advertisement by the Public Printer, under the direction of the Joint Committee, which may authorize him to make immediate contracts for lithographing or engraving whenever the exigencies of the public service do not justify advertisement for proposals. [28 Stat. L. 603.]

Maps, etc., where made. — "Here is clear evidence that Congress does not intend maps, charts, and illustrations to be made at the Government Printing Office." (1891) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 41.

SEC. 16. [Schedule of materials — proposals for contracts — contracts — returns.] The Public Printer shall prepare a schedule of materials required to be purchased, showing the description, quantity, and quality of each article, and shall invite proposals for furnishing the same, either by advertisement or circular, as the Joint Committee on Printing may direct, and shall make contracts for the same with the lowest responsible bidder, making a return of the same to the Joint Committee, showing the number of bidders, the amounts of each bid, and the awards of the contracts. [28 Stat. L. 603.]

This section, together with sections 17 and 45, infra, supersedes the following provisions of the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of July 31, 1876, ch. 246, sec. 1:

"That from and after the passage of this act it shall be the duty of the Public Printer to employ no workmen not thoroughly skilled in their respective branches of industry, as shown by a trial of their skill under his direction; and whenever it becomes necessary for the Public Printer to make purchases of materials not already due under contracts he shall prepare a schedule of the articles required, showing the description, quantity, and quality of each article and shall invite proposals for furnishing the same either by advertisement or circular, as the Joint Committee on Public Printing may direct, and shall make contracts for the same with the lowest responsible bidder, making a return of the same to the Joint Committee on Public Printing, showing the number of bidders, the amounts of each bid and the awards of the contracts. That so much of all laws or parts of laws as provide for the election or appointment of Public Printer be, and the same are hereby, repealed, to take effect from and after the passage of this act; and the President of the United States shall appoint by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, a suitable person who must be a practical printer and versed in the art of book-binding, to take charge of and manage the Government Printing Office from and after the date aforesaid: he shall be called the 'Public Printer,' and shall be vested with all the powers and subject to all the restrictions pertaining to the officer now known as the Public Printer; he shall give bond in the sum of one hundred thousand dollars for the faithful performance of the duties of his office, said bond to be approved by the Secretary of the Interior." * * *

Section 17 also supersedes the following provision of the Act of Aug. 15, 1876, ch. 287, sec. 1, as follows:

"That the term 'Public Printer' as employed in that part of the act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the current fiscal year which repeals all laws providing for the election or appointment of Public Printer shall be construed as embracing that officer whether known as Congressional Printer or Public Printer." [19 Stat. L. 146.]

SEC. 17. [Public Printer — appointment — qualifications — title — salary — bond.] The President of the United States shall nominate and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, appoint a suitable person, who must be a practical printer and versed in the art of bookbinding, to take charge of and manage the Government Printing Office. The title of said officer shall be Public Printer. He shall receive a salary of four thousand five hundred dollars per annum, and shall give bond in the sum of one hundred thousand dollars for the faithful performance of the duties of his office, said bond to be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury. [28 Stat. L. 603.]

See note to section 16, supra, as to provisions superseded by the above section.

Control of joint committee. — Prior to the Revised Statutes it was held, in U. S. v. Seaman. (1854) 2 Hayw. & H. (D. C.) 151, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,245a, affirmed in (1854) 17

How. (U. S.) 225, that the superintendent as public printer is subjected wholly to the control of the joint committee on printing.

Nature of office.—Prior to the passage of this Act it was held, in Clapp's Case, (1871) 7 Ct. Cl. 353, that the congressional printer is an officer of the Senate, but his duties are not confined to the Senate, but extend equally to the House of Representatives and to all departments of the government by law authorized to require printing at the government printing office; his duties being distinct, discharged outside the halls of Congress, paid for by specific appropriation and not out of the contingent fund of Congress, neither he nor his clerks or employees can be classed as officers of the Senate within the meaning of an Act giving employees of the Senate additional pay. (14 Stat. L. 323, sec. 18.)

To whom responsible.—It was held, under the provisions superseded by the above Act, in U. S. v. Allison, (1875) 91 U. S. 303, reversing (1874) 10 Ct. Cl. 449, that the superintendent of public printing is not under the control of any one of the executive departments. He seems to have a department of his own, in which in a sense he is supreme, being more responsible to Congress than to any other authority. The secretary of the interior has no control whatever over the employment of men by the superintendent, neither can he fix their wages nor supervise the action of the superintendent in that particular. He does not pay them, and has no control whatever over the funds out of which they are paid. The superintendent is under the direction of the committees of each House of Congress in respect to engraving, and he goes to the secretary of the treasury with his estimates. The joint committee on printing settle all disputes between him and his contractor for the delivery of paper. He reports to Congress in respect to his employees, and to the secretary of the treasury in respect to his receipts and disbursements; from that department, also, he draws his money upon proper requisitions.

SEC. 18. [Duties of Public Printer.] It shall be the duty of the Public Printer to purchase all materials and machinery which may be necessary for the Government Printing Office; to take charge of all matter which is to be printed, engraved, lithographed, or bound; to keep an account thereof in the order in which it is received, and to cause the work to be promptly executed; to superintend all printing and binding done at the Government Printing Office, and to see that the sheets or volumes are promptly delivered to the officer who is authorized to receive them. The receipt of such officer shall be a sufficient voucher for their delivery. [28 Stat. L. 603.]

What purchases included.—The purchases by the public printer contemplated by this Act are paper and materials for printing and binding public documents and such as do not come within R. S. sec. 3709, inhibiting purchases and contracts for supplies by departments of the government except after due advertisement for proposals. (1895) 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 137.

SEC. 19. [Public Printer to report number of copies, etc., printed and bound.] See ESTIMATES, APPROPRIATIONS, AND REPORTS, vol. 2, p. 935.]

SEC. 20. [Boards of examiners — board of condemnation.] The chief clerk, the foreman of printing, and a person designated by the Joint Committee on Printing, shall constitute a board to examine and report in writing on all paper delivered under contract, or by purchase or otherwise, at the Government Printing Office. The chief clerk, foreman of binding, and a person designated by the Joint Committee on Printing shall constitute a board to examine and report in writing on all material, except paper, for the use of the bindery. The chief clerk, the foreman of printing, and a person designated by the Joint Committee on Printing shall constitute a board of condemnation, who, upon the call of the Public Printer, shall determine the condition of presses and other machinery and material used in the Government Printing Office, with a view to condemnation. [28 Stat. L. 603.]

SEC. 21. [Condemned material to be sold or exchanged.] Whenever any machinery or material in the Government Printing Office shall have been regularly condemned as unserviceable, the Public Printer may sell the same, after public advertisement, to the highest bidder, for cash, and turn the proceeds into the Treasury of the United States: Provided, That in case the sum or sums offered for such advertised property should be deemed by him too low, he may exchange said old machinery or material for new, paying the difference in money, and render appropriate vouchers for such expenditure. [28 Stat. L. 604.]

SEC. 22. [Public Printer to report to Congress. See ESTIMATES, APPROPRIATIONS, AND REPORTS, vol. 2, p. 934.]

SEC. 23. [Leaves of absence to employees in Government Printing Office.] [Superseded.]

This section was as follows:

"SEC. 23. The employees of the Government Printing Office, whether employed by the piece or otherwise, shall be allowed leaves of absence with pay to the extent of not exceeding thirty days in any one fiscal year under such regulations and at such times as the Public Printer may designate at the rate of pay received by them during the time in which said leave was earned; but such leaves of absence shall not be allowed to accumulate from year to year. Such employees as are engaged on piecework shall receive the same rate of pay for the said thirty days' leave as will be paid to day hands: Provided, That those regularly employed on the Congressional Record shall receive leave, with pay, at the close of each session, pro rata for the time of such employment: And provided further, That it shall be lawful to allow pro rata leave to those serving fractional parts of the year." [28 Stat. L. 604.]

It was superseded by the provisions of Act of June 11, 1896, ch. 420, sec. 1, infra, p. 661.

Prior provisions superseded were as follows:

Act of June 30, 1886, ch. 572, "An act granting leave of absence to employees in the Government Printing Office."

"[SEC. 1.] That the employees of the Government Printing Office, whether employed by the piece or otherwise, be allowed a leave of absence, with pay, not exceeding fifteen days in any one fiscal year, after the service of one year and under such regulations and at such time as the Public Printer may designate. Such employees as are engaged on piece-work shall receive the same rate of pay for the said fifteen days' leave as will be paid the day-hands: Provided, That those regularly employed on the Congressional Record shall receive leave, with pay, at the close of each session, pro rata for the time of such employment. [24 Stat. L. 91.]

"SEC. 2. That this act shall take effect on and after the first day of July, eighteen hundred and eighty-six." [24 Stat. L. 91.]

Act of Aug. 1, 1888, ch. 722, "An act to extend the leave of absence of employees in the Government Printing Office to thirty days per annum."

"That the act entitled 'An act granting leave of absence to employees in the Government Printing Office,' approved June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and eighty-six, be so amended as to extend the annual leave of absence therein described to thirty days in each fiscal year: Provided, That it shall be lawful to allow pro rata leave to those serving fractional parts of a year." [25 Stat. L. 352.]

Act of June 19, 1894, ch. 108.

"* * * Hereafter the Public Printer is authorized to pay pro rata leave of absence out of any appropriation for leaves of absence to employees of the Government Printing Office in any fiscal year, notwithstanding the fact that thirty days' leave of absence, with pay, may have been granted to such employees in that fiscal year on account of service rendered in a previous fiscal year." * * * [28 Stat. L. 94.]

This provision was repeated in the Deficiencies Appropriation Act of March 2, 1895, ch. 187, sec. 1, 28 Stat. L. 868.

"SEC. 28. There shall be advanced to the Public Printer, from time to time, as the public service may require it, and under such rules as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, a sum of money, not exceeding, at any time, four-fifths of the penalty of his bond, to enable him to pay for work and material." [28 Stat. L. 604.]

It was superseded by Act of March 30, 1900, ch. 118, infra, p. 663.

SEC. 29. [Receipts from sales of documents, waste material, etc., deposited in Treasury — report.] Moneys received from sales of extra copies of documents, paper shavings, imperfections, waste gold leaf, leather and book-cloth scraps, and for the sale of old and condemned material, shall be deposited by the Public Printer in the Treasury of the United States, and a detailed statement thereof shall be included in his annual report to Congress. [28 Stat. L. 605.]

SEC. 30. [Settlement of accounts.] The Public Printer shall settle the account of his receipts and disbursements in the same manner required of other disbursing officers. [28 Stat. L. 605.]

SEC. 31. [Consolidation of printing offices under control of Public Printer — exceptions — requisitions for work — reports.] All printing offices in the Departments now in operation, or hereafter put in operation, by law, shall be considered a part of the Government Printing Office, and shall be under the control of the Public Printer, who shall furnish all presses, types, imposing stones, and necessary machinery and material for said offices from the general supplies of the Government Printing Office; and all paper and material of every kind used in the said offices for departmental work, except letter and note paper and envelopes, shall be supplied by the Public Printer; and all persons employed in said printing offices and binderies shall be appointed by the Public Printer, and be carried on his pay roll the same as employees in the main office, and shall be responsible to him: Provided, That the terms of this Act shall not apply to the office in the Weather Bureau, or, to so much of the printing as is necessary to expedite the work of the Record and Pension Division of the War Department nor to the printing office now in operation in the Census Office; but the Public Printer, with the approval of the Joint Committee on Printing, may abolish any of these excepted offices whenever in their judgment the economy of the public service would be thereby advanced. All work done in the said offices shall be ordered on blanks prepared for that purpose by the Public Printer, which shall be numbered consecutively, and must be signed by some one designated by the head of the Department for which the work is to be done, who shall be held responsible for all work thus ordered, and who shall quarterly report to the head of the Department a classified statement of the work done and the cost thereof, which report shall be transmitted to the Public Printer in time for his annual report to Congress. The Public Printer shall show in detail, in his annual report, the cost of operating each departmental office. [28 Stat. L. 605.]

SEC. 32. [Accountability for materials — requisitions — receipts.] The Public Printer shall charge himself with, and be accountable for, all material received for the public use. The foreman of printing and binding shall make out estimates of the quantity and kind of material required for their respective departments, and file written requisitions therefor when it is needed. The Public Printer shall furnish the same to them on these requisitions, as required for the public service, and they shall receipt to him and be held accountable for all material so received. [28 Stat. L. 605.]

SEC. 33. ink, rollers, composition for making rollers, types, press-blankets, and lubricating oils; taking care that only the lowest market prices be paid for the quality of the articles purchased; and when practicable, issue circulars for bids from persons capable of supplying them." [22 Stat. L. 597.]

SEC. 39. [Wages — extra pay for night work.] The Public Printer shall pay no greater price for composition than fifty cents per thousand ems, to pressmen fifty cents per hour, and forty cents per hour for time work to printers and bookbinders: Provided, That the pay of all employees of the Government Printing Office engaged on night work (between the hours of five o'clock post-meridian and eight o'clock antemeridian) shall be twenty per centum in addition to the amount paid for day labor. [28 Stat. L. 607.]

The first part of this section is a re-enactment of a provision in the Deficiency Appropriation Act of Feb. 16, 1877, ch. 58, 19 Stat. L. 231. The proviso is a re-enactment of the Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 550, "An act to revise the wages of certain employees in the Government Printing Office." The above section also superseded the provisions of the Act of Jan. 13, 1883, ch. 23, 22 Stat. L. 402, "An Act to provide for extra work in the Government Printing Office in cases of emergency," as follows:

"That for extra work, ordered in emergencies, and performed on Sundays or legal holidays, or between the hours of midnight and eight ante meridian, excepting that done by regular organized night forces, the Public Printer is hereby authorized to pay such extra prices as the customs of the trade and the justice of the case may require." [22 Stat. L. 402.]

Modified. — The section in the text was modified by Act of June 6, 1900, ch. 791, sec. 1, infra, p. 663.

Who entitled to extra pay for night work. — An assistant foreman of the pressroom in the government printing office on duty at night is an "employee engaged on night work" within the intent of this Act and entitled to "twenty per cent. in addition to the amount paid for day labor." Louis v. U. S., (1901) 37 Ct. Cl. 81.

How computed. — The additional twenty per cent. given by this section for the performance of night labor is to be computed on the amount of the employee's salary while serving in the daytime, and is not to be computed on the salary of the officer performing similar work in the daytime. Louis v. U. S., (1901) 37 Ct. Cl. 81.

[Binding and classification of documents.] Every public document of sufficient size on any one subject shall be bound separately, and receive the title suggested by the subject of the volume, which shall be the chief title, and the classification of the volume shall be placed on the back at the bottom, as simply indicating its classification and not as a part of the title. [28 Stat. L. 621.]

SEC. 82. [Bound sets of bills and resolutions for Congress.] The Public Printer shall bind four sets of Senate and House of Representatives bills, joint and concurrent resolutions of each Congress, two for the Senate and two for the House, to be furnished him from the files of the Senate and House document room, the volumes when bound to be kept there for reference. [28 Stat. L. 622.]

This section superseded the provisions of Act of June 20, 1878, ch. 359, as amended by Act of Jan. 27, 1879, ch. 27, and Act of Feb. 26, 1879, ch. 106, as follows:

"Hereafter no binding shall be done for any department of the government except in plain sheep or cloth, and no books shall be printed and bound except when the same shall be ordered by Congress or are authorized by law, except record and account books which may be bound in Russia leather sheep fleshers and skivers, when authorized by the head of a department, and this restriction shall not apply to the Congressional Library, nor to the Library of the Patent Office, nor to the Library of the Department of State, nor to the Library of the Surgeon-General's Office." [20 Stat. L. 207, 267, 323.]

In (1878) 16 Op. Atty-Gen. 57, it was held prior to this Act that the provision in the Sundry Civil Act of June 20, 1878, ch.

359, that "no books shall be printed and bound except when the same shall be ordered by Congress or are authorized by law," operated to prohibit the practice which theretofore existed (under implied authority of law) of printing and binding reports, etc., made in the course of departmental business, and required that thenceforth for such printing and binding there must be express statutory authorization.

SEC. 87. [What work to be done at printing office.] All printing, binding, and blank books for the Senate or House of Representatives and for the Executive and Judicial Departments shall be done at the Government Printing Office, except in cases otherwise provided by law. [28 Stat. L. 622.]

SEC. 88. [Printing and binding and documents for President.] The Public Printer shall execute such printing and binding for the President as he shall order and make requisitions for, and deliver to the Executive Mansion two copies each of all documents, bills, and resolutions as soon as printed and ready for distribution. [28 Stat. L. 622.]

SEC. 89. [No printing in excess of appropriations or without requisition—number limited—direction as to printing.] No printing shall be done for the Executive Departments in any fiscal year in excess of the amount of the appropriation, and none shall be done without a special requisition, signed by the chief of the Department and filed with the Public Printer. No report, publication, or document shall be printed in excess of the number of one thousand of each in any one fiscal year without authorization therefor by Congress, except that of the annual report of the head of the Department without appendices there may be printed in any one fiscal year not to exceed five thousand copies, bound in pamphlet form; and of the reports of chiefs of bureaus without appendices there may be printed in any one fiscal year not to exceed two thousand five hundred copies, bound in pamphlet form: Provided, The Secretary of Agriculture may print such number of copies of the monthly crop report, and of other reports and bulletins containing not to exceed one hundred octavo pages, as he shall deem requisite; and this provision shall apply to the maps, charts, bulletins, and minor reports of the Weather Bureau, which shall be printed in such numbers as the Secretary of Agriculture may deem for the best interests of the Government: Provided further, That the Secretary of the Treasury may authorize the printing of the notices to mariners, tide tables' coast pilots, bulletins, and other special publications of the Coast and Geodetic Survey and of the Light-House Board, and the Secretary of the Navy may authorize the printing of the charts, maps, notices to mariners, tide tables, light lists, sailing directions, bulletins, and other special publications of the Hydrographic Office in such editions as the interests of the Government and of the public may require.

Heads of Executive Departments shall direct whether reports made to them by bureau chiefs and chiefs of divisions shall be printed or not. [28 Stat. L. 622.]

This section and sec. 94, infra, supersede the provisions of the following Acts:

Act of June 23, 1874, ch. 455.

[SEC. 1.] * * * "That hereafter the Congressional Printer shall print, upon the order of the heads of the Executive Departments, respectively, only such limited number of the annual reports of such Departments and necessary accompanying reports of subordinates as may be deemed necessary for the use of Congress: Provided, however, That no expensive maps or illustrations shall be printed without the special order of Congress." * * * [18 Stat. L. 204.]

Act of July 7, 1884, ch. 332.

[SEC. 1.] * * * "That it shall not be lawful for the head of any Executive Department or of any Bureau, branch, or office of the Government, to cause to be printed, nor shall the Public Printer print, any document or matter of any character whatever except that which is authorized by law and necessary to administer the public business, nor shall any Bureau officer embrace in his annual or other report to be printed any matter not directly pertaining to the duties of his office as prescribed by law," * * * [23 Stat. L. 227.]

Act of Aug. 5, 1892, ch. 380.

[SEC. 1.] * * * "No printing and binding shall be done by the Public Printer for the several Executive and Judicial Departments of the Government in any fiscal year in excess of the amount of the allotment for such Departments, and none shall be done without a special requisition, signed by the chief of the Department and filed with the Public Printer; but this restriction shall not be so construed as to prevent the Public Printer from executing printing and binding authorized by special appropriation for any of said Departments. Heads of executive departments shall direct whether reports made to them by bureau chiefs and chiefs of divisions shall be printed or not." * * * [27 Stat. L. 383.]

Publications of office of naval intelligence. — See Res. of March 21, 1900, No. 14, given under PUBLIC DOCUMENTS, ante, p. 186.

SEC. 90. [Departments to order documents required — limit — bills and resolutions.] The heads of Executive Departments, and such executive officers as are not connected with the Departments, respectively, shall cause daily examination of the Congressional Record for the purpose of noting documents, reports, and other publications of interest to their Departments, and shall cause an immediate order to be sent to the Public Printer for the number of copies of such publications required for official use, not to exceed, however, the number of bureaus in the Department and divisions in the office of the head thereof. The Public Printer shall send to each Executive Department and to each executive office not connected with the Departments, as soon as printed, five copies of all bills and resolutions, except the State Department, to which shall be sent ten copies of bills and resolutions. When the head of a Department desires a greater number of any class of bills or resolutions for official use, they shall be furnished by the Public Printer on requisition promptly made. [28 Stat. L. 623.]

Requisition for greater number. — The head of a department has no right under this section to make a requisition upon the public printer for a greater number of copies of publications other than "bills and resolutions" than the number of bureaus in the department and divisions in the office of the head thereof. If he makes the requisition under the general authority vested in his department and with the understanding that the cost is to be charged against the printing appropriation for his department, he has the right to make such requisition, and the public printer has no authority to pass upon the character of publications which he may deem essential for carrying out the work of his department. (1896) 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 370.

Copies of Congressional documents ordered from the public printer under this section by the secretary of state, to a number not exceeding the number of bureaus in his department, should not be charged to the allotment of the public printer's appropriation for such department. (1896) 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 423.

SEC. 91. [Form, etc., of reports of executive officers.] The annual reports of executive officers shall be printed in the same type and form as the report of the head of the Department which it accompanies, unless otherwise ordered by the Joint Committee on Printing. [28 Stat. L. 623.]

SEC. 93. [Work for departments — estimate of cost — requisitions.] When any Department, the Supreme Court, the Court of Claims, or the Library of Congress shall require printing or binding to be done, it shall be on certificate that such work be necessary for the public service; whereupon the Public Printer shall furnish an estimate of the cost by the principal items for such printing or binding so called for, after which requisitions shall be made upon him therefor by the head of such Department, the Clerk of the Supreme Court, Chief Justice of the Court of Claims, or the Librarian of Congress; and the Public Printer shall place the cost thereof to the debit of such Department in its annual appropriation for printing and binding. [28 Stat. L. 623.]

This section superseded the provisions of Act of June 20, 1878, ch. 359, as follows:

"And when any department shall require printing to be done the Public Printer shall furnish to such department an estimate of the cost by the principal items for said printing so called for; and he shall place to the debit of such department the cost of the same, on certification of the head of the department, Supreme Court, Court of Claims, or Library of Congress, that said printing is necessary." [20 Stat. L. 207.]

Printing for Supreme Court.—See Act of June 4, 1897, ch. 2, sec. 1, infra, p. 664.

SEC. 94. [Restriction of printing.] No head of any Executive Department, or of any bureau, branch, or office of the Government, shall cause to be printed, nor shall the Public Printer print, any document or matter except that which is authorized by law and necessary to the public business; and executive officers, before transmitting their annual reports, shall carefully examine the same and all accompanying documents, and exclude therefrom all matter, including engravings, maps, drawings, and illustrations, except such as they shall certify in their letters transmitting such reports are necessary and relate entirely to the transaction of the public business. [28 Stat. L. 624.]

SEC. 98. [Documents to departments, etc., libraries. See PUBLIC DOCUMENTS, ante, p. 175.]

SEC. 99. [Congressional work — extra binding — preliminary reports — delivery of publications.] All future orders or requisitions for printing or binding shall be governed by the provisions of this Act; and all printing, binding, and other work incident to stationery or blank books required for the Senate and House of Representatives, or the committees and officers thereof, except such stationery and blank books as may be purchased by the officers of the Senate and House of Representatives for sale to members in the stationery rooms of the two Houses, together with the material necessary to such work, shall be furnished by the Public Printer on requisition of the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House of Representatives respectively: Provided, That each Senator and Representative shall be entitled to the binding in half morocco, or material no more expensive, of but one copy of each public document to which he may be entitled, an account of which, with each Senator and Representative, shall be kept by the Secretary and Clerk, respectively: And provided further, That in printing preliminary reports and other papers for the use of committees no more than fifty copies shall be ordered unless expressly authorized by the Committee on Printing of each House, respectively. Limitation of section. See Act of March 2, 1895, ch. 189, sec. 1, infra, p. 664.

Superseded Act. — The above section superseded the provision of Act of March 3, 1883, ch. 143, as follows:

"That there may be bound for each Senator, Representative, or Delegate in Congress, one copy of each book or document issued or ordered by authority of Congress during the term of service of such Senator, Representative, or Delegate; but this provision shall not be construed as allowing any binding as aforesaid to be done of any books or documents issued during any former Congress of which said Senator, Representative, or Delegate was not a member." [22 Stat. L. 629.]

SEC. 100. [Repeal.] All laws in conflict with the provisions of this Act are hereby repealed. [28 Stat. L. 624.]

Joint resolution directing the Public Printer to keep an account of all expenditures for printing, mailing, and binding the Congressional Records, etc.

[Res. No. 12, of June 20, 1874, 18 Stat. L. 288.]

[Public Printer to keep and report to Congress separate account of expense of Congressional Record.] That the Congressional Printer be, and he is hereby, directed to keep a separate and exact account in detail of all expenditures for printing, mailing, and binding the Congressional Records, including specific statements of the cost of all machinery and material which may have been or shall be used for the publication of said Record, commencing with its first publication at the Government Printing Office; and that he shall publish the amounts thus yearly expended, in his next succeeding annual report, and each succeeding report, separately from the other disbursements of his office. [18 Stat. L. 288.]

This subject seems to be fully covered by the later Act of Jan. 12, 1895, ch. 23, sec. 22. See ESTIMATES, APPROPRIATIONS, AND REPORTS, vol. 2, p. 934.

[SEC. 1.] [Leave of absence to employees of Government Printing Office.] * * * The employees of the Government Printing Office, whether employed by the piece or otherwise, shall be allowed leaves of absence with pay to the extent of not exceeding thirty days in any one fiscal year under such regulations and at such times as the Public Printer may designate at the rate of pay received by them during the time in which said leave was earned; but such leaves of absence shall not be allowed to accumulate from year to year. Such employees as are engaged on piecework shall receive the same rate of pay for the said thirty days' leave as will be paid to day hands: Provided, That those regularly employed on the Congressional Record shall receive leave, with pay, at the close of each session, pro rata for the time of such employment: And provided further, That it shall be lawful to allow pay for pro rata leave to those serving fractional parts of a year; also to allow pay for pro rata leave of absence to employees of the Government Printing Office in any fiscal year, notwithstanding the fact that thirty days' leave of absence, with pay, may have been granted to such employees in that fiscal year on account of service rendered in a previous fiscal year. And the Public Printer is hereby authorized to pay to the legal representatives of any employees who have died during the fiscal years of eighteen hundred and ninety-four, eighteen hundred and ninety-five, eighteen hundred and ninety-six, or may hereafter die, who have or hereafter may have any accrued leave of absence due them as such employees, and said claims to be paid out of any unexpended balances of appropriations for the payment of leaves of absence to the employees of the Government Printing Office, for the fiscal years eighteen hundred and ninety-four, eighteen hundred and ninety-five, eighteen hundred and ninety-six, and out of any future appropriations for leaves of absence. * * * [29 Stat. L. 453.]

See note under Act of Jan. 12, 1895, ch. 23, sec. 23, supra, p. 649, for provisions superseded by the provisions in the text.

For a summary of the prior statutes, and their effect upon the right of a temporary employee to leave of absence, see U. S. v. Barringer, (1903) 188 U. S. 577.

The purpose of the leave of absence law is to restrict work, not to increase wages. Harrison v. U. S., (1891) 26 Ct. Cl. 260.

System controlling time of work.—The eight-hour law (R. S. sec. 3738), the leave of absence laws, the Act limiting wages (31 Stat. L. 643), and the common-law usage regarding the sabbath constitute a legal system controlling the government printing office, the legislative purpose being that an employee shall not work more than eight hours a day, six days a week, and eleven months a year, and shall not receive more than the prescribed rate of wages. Harrison v. U. S., (1891) 26 Ct. Cl. 260.

Rules and regulations of public printer.—The public printer may prescribe rules and regulations, make leave of absence dependent on good conduct, refuse a leave in exigency, discharge an employee before he has received a leave, but he cannot grant constructive leave to persons who have ceased to be employees nor pay them money equivalent to leave. Harrison v. U. S., (1891) 2 Ct. Cl. 260.

Leaves of absence are not cumulative under the statute, but are limited to thirty days in each fiscal year. They cannot be omitted in one year and doubled in the next. Harrison v. U. S., (1891) 26 Ct. Cl. 260.

A leave of absence will not affect the wages of an employee. If a time worker, he will receive precisely what he would have earned during the identical period of absence; if a piece worker, he is entitled to what time workers receive during the same period. Harrison v. U. S., (1891) 26 Ct. Cl. 260.

Payment to ex-employee.—Payment to a man after he has ceased to be an employee, in lieu of a leave of absence which he was entitled to but did not take, is unauthorized and forbidden by law. Harrison v. U. S., (1891) 26 Ct. Cl. 260.

Temporary employees.—“An analysis of the Act of 1896 discloses nothing which lends support to the argument that, in reiterating the previous law in this Appropriation Act, it was the intention of Congress to depart from the rule applied from the beginning by conferring the right to leave of absence on a mere temporary employee. On the contrary, this statute—like the previous ones—reiterates the exception in favor of a particular class of temporary employees, and by its silence is a further manifestation of the approval by the lawmaking power of the construction of the previous statutes resulting from the rule adopted by the public printer from the beginning, excluding temporary employees from the right to leave. And this recapitulation again demonstrates that the mind of Congress was addressed to the necessity of making such changes as it deemed wise, since there is a new provision allowing the legal representatives of deceased employees who were entitled to a leave to recover the amount due therefor.” U. S. v. Barringer, (1903) 188 U. S. 577, reversing (1901) 37 Ct. Cl. 1.

[SEC. 1.] [Estimates by Public Printer—notification to departments.]

* * * And it shall be the duty of the Public Printer to submit to Congress at the beginning of its next regular session, estimates in detail under the head of Printing and binding for the service of the fiscal year eighteen hundred and ninety-seven and annually thereafter, covering appropriations requisite for all work to be done and services to be rendered under his direction by the provisions of the said Act and not previously required of him; and of the details of all such estimates, he shall notify the heads of the Executive Departments and other Government establishments affected thereby, within such time as will enable them to omit the amounts thereof from the estimates of appropriations which they are required to submit for the fiscal year eighteen hundred and ninety-seven. * * * [28 Stat. L. 961.]

This is from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of March 2, 1895, ch. 189. For other provisions on this subject, see ESTIMATES, APPROPRIATIONS, AND REPORTS, vol. 2, p. 891.

[Advances to Public Printer.] * * * Hereafter there shall be advanced to the Public Printer from time to time, as the public service may require it, and under such rules as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, a sum of money not exceeding at any time the penalty of his official bond, to enable him to pay for work and material. * * * [31 Stat. L. 58.]

This is from the Urgent Deficiencies Appropriation Act of March 30, 1900, ch. 118.

This provision is an amendment of Act of Jan. 12, 1895, ch. 23, sec. 28 (see supra, p. 649), which was a re-enactment of Act of May 29, 194, ch. 85, 28 Stat. L. 84, which allowed advances to the amount of four-fifths of the penalty of the bond. These Acts are themselves a substitute for R. S. sec. 3816, which allowed two-thirds only. The bond of the government printer is $100,000. See Act of Jan. 12, 1895, ch. 23, sec. 17, supra, p. 647.

[SEC. 1.] [Additional printing on envelopes for documents, etc.] * * * The Public Printer, under section thirty-seven of the "Act providing for the public printing and binding and the distribution of public documents," approved January twelfth, eighteen hundred and ninety-five, may, at the request of any Senator, Representative, or Delegate in Congress, print on envelopes authorized to be furnished, in addition to the words therein named, the name of the Senator, Representative, or Delegate, and State, the date, and the topic or subject-matter, not exceeding twelve words. * * * [28 Stat. L. 961.]

This is from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of March 2, 1895, ch. 189. The section mentioned in the text is set out supra, p. 652.

[SEC. 1.] [Wages to employees.] * * * That the Public Printer may hereafter, in his discretion, pay all printers, bookbinders, and leather parers employed in the Government Printing Office at the rate of fifty cents per hour for time actually employed. * * * [31 Stat. L. 643.]

By the Act of Feb. 16, 1877, ch. 58 (see Act of Jan. 12, 1895, ch. 23, sec. 39, supra, p. 653), the price for composition is limited to 50 cents per 1,000 ems and 40 cents per hour for time work to printers and bookbinders. This limit of wages per hour for time work remained in force until by Act of March 3, 1899, ch. 424, 31 Stat. L. 1119, the public printer was, for the coming fiscal year, authorized in his discretion to pay printers and bookbinders at the rate of 50 cents per hour. The paragraph in the text, by the use of the word "hereafter," makes the provision permanent.

[SEC. 1.] [Eight-hour law.] * * * And the Public Printer is hereby directed to rigidly enforce the provisions of the eight hour law in the Department under his charge. * * * [25 Stat. L. 57.]

This is from the Urgent Deficiencies Appropriation Act of March 30, 1888, ch. 47. See Act of Jan. 12, 1895, ch. 23, sec. 47. and note, supra, p. 654.

[SEC. 1.] [Account of printing, etc., for Patent Office.] * * * That the Public Printer shall keep an account of the actual cost of all printing and binding done for the Patent Office, and shall make a statement of such cost in his annual report. * * * [22 Stat. L. 334.]

This is from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of Aug. 7, 1882, ch. 433.

[SEC. 1.] [Binding for Senate library.] * * * The Secretary of the Senate is authorized to make requisition upon the Public Printer for the binding for the Senate library of such books as he may deem necessary at a cost not to exceed two hundred dollars per year. * * * [28 Stat. L. 958.]

This is from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of March 2, 1895, ch. 189.

[SEC. 1.] [Printing for Supreme Court.] * * * PUBLIC PRINTING AND BINDING: * * * For the Supreme Court of the United States, nine thousand dollars, to be expended under the direction of that court, of which sum two thousand dollars to be immediately available; and the printing for that court shall be done by the printer it may employ, unless it shall otherwise order. * * * [30 Stat. L. 61.]

This is from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of June 4, 1897, ch. 2.

The same provision occurs in Act of Dec. 22, 1896, ch. 3, 29 Stat. L. 481.

See opinion of Mr. Justice Harlan on this provision, 6 Comp. Dec. 301. Prior legislation governing printing for the Supreme Court is contained in Act of Jan. 12, 1895, ch. 23, sec. 87, 93, supra, pp. 658, 659.

[SEC. 1.] [Duplicating and filing devices for Government offices.] * * * The Public Printer is authorized hereafter to procure and supply, on the requisition of the head of any Executive Department or other Government establishment, complete manifold blanks, books, and forms, required in duplicating processes; also complete patented devices with which to file money-order statements, or other uniform official papers, and to charge such supplies to the allotment for printing and binding of the Department or Government establishment requiring the same. * * * [32 Stat. L. 481.]

This is from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of June 28, 1902, ch. 1301.

[SEC. 1.] [Binding for members of Congress.] * * * That no binding shall be done at the Government Printing Office for Senators, Representatives, or Delegates in Congress, except that there may be bound for each Senator, Representative or Delegate, one copy of each book or document issued by order of Congress, but this provision shall not allow any binding as aforesaid, to be done of books, or documents issued by authority of and during any former Congress: * * * [22 Stat. L. 334.]

This is from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of Aug. 7, 1882, ch. 433. It supersedes the Act of Dec. 10, 1877, ch. 6, "An Act authorizing binding of documents for members of Congress," as follows:

"That the Public Printer, be authorized to bind at the Government Printing Office any books, maps, charts, or documents published by the authority of Congress, upon application of any member of the Senate or House of Representatives, upon payment of the actual cost of such binding." [20 Stat. L. 5.]

See, however, Act of Jan. 12, 1895, ch. 23, sec. 99, supra, p. 660.

[SEC. 1.] [Printing for committees of Congress.] * * * That nothing in the second provision of section ninety-nine of the Act providing for the public printing and binding and the distribution of public documents, approved January twelfth, eighteen hundred and ninety-five, shall be held to contravene the orders of either House of Congress authorizing printing for the use of committees, as to the number of copies or otherwise: Provided, That there shall not be printed, under such orders, for the use of any committee, any hearing or other document costing in excess of five hundred dollars. * * * [28 Stat. L. 961.]

This is from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of March 2, 1895, ch. 189. The provision mentioned in the text is given supra, p. 660.

[II. ADVERTISING.]

Sec. 3823. [Clerk of House to select newspapers in certain States to publish treaties, laws, etc.] The Clerk of the House of Representatives shall select in Virginia, South Carolina, North Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, and Arkansas, one or more newspapers, not exceeding the number allowed by law, in which such treaties and laws of the United States as may be ordered for publication in newspapers according to law shall be published, and in some one or more of which so selected all such advertisements as may be ordered for publication in said districts by any United States court or judge thereof, or by any officer of such courts, or by any executive officer of the United States, shall be published, the compensation for which and other terms of publication, shall be fixed by said Clerk at a rate not exceeding two dollars per page for the publication of treaties and laws, and not exceeding one dollar per square of eight lines of space, for the publication of advertisements, the accounts for which shall be adjusted by the proper accounting officers, and paid in the manner now authorized by law in the like cases. [R. S.]

Act of March 2, 1867, ch. 167, 14 Stat. L. 466; Act of March 29, 1867, ch. 13, 15 Stat. L. 7.

Repeal.—This section and sections 3824, 3825 following so far as they relate to the publication of laws in newspapers were repealed by R. S. sec. 79, as amended. See CONGRESS, vol. 2, p. 237. These sections so far as they relate to the publication of treaties are repealed by Act of July 31, 1876, ch. 246, infra, p. 667, and by the following Acts. It is doubtful if they are now of any force. See the following cases.

It was held by acting Attorney-General Jenks, in (1838) 19 Op. Atty.-Gen. 159, that R. S. secs. 3823, 3824, and 3825 were repealed as to the publication of laws by R. S. sec. 79, as amended by the Act of Feb. 18, 1875; and as to the publication of treaties, by the Act of July 31, 1876, providing for the publication of treaties in another manner; and as to the price paid for advertising, by the Act of June 20, 1878. He also held that the duties of the clerk to publish the laws and treaties therefore ceased, and he was no longer required to act; therefore the injunction made upon a court or a judge, an officer of court, or an executive officer of the United States by this section (contingent upon the action of the clerk) also ceased.

What advertisements included.—In Moncure v. Zunts, (1870) 11 Wall. (U. S.) 416, prior to this Act, it was held that the seventh section of the Act of Congress of March 2, 1867, 14 Stat. L. 466, providing for judicial, etc., notices, applies only to such advertisements as may be published in behalf of the government and are to be paid for out of the federal treasury. It does not effect advertisements for sale of lands under judicial process in suits between individuals.

Conditional post-office advertisement.—Where the postmaster-general sends an advertisement to a newspaper requesting its publication, if it can be done for a sum in gross specified, the request is conditional, and if the publisher inserts the advertisement he cannot recover compensation at the rates fixed by the clerks of the House of Representatives. Wright's Case, (1879) 15 Ct. Cl. 80.

Proposals for carrying mail.—An advertisement by the postmaster-general of proposals for carrying the mail is not included under the provisions of this section, but R. S. sec. 3941 governs such a case, even though the paper for such advertisement had been selected by the clerk under the provisions of R. S. sec. 3823. (1876) 15 Op. Atty.-Gen. 627.

Sec. 3824. [Heads of departments and judges to be notified, and to publish only in such newspapers.] The Clerk shall notify each head of the several Executive Departments, and each judge of the United States courts therein, of the papers selected by him in accordance with the provisions of the preceding section, and thereafter it shall be the duty of the several executive officers charged therewith to furnish to such selected papers only, an authentic copy of the publications to be made as aforesaid; and no money appropriated shall be paid for any publications or advertisements hereafter to be made in said districts, nor shall any such publication or advertisement be ordered by any department or public officer otherwise than as herein provided. [R. S.]

Act of March 2, 1867, ch. 167, 14 Stat. L. 466; Act of March 29, 1867, ch. 13, 15 Stat. L. 7. See note to section 3823, supra.

Sec. 3825. [Rates of pay in all the states for publishing treaties and laws.] The rates fixed in section thirty-eight hundred and twenty-three, to be paid for the publication of the treaties and laws of the United States in the States therein designated, shall also be paid for the same publications in all the States not designated in that section. [R. S.]

Act of March 29, 1867, ch. 13, 15 Stat. L. 8. See note to section 3823, supra.

Sec. 3826. [Advertisements in Washington, D. C.] All advertisements, notices, and proposals for contracts for all the Executive Departments of the Government, and the laws passed by Congress and executive proclamations and treaties to be published in the District of Columbia, Maryland, and Virginia, shall hereafter be advertised by publication in the three daily papers published in the District of Columbia having the largest circulation, one of which shall be selected by the Clerk of the House of Representatives, and in no others. The charges for such publications shall not be higher than such as are paid by individuals for advertising in said papers, and the same publications shall be made in each of the said papers equally as to frequency: Provided, That no advertisement to any State, district, or Territory, other than the District of Columbia, Maryland, or Virginia, shall be published in the papers designated, unless at the direction first made of the proper head of a Department: And provided further, That this section shall not be construed to allow a greater compensation for the publication of the laws passed by Congress and executive proclamations and treaties in the papers of the District of Columbia than is provided by law for such publications in other papers. [R. S.]

Act of March 2, 1867, ch. 167, 14 Stat. L. 467; Act of March 29, 1867, ch. 13, 15 Stat. L. 7; Act of July 20, 1868, ch. 176, 15 Stat. L. 110.

Repeal.—See following text.

Effect of repeal.—The joint effect of sections 853 and 3826, R. S., as regards government advertisements in newspapers published in the District of Columbia, was to allow the compensation fixed by section 853, unless (under section 3826) that be more than is paid by private individuals for like services. But section 1 of the Act of 1875, ch. 128, repeals section 3826 for every purpose connected with claims for such services. (1876) 15 Op. Atty.-Gen. 594.

[SEC. 1.] [Mail lettings for Maryland and Virginia—advertisements in newspapers abolished.] * * * That hereafter the mail lettings for the States of Maryland and Virginia and for the District of Columbia shall be advertised in not more than one newspaper published in the District of Columbia, and at prices satisfactory to the Postmaster-General, not exceeding the customary rates paid in the city of Washington for ordinary commercial advertisements; and so much of section three thousand eight hundred and twenty-six of the Revised Statutes of the United States as refers to the publication of advertisements in newspapers be, and the same is hereby, repealed. [18 Stat. L. 342.]

This is from the Post-office Department Appropriation Act of March 3, 1875, ch. 128. So far as it relates to advertising of mail-lettings it is superseded by Act of March 1, 1881, ch. 96, and Act of July 26, 1892, ch. 249. See POSTAL SERVICE, vol. 5, p. 879.

Purpose of proviso.—This proviso was intended to relieve the heads of all the executive departments from the requirements of section 3826 of the Revised Statutes, respecting the publication of advertisements, notices, and proposals for Virginia, Maryland, and the District of Columbia, as well as to provide specifically respecting the publication of mail lettings by the postmaster-general for the states and district above mentioned. (1875) 14 Op. Atty.-Gen. 576.

Effect on treasury department.—Such proviso obviously has no reference to the advertising of the treasury department. (1880) 15 Op. Atty.-Gen. 282.

Discretion of departmental heads.—It is left discretionary with each head of department whether he will make the publication referred to in R. S. sec. 3826 in one or more papers of the District of Columbia. (1875) 14 Op. Atty.-Gen. 576.

Sec. 3827. [Mail-route advertisements in District of Columbia.] [Superseded.]

This section was as follows:

"Sec. 3827. No payment shall be made to any newspaper published in the District of Columbia for advertising any other mail-routes than those in Virginia and Maryland." Act of March 3, 1873, ch. 231, 17 Stat. L. 557.

A substantially similar provision appeared in Act of June 23, 1874, ch. 456, 18 Stat. L. 231.

Both sections were superseded by the provisions of the Acts noted in the note to the preceding section.

Sec. 3828. [No advertisement without authority.] No advertisement, notice, or proposal for any Executive Department of the Government, or for any Bureau thereof, or for any office therewith connected, shall be published in any newspaper whatever, except in pursuance of a written authority for such publication from the head of such Department; and no bill for any such advertising, or publication, shall be paid, unless there be presented, with such bill, a copy of such written authority. [R. S.]

Act of July 15, 1870, ch. 292, 16 Stat. L. 308.

General or special authority.—"For anything in the letter of the statute, or the subject-matter regulated by it, the authority to advertise might as well be general as special; that is, might, under the terms of the statute, be made to comprehend and authorize the publication of successive advertisements of a particular class or kind as well as a single one." U. S. v. Odeneal, (1882) 10 Fed. Rep. 616.

General order by representative of departmental head.—An advertisement is sufficiently authorized to meet the requirements of this section if it is made under the authority of an officer publishing a general order, upon the authority of his office, and as the representative of the head of the department, wherein he informed the officer directed to advertise that by the direction of the head of the department he was authorized to publish such advertisement. A copy of such general order attached to the bills for publishing such advertisements is sufficient for the allowance of the account. U. S. v. Odeneal, (1882) 10 Fed. Rep. 616.

What offices included.—The provisions of this section extend to all the offices connected as stated in the statute, no matter where they may be situated, and not merely to such offices as are at the seat of government. (1878) 16 Op. Atty.-Gen. 616.

[Publication of proclamations and treaties — advertisements for contracts in District of Columbia.] That all executive proclamations, & all treaties required by law to be published, shall be published in only one newspaper the same to be printed and published in the District of Columbia and to be designated by the Secretary of State and in no case of advertisement for contracts for the public service shall the same be published in any newspaper published and printed in the District of Columbia unless the supplies or labor covered by such advertisement are to be furnished or performed in said District of Columbia. * * * [19 Stat. L. 105.]

This is from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of July 31, 1876, ch. 246.

[SEC. 1.] [Rate of payment for advertisements.] That hereafter all advertisements, notices, proposals for contracts, and all forms of advertising required by law for the several departments of the government may be paid for at a price not to exceed the commercial rates charged to private individuals, with the usual discounts; such rates to be ascertained from sworn statements to be furnished by the proprietors or publishers of the newspapers proposing so to advertise: * * * but the heads of the several departments may secure lower terms at special rates whenever the public interest requires it. * * * [20 Stat. L. 216.]

This is from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of June 20, 1878, ch. 359.

An act to regulate the award of and compensation for public advertising in the District of Columbia.

[SEC. 1.] [Advertising in District of Columbia — rate of payment.] That all advertising required by existing laws to be done in the District of Columbia by any of the departments of the government shall be given to one daily and one weekly newspaper of each of the two principal political parties and to one daily and one weekly neutral newspaper: Provided, That the rates of compensation for such service shall in no case exceed the regular commercial rate of the newspapers selected; nor shall any advertisement be paid for unless published in accordance with section thirty-eight hundred and twenty-eight of the Revised Statutes. [21 Stat. L. 317.]

SEC. 2. [Repeal.] All laws or parts of laws inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed. [21 Stat. L. 317.]

[III. BUREAU OF ENGRAVING AND PRINTING.]

[SEC. 1.] [Engraving and printing notes, bonds, and other securities.] * * * For * * * expenses of engraving and printing notes, bonds, and other securities of the United States. * * * Provided, That the above-named notes, currency, and other securities of the United States be executed with not less than three plate-printings: And provided further, That the Secretary of the Treasury shall have executed one or two of such printings by such responsible and capable and experienced bank-note companies or bank-note engravers as may contract for the same at the lowest cost to the Government, and at prices not greater than those heretofore paid for the same class of work; no company or establishment executing more than one printing upon the same note or obligation, and the final printing and finishing to be executed in the Treasury Department. * * * [18 Stat. L. 373.]

This is from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of March 3, 1875, ch. 130.

"This provision, it is understood, has been held, for several years past, by the treasury department not to be of a permanent nature. If permanent, it may perhaps be considered as superseded by 1877, March 3, ch. 105. It is impossible to determine extrajudicially whether this and many other provisions in annual appropriation acts are permanent or temporary. Where the language is such as to admit of doubt on the question, the provisions have been inserted in this edition."—Compilers' note, 1 Supp. R. S. 73.

[Engraving and printing notes, bonds, and other securities in Treasury Department.] * * * For labor and expenses of engraving and printing, namely: For * * * engraving and printing notes, bonds, and other securities of the United States * * * : Provided, The work be performed at the Treasury Department, And provided further, That it can be done as cheaply, as perfectly, and as safely and all contracts already made shall be faithfully carried out. * * * [19 Stat. L. 353.]

This is from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of March 3, 1877, ch. 105.
See note to preceding text.

An act relating to printing impressions from portraits and vignettes.

[Act of Dec. 22, 1879, ch. 2, 21 Stat. L. 59.]

[Impressions of portraits, etc., may be furnished from Bureau of Engraving.] That the Secretary of the Treasury, at the request of a Senator, Representative, or Delegate in Congress, the head of a department or bureau, art association, or library, be, and he is hereby authorized to furnish impressions from any portrait or vignette which is now, or may hereafter be, a part of the engraved stock of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, at such rates and under such conditions as he may deem necessary to protect the public interests. [21 Stat. L. 59.]

[SEC. 1.] [Receipts for miscellaneous work covered into the Treasury.] * * * Hereafter receipts for miscellaneous work authorized by law to be performed by the Bureau of Engraving and Printing for the several Departments of the Government, and the amounts properly chargeable to national banks for engraving their plates shall be deposited, and covered into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts. * * * [24 Stat. L. 227.]

This is from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of Aug. 4, 1886, ch. 902.

An act to allow thirty days' leave of absence to employees in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing.

[Act of July 6, 1892, ch. 154, 27 Stat. L. 87.]

[Leave of absence to employees.] That the employees of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, including the pieceworkers, shall be allowed leave of absence with pay, not exceeding thirty days in any one year, under such regulations and at such time or times as the Chief of the Bureau, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, may prescribe and designate: Provided. That the length of the leave of absence of any employee of said Bureau doing piecework, and the pay during such leave of absence, shall be determined by the average amount of work done by such person and the pay therefor during the several months of the year. [27 Stat. L. 87.]

This Act superseded the provisions of the Act of March 3, 1887, ch. 392, as follows:

[Sec. 1.] * * * "The employees of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, including piece-workers, shall be allowed leave of absence, with pay, not exceeding fifteen days in any one year, at such time as the Chief of the Bureau may designate." * * * [24 Stat. L. 607.]

Effect of other Acts.—The nature of the work done in the bureau of engraving and printing is so different from that done in other executive departments as to confirm the view that the special Act governing leaves of absence to its employees was not intended to be repealed by the Act of March 3, 1893, ch. 211, sec. 5. (1896) 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 338.

Effect of proviso.—As the piece-worker is entitled to the leave of absence with pay only in accord with this Act, it cannot be said that any reduction arises from the proviso, but on the other hand the proviso designates the measure by which the length of the leave and the amount of leave pay may be determined. (1892) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 429.

Authority to execute provisions.—"While the proviso may be somewhat obscure as to the method of its execution, its purpose does not admit of question, and authority to make all necessary regulations to execute the Act and carry out the intent of the proviso is explicitly given." (1892) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 429.

Extent of allowance to piece-worker.—"The leave of absence cannot extend beyond thirty days per year, and the pay cannot exceed the average pay of the employee concerned during the several months of the year. Thirty days' absence per year, with a continuance of average compensation during the absence, appears to be the maximum allowance of the Act in favor of a piece-worker so situated as to receive the greatest benefit therefrom." (1892) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 429.

Piece-workers subject to rules of department, etc.—It is evident that Congress intended to establish the rule that the piece-workers referred to, who continue in regular employment throughout the year, may have not exceeding thirty days' leave of absence annually, subject to the rules of the department and the proper supervision of the chief of the bureau acting under the approval of the secretary. (1892) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 429.

Piece-worker earning less than maximum.—"The length of the leave of absence and the amount of pay during the same, given to a piece-worker whose service and consequent earnings are less than the maximum, must be determined by the average amount of his work and of his pay therefor." (1892) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 429.

[I. SEAT OF GOVERNMENT AND PUBLIC BUILDINGS AND GROUNDS IN DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.]

Sec. 1795. [Permanent seat of Government.] All that part of the territory of the United States included within the present limits of the District of Columbia shall be the permanent seat of Government of the United States. [R. S.]

Act of July 16, 1790, ch. 28, 1 Stat. L. 130. Sections 1795-1835 constitute title 21 of the Revised Statutes, entitled "Seat of Government, including the Public Buildings."

For a historical outline of Acts establishing District of Columbia and the city of Washington, the boundaries and maps of the city and rights thereunder, see Morris v. U. S., (1899) 174 U. S. 196, and cases there cited.

Plan of city of Washington.—The Act of July 16, 1790, for establishing the seat of government of the United States, authorized commissioners, who were to be appointed by the President, to purchase or accept such quantity of land on the eastern side of the Potomac, within the District of Columbia, as the President should deem proper for the use of the United States; and by a liberal construction of that provision only has it been claimed that the President had power to establish a plan of the city; but the deeds of the original proprietors require the trustees, appointed by them, to convey to the commissioners such streets, squares, parcels, and lots as the President should deem proper. In pursuance of the power thus conferred, President Washington, in 1797, executed an instrument of writing, in which he directed the trustees to convey to the commissioners all the streets delineated in a plan intended to be but not annexed. President Washington having previously ratified Ellicott's engraved plan of the city, it must now be presumed that Ellicott's plan was what he intended to annex; and that as it indicated streets through the mall, it was originally intended that streets might be opened through it. And although President Adams subsequently gave his sanction to another plan, said by the commissioners to have been annexed, which did not indicate streets through the mall, the promulgation, publication, and exhibition of Ellicott's plan on the day of sale of lots amount to a pledge of the public faith that the streets thus indicated should be opened. (1820) 1 Op. Atty.-Gen. 416.

Sec. 1796. [Public offices to be exercised at seat of Government.] All offices attached to the seat of Government shall be exercised in the District of Columbia, and not elsewhere, except as otherwise expressly provided by law. [R. S.]

Act of July 16, 1790, ch. 28, 1 Stat. L. 130. Removal of public offices on ground of health. See HEALTH AND QUARANTINE, vol. 3, p. 216.

Sec. 1797. [Chief of engineers to have charge of public buildings and grounds in District of Columbia.] That the Chief of Engineers shall have charge of the public buildings and grounds in the District of Columbia, under such regulations as may be prescribed by the President, through the War Department, except those buildings and grounds which are otherwise provided for by law; and when it shall be made to appear to the said Chief of Engineers, or to the officer under his direction having immediate charge of said public buildings and grounds, that any person or persons is in unlawful occupation of any portion of said public lands in the District of Columbia, it shall be the duty of said officer in charge thereof to notify the marshal of the District of Columbia in writing of such unlawful occupation, and the said marshal shall thereupon cause the said trespasser or trespassers to be ejected from said lands, and shall restore possession of the same to the officer charged by law with the custody thereof. [R. S.]

This section was amended "to read as" above by the Act of April 28, 1902, ch. 594, sec. 1, 32 Stat. L. 152. The section originally read as follows:

"Sec. 1797. [Chief of engineers to have charge of public buildings and grounds.] The Chief of Engineers shall have charge of the public buildings and grounds in the District of Columbia, under such regulations as may be prescribed by the President through the War Department, except those buildings and grounds which are otherwise provided for by law." Act of Aug. 4, 1854, ch. 242, 10 Stat. L. 573; Act of March 2, 1867, ch. 167, 14 Stat. L. 466.

Under what department.—The office of commissioner of public buildings, originally placed under the supervision of the President, subsequently transferred to the department of the interior, and afterwards abolished, its duties being transferred to the chief engineer of the army, leaves the officer performing its duties under either the department of the interior or the department of war, but certainly under one or the other. Therefore a watchman employed by him is in one of the executive departments of the government. Ashfield's Case, 11 Ct. Cl. 153.

Who may be ejected as trespasser.—The only intent of this section is to empower the United States marshal of the District of Columbia to eject summarily transient or disturbing persons from the public grounds in

Sec. 1820. [Protection of public buildings — arrest of offenders.] The Sergeants-at-Arms of the Senate and of the House of Representatives are authorized to make such regulations as they may deem necessary for preserving the peace and securing the Capitol from defacement, and for the protection of the public property therein, and they shall have power to arrest and detain any person violating such regulations, until such person can be brought before the proper authorities for trial. Sec. 1821. [Capitol police.] There shall be a Capitol police, the members of which shall be appointed by the Sergeants-at-Arms of the two Houses and the Architect of the Capitol Extension. There shall be a captain of the Capitol police and such other members with such rates of compensation, respectively, as may be appropriated for by Congress from year to year. [R. S.]

By whom appointed. — Prior to 1867, the police of the Capitol were appointed by the commissioner of public buildings and grounds; then it was provided that the chief engineer of the army and the sergeants-at-arms of the two Houses should constitute the board; and by the Act of 1873 the "architect of the capitol extension" was added in place of the chief engineer of the army. Allabach v. U. S., (1884) 19 Ct. Cl. 556.

Nature of appointment or removal necessary. — Neither a commission nor other technical form of appointment is necessary for the appointment of the capitol police, and their removal from office may be as informal as their appointment. Thwing's Case, (1880) 16 Ct. Cl. 13.

The tenure of the appointment or employment of the members of the capitol police not being fixed or limited by statute, they hold at the will of the officials vested with the power of appointing them; and they may be removed by their superiors by an authority, which, in such case, is incident to the power of appointment. Thwing's Case, (1880) 16 Ct. Cl. 13.

Rules and jurisdiction of police board. — The officers who by law constitute the appointing power have organized as a distinct board, the architect being the president. The rules adopted by this board embrace the entire supervision of the capitol and its grounds, whether Congress is in session or not. It is a police having jurisdiction of the grounds and capitol as the property of the United States, and which is simply incidentally protective, to each house of Congress, in the preservation of "order and decorum within the capitol and its grounds." Allabach v. U. S., (1884) 19 Ct. Cl. 556.

Members absent from duty. — Where members of the capitol police remained absent from duty with no notice that they intended to return, and their names were stricken from the pay rolls, they must be regarded as having been removed even though subsequently restored to duty. Thwing's Case, (1880) 16 Ct. Cl. 13.

Police as employees of Congress. — Though the capitol police are borne on the pay rolls of Congress, yet being appointed by the capitol police board and being custodians of the building and grounds of the capitol, they have not been regarded as employees of the Senate and House in previous legislation. Allabach v. U. S., (1884) 19 Ct. Cl. 556.

Sec. 1822. [Number and pay.] The Capitol police shall consist of the following members, to be paid at the following rates, respectively, per annum, on the order of the Sergeant-at-Arms of the Senate and the Sergeant-at-Arms of the House, or of either of them, namely:

One captain, at two thousand four hundred and one dollars and twenty cents; three lieutenants, at two thousand and seventy dollars each; twenty-seven privates, at one thousand eight hundred and twenty-one dollars and sixty cents each; and eight watchmen, at one thousand one hundred and fifty dollars each. Sec. 1823. [Suspension of members of force.] The captain of the Capitol police may suspend any member of the force, subject to the approval of the two Sergeants-at-Arms and of the Architect of the Capitol Extension. [R. S.]

Act of March 3, 1873, ch. 226, 17 Stat. L. 488.

[SEC. 1.] [No pay during suspension.] * * * That hereafter, whenever a member of the Capitol police or watch force is suspended from duty for cause, said policeman or watchman shall receive no compensation for the time of such suspension if he shall not be reinstated. * * * [18 Stat. L. 345.]

This is from the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Appropriation Act of March 3, 1875, ch. 129. A similar provision without the word "hereafter" was contained in the Act of June 20, 1874, ch. 328, 18 Stat. L. 86.

Sec. 1824. [Uniform.] The Sergeant-at-Arms of the Senate and the Sergeant-at-Arms of the House of Representatives are directed to select and regulate the pattern for a uniform for the Capitol police and watchmen, and to furnish each member of the force with the necessary belts and arms, at a cost not to exceed twenty dollars per man, payable out of the contingent fund of the Senate and House of Representatives upon the certificate of the officers above named. [R. S.]

Act of March 30, 1867, ch. 20, 15 Stat. L. 11.

[SEC. 1.] [Uniform to be worn when on duty.] * * * And hereafter the officers, privates, and watchmen of the Capitol police shall, when on duty, wear the regulation uniform. * * * [31 Stat. L. 963.]

This is from the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Appropriation Act of March 3, 1901, ch. 830. The same provision without the word "hereafter" was contained in the Act of April 17, 1900, ch. 192, 31 Stat. L. 90.

Sec. 1825. [At whose expense.] The members of the Capitol police shall furnish, at their own expense, each his own uniform, which shall be in exact conformity to that required by regulation of the Sergeants-at-Arms. [R. S.]

[19 Stat. L. 41.]

[SEC. 1.] [Duty to police Capitol building and grounds.] * * * And hereafter the Capitol police, under the direction of the Sergeants-at-Arms of the Senate and of the House of Representatives and of the Architect of the Capitol, shall police the Capitol building and the Capitol grounds. * * *

This is from the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Appropriation Act of May 28, 1896, ch. 252.

Sec. 1826. [Supervision extended over Botanical Garden.] The supervision of the Capitol police shall be extended over the Botanical Garden, and, until otherwise ordered, and especially during the period employed for rebuilding the fence surrounding the grounds, additional police force may be employed, if deemed necessary, the expense for which shall be defrayed from the contingent fund of the Senate and House of Representatives; but the additional number of policemen for this purpose shall not exceed three at any time. [Work of fine arts.] The Joint Committee on the Library, whenever, in their judgment, it is expedient, are authorized to accept any work of the fine arts, on behalf of Congress, which may be offered, and to assign the same such place in the Capitol as they may deem suitable, and shall have the supervision of all works of art that may be placed in the Capitol. [R. S.]

Act of June 10, 1872, ch. 415, 17 Stat. L. 362.

[III. CONSTRUCTION OF PUBLIC BUILDINGS AND WORKS.]

Sec. 355. [Title to land to be purchased by the United States.] No public money shall be expended upon any site or land purchased by the United States for the purposes of erecting thereon any armory, arsenal, fort, fortification, navy-yard, custom-house, light-house, or other public building, of any kind whatever, until the written opinion of the Attorney-General shall be had in favor of the validity of the title, nor until the consent of the legislature of the State in which the land or site may be, to such purchase, has been given. The district attorneys of the United States, upon the application of the Attorney-General, shall furnish any assistance or information in their power in relation to the titles of the public property lying within their respective districts. And the Secretaries of the Departments, upon the application of the Attorney-General, shall procure any additional evidence of title which he may deem necessary, and which may not be in the possession of the officers of the Government, and the expense of procuring it shall be paid out of the appropriations made for the contingencies of the Departments respectively. [R. S.]

Res. of Sept. 11, 1841, No. 6, 5 Stat. L. 468. As to public contracts generally, see that title, ante, p. 90.

Purpose of sections.—These provisions, R. S. 355, 359–366, are too comprehensive and too specific to leave any doubt that Congress intended to gather into the department of justice, under the supervision and control of the attorney-general, all the litigation and all the law business in which the United States are interested and which previously had been scattered among different public officers, departments, and branches of the government, and to break up the practice of frequently employing unofficial attorneys in the public service. Perry v. U. S., (1893) 28 Ct. Cl. 483.

Construed with Constitution.—The above provision demands that a transfer of jurisdiction in order to satisfy its requirements must be coextensive with that contemplated by article 1, section 8, of the Constitution. (1893) 20 Op. Att.-Gen. 611.

Validity of title necessary.—Property bargained for by the government is always to be taken and paid for, if the title should be pronounced valid by the attorney-general, and not otherwise. This Act enters into and forms part of every such contract. Where the attorney-general has officially refused to certify the titles, the head of the department through which the negotiation is conducted ought at once to declare the contract rescinded; and when he does so, the end of that contract has come. It can have no more force afterwards than if it had never been made. (1857) 9 Op. Att.-Gen. 100.

Title to lighthouse sites.—It is not competent to the lighthouse board to erect a lighthouse until title to the sites, though located under navigable waters of the United States, has been obtained for the government. (1879) 16 Op. Att.-Gen. 369.

Nature of state consent necessary.—The settled construction of the department of justice is that the “consent” of the legislature of a state to the purchase of lands therein by the United States, required by this section, must be free from any conditions or reservations inconsistent with the exercise by Congress of “exclusive legislation” thereover. (1903) 24 Op. Att.-Gen. 617.

Conditional and unconditional consents.—There is a clear distinction between Acts in which the reservation of jurisdiction is made an express condition of the consent, and an Act which unequivocally expresses the consent of the legislature and does not make any objectionable reservation which may contain an absolute and inseparable condition of the consent. In such a case there seems to be no good reason for holding that the reservation invalidated the entire Act. (1903) 24 Op. Att.-Gen. 617.

Methods of ceding jurisdiction.—Such cession may take place in two ways: indirectly, by an Act of the state legislature consenting to the purchase of the land by the United States; and directly, by an Act of the state legislature granting the jurisdiction to the United States. (1871) 13 Op. Att.-Gen. 460.

Consent necessary for exclusive federal jurisdiction.—Congress cannot acquire or assert exclusive jurisdiction over any part of the territory of a state without the consent of the state legislature; and hence before such jurisdiction over a national cemetery can become vested in the United States the consent of the legislature of the state in which the cemetery is situated must be obtained. (1869) 13 Op. Att.-Gen. 131.

“Although the United States may well purchase and hold lands for public purposes within the territorial limits of a state, this does not of itself oust the jurisdiction of sovereignty of such state over the land so purchased. It remains until the state has relinquished its authority over the land, either expressly or by necessary implication.” Arlington's Case, (1879) 3 Hughes (U. S.) 36, 15 Fed. Cas. No. 8,191; U. S. v. Cornell, (1819) 2 Mason (U. S.) 60, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 14,867.

Complete consent cedes jurisdiction.—An Act of the legislature of a state which gives a complete and unequivocal consent to the purchase of land therein by the United States for the erection of needful public buildings, is such a cession of jurisdiction as is contemplated by this Act. (1858) 9 Op. Att.-Gen. 263.

If the consent of the legislature to the purchase is complete, and has been given, the Constitution carries with it the authority and jurisdiction required by this Act. This will authorize the expenditure of money upon the purchase. (1857) 9 Op. Att.-Gen. 129.

Jurisdiction is acquired by the United States by the consent of a state to the purchase of land within the same for constitutional uses of the Union. (1856) 7 Op. Att.-Gen. 628.

Sufficient cession of jurisdiction.—An Act ceding jurisdiction to the United States over certain lands in a state for public purposes and providing for the purchase and condemnation thereof satisfies the requirements of this section, and no further cession of jurisdiction is legally required. (1903) 24 Op. Att.-Gen. 617.

Insufficient consent.—Where the Act contains neither an assent to the purchase nor a grant of jurisdiction, but merely gives the consent of the state to the use of the land for a specific purpose, which consent is declared to be “as provided in the sixteenth clause of the eighth section of the first article of the Constitution of the United States, and in the Acts of Congress in such case made and provided,” the Act does meet the requirement of the law. (1871) 13 Op. Att.-Gen. 460.

Cession by constitutional convention.—A cession of jurisdiction over land purchased by the United States by a constitutional convention of a state is not a consent to the purchase by the legislature of the state. (1868) 12 Op. Att.-Gen. 428.

Consent obtained after purchase.—Where compensation has been paid for land thus acquired for a national cemetery, without having obtained the consent of the state legislature to the acquisition, the proper course to be taken is for the secretary of war to apply to such legislature for its consent. (1869) 13 Op. Atty.-Gen. 131.

Land purchased without state consent.—There is nothing in the Constitution which prohibits the United States purchasing land within a state without the consent of the state legislature; but when land is purchased by them in a state without such consent the United States cannot exercise "exclusive legislation" over the place. (1861) 10 Op. Atty.-Gen. 34.

Effect of refusal of consent.—If the state legislature, for any or no assigned reason, withhold its consent to a purchase of the site, then the government has tied its own hands. It may purchase and hold the land to be used; it may stand in the most pressing need of a fort, a lighthouse, or a post office, upon the spot, and yet it cannot spend a dollar of public money upon the site for the erection of the necessary building thereon. (1861) 10 Op. Atty.-Gen. 34.

Ascertainment of consent by attorney-general.—These provisions do not require the attorney-general to inquire into and report upon the fact in question whether the state in which the land lies has consented to the purchase. (1861) 10 Op. Atty.-Gen. 34.

Requirements to authorize payment for land.—To authorize payment for land appropriated for the purpose of a national cemetery the consent of the legislature of the state in which the land lies is not necessary; nor in such case is the opinion of the attorney-general as to the validity of the title required, though as a prudential measure for the security of the government it would seem to be highly expedient to obtain his opinion. (1869) 13 Op. Atty.-Gen. 131.

Payment of purchase money, and expenditures prior to consent.—This Act does not forbid the payment of the purchase money of any site or land for the purpose of erecting public buildings, before the consent of the legislature of the state is given to the purchase; but it does prohibit the expenditure of public money upon the improvement of the land, by the erection thereon of the needful public building, until that consent is given to the purchase. (1861) 10 Op. Atty.-Gen. 34; (1877) 15 Op. Atty.-Gen. 212.

Land donated.—Before any money could lawfully be expended upon land donated it would be necessary to obtain a cession of jurisdiction from the state. (1871) 13 Op. Atty.-Gen. 465.

Where land was donated to the United States for the purpose of a site for a certain public building, for the construction of which an appropriation was made, the consent of the legislature of the state to the grant is required by force of this section before any part of the appropriation can be lawfully expended in the erection of the building. (1880) 16 Op. Atty.-Gen. 414.

Acquisition of land by expropriation.—The acquisition of land by the United States through the means of a statute process of expropriation is a "purchase" which if done in strict accordance with the form of the statute may be certified by the attorney-general as vesting a valid title in the United States. (1855) 7 Op. Atty.-Gen. 114.

Lands encumbered by outstanding liens.—The purpose of this provision was to protect the United States against the expenditure of money in the purchase or improvement of land to which it acquired a doubtful or invalid title. No money is to be paid until in the method designated the title is ascertained to be valid. But if the title be valid, the provisions do not forbid the purchase of lands encumbered by outstanding liens, and although in such case the payment of the purchase money should be withheld until the liens are removed, there is no reason why a contract of purchase may not be made and possession taken in pursuance thereof, with a stipulation that the purchase money shall be applied to the discharge of the incumbrances as they fall due or withheld until the vendor shall discharge them. (1862) 10 Op. Atty.-Gen. 353.

Extent of jurisdiction generally reserved.—In Acts of the different state legislatures giving consent to the purchase of lands by the United States, as well as in their Acts expressly ceding jurisdiction over such lands, it is usual to reserve to the state the right to serve on the land purchased its civil and criminal process, and a reservation of jurisdiction to that extent has always been regarded as consistent with the requirements of the provisions in this section. (1893) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 611.

The customary reservation by the state of the right to serve and execute its civil and criminal process in the place purchased has, however, always been permissible, the object of this reservation being, it is said, simply to prevent such place from becoming a sanctuary for fugitives from justice, and it operates merely as "an agreement of the new sovereign to permit its free exercise as quoad hoc his own process." (1903) 24 Op. Atty.-Gen. 617.

Purpose of reservation.—The reservation which has usually accompanied the consent of the states, that civil and criminal process of the state courts may be served in the places purchased, is not considered as interfering in any respect with the supremacy of the United States over them. Ft. Leavenworth R. Co. v. Lowe, (1885) 114 U. S. 525.

Retention of jurisdiction by state.—Where a state's consent to the purchase of land by the United States provides that the state shall forever retain concurrent jurisdiction over any such place to the extent that all legal and military process issued under the authority of the state may be executed anywhere on such place or in any building thereon or any part thereof, and that any offense against the laws of the state committed on such place may be tried and punished by any competent court or magistrate of the state, it does not satisfy the provisions of this section. (1893) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 611.

Concurrent jurisdiction retained.—Phrases in legislative Acts of the states retaining concurrent jurisdiction for certain purposes do not impair the federal jurisdiction conferred by the Constitution. (1856) 7 Op. Atty.-Gen. 628.

The declared retention of jurisdiction is an express qualification of the assent and such a qualification as causes it to fail to satisfy the Act. (1856) 8 Op. Atty.-Gen. 102.

Effect of consent upon reservations, etc.—If the legislative Act of the state wherein the land lies amounts to a consent to the purchase of property by the United States, any exceptions, reservations, or qualifications contained in the Act are void. (1861) 10 Op. Atty.-Gen. 34.

Official duties of district attorney.—It is clearly within the official duties of the district attorney to prosecute cases for the judicial condemnation of the property taken by a United States commission and to perform all the professional law services connected therewith. Perry v. U. S., (1893) 28 Ct. Cl. 483.

Where the title to land is to be vested in the United States, and the land to be acquired is to be used "as a public park or pleasure ground for the benefit of the people of the United States," it is the duty of the district attorney and his assistant to render professional services in regard to the acquisition or the protection of the same. Cole v. U. S., (1893) 28 Ct. Cl. 501.

Services required of district attorneys.—Under the provisions of this section the district attorneys are to furnish any assistance or information in their power in relation to the titles of the public property lying in their respective districts. In construing the language here used according to its ordinary import it would not require any services of the district attorneys except in regard to any other than public property. Weed v. U. S., (1897) 82 Fed. Rep. 414.

These provisions should be interpreted to mean proper legal assistance or such information as an attorney might possess without exercising great industry and expense in the procuring of evidence and abstracts of titles. Weed v. U. S., (1897) 82 Fed. Rep. 414.

Compensation of district attorneys.—With regard to the compensation of district attorneys for services in examining titles of public property under this section, see U. S. v. Johnson, (1899) 173 U. S. 363; U. S. v. Ady, (C. C. A. 1896) 76 Fed. Rep. 359; Weed v. U. S., (1897) 82 Fed. Rep. 414; Weed v. U. S., (1894) 65 Fed. Rep. 399; Ruhm v. U. S., (1895) 66 Fed. Rep. 531; Perry v. U. S., (1893) 28 Ct. Cl. 483; Cole v. U. S., (1893) 28 Ct. Cl. 501; (1887) 19 Op. Atty.-Gen. 63; (1868) 12 Op. Atty.-Gen. 416; (1866) 11 Op. Atty.-Gen. 433; (1855) 7 Op. Atty.-Gen. 46. Joint Resolution Relative to suspension of part of section three hundred and fifty-five of Revised Statutes, relative to erection of forts, fortifications, and so forth.

[Erection of forts and fortifications in cases of emergency.] That in case of emergency when, in the opinion of the President, the immediate erection of any temporary fort or fortification is deemed important and urgent, such temporary fort or fortification may be constructed upon the written consent of the owner of the land upon which such work is to be placed; and the requirements of section three hundred and fifty-five of the Revised Statutes shall not be applicable in such cases. [30 Stat. L. 737.]

Sec. 3734. [Restrictions on commencement of new buildings.] Before any new buildings for the use of the United States are commenced, the plans and full estimates therefor shall be prepared and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, the Postmaster-General, and the Secretary of the Interior; and the cost of each building shall not exceed the amount of such estimate [R. S.]

Act of July 15, 1870, ch. 292, 16 Stat. L. 296.

An act to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to suspend work upon the public buildings.

[Act of June 23, 1874, ch. 476, 18 Stat. L. 275.]

[SEC. 1.] [Suspension of work on public buildings—unexpended balances of appropriations. See ESTIMATES, APPROPRIATIONS, AND REPORTS, vol. 2, p. 902.]

This section authorizes and directs the secretary of the treasury to suspend work on public buildings not actually commenced, and makes provision as to the unexpended balances of appropriations.

SEC. 2. [Selection of site for public buildings — affidavits as to interest.] That in the selection of a site for any public building not yet commenced, reference shall be had to the interest and convenience of the public, as well as to the best interests of the Government; and the Secretary of the Treasury shall have power, and it shall be his duty, to set aside any selection which in his opinion has not been made solely with reference thereto. No expenditure shall be made upon any building, a site for which has been selected, and work upon which has not been commenced, until such of the persons who acted as commissioners in selecting such site shall make and file with the Secretary of the Treasury an oath or affirmation that he is not at the time of making the affidavit, and was not at the date of making the selection of such site, directly or indirectly interested in the property selected for the same, and a similar affidavit shall be made and filed by each and every person hereafter appointed as such commissioner, before any site shall be finally adopted. In either case a failure on the part of any commissioner to make and file such an affidavit shall render the selection void. [18 Stat. L. 276.]

[SEC. 1.] [Restriction upon contracts and expenditures for public buildings and sites therefor.] * * * And hereafter no money shall be paid nor contracts made for payment for any site for a public building in excess of the amount specifically appropriated therefor; and no money shall be expended upon any public building on which work has not yet been actually begun until after drawings and specifications together with detailed estimates of the cost thereof shall have been made by the Supervising Architect of the Treasury Department, and said plans and estimates shall have been approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, Secretary of the Interior, and the Postmaster General; and all appropriations made for the construction of such building shall be expended within the limitations of the act authorizing the same or limiting the cost thereof; and no change of said plan involving an increase of expense exceeding ten per centum of the amount to which said building was limited shall be allowed or paid by any officer of the Government without the special authority of Congress. * * * [18 Stat. L. 395.]

site not an appropriation. See ESTIMATES, APPROPRIATIONS, AND REPORTS, vol. 2 p. 892.

[SEC. 1.] [Approval of plans, before site selected, and in excess of appropriation forbidden.] * * * That hereafter no plan shall be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury for any public building authorized by Congress to be erected, until after the site therefor shall have been finally selected; and he shall not authorize or approve of any plan for any such building which shall involve a greater expenditure in the completion of such building, including heating apparatus, elevators, and approaches thereto, than the amount that shall remain of the sum specified in the law authorizing the erection of such building excluding cost of site. [25 Stat. L. 941.]

[Sites for buildings — commissions on purchase forbidden — mode of payment.] That hereafter commissions shall not be paid for disbursements on account of sites for public buildings; nor on account of construction of public buildings except for moneys actually handled and paid out by disbursing agents; and payments for sites for public buildings under the control of the Treasury Department shall be made by the Treasury Department, at Washington, District of Columbia, by drafts or checks payable to the grantors of such sites or their legal representatives. [25 Stat. L. 941.]

[Legal services — abstracts of title.] That hereafter all legal services connected with the procurement of titles to site for public buildings, other than for life saving stations at pier-head lights, shall be rendered by United States district attorneys: Provided further, That hereafter, in the procurement of sites for such public buildings, it shall be the duty of the Attorney-General to require of the grantors in each case to furnish, free of all expenses to the Government, all requisite abstracts, official certifications, and evidences of title that the Attorney-General may deem necessary. * * * [25 Stat. L. 941.]

The foregoing paragraphs are from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of March 2, 1889, ch. 411.

[SEC. 1.] [Purchase or condemnation of sites authorized.] * * * And the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to acquire, by private purchase or by condemnation, the necessary lands for public buildings and light-houses to be constructed, and for which money is appropriated, including all public building sites authorized to be acquired under any of the acts of the first session of the Forty-seventh Congress; and there may be expended by the Secretary of the Treasury, from the several amounts appropriated for the construction of public buildings, the expenses incident to the procuring of sites for said buildings, respectively. * * * [22 Stat. L. 605.]

This is from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of March 3, 1883, ch. 143.

An act to authorize condemnation of land for sites of public buildings, and for other purposes.

[SEC. 1.] [Condemnation for building sites — jurisdiction of proceedings.] That in every case in which the Secretary of the Treasury or any other officer of the Government has been, or hereafter shall be, authorized to procure real estate for the erection of a public building or for other public uses he shall be, and hereby is, authorized to acquire the same for the United States by condemnation, under judicial process, whenever in his opinion it is necessary or advantageous to the Government to do so. And the United States circuit or district courts of the district wherein such real estate is located, shall have jurisdiction of proceedings for such condemnation, and it shall be the duty of the Attorney-General of the United States, upon every application of the Secretary of the Treasury, under this act, or such other officer, to cause proceedings to be commenced for condemnation, within thirty days from the receipt of the application at the Department of Justice. [25 Stat. L. 357.]

"In addition to this Act the following others appear to be in force authorizing or regulating the taking of private property for public use:

"R. S. secs. 4870-4872, authorizing the secretary of war to purchase land for national cemeteries, or obtain the same by appraisal and payment, after application to the proper circuit or district court.

"1875, March 3, ch. 130, authorizing the secretary of the treasury to acquire, by donation or purchase, the right to occupy sites for life-saving stations, etc.

"1883, March 3, ch. 143, authorizing the secretary of the treasury to acquire land for public buildings and lighthouses by private purchase or condemnation, and to defray the expenses incident to the procuring of sites from the appropriations for the construction of the buildings. (See 18 Op. Atty-Gen. 174, 484.)

"1888, April 24, ch. 194, authorizing the secretary of war to cause proceedings to be instituted for the condemnation of any land, right of way, or material required for the improvement of rivers and harbors, or in his discretion to purchase the same or accept donations of lands or materials.

"1889, March 2, ch. 370, prohibiting the commissioners of the District of Columbia from employing agents in making purchases of school sites, etc., in certain cases.

"1890, Aug. 6, ch. 724, extending to the commissioners of the District of Columbia the powers conferred on the officers of the United States by the Act in the text, and regulating the preparation of plans, etc., for the buildings.

"1890, Aug. 18, ch. 797, authorizing the secretary of war to cause proceedings to be instituted for the condemnation of any land or right pertaining thereto, for fortifications and coast defenses, or to purchase the same or accept donations of such lands or rights. (See 45 Fed. Rep. 546.)

"1890, Aug. 30, ch. 837, secs. 2, 3, which, after providing for the acquisition of land by purchase or condemnation for the purposes of the government printing office, directs that hereafter the same provisions shall apply to all cases of the taking of property in the District of Columbia for public use.

"Previous to the passage of the last-named Act the proceedings in the district in taking private property for public use had not been uniform. In increasing the water supply, for instance, three appraisers were to be appointed, but the owner, if dissatisfied with their valuation, might apply to the Court of Claims (22 Stat. L. 168, 169); while on the other hand the proceedings in the acquisition of land for the library of Congress were to be conducted (24 Stat. L. 12, 13), "in the manner provided with reference to the taking of land for highways in the District of Columbia," the provisions as to which are contained in R. S. of D. C., secs. 252-265." Compilers' note, 1 Supp. R. S. 601.

The right of eminent domain does not rest on a statute or on a constitutional enactment. It is an attribute of sovereignty possessed by the general government as sovereign to enable it to perform its proper functions. It is an authority essential to its independent existence and perpetuity. Mississippi, etc., Boom Co. v. Patterson, (1878) 98 U. S. 406; Kohl v. U. S., (1875) 91 U. S. 367; U. S. v. Jones, (1883) 109 U. S. 513.

Constitutionality.—It is wholly competent for Congress to give to the secretary of the treasury the necessary authority to appropriate for governmental uses the land of an individual, he being unwilling to part with his land. U. S. v. Rauhers, (1895) 70 Fed. Rep. 748.

This Act is a constitutional exercise of the power of Congress. Chappell v. U. S., (1896) 160 U. S. 499.

General construction.—In this Act Congress has empowered certain public officials who may thereto be specially authorized to put in operation the right of eminent domain. It requires this right to be exercised by judicial proceedings in the District or Circuit Courts of the United States. These courts in directing and conducting these proceedings, mindful of their constitutional obligations, must see to it that the process of condemnation be not awarded unless full compensation be provided. In re Rugheimer, (1888) 36 Fed. Rep. 369.

Strict construction of statute.—A fundamental principle of law controlling all matters of this character is that every statute which undertakes to appropriate in any manner the property of private persons for public use must be strictly construed. One of the greatest aims of government is to secure to each citizen the enjoyment of his estate. On the other hand, in cases of public necessity, the right of the individual must yield to the right and demand of the public; but since that demand is in derogation of private right it must be closely scrutinized and the expression of legislative purpose in which it is conveyed must be strictly construed. U. S. v. Rauhers, (1895) 70 Fed. Rep. 748.

Construed with Constitution.—The Act of 1888 must be read in pari materia with the Constitution. The term "condemnation" used in that Act must be construed to mean condemnation with just compensation. The machinery of the courts is employed to ascertain and secure such compensation. In re Rugheimer, (1888) 36 Fed. Rep. 369.

Construed with other Acts.—These two Acts (Aug. 1, 1888, ch. 728, and Aug. 18, 1890, ch. 797) are in pari materia. The first Act gives jurisdiction to the courts of the United States only and prescribes that the form of the proceedings shall, as near as may be, conform to the practice, pleading, form, and mode of procedure in like causes in the state courts. The second Act authorizes proceedings in any court of competent jurisdiction to be presented in accordance with the laws relating to the condemnation of property of the states wherein the proceeding may be instituted. The government may proceed under either Act in its own discretion. When proceedings are taken under either of these Acts, strict compliance must be had with all the provisions of law made for the protection of the landowner, or the proceedings are ineffectual; and these proceedings must show affirmatively that the requirements of the law have been fulfilled. Chappell v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1897) 81 Fed. Rep. 764.

Public use only.—Article 5 of the amendments to the Constitution of the United States prohibits the taking of private property for public use without just compensation. If the use for which it is proposed to take such property is not a public use, or if the owner of the property is not to be paid an equivalent, to be lawfully ascertained, for its loss, then no proceedings for condemnation can or should be allowed. In re Manderson, (C. C. A. 1892) 51 Fed. Rep. 501.

Authorization of officer necessary.—The authority to condemn is made dependent upon the existence of authority to procure, and before the power of eminent domain can be exercised by any officer of the government its delegation to him must plainly appear, and may not be deduced from ambiguous language by doubtful inference. U. S. v. Certain Tract of Land, (1894) 70 Fed. Rep. 940. See also U. S. v. Rauers, (1895) 70 Fed. Rep. 748; U. S. v. Certain Tract of Land, (1895) 67 Fed. Rep. 869; In re Manderson, (C. C. A. 1892) 51 Fed. Rep. 501, (1892) 48 Fed. Rep. 896.

The secretary of the treasury is not by the terms of the statute authorized to procure real estate, and he must be expressly so authorized before he is authorized to proceed by condemnation in his discretion. U. S. v. Rauers, (1895) 70 Fed. Rep. 748.

Judicial control of secretary's discretion.—This Act gives to the secretary of the treasury the right to determine whether the acquisition of land by condemnation by a judicial process be necessary or advantageous. Whatever may be his motive with that the court can have no concern. Nor can it control his discretion. In re Rugheimer, (1888) 36 Fed. Rep. 369.

Purchase of land not authorized.—This Act confers no power on any one to negotiate for the purchase of land. It only provides that where an officer is authorized otherwise to purchase, he may purchase by condemnation. The duty of the attorney-general under the Act is confined to instituting and supervising the judicial proceeding for condemnation. (1890) 19 Op. Atty.-Gen. 673.

Proceedings in whose name.—Proceedings for the condemnation of an interest in land for the use and benefit of the United States having been commenced in the name of the secretary of the treasury, it is rightly ordered to be amended so as to make the United States the formal as they were the real petitioner. Chappell v. U. S., (1896) 160 U. S. 499.

Discretion of attorney-general.—The Act of Congress does not authorize the secretary of the treasury, nor any other officer of the government desiring such proceedings to be instituted, to instruct the attorney-general in what court or in what mode to conduct the proceedings. These are left wholly to his discretion. No action on the part of the secretary of war after having made the application provided by law, and no limitation of authority to another, no instruction of another, can affect the discretion of the attorney-general in carrying out the purposes of the application and in condemning the land. Chappell v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1897) 81 Fed. Rep. 764.

Personal attention of attorney-general.—It was, of course, not contemplated by Congress that the attorney-general should be away from the national capital in order to give his personal attention to the conduct of such proceedings. U. S. v. Johnson, (1899) 173 U. S. 363.

Necessary requisites for jurisdiction.—Under this Act, in order to put the machinery of the District or Circuit Court of the United States in motion, it must appear that application for the commencement of the proceedings is made by the secretary of the treasury or some other officer of the United States; that such officer has been authorized to procure real estate for some public use; and that in his opinion it is necessary or advantageous to the government to acquire such real estate for the United States, by condemnation under judicial process. In re Rugheimer, (1888) 36 Fed. Rep. 369.

Jurisdiction in courts, not judges.—Under the Act the courts of the United States, the District and Circuit Courts, not the judges, have jurisdiction. In re Rugheimer, (1888) 36 Fed. Rep. 369.

Jurisdiction of state and federal courts.—By virtue of this Act the national court acquired exclusive jurisdiction of a limited and statutory nature, in which the issues are confined to those matters which are material to and directly connected with the judgment sought to be rendered therein, and a state court has no jurisdiction over such condemnation proceedings—certainly not as to the right of condemnation of the land involved and the awarding of proper damages therefor; but it does not necessarily follow by the commencement of such proceedings in the national court that the title to the land if in dispute must be tried therein, and cannot be tried, heard, and determined in any other court. This is a matter over which the state courts have jurisdiction, especially where the parties adversely claiming title to the land are all residents of the state wherein it is located; and the validity of the judgment or decree in a state court with regard to the title to such land cannot be questioned in a proceeding in a national court under this section. U. S. v. Eisenbeis, (C. C. A. 1901) 112 Fed. Rep. 190.

Petition and submission of question.—The representation must be made upon the petition of a duly authorized person to a court of record, and then follow notice of such petition to the landowner, a summary hearing by the court, the submission of the question, sooner or later, always to a jury. When that question is to be submitted it must be submitted in the name of the United States. In re Rugheimer, (1888) 36 Fed. Rep. 369.

Compensation, when necessary.—The property of a citizen cannot be taken for a public use without just compensation. To protect him, to secure him in his right, the condemnation by the action of this court must be accompanied by the provision for his compensation. As the judgement binds him in the taking of his land, so it must bind the United States to pay him for it. But this only becomes necessary and proper after the officer of the United States asking for the exercise of the sovereign right of eminent domain has satisfied the court that he is authorized to make his application. In re Rugheimer, (1888) 36 Fed. Rep. 369.

These laws were enacted subject to the constitutional restriction that private property should not be taken for public use without compensation. Congress intended that compensation should follow the condemnation proceedings in every case, and the omission to make an appropriation in advance to pay the damages assessed for taking the property constitutes no bar to such proceedings, for the faith of the government is always a guaranty for that payment. In re Manderson, (C. C. A. 1892) 51 Fed. Rep. 501.

SEC. 2. [Practice and procedure.] The practice, pleadings, forms and modes of proceedings in causes arising under the provisions of this act shall conform, as near as may be, to the practice, pleadings, forms and proceedings existing at the time in like causes in the courts of record of the State within which such circuit or district courts are held, any rule of the court to the contrary notwithstanding. [25 Stat. L. 357.]

Purpose of section.—It was undoubtedly the purpose of the Act of Aug. 1, 1888, to extend to condemnation suits brought by the government the provisions of the Act of June 1, 1872 (now section 914, R. S.), which prescribes, in effect, that in civil actions at law the Circuit and District Courts of the United States are to conform their practice and procedure as near as may be to that of the state courts in like causes in the state wherein such Circuit and District Courts are held. If any suits had been governed by these provisions the Act of Aug. 1, 1888, was wholly unnecessary legislation. The Act explicitly extends the provisions of the former Act to government condemnation suits and includes them in the category of causes in which the Circuit and District Courts of the United States are to conform their practice as near as may be to that prescribed for the state courts by the laws of the state in which the suit is brought. Carlisle v. Cooper, (C. C. A. 1894) 64 Fed. Rep. 472.

Nature of conformity to state laws necessary.—The language is intended to devolve upon the federal courts the power to reject any subordinate provisions in state statutes regulating practice, which in their judgment would unwisely encumber the administration of the law, or tend to defeat the ends of justice in the federal tribunal. Subject to this reservation of discretionary power, the federal courts, in condemnation suits, are to conform, by adopting the practice and procedure which the state courts would follow in a similar suit. This they cannot do without certainty unless the rule of conformity is found in the practice and procedure in similar causes generally, and not in that which may obtain abnormally, or in similar causes exceptionally. In re Secretary of Treasury, (1891) 45 Fed. Rep. 396.

The direction in the Act of Congress that the practice, pleadings, forms, and modes of proceeding in cases arising under it "shall conform as near as may be to the practice, pleadings, forms, and proceedings existing at the time in like causes in the courts of record of the state," must "give way whenever to adopt the state practice would be inconsistent with the terms, defeat the purpose, or impair the effect of any legislation of Congress." Chappell v. U. S., (1896) 160 U. S. 499. See also Luxton v. North River Bridge Co., (1893) 147 U. S. 337.

By other Acts.—Irrespective of the terms of the Federal Condemnation Act, conformity of procedure is required, as in all suits at common law, by section 914 of the Revised Statutes of the United States. In re Secretary of Treasury, (1891) 45 Fed. Rep. 396.

"In like causes," that is to say in analogous causes. In re Rugheimer, (1888) 36 Fed. Rep. 369.

"As near as may be," that is to say as near as may be practicable, not as near as may be possible, with discretion in the judge of construing and deciding how far to go. Chappell v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1897) 81 Fed. Rep. 764; In re Rugheimer, (1888) 36 Fed. Rep. 369, citing Indianapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Horst, (1876) 93 U. S. 301; Phelps v. Oaks, (1886) 117 U. S. 239.

At common law.—A proceeding to condemn land for public use is a suit at common law. Kohl v. U. S., (1875) 91 U. S. 367.

No state rule of damages applicable.—Where lands within a state are sought to be condemned under the provisions of this Act for a specific purpose, and the laws of the state provide no rule of damages applicable to a condemnation for such purpose, the determination of what is just compensation must be made under the principles of the common law. High Bridge Lumber Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1895) 69 Fed. Rep. 320.

Necessary allegations.—It is a well-settled principle that when the exercise of a special authority, delegated by statute to a particular person or to a special tribunal, is dependent upon conditions precedent, all preliminaries which show fulfilment of such conditions, and which confer upon such person or tribunal power to act, must clearly appear upon the face of the proceedings. The proper practice is to state affirmatively and with certainty all facts upon which, in such case, jurisdiction depends. Intendment and presumption should not be resorted to for justification of any judicial proceedings in derogation of private rights. In re Montgomery, (1892) 48 Fed. Rep. 896.

It was held by the court in U. S. v. Raders, (1895) 70 Fed. Rep. 748, following

In re Montgomery, (1892) 48 Fed. Rep. 896, affirmed (C. C. A. 1892) 51 Fed. Rep. 501, that "the petition for condemnation must affirmatively show that the officer is authorized by Congress to acquire lands and that in his opinion it is necessary or advantageous to proceed by judicial process, and these facts cannot be inferred."

Trial by jury.—Congress has not itself provided any peculiar mode of trial in proceedings for the condemnation of lands for public uses. The direction in this Act that such proceedings shall conform, "as near as may be" to those "in the courts of record of the state," is not to be construed as creating an exception to the general rule of trial by an ordinary jury in a court of record, and as requiring, by way either of preliminary or of substitute, a trial by a different jury, not in the court of record, nor in the presence of any judge. Such a construction would unnecessarily and unwisely encumber the administration of justice in the courts of the United States. Chappell v. U. S., (1896) 160 U. S. 499. See also U. S. v. Honolulu Plantation Co., (C. C. A. 1903) 122

Fed. Rep. 586; Postal Tel. Cable Co. v. Southern R. Co., (1903) 122 Fed. Rep. 162.

Costs and damages.—In the absence of legislation by Congress authorizing costs against the government they cannot be imposed in any suit to which it is a party, and this Act was not intended as a consent by Congress to waive the immunity of the government from judgments for damages or costs; nor does R. S. section 914 permit them. Carlisle v. Cooper, (C. C. A. 1894) 64 Fed. Rep. 472.

Provisions of Maryland law.—The provision of a state that a petition in the County Court shall be verified by affidavit of the agent of the United States is inapplicable to a petition presented to a court of the United States by the officer designated in the Act of Congress. Chappell v. U. S., (1896) 160 U. S. 499.

The provision requiring a sheriff's jury to reduce to writing and to return to the clerk of the court the testimony taken before them, has no application to a trial had and evidence taken before the court itself. Chappell v. U. S., (1896) 160 U. S. 499.

[SEC. 1.] [Condemnation for National Home of Disabled Volunteers.]

* * * That the provisions of the Act entitled "An Act to authorize condemnation of land for sites of public buildings, and for other purposes," approved August first, eighteen hundred and eighty-eight, shall be construed to apply to the Board of Managers of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers. * * * [30 Stat. L. 121.]

This is from the Deficiencies Appropriation Act of July 19, 1897, ch. 9.

[Condemnation of sites for fortifications and coast defenses.] * * *

Hereafter the Secretary of War may cause proceedings to be instituted, in the name of the United States, in any court having jurisdiction of such proceedings, for the acquirement, by condemnation, of any land, or right pertaining thereto, needed for the site, location construction or prosecution of works for fortifications and coast defenses, such proceedings to be prosecuted in accordance with the laws relating to suits for the condemnation of property of the States wherein the proceedings may be instituted: Provided, That when the owner of such lands or rights pertaining thereto shall fix a price for the same which, in the opinion of the Secretary of War shall be reasonable, he may purchase the same at such price without further delay: Provided, further, That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to accept on behalf of the United States donations of lands or rights pertaining thereto required for the above-mentioned purposes: And provided further, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to authorize an expenditure, or to involve the government in any contract or contracts for the future payment of money, in excess of the sums appropriated therefor. * * * [26 Stat. L. 316.]

This is from the Act of Aug. 18, 1890, ch. 797, "An act making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, for the armament thereof, for the procurement of heavy ordnance for trial and service, and for other purposes."

What authority granted.—Any officer of the government who is authorized to procure real estate for a public purpose is authorized to acquire the same for the United States by condemnation under judicial process. This authority is specially vested in the secretary of war by this Act, of which the courts take cognizance. Chappell v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1897) 81 Fed. Rep. 764.

SEC. 2. [Purchase or condemnation of site for Government Printing Office—board constituted.] That to provide accommodation for the Government Printing Office, and the construction of the needed storage and distributing warehouses in connection therewith, the Secretary of the Treasury, the Public Printer, and the Architect of the Capitol, acting as a board, be, and they are hereby, empowered and instructed to acquire, either by purchase or by condemnation proceedings, as hereinafter provided, the land necessary, in their opinion, for the purposes aforesaid, and for the purposes stated, the sum of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, or so much thereof as shall be necessary, is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated. * * * [26 Stat. L. 412.]

This and section 3 following are from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of Aug. 30, 1890, ch. 837. While these sections in terms relate to the purchase or condemnation of the site for a government printing office, by a provision at the close of section 3 the same procedure is directed in all similar cases in the future in the District of Columbia, and though the particular appropriation for the government printing office was suspended by Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 542, 26 Stat. L. 989, the sections are here retained.

SEC. 3. [Procedure—application of Act to future cases.] That in the event it shall be necessary, in order to carry out the purpose of the foregoing section, for the board, as above constituted, to acquire land, said board is empowered and directed to acquire the same by negotiation, where any such land may and can be so acquired and title secured at a price not above a fair relative value as to other lands which have been sold in the immediate vicinity; or if the said board hereby created shall be unable to purchase said land by agreement with any one or more of the respective owners at a reasonable price within sixty days after the passage of this act they are authorized and directed to make application to the supreme court of the District of Columbia, at any general or special term thereof, by petition for the condemnation of such land not so purchased, and for the ascertainment of its value. Such petition shall contain a particular description of the property not so purchased, and selected for the purpose aforesaid, with the name of the owner or owners thereof and their residences, so far as the same may be ascertained, together with a plan of the land proposed to be taken; and thereupon the said court is authorized and required to cite all such owners and all other persons interested to appear in said court at a time to be fixed by such court, on reasonable notice, to answer the said petition; and if it shall appear to the court that there are any owners or other persons interested who are under disability the court shall give public notice of the time at which the said court will proceed with the matter of condemnation; and at such time if it shall appear that there are any persons under disability either who have appeared or who have not appeared, the court shall appoint guardians ad litem for each such persons, and the court shall thereupon proceed to appoint three capable and disinterested commissioners to appraise the value of the respective interests of all persons concerned in such lands, under such regulations as to notice and hearing as to the court shall seem meet. Such commissioners shall thereupon, after being duly sworn for the proper performance of their duties, examine the premises and hear the persons in interest who may appear before them, and return their appraisal of the value of the interests of all persons, respectively, in such land; and when such report shall have been confirmed by the court the President of the United States shall, if he think the public interest requires it, cause payment to be made to the respective persons entitled according to the judgment of the court, and in case any of such persons are under disability, or can not be found, or neglect to receive payment, the money to be paid to any of them shall be deposited in the Treasury to their credit, unless there shall be some person lawfully authorized to receive the same under the direction of the court, and when such payments are so made, or the amounts belonging to persons to whom payment shall not be made are so deposited, the said lands shall be deemed to be condemned and taken by the United States for the public use. And hereafter, in all cases of the taking of property in the District of Columbia for public use, whether herein, heretofore, or hereafter authorized, the foregoing provisions, as it respects the application by the proper officer to the supreme court of the District of Columbia and the proceedings therein shall be as in the foregoing provisions declared. [26 Stat. L. 412.]

See note to section 2, supra.

The object of these provisions would appear to have been to make a change only in the persons who should assess the compensation, not in the rule of assessment. Bauman v. Ross, (1897) 167 U. S. 548.

An act authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to obtain plans and specifications for public buildings to be erected under the supervision of the Treasury Department, and providing for local supervision of the construction of the same.

[28 Stat. L. 47.]

SEC. 4. [Regulations to enforce Act.] That the heads of the several Departments are hereby empowered to make and enforce regulations to carry out the provisions of this Act. [28 Stat. L. 47.]

"On October 6, 1894, the auditor for the war department officially stated that no regulations under this Act have been made which affect this office."

"By General Orders, No. 22, Headquarters of the Army, July 6, 1894, the following regulations are promulgated under this Act:

"By direction of the secretary of war, and in conformity with the above Act (quoted in the order), the following is published for the information and guidance of all concerned:

"I. All returns of stores or supplies will be rendered as required by regulations or orders, and will be forwarded within twenty days after the expiration of the accounting periods to the chief of the bureau to which the property pertains. Abstracts of purchases will be forwarded with the money accounts.

"II. As soon as possible after the receipt of the return by the proper chief of bureau it will be examined in his office, and the officer making the return will be notified of all errors and irregularities found therein and granted three months to correct them. Suspensions or disallowances will not be made on account of slight informalities which do not affect the validity of the voucher, but the officer's attention may be called to them. Whenever the errors have been corrected, or compensation has been made for deficient articles, and the action of the bureau chief is sustained or modified by the secretary of war, the return will be regarded as settled and the officer who rendered the return will be notified accordingly.

"III. If the necessary corrections in the return be not made within the prescribed time the facts will be reported to the secretary of war. When it has been determined that the money value of the property for which an officer has failed to account shall be refunded to the United States, the facts will be certified to the proper accounting officer of the treasury by the chief of bureau.

"The provisions of the above act and regulations are applicable to all property returns rendered for any period of accountability subsequent to March 31, 1894.

"Paragraphs 1327, 1328, 1329, 1330, 1332, and section 7, paragraph 1431, Army Regulations 1889, are hereby revoked." Compilers' note, 2 Supp. R. S. 174.

SEC. 5. [Repeal.] That all laws or parts of laws inconsistent with the provisions of this Act are hereby repealed. [28 Stat. L. 47.]

Sec. 3748. [Uniforms and equipments.] The clothes, arms, military outfits, and accouterments furnished by the United States to any soldier shall not be sold, bartered, exchanged, pledged, loaned, or given away; and no person not a soldier, or duly authorized officer of the United States, who has possession of any such clothes, arms, military outfits, or accouterments, so furnished, and which have been the subjects of any such sale, barter, exchange, pledge, loan, or gift, shall have any right, title, or interest therein; but the same may be seized and taken wherever found by any officer of the United States, civil or military, and shall thereupon be delivered to any quartermaster, or other officer authorized to receive the same. The possession of any such clothes, arms, military outfits, or accouterments by any person not a soldier or officer of the United States shall be presumptive evidence of such a sale, barter, exchange, pledge, loan, or gift. [R. S.]

Act of March 3, 1863, ch. 75, 12 Stat. L. 735.

R. S. sections 3748-3755 constitute title 44 of the Revised Statutes, entitled "The Public Property."

Sec. 3749. [Solicitor of Treasury may rent or sell unproductive lands or property.] The Solicitor of the Treasury is authorized, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, to rent, for a period not exceeding three years, or to sell, at public sale, any unproductive lands, or other property of the United States acquired under judicial process or otherwise in the collection of debts, after advertising the time, place, and conditions of such sale for three months preceding the same in some newspaper published in the vicinity thereof, in such manner and upon such terms as may, in his judgment, be most advantageous to the public interest. [R. S.]

Act of March 3, 1863, ch. 76, 12 Stat. L. 740.

Real estate acquired by United States under internal revenue laws. See INTERNAL REVENUE, vol. 3, p. 592.

Approval of secretary necessary.—The legislation of Congress would be wholly ineffectual to prevent the evils which it was designed to remedy if this approval should not be treated as a substantial requirement, a thing essential to give validity to the sale. The question is one of power, and the power is given to sell when the secretary thinks it advisable to do so. His approval is a condition precedent, without which the solicitor has no authority whatever to act. U. S. v. Jonas, (1873) 19 Wall. (U. S.) 598.

Under earlier Acts.—If the Congress of 1830 (by Act of May 29, 1830) intended that the solicitor of the treasury should be the sole judge of the propriety of selling the property of the United States taken in payment of debts, the Congress of 1863 (by Act of March 3, 1863) thought proper to abandon this policy and to declare that in no case should there be a sale without the approval of the secretary of the treasury. It went further and said that all sales should be at public auction, and gave the power to lease for a limited time, but whether the property were leased or sold, the secretary should be first consulted and his consent obtained, and all persons given a fair and equal opportunity of buying. The system thus inaugurated did away with the objections to private sales, and made the secretary of the treasury responsible, as he should be, for the proper administration of this branch of the public service. U. S. v. Jonas, (1873) 19 Wall. (U. S.) 598.

Written evidence of approval.—The purchaser is not bound to accept a deed unless there be written evidence of this approval. U. S. v. Jonas, (1873) 19 Wall. (U. S.) 598.

As the important power of selling the property of the United States acquired in payment of debts can only be exercised by the solicitor with the approval of the secretary, there would seem to be the best of reasons for requiring some written evidence of this approval, not only for the security of the purchaser but for the protection of the government. U. S. v. Jonas, (1873) 19 Wall. (U. S.) 598.

Presumption of approval.—The approval of the secretary is not a fact to be presumed because the deed of the solicitor is the deed of an official person, nor even because it recites that the sale was made in pursuance of this Act. U. S. v. Jonas, (1873) 19 Wall. (U. S.) 598.

Lands acquired on judgments.—The solicitor of the treasury, by virtue of this section and R. S. sec. 3760, has charge of, and, with the approval of the secretary of the treasury, power to rent or sell lands acquired in satisfaction of judgments on bonds of internal-revenue collectors. (1878) 16 Op. Atty.-Gen. 143.

“Authority to convey to the purchaser the property purchased at such sale, though not conferred on the solicitor in express terms, is undoubtedly to be implied.” (1881) 17 Op. Atty.-Gen. 100.

An act authorizing the Secretary of War to lease public property in certain cases.

[Act of July 28, 1892, ch. 316, 27 Stat. L. 321.]

[Secretary of War may lease public property not required.] That authority be, and is hereby, given to the Secretary of War, when in his discretion it will be for the public good, to lease, for a period not exceeding five years and revocable at any time, such property of the United States under his control as may not for the time be required for public use and for the leasing of which there is no authority under existing law, and such leases shall be reported annually to Congress: Provided, That nothing in this act contained shall be held to apply to mineral or phosphate lands. [27 Stat. L. 321.]

Longer than five years.—This Act forbids an occupation which contemplates permanency or duration longer than five years. (1897) 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 537.

A revocable license, without limitation as to time, by the secretary of war to a Roman Catholic archbishop, to erect and maintain a chapel on a military reservation, transcends the statute. (1897) 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 537.

[SEC. 1.] [Secretary of Treasury may sell lands acquired by devise.] * * * The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to sell such lands as have been acquired by the United States by devise, upon such terms and after such public notice by advertisement as he may deem best for the public interest. * * * [22 Stat. visions and clothing to keep an account and report supplies on hand.

[Sale of condemned naval stores.] * * * The Secretary of the Navy is hereby authorized to sell, after advertisement of the sale for such time as in his judgment the public interests may require, condemned naval supplies, stores, and materials, either by public auction or by advertisement for sealed proposals for the purchase of the same. * * * [26 Stat. L. 194.]

Sec. 3750. [Solicitor of Treasury to have charge of property transferred to the United States.] The Solicitor of the Treasury shall have charge of all lands and other property which have been or may be assigned, set off, or conveyed to the United States in payment of debts, and of all trusts created for the use of the United States in payment of debts due them; and of the sale and disposal of lands assigned or set off to the United States in payment of debts, or vested in them by mortgage or other security for the payment of debts: Provided, That this section shall not apply to real estate which has been or shall be assigned, set off, or conveyed to the United States, in payment of debts arising under the internal-revenue laws, nor to trusts created for the use of the United States, in payment of such debts due them. [R. S.]

Act of May 29, 1830, ch. 153, 4 Stat. L. 414; Act of March 2, 1867, ch. 169, 14 Stat. L. 472.

Reference to state laws.—There can be no doubt that the Act regulating the duties of solicitor had a reference to existing laws in some of the states, which authorize the debtor to set off his real estate on execution; and in other cases where he surrenders all his property to the United States on which he is released; but all the provisions are not limited to these cases. Some of them are general and apply to cases of "trusts created for the benefit of the United States in payment of debts due them." U. S. v. Lane, (1844) 3 McLean (U. S.) 365, 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,559.

Power of solicitor.—There is no imaginable reason why a trustee having power to sell lands should not have power to sell movables and incorporeal rights, and the policy of the Act demands it. At any rate, however, the solicitor of the treasury is charged with the administration of said trusts; he may do, therefore, under this statute, whatever any other trustee would be allowed to do in a court of chancery. (1842) 4 Op. Atty.-Gen. 135.

Land taken to secure debt.—Land taken, not as a purchase, but to secure the debt of a receiver, and sold on credit in order that the sum due by the receiver might be paid, is a case of trust recommended by the public interest and opposed to no law or public policy. U. S. v. Lane, (1844) 3 McLean (U. S.) 365, 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,559.

Sec. 3751. [To release lands in certain cases.] In cases where real estate has become the property of the United States, by conveyance, extent, or otherwise, in payment of a debt, and such debt is afterward fully paid in money, and the same has been received by the United States, the Solicitor of the Treasury may release by deed or otherwise convey the same real estate to the debtor from whom it was taken, if he is living, or, if such debtor is dead, to his heirs or devisees, or such person as they may appoint: Provided, That this section shall not apply to real estate so acquired by the United States in payment of any debt arising under the internal-revenue laws. [R. S.]

Act of May 29, 1830, ch. 153, 4 Stat. L. 414; Act of March 2, 1867, ch. 169, 14 Stat. L. 472.

Sec. 3752. [Power to obtain releases.] Whenever any lands have been or shall be conveyed to individuals or officers, for the use or benefit of the United States, the President is authorized to obtain from such person a release of his interest to the United States. [R. S.]

Act of April 28, 1828, ch. 41, 4 Stat. L. 264.

Sec. 3753. [Releasing property from attachment.] Whenever any property owned or held by the United States, or in which the United States have or claim an interest, shall, in any judicial proceeding under the laws of any State, district, or Territory, be seized, arrested, attached, or held for the security or satisfaction of any claim made against such property, the Secretary of the Treasury, in his discretion, may direct the Solicitor of the Treasury to cause a stipulation to be entered into by the proper district attorney for the discharge of such property from such seizure, arrest, attachment, or proceeding, to the effect that upon such discharge, the person asserting the claim against such property shall become entitled to all the benefits of this and the following section. Nothing herein contained shall, however, be considered as recognizing or conceding any right to enforce by seizure, arrest, attachment, or any judicial process, any claim against any property of the United States, or against any property held, owned, or employed by the United States, or by any Department thereof, for any public use, or as waiving any objection to any proceeding instituted to enforce any such claim. [R. S.]

Act of June 11, 1864, ch. 117, 13 Stat. L. 122.

The right of a party in ordinary litigation to a release of property from attachment upon giving a bond for indemnity is fundamental. That doctrine was recognized in the debate on the Act of 1864, which now appears in the above sections of the law. It manifestly applies with greater force and reason in a case affecting the government as parens patriæ than where the interests of private litigants alone are involved. The statute enables the government, although not a party nor in general subject to be made such, to intervene without prejudice and to invoke that doctrine. (1903) 24 Op. Atty.-Gen. 679.

This Act is not mandatory in its provisions, and in a palpable case of improper interference with the government's rights the strong executive arm may be relied upon for the protection of its sovereignty, the language of the Act being that the secretary of the treasury may in his discretion cause such stipulation to be entered. (1903) 24 Op. Atty.-Gen. 679.

Proceedings under state law only.—To authorize the discharge of a vessel upon this stipulation the "judicial proceeding" in which it is arrested must be one taken or conducted "under"—in subordination to—the law of the state. Such a proceeding can only take place in the state court. It follows that the section does not include a "judicial proceeding" in the national courts. The Revenue Cutter, (1876) 4 Sawy. (U. S.) 136, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,712.

Suit in admiralty to enforce state lien.—

A suit in admiralty in a national court to enforce a lien given by the state law is not a judicial proceeding under such law, and therefore the United States is not entitled in such suit to have the res discharged from arrest under this section. The Revenue Cutter, (1876) 4 Sawy. (U. S.) 136, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,712.

Nature of stipulation.—The nature and necessities of the subject, the sovereign claim and interest, the object to be gained, the words of the statute, its fair inference and clear reservations, all convince beyond doubt that the "stipulation to be entered into" is an engagement on behalf of the United States which shall be addressed to and filed with the particular court under proper reserve of submission to the jurisdiction, whereupon discharge of the property as matter of course would follow, and adverse claimants would have the opportunity of establishing in accordance with the law their respective claims against the bond of indemnity thus provided. (1903) 24 Op. Atty.-Gen. 679.

The word "stipulation" as used in this section denotes an undertaking in the nature of bail, and is analogous to the "stipulation for value" under present admiralty practice, the measure of the government's obligation being limited in this section to "the value of the interest of the United States in the property in question." (1903) 24 Op. Atty.-Gen. 679.

The discretion of courts relative to such "stipulation" is practically limited to a consideration of the bond or equivalent engagement, and the sufficiency of the sureties where security is required, the release of the property following as a matter of right. (1903) 24 Op. Atty.-Gen. 679.

Extent of exemption.—The United States is entitled to the undisputed possession and control of its property, and of property in which it is interested to the extent of that interest, and this possession and control are exempt from the process of every court. (1903) 24 Op. Atty.-Gen. 679.

Property in general included.—The meaning of the word "stipulation" is not necessarily restricted to admiralty law; it may be applied to property in general in proper cases, and was employed by Congress with this intention and meaning in this section. (1903) 24 Op. Atty.-Gen. 679.

No instrumentality of the government may be taken into custody and held under any adverse authority whatever. This applies as well to an instrumentality in process of creation as to one already completed. (1903) 24 Op. Atty.-Gen. 679.

Sec. 3754. [Payment.] In all cases where a stipulation is entered into under the preceding section, and, in consequence thereof, the property is discharged, and final judgment is afterward given in the court of last resort to which the Secretary of the Treasury may deem proper to cause such proceedings to be carried, affirming the claim for the security or satisfaction of which such proceedings have been instituted, and the right of the person asserting the same to enforce it against such property by means of such proceedings, notwithstanding the claims of the United States thereto, such final judgment shall be deemed, to all intents and purposes, a full and final determination of the rights of such person, and shall entitle such person, as against the United States, to such rights as he would have had in case possession of such property had not been changed. Whenever such claim is for the payment of money, and the same is by such judgment found to be due, the presentation of a duly authenticated copy of the record of such judgment and proceedings shall be sufficient evidence to the proper accounting officers for the allowance thereof; and the same shall thereupon be allowed and paid out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated. The amount so to be allowed and paid shall not, however, exceed the value of the interest of the United States in the property in question. [R. S.]

Sec. 3755. [Preservation, sale, etc., of abandoned property.] The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to make such contracts and provisions as he may deem for the interest of the Government, for the preservation, sale, or collection of any property, or the proceeds thereof, which may have been wrecked, abandoned, or become derelict, being within the jurisdiction of the United States, and which ought to come to the United States, or of any moneys, dues, and other interests lately in the possession of or due to the so-called Confederate States, or their agents, and now belonging to the United States, which are now withheld or retained by any person, corporation, or municipality whatever, and which ought to have come into the possession and custody of, or been collected or received by, the United States; and in such contracts to allow such compensation to any person giving information thereof, or who shall actually preserve, collect, surrender, or pay over the same, as the Secretary of the Treasury may deem just and reasonable. No costs or claim shall, however, become chargeable to the United States in so obtaining, preserving, collecting, receiving, or making available property, debts, dues, or interests, which shall not be paid from such moneys as shall be realized and received from the property so collected, under each specific agreement. [R. S.]

Res. of June 21, 1870, No. 75, 16 Stat. L. 380.
The clause "which ought to come to the United States" is not intended as a declaratory clause, but as a descriptive and limiting one—limiting the operation of the law to those classes of property, wrecked, abandoned, or become derelict, "which ought to come to the United States." Russell v. Forty Bales Cotton, (1872) 21 Fed. Cas. No. 12,154.

War claims.—Under the resolution of June 21, 1870, it was held in Russell v. Forty Bales Cotton, (1872) 21 Fed. Cas. No. 12,154, that the continuation of the resolution shows plainly the fact that the property, dues, and claims that "ought to come to the United States" were such as came through the war of the rebellion, and no others.

Real and personal property.—The words "any property" include real as well as personal property. (1870) 13 Op. Atty.-Gen. 569.

That the word "derelict" is here used in a sense applicable to real estate is doubtful perhaps; but in view of the legislation of Congress enacted since the "so-called Confederate States" began to exist, there can be little doubt that the preceding word, "abandoned," may be applied to real property. (1870) 13 Op. Atty.-Gen. 569.

Wreckage.—This section relates apparently to property which ought equitably to go to the United States, and not to wreckage of any kind. U. S. v. Tyndale, (C. C. A. 1902) 116 Fed. Rep. 820.

What wrecks included.—This section undoubtedly includes wrecks which are, unless they have been definitely abandoned or allowed to become derelict, the property of the United States, even if it does not exclusively refer to such wrecks, but extends also to the property of private owners which has been wrecked, abandoned, or become derelict. (1900) 23 Op. Atty.-Gen. 76.

As to Spanish vessels wrecked in battle by the naval vessels of the United States during the war with Spain, and lying along the coast of Cuba, see (1900) 23 Op. Atty.-Gen. 76.

Recovery on fraudulent judgment.—Where a judgment recovered by the United States in the Court of Claims has been paid, and is subsequently set aside on the ground of fraud, the money can be recovered, if at all, because of the fraud, and not because it is property or proceeds thereof belonging to the United States and now withheld as contemplated by this section. (1899) 22 Op. Atty.-Gen. 411.

Contract to recover money fraudulently obtained.—The secretary of the treasury has no authority under this section to enter into a contract with a private individual for the collection of money paid upon a fraudulent judgment with regard to the ownership of certain property captured by the United States forces. (1899) 22 Op. Atty.-Gen. 411.

Liability of United States under contract.

—The Act authorizing the secretary of the treasury to make contracts in relation to certain property and therein to allow compensation to persons "giving information thereof," would, without further restriction, authorize the secretary of the treasury to create what might be called a general liability on the part of the United States to pay the compensation agreed upon, a liability which the government would not deny, though in order to its discharge an appropriation of money by Congress might be necessary. But by the proviso which concludes the Act, the authority to create such general liability is taken away. All modes of payment other than from moneys realized from property secured under specific agreement being prohibited, there would seem to be no ground for doubt that an agreement to pay in this mode was authorized—specially and solely authorized—by the Act. (1870) 13 Op. Atty.-Gen. 569.

The capital stock of said company shall consist of one hundred thousand shares of one thousand dollars each, which shall be subscribed for and held in not more than two hundred shares by any one person, and shall be transferable in such manner as the by-laws of said corporation shall provide. The persons hereinbefore named, together with those to be appointed by the Secretary of the Interior, are hereby constituted and appointed commissioners, and such body shall be called the Board of Commissioners of the Union Pacific Railroad and Telegraph Company, and twenty-five shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business. The first meeting of said board shall be held at Chicago at such time as the commissioners from Illinois herein named shall appoint, not more than three nor less than one month after the passage of this act, notice of which shall be given by them to the other commissioners by depositing a call thereof in the post office at Chicago, post paid, to their address at least forty days before said meeting, and also by publishing said notice in one daily newspaper in each of the cities of Chicago and Saint Louis. Said president, vice-president and directors shall hold their office for three years, and until their successors are duly elected and qualified, or for such less time as the by-laws of the corporation may prescribe; and a majority of said directors shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business. The secretary and treasurer shall give such bonds, with such security, as the said board shall from time to time require, and shall hold their offices at the will and pleasure of the directors. Annual meetings of the stockholders of the said corporation, for the choice of officers (when they are to be chosen) and for the transaction of annual business, shall be holden at such time and place and upon such notice as may be prescribed in the by-laws. [12 Stat. L. 489.]

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the right of way through the public lands be, and the same is hereby, granted to said company for the construction of said railroad and telegraph line; and the right, power, and authority is hereby given to said company to take from the public lands adjacent to the line of said road, earth, stone, timber, and other materials for the construction thereof; said right of way is granted to said railroad to the extent of two hundred feet in width on each side of said railroad where it may pass over the public lands, including all necessary grounds for stations, buildings, workshops, and depots, machine shops, switches, side tracks, turntables, and water stations. The United States shall extinguish as rapidly as may be the Indian titles to all lands falling under the operation of this act and required for the said right of way and grants hereinafter made. [12 Stat. L. 491.]

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That there be, and is hereby, granted to the said company, for the purpose of aiding in the construction of said railroad and telegraph line, and to secure the safe and speedy transportation of the mails, troops, munitions of war, and public stores thereon, every alternate section of public land, designated by odd numbers, to the amount of five alternate sections per mile on each side of said railroad, on the line thereof, and within the limits of ten miles on each side of said road, not sold, reserved, or otherwise disposed of by the United States, and to which a pre-emption or homestead claim may not have attached at the time the line of said road is definitely fixed: Provided, That all mineral lands shall be excepted from the operation of this act; but where the same shall contain timber, the timber thereon is hereby granted to said company. And all such lands, so granted by this section, which shall not be sold or disposed of by said company within three years after the entire road shall have been completed, shall be subject to settlement and pre-emption, like other lands, at a price not exceeding one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, to be paid to said company. [12 Stat. L. 492.]

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That whenever said company shall have completed forty consecutive miles of any portion of said railroad and telegraph line, ready for the service contemplated by this act and supplied with all necessary drains, culverts, viaducts, crossings, sidings, bridges, turnouts, watering places, depots, equipments, furniture, and all other appurtenances of a first class railroad, the rails and all the other iron used in the construction and equipment of said road to be American manufacture of the best quality, the President of the United States shall appoint three commissioners to examine the same and report to him in relation thereto; and if it shall appear to him that forty consecutive miles of said railroad and telegraph line have been completed and equipped in all respects as required by this act, then, upon certificate of said commissioners to that effect, patents shall issue conveying the right and title to said lands to said company, on each side of the road as far as the same is completed, to the amount aforesaid; and patents shall in like manner issue as each forty miles of said railroad and telegraph line are completed, upon certificate of said commissioners. Any vacancies occurring in said board of commissioners by death, resignation, or otherwise, shall be filled by the President of the United States: Provided, however, That no such commissioners shall be appointed by the President of the United States unless there shall be presented to him a statement, verified on oath by the president of said company, that such forty miles have been completed, in the manner required by this act, and setting forth with certainty the points where such forty miles begin and where the same end; which oath shall be taken before a judge of a court of record. [12 Stat. L. 492.]

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That for the purposes herein mentioned the Secretary of the Treasury shall, upon the certificate in writing of said commissioners of the completion and equipment of forty consecutive miles of said railroad and telegraph, in accordance with the provisions of this act, issue to said company bonds of the United States of one thousand dollars each, payable in thirty years after date, bearing six per centum per annum interest, (said interest payable semi-annually,) which interest may be paid in United States treasury notes or any other money or currency which the United States have or shall declare lawful money and a legal tender, to the amount of sixteen of said bonds per mile for such section of forty miles; and to secure the repayment to the United States, as hereinafter provided, of the amount of said bonds so issued and delivered to said company, together with all interest thereon which shall have been paid by the United States, the issue of said bonds and delivery to the company shall ipso facto constitute a first mortgage on the whole line of the railroad and telegraph, together with the rolling stock, fixtures and property of every kind and description, and in consideration of which said bonds may be issued; and on the refusal or failure of said company to redeem said bonds, or any part of them, when required so to do by the Secretary of the Treasury, in accordance with the provisions of this act, the said road, with all the rights, functions, immunities, and appurtenances thereunto belonging, and also all lands granted to the said company by the United States, which, at the time of said default, shall remain in the ownership of the said company, may be taken possession of by the Secretary of the Treasury, for the use and benefit of the United States: Provided, This section shall not apply to that part of any road now constructed. [12 Stat. L. 492.]

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the grants aforesaid are made upon condition that said company shall pay said bonds at maturity, and shall keep said railroad and telegraph line in repair and use, and shall at all times transmit dispatches over said telegraph line, and transport mails, troops, and munitions of war, supplies and public stores upon said railroad for the government, whenever required to do so by any department thereof, and that the government shall at all times have the preference in the use of the same for all the purposes aforesaid, (at fair and reasonable rates of compensation, not to exceed the amounts paid by private parties for the same kind of service;) and all compensation for services rendered for the government shall be applied to the payment of said bonds and interest until the whole amount is fully paid. Said company may also pay the United States, wholly or in part, in the same or other bonds, treasury notes, or other evidences of debt against the United States, to be allowed at par; and after said road is completed, until said bonds and interest are paid, at least five per centum of the net earnings of said road shall also be annually applied to the payment thereof. [12 Stat. L. 493.]

And be it further enacted, That said company shall file their assent to this act, under the seal of said company, in the Department of the Interior, within one year after the passage of this act, and shall complete said railroad and telegraph from the point of beginning as herein provided, to the western boundary of Nevada Territory before the first day of July, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four: Provided, That within two years after the passage of this act said company shall designate the general route of said road, as near as may be, and shall file a map of the same in the Department of the Interior, whereupon the Secretary of the Interior shall cause the lands within fifteen miles of said designated route or routes to be withdrawn from preemption, private entry, and sale; and when any portion of said route shall be finally located, the Secretary of the Interior shall cause the said lands hereinbefore granted to be surveyed and set off as fast as may be necessary for the purposes herein named: Provided, That in fixing the point of connection of the main trunk with the eastern connections, it shall be fixed at the most practicable point for the construction of the Iowa and Missouri branches, as hereinafter provided. [12 Stat. L. 493.]

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That the line of said railroad and telegraph shall commence at a point on the one hundredth meridian of longitude west from Greenwich, between the south margin of the valley of the Republican River and the north margin of the valley of the Platte River, in the Territory of Nebraska, at a point to be fixed by the President of the United States, after actual surveys; thence running westerly upon the most direct, central and practicable route, through the territories of the United States, to the western boundary of the Territory of Nevada, there to meet and connect with the line of the Central Pacific Railroad Company of California. [12 Stat. L. 493.]

And whenever there shall be a line of railroad completed through Minnesota or Iowa to Sioux City, then the said Pacific Railroad Company is hereby authorized and required to construct a railroad and telegraph from said Sioux City upon the most direct and practicable route to a point on, and so as to connect with, the branch railroad and telegraph in this section hereinbefore mentioned, or with the said Union Pacific Railroad, said point of junction to be fixed by the President of the United States, not further west than the one hundredth meridian of longitude aforesaid, and on the same terms and conditions as provided in this act for the construction of the Union Pacific Railroad as aforesaid, and to complete the same at the rate of one hundred miles per year; and should said company fail to comply with the requirements of this act in relation to the said Sioux City railroad and telegraph, the said company shall suffer the same forfeitures prescribed in relation to the Iowa branch railroad and telegraph hereinbefore mentioned. act, at such places and upon such just and equitable terms as the President of the United States may prescribe. Whenever the word company is used in this act it shall be construed to embrace the words their associates, successors, and assigns, the same as if the words had been properly added thereto. [12 Stat. L. 496.]

And be it further enacted, That at any time after the passage of this act all the railroad companies named herein, and assenting hereto, or any two or more of them, are authorized to form themselves into one consolidated company; notice of such consolidation, in writing, shall be filed in the Department of the Interior, and such consolidated company shall thereafter proceed to construct said railroad and branches and telegraph line upon the terms and conditions provided in this act. [12 Stat. L. 497.]

SEC. 17. And be it further enacted, That in case said company or companies shall fail to comply with the terms and conditions of this act, by not completing said road and telegraph and branches within a reasonable time, or by not keeping the same in repair and use, but shall permit the same, for an unreasonable time, to remain unfinished, or out of repair, and unfit for use, Congress may pass any act to insure the speedy completion of said road and branches, or put the same in repair and use, and may direct the income of said railroad and telegraph line to be thereafter devoted to the use of the United States, to repay all such expenditures caused by the default and neglect of such company or companies: Provided, That if said roads are not completed, so as to form a continuous line of railroad, ready for use, from the Missouri River to the navigable waters of the Sacramento River, in California, by the first day of July, eighteen hundred and seventy-six, the whole of all of said railroads before mentioned and to be constructed under the provisions of this act, together with all their furniture, fixtures, rolling stock, machine shops, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, and property of every kind and character, shall be forfeited to and be taken possession of by the United States: Provided, That of the bonds of the United States in this act provided to be delivered for any and all parts of the roads to be constructed east of the one hundredth meridian of west longitude from Greenwich, and for any part of the road west of the west foot of the Sierra Nevada mountain, there shall be reserved of each part and instalment twenty-five per centum, to be and remain in the United States treasury, undelivered, until said road and all parts thereof provided for in this act are entirely completed; and of all the bonds provided to be delivered for the said road, between the two points aforesaid, there shall be reserved out of each instalment fifteen per centum, to be and remain in the treasury until the whole of the road provided for in this act is fully completed; and if the said road or any part thereof shall fail of completion at the time limited therefor in this act, then and in that case the said part of said bonds so reserved shall be forfeited to the United States. [12 Stat. L. 497.]

SEC. 18. And be it further enacted, That whenever it appears that the net earnings of the entire road and telegraph, including the amount allowed for services rendered for the United States, after deducting all expenditures, including repairs, and the furnishing, running, and managing of said road, shall exceed ten per centum upon its cost, exclusive of the five per centum to be paid to the United States, Congress may reduce the rates of fare thereon, if unreasonable in amount, and may fix and establish the same by law. And the better to accomplish the object of this act, namely, to promote the public interest and welfare by the construction of said railroad and telegraph line, and keeping the same in working order, and to secure to the government at all times (but particularly in time of war) the use and benefits of the same for postal, military and other purposes, Congress may, at any time, having due regard for the rights of said companies named herein, add to, alter, amend, or repeal this act. [12 Stat. L. 497.]

SEC. 19. And be it further enacted, That the several railroad companies herein named are authorized to enter into an arrangement with the Pacific Telegraph Company, the Overland Telegraph Company, and the California State Telegraph Company, so that the present line of telegraph between the Missouri River and San Francisco may be moved upon or along the line of said railroad and branches as fast as said roads and branches are built, and if said arrangement be entered into, and the transfer of said telegraph line be made in accordance therewith to the line of said railroad and branches, such transfer shall, for all purposes of this act, be held and considered a fulfillment on the part of said railroad companies of the provisions of this act in regard to the construction of said line of telegraph. And, in case of disagreement, said telegraph companies are authorized to remove their line of telegraph along and upon the line of railroad herein contemplated without prejudice to the rights of said railroad companies named herein. [12 Stat. L. 497.]

SEC. 20. And be it further enacted, That the corporation hereby created and the roads connected therewith, under the provisions of this act, shall make to the Secretary of the Treasury an annual report wherein shall be set forth—

Second. The names and residences of the directors, and all other officers of the company;

Fifth. The amount received from passengers on the road;

Sixth. The amount received from freight thereon;

Seventh. A statement of the expense of said road and its fixtures;

Eighth. A statement of the indebtedness of said company, setting forth the various kinds thereof. Which report shall be sworn to by the president of the said company, and shall be presented to the Secretary of the Treasury on or before the first day of July in each year. [12 Stat. L. 498.]

fully paid; and money only shall be receivable for such assessment, or as equivalents for any portion of the capital stock hereinbefore authorized. The capital stock of said company shall not be increased beyond the actual cost of said road. And the stock of the company shall be deemed personal property, and shall be transferable on the books of the company, at the general office of said company in the city of New York, or at such other transfer office as the company may establish. [13 Stat. L. 356.]

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the Union Pacific Railroad Company, and all other companies provided for in this act and the act to which this is an amendment, be, and hereby are, empowered to enter upon, purchase, take, and hold any lands or premises that may be necessary and proper for the construction and working of said road, not exceeding in width one hundred feet on each side of its centre line, unless a greater width be required for the purpose of excavation or embankment; and also any lands or premises that may be necessary and proper for turnouts, standing places for cars, depots, station house[s], or any other structures required in the construction and operating of said road. And each of said companies shall have the right to cut and remove trees or other materials that might by falling encumber its road-bed, though standing or being more than one hundred feet therefrom. And in case the owner or claimant of such lands or premises and such company cannot agree as to the damages, the amount shall be determined by the appraisal of three disinterested commissioners, who may be appointed upon application by any party to any judge of a court of record in any of the territories in which the lands or premises to be taken lie; and said commissioners, in their assessments of damages, shall appraise such premises at what would have been the value thereof if the road had not been built; and upon return into court of such appraisal, and upon the payment to the clerk thereof of the amount so awarded by the commissioners for the use and benefit of the owner thereof, said premises shall be deemed to be taken by said company, which shall thereby acquire full title to the same for the purposes aforesaid. And either party feeling aggrieved by said assessment may, within thirty days, file an appeal therefrom, and demand a jury of twelve men to estimate the damage sustained; but such appeal shall not interfere with the rights of said company to enter upon the premises taken, or to do any act necessary in the construction of its road. And said party appealing shall give bonds with sufficient surety or sureties, for the payment of any costs that may arise upon such appeal. And in case the party appealing does not obtain a more favorable verdict, such party shall pay the whole cost incurred by the appellee, as well as its own. And the payment into court for the use of the owner or claimant, of a sum equal to that finally awarded shall be held to vest in said company the title of said land, and the right to use and occupy the same for the construction, maintaining, and operating of the road of said company. And in case any of the lands to be taken as aforesaid shall be held by any person residing without the territory, or subject to any legal disability, the court may appoint a proper person who shall give bonds with sufficient surety or sureties, for the faithful execution of his trust, and who may represent in court the person disqualified or absent as aforesaid, when the same proceeding shall be had in reference to the appraisal of the premises to be taken, and with the same effect as have been already described. And the title of the company to the land taken by virtue of this act shall not be affected nor impaired by reason of any failure by any guardian to discharge faithfully his trust. And in case it shall be necessary for either of the said companies to enter upon lands which are unoccupied, and of which there is no apparent owner or claimant, it may proceed to take and use the same for the purpose of its said railroad, and may institute proceedings in manner described for the purpose of ascertaining the value of, and acquiring a title to, the same; and the court may determine the kind of notice to be served on such owner or owners, and may in its discretion appoint an agent or guardian to represent such owner or owners in case of his or their incapacity or non-appearance. But in case no claimant shall appear within six years from the time of the opening of said road across any land, all claims to damages against said company shall be barred. It shall be competent for the legal guardian of any infant, or any other person under guardianship, to agree with the proper company as to damages sustained by reason of the taking of any lands of any such person under disability, as aforesaid, for the use as aforesaid; and upon such agreement being made, and approved by the court having supervision of the official acts of said guardian, the said guardian shall have full power to make and execute a conveyance thereof to the said company which shall vest the title thereto in the said company. [13 Stat. L. 357.]

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That section three of said act be hereby amended by striking out the word "five," where the same occurs in said section, and by inserting in lieu thereof the word "ten;" and by striking out the word "ten," where the same occurs in said section, and by inserting in lieu thereof the word "twenty." And section seven of said act is hereby amended by striking out the word "fifteen," where the same occurs in said section, and inserting in lieu thereof the word "twenty-five." And the term "mineral land," wherever the same occurs in this act, and the act to which this is an amendment, shall not be construed to include coal and iron land. And any lands granted by this act or the act to which this is an amendment, shall not defeat or impair any preemption, homestead, swamp land, or other lawful claim, nor include any government reservation or mineral lands, or the improvements of any bona fide settler, or any lands returned and denominated as mineral lands, and the timber necessary to support his said improvement as a miner, or agriculturalist, to be ascertained under such rules as have been or may be established by the commissioner of the general land-office, in conformity with the provisions of the preëmption laws: Provided, That the quantity thus exempted by the operation of this act, and the act to which this act is an amendment, shall not exceed one hundred and sixty acres for each settler who claims as an agriculturalist, and such quantity for each settler who claims as a miner, as the said commissioner may establish by general regulation: Provided, also, That the phrase "but where the same shall contain timber, the timber thereon is hereby granted to said company," in the proviso to said section three, shall not apply to the timber growing or being on any land farther than ten miles from the centre line of any one of said roads or branches mentioned in said act, or in this act. And all lands shall be excluded from the operation of this act, and of the act to which this act is an amendment, which were located, or selected to be located, under the provisions of an act entitled "an act donating lands to the several states and territories which may provide colleges for the benefit of agriculture and the mechanic arts," approved July second, eighteen hundred and sixty two, and notice thereof given at the proper land-office. [13 Stat. L. 358.]

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the time for designating the general route of said railroad, and of filing the map of the same, and the time for the completion of that part of the railroads required by the terms of said act of each company, be, and the same is hereby, extended one year from the time in said act designated; and that the Central Pacific Railroad Company of California shall be required to complete twenty-five miles of their said road in each year thereafter, and the whole to the state line within four years, and that only one half of the compensation for services rendered for the government by said companies shall be required to be applied to the payment of the bonds issued by the government in aid of the construction of said roads. [13 Stat. L. 358.]

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the proviso to section four of said act is hereby modified as follows, viz: And the President of the United States is hereby authorized, at any time after the passage of this act, to appoint for each and every of said roads three commissioners, as provided for in the act to which this is amendatory; and the verified statement of the president of the California company, required by said section four, shall be filed in the office of the United States surveyor-general for the State of California, instead of being presented to the President of the United States; and the said surveyor-general shall thereupon notify the said commissioners of the filing of such statement, and the said commissioners shall thereupon proceed to examine the portion of said railroad and telegraph line so completed, and make their report thereon to the President of the United States, as provided by the act of which this is amendatory. And such statement may be filed, and such railroad and telegraph line examined and reported on, by the said commissioners, and the requisite amount of bonds may be issued and the lands appertaining thereto may be set apart, located, entered, and patented, as provided in this act and the act to which this is amendatory upon the construction by said railroad company of California of any portion of not less than twenty consecutive miles of their said railroad and telegraph line, upon the certificate of said commissioners that such portion is completed as required by the act to which this is amendatory. And section ten of the act of which this is amendatory is hereby amended by inserting, after the words "United States," in the last clause, the words "and states intervening." [13 Stat. L. 359.]

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That so much of section seventeen of said act as provides for a reservation by the government of a portion of the bonds to be issued to aid in the construction of the said railroads is hereby repealed. And the failure of any one company to comply fully with the conditions and requirements of this act, and the act to which this is amendatory, shall not work a forfeiture of the rights, privileges, or franchise of any other company or companies that shall have complied with the same. [13 Stat. L. 359.]

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That for the purpose of facilitating the work on said railroad, and of enabling the said company as early as practicable to commence the grading of said railroad in the region of the mountains, between the eastern base of the Rocky Mountains and the western base of the Sierra Nevada Mountains, so that the same may be finally completed within the time required by law, it is hereby provided that whenever the chief engineer of the said company, and said commissioners, shall certify that a certain proportion of the work required required to prepare the road for the superstructure on any such section of twenty miles is done, (which said certificate shall be duly verified,) the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and required, upon the delivery of such certificate, to issue to said company a proportion of said bonds, not exceeding two thirds of the amount of bonds authorized to be issued under the provisions of the act, to aid in the construction of such section of twenty miles, nor in any case exceeding two thirds of the value of the work done, the remaining one third to remain until the said section is fully completed and certified by the commissioners appointed by the President, according to the terms and provisions of the said act; and no such bonds shall issue to the Union Pacific Railroad Company for work done west of Salt Lake City under this section, more than three hundred miles in advance of the completed continuous line of said railroad from the point of beginning on the one hundredth meridian of longitude. [13 Stat. L. 359.]

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That to enable any one of said corporations to make convenient and necessary connections with other roads, it is hereby authorized to establish and maintain all necessary ferries upon and across the Missouri River and other rivers which its road may pass in its course; and authority is hereby given said corporation to construct bridges over said Missouri River, and all other rivers for the convenience of said road: Provided, That any bridge or bridges it may construct over the Missouri River, or any other navigable river on the line of said road, shall be constructed with suitable and proper draws for the passage of steamboats, and shall be built, kept, and maintained, at the expense of said company in such manner as not to impair the usefulness of said rivers for navigation to any greater extent than such structures of the most approved character necessarily do: And provided, further, That any company authorized by this act to construct its road and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the initial point aforesaid, may construct its road and telegraph line so as to connect with the Union Pacific Railroad at any point westwardly of such initial point, in case such company shall deem such westward connection more practicable or desirable; and in aid of the construction of so much of its road and telegraph line as shall be a departure from the route hereinbefore provided for its road, such company shall be entitled to all the benefits; and be subject to all the conditions and restrictions, of this act: Provided, further, however, That the bonds of the United States shall not be issued to such company for a greater amount than is hereinbefore provided, if the same had united with the Union Pacific Railroad on the 100th degree of longitude; nor shall such company be entitled to receive any greater amount of alternate sections of public lands than are also herein provided. [13 Stat. L. 360.]

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That section five of said act be so modified and amended that the Union Pacific Railroad Company, the Central Pacific Railroad Company, and any other company authorized to participate in the construction of said road, may, on the completion of each section of said road, as provided in this act and the act to which this act is an amendment, issue their first mortgage bonds on their respective railroad and telegraph lines to an amount not exceeding the amount of the bonds of the United States, and of even tenor and date, time of maturity, rate and character of interest with the bonds authorized to be issued to said railroad companies respectively. And the lien of the United States bonds shall be subordinate to that of the bonds of any or either of said companies hereby authorized to be issued on their respective roads, property, and equipments, except as to the provisions of the sixth section of the act to which this act is an amendment, relating to the transmission of dispatches and the transportation of mails, troops, munitions of war, supplies and public stores for the government of the United States. And said section is further amended by striking out the word "forty," and inserting in lieu thereof the words "on

SEC. 11. And be it further enacted, That if any of the railroad companies entitled to bonds of the United States, or to issue their first mortgage bonds herein provided for, has, at the time of the approval of this act, issued, or shall thereafter issue, any of its own bonds or securities in such form or manner as in law or equity to entitle the same to priority or preference of payment to the said guaranteed bonds, or said first mortgage bonds, the amount of such corporate bonds outstanding and unsatisfied, or uncanceled, shall be deducted from the amount of such government and first mortgage bonds which the company may be entitled to receive and issue; and such an amount only of such government bonds and such first mortgage bonds shall be granted or permitted, as added to such outstanding, unsatisfied, or uncanceled bonds of the company shall make up the whole amount per mile to which the company would otherwise have been entitled: And provided further, That before any bonds shall be so given by the United States, the company claiming them shall present to the Secretary of the Treasury an affidavit of the president and secretary of the company, to be sworn to before the judge of a court of record, setting forth whether said company has issued any such bonds or securities, and, if so, particularly describing the same, and such other evidence as the secretary may require, so as to enable him to make the deduction herein required; and such affidavit shall then be filed and deposited in the office of the Secretary of the Interior. And any person swearing falsely to any such affidavits, shall be deemed guilty of perjury, and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished as aforesaid: Provided, also, That no land granted by this act shall be conveyed to any party or parties, and no bonds shall be issued to any company or companies, party or parties, on account of any road or part thereof, made prior to the passage of the act to which this act is an amendment, or made subsequent thereto under the provisions of any act or acts other than this act, and the act amended by this act. [13 Stat. L. 360.]

SEC. 12. And be it further enacted, That the Leavenworth, Pawnee, and Western Railroad Company, now known as the Union Pacific Railroad Company, eastern division, shall build the railroad from the mouth of Kansas River, by the way of Leavenworth, or, if that be not deemed the best route, then the said company shall, within two years, build a railroad from the city of Leavenworth to unite with the main stem at or near the city of Lawrence; but to aid in the construction of said branch the said company shall not be entitled to any bonds. And if the Union Pacific Railroad Company shall not be proceeding in good faith to build the said railroad through the territories when the Leavenworth, Pawnee, and Western Railroad Company, now known as the Union Pacific Railroad Company, eastern division, shall have completed their road to the hundredth degree of longitude, then the last-named company may proceed to make said road westward until it meets and connects with the Central Pacific Railroad Company on the same line. And the said railroad from the mouth of Kansas River to the one hundredth meridian of longitude shall be made by the way of Lawrence and Topeka, or on the bank of the Kansas River opposite said towns: Provided, That no bonds shall be issued or land certified by the United States to any person or company, for the construction of any part of the main trunk-line of said railroad west of the one hundredth meridian of longitude and east of the Rocky Mountains, until said road shall be completed from or near Omaha, on the Missouri River, to the said one hundredth meridian of longitude. [13 Stat. L. 361.]

SEC. 13. And be it further enacted, That at and after the next election of directors, the number of directors to be elected by the stockholders shall be fifteen; and the number of directors to be appointed by the President shall be five; and the President shall appoint three additional directors to serve until the next regular election, and thereafter five directors. At least one of said government directors shall be placed on each of the standing committees of said company, and at least one on every special committee that may be appointed. The government directors shall, from time to time, report to the Secretary of the Interior, in answer to any inquiries he may make of them, touching the condition, management, and progress of the work, and shall communicate to the Secretary of the Interior, at any time, such information as should be in the possession of the department. They shall, as often as may be necessary to a full knowledge of the condition and management of the line, visit all portions of the line of road, whether built or surveyed; and while absent from home, attending to their duties as directors, shall be paid their actual travelling expenses, and be allowed and paid such reasonable compensation for their time actually employed as the board of directors may decide. [13 Stat. L. 361.]

SEC. 14. And be it further enacted, That the next election for directors of said railroad shall be held on the first Wednesday of October next, at the office of said company in the city of New York, between the hours of ten o'clock a. m. and four o'clock p. m. of said day; and all subsequent regular elections shall be held annually thereafter at the same place; and the directors shall hold their offices for one year, and until their successors are qualified. [13 Stat. L. 362.]

SEC. 15. And be it further enacted, That the several companies authorized to construct the aforesaid roads, are hereby required to operate and use said roads and telegraph for all purposes of communication, travel, and transportation, so far as the public and the government are concerned, as one continuous line; and, in such operation and use, to afford and secure to each equal advantages and facilities as to rates, time, and transportation, without any discrimination of any kind in favor of the road or business of any or either of said companies, or adverse to the road or business of any or either of the others, and it shall not be lawful for the proprietors of any line of telegraph, authorized by this act, or the act amended by this act to refuse, or fail to convey for all persons requiring the transmission of news and messages of like character, on pain of forfeiting to the person injured for each offence, the sum of one hundred dollars, and such other damage as he may have suffered on account of said refusal or failure, to be sued for and recovered in any court of the United States, or of any state or territory of competent jurisdiction. [13 Stat. L. 362.]

SEC. 16. And be it further enacted, That any two or more of the companies authorized to participate in the benefits of this act, are hereby authorized at any time to unite and consolidate their organizations, as the same may or shall be, upon such terms and conditions, and in such manner as they may agree upon, and as shall not be incompatible with this act, or the laws of the state or states in which the roads of such companies may be, and to assume and adopt such corporate name and style as they may agree upon, with a capital stock not to exceed the actual cost of the roads so to be consolidated, and shall file a copy of such consolidation in the Department of the Interior; and thereupon such organization, so formed and consolidated, shall succeed to, possess, and be entitled to receive from the government of the United States, all and singular the grants, benefits, immunities, guarantees, acts, and things to be done and performed, and be subject to the same terms, conditions, restrictions, and requirements which said companies respectively, at the time of such consolidation, are or may be entitled or subject to under this act, in place and substitution of said companies so consolidated respectively. And all other provisions of this act, so far as applicable, relating or in any manner appertaining to the companies so consolidated, or either thereof, shall apply and be of force as to such consolidated organization. And in case upon the completion by such consolidated organization of the roads, or either of them, of the companies so consolidated, any other of the road or roads of either of the other companies authorized as aforesaid, (and forming, or intended or necessary to form, a portion of a continuous line from each of the several points on the Missouri River, hereinbefore designated, to the Pacific Coast,) shall not have constructed the number of miles of its said road within the time herein required, such consolidated organization is hereby authorized to continue the construction of its road and telegraph in the general direction and route upon which such incomplete or unconstructed road is hereinbefore authorized to be built, until such continuation of the road of such consolidated organization shall reach the constructed road and telegraph of said other company, and at such point to connect and unite therewith; and for and in aid thereof the said consolidated organization may do and perform, in reference to such portion of road and telegraph as shall so be in continuation of its constructed road and telegraph, and to the construction and equipment thereof, all and singular, the several acts and things hereinbefore provided, authorized, or granted to be done by the company hereinbefore authorized to construct and equip the same, and shall be entitled to similar and like grants, benefits, immunities, guarantees, acts, and things to be done and performed by the government of the United States, by the President of the United States, by the Secretaries of the Treasury and Interior, and by commissioners in reference to such company, and to such portion of the road hereinbefore authorized to be constructed by it, and upon the like and similar terms and conditions, so far as the same are applicable thereto. And said consolidated company shall pay to said defaulting company the value to be estimated by competent engineers of all the work done and material furnished by said defaulting company, which may be adopted and used by said consolidated company in the progress of the work under the provisions of this section: Provided, nevertheless, That said defaulting company may at any time, before receiving pay for its said work and material, as hereinbefore provided, on its own election, pay said consolidated company the value of the work done and material furnished by said consolidated company, to be estimated by competent engineers, necessary for, and used in, the construction of the road of said defaulting company, and resume the control of its said road; and all the rights, benefits, and privileges which shall be acquired, possessed, or exercised, pursuant to this section, shall be to that extent an abatement of the rights, benefits, and privileges hereinbefore granted to such other company. And in case any company authorized thereto, shall not enter into such consolidated organization, such company, upon the completion of its road as hereinbefore provided, shall be entitled to, and is hereby authorized to, continue and extend the same under the circumstances, and in accordance with the provisions of this section, and to have all the benefits thereof, as fully and completely as are herein provided, touching such consolidated organization. And in case more than one such consolidated organization shall be made, pursuant to this act, the terms and conditions of this act, hereinbefore recited as to one, shall apply in like manner, force, and effect to the other. Provided, however, That rights and interests at any time acquired by one such consolidated organization, shall not be impaired by another thereof. It is further provided that, should the Central Pacific Railroad Company of California complete their line to the eastern line of the State of California, before the line of the Union Pacific Railroad Company shall have been extended westward so as to meet the line of the said first-named company, said first-named company may extend their line of road eastward one hundred and fifty miles on the established route, so as to meet and connect with the line of the Union Pacific road, complying in all respects with the provisions and restrictions of this act as to said Union Pacific road, and upon doing so, shall enjoy all the rights, privileges, and benefits conferred by this act on said Union Pacific Railroad Company. [13 Stat. L. 362.]

SEC. 17. And be it further enacted, That so much of section fourteen of said act as relates to a branch from Sioux City be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows: That whenever a line of railroad shall be completed through the States of Iowa, or Minnesota, to Sioux City, such company, now organized or may hereafter be organized under the laws of Iowa, Minnesota, Dakota, or Nebraska, as the President of the United States, by its request, may designate or approve for that purpose, shall construct and operate a line of railroad and telegraph from Sioux City, upon the most direct and practicable route, to such a point on, and so as to connect with, the Iowa branch of the Union Pacific Railroad from Omaha, or the Union Pacific Railroad, as such company may select, and on the same terms and conditions as are provided in this act and the act to which this is an amendment, for the construction of the said Union and Pacific Railroad and telegraph line and branches; and said company shall complete the same at the rate of fifty miles per year: Provided, That said Union Pacific Railroad Company shall be, and is hereby, released from the construction of said branch. And said company constructing said branch shall not be entitled to receive in bonds an amount larger than the said Union Pacific Railroad Company would be entitled to receive if it had constructed the branch under this act and the act to which this is an amendment; but said company shall be entitled to receive alternate sections of land for ten miles in width on each side of the same along the whole length of said branch: And provided, further, That if a railroad should not be completed to Sioux City, across Iowa or Minnesota, within eighteen months from the date of this act, then said company designated by the President, as aforesaid, may commence, continue, and complete the construction of said branch as contemplated by the provisions of this act: Provided, however, That if the said company so designated by the President as aforesaid shall not complete the said branch from Sioux City to the Pacific Railroad within ten years from the passage of this act, then, and in that case, all of the railroad which shall have been constructed by said company shall be forfeited to, and become the property of, the United States. [13 Stat. L. 363.]

SEC. 18. And be it further enacted, That the Burlington and Missouri River Railroad Company, a corporation organized under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Iowa, be, and hereby is, authorized to extend i[t]s road through the Territory of Nebraska from the point where it strikes the Missouri River, south of the mouth of the Platte River, to some point not further west than the one hundredth meridian of west longitude, so as to connect, by the most practicable route, with the main trunk of the Union Pacific Railroad, or that part of it which runs from Omaha to the said one hundredth meridian of west longitude. And, for the purpose of enabling said Burlington and Missouri River Railroad Company to construct that portion of their road herein authorized, the right of way through the public lands is hereby granted to said company for the construction of said road. And the right, power, and authority is hereby given to said company to take from the public lands adjacent to the line of said road, earth, stone, timber, and other materials for the construction thereof. Said right of way is granted to said company to the extent of two hundred feet where it may pass over the public lands, including all necessary grounds for stations, buildings, workshops, depots, machine shops, switches, side-tracks, turntables, and water-stations. And the United States shall extinguish, as rapidly as may be, consistent with public policy and the welfare of the said Indians, the Indian titles to all lands falling under the operation of this section and required for the said right of way and grant of land herein made. [13 Stat. L. 364.]

SEC. 19. And be it further enacted, That for the purpose of aiding in the construction of said road, there be, and hereby is, granted to the said Burlington and Missouri River Railroad Company, every alternate section of public land (excepting mineral lands as provided in this act) designated by odd numbers, to the amount of ten alternate sections per mile on each side of said road, on the line thereof, and not sold, reserved, or otherwise disposed of by the United States, and to which a preëmption or homestead claim may not have attached at the time the line of said road is definitely fixed: Provided, That said company shall accept this grant within one year from the passage of this act, by filing such acceptance with the Secretary of the Interior, and shall also establish the line of said road, and file a map thereof with the Secretary of the Interior within one year of the date of said acceptance, when the said Secretary shall withdraw the lands embraced in this grant from market. [13 Stat. L. 364.]

SEC. 20. And be it further enacted, That whenever said Burlington and Missouri River Railroad Company shall have completed twenty consecutive miles of the road mentioned in the foregoing section, in the manner provided for other roads mentioned in this act, and the act to which this is an amendment, the President of the United States shall appoint three commissioners to examine and report to him in relation thereto; and if it shall appear to him that twenty miles of said road have been completed as required by this act, then, upon certificate of said commissioner[s] to that effect, patents shall issue conveying the right and title to said lands to said company on each side of said road, as far as the same is completed, to the amount aforesaid; and such examination, report and conveyance, by patents, shall continue from time to time, in like manner, until said road shall have been completed. And the President shall appoint said commissioners, fill vacancies in said commission, as provided in relation to other roads mentioned in the act to which this is an amendment. And the said company shall be entitled to all the privileges and immunities granted to the Hannibal and Saint Joseph's Railroad Company by the said last-mentioned act, so far as the same may be applicable: Provided, That no government bonds shall be issued to the said Burlington and Missouri River Railroad Company to aid in the construction of said extension of its road. And provided, further, That said extension shall be completed within the period of ten years from the passage of this act. [13 Stat. L. 364.]

SEC. 21. And be it further enacted, That before any land granted by this act shall be conveyed to any company or party entitled thereto under this act, there shall first be paid into the treasury of the United States, the cost of surveying, selecting, and conveying the same, by the said company or party in interest, as the titles shall be required by said company, which amount shall, without any further appropriation, stand to the credit of the proper account, to be used by the commissioner of the general land-office for the prosecution of the survey of the public lands along the line of said road, and so from year to year until the whole shall be completed, as provided under the provisions of this act. [13 Stat. L. 365.]

SEC. 22. And be it further enacted, That Congress may, at any time, alter, amend, or repeal this act. [13 Stat. L. 365.]

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted. That the said Union Pacific Railway Company, eastern division, shall extend its railroad and telegraph to a connection at the city of Den-

And all the provisions of law for the operation of the Union Pacific railroad, its branches and connections, as a continuous line, without discrimination, shall apply the same as if the road from Denver to Cheyenne had been constructed by the said Union Pacific Railway Company, eastern division; but nothing herein shall authorize the said eastern division company to operate the road or fix the rates of tariff for the Denver Pacific Railway and Telegraph Company. [15 Stat. L. 324.]

Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That said companies are hereby authorized to mortgage their respective portions of said

Sec. 5257. [Connection of other roads.] Any railroad company now or hereafter incorporated under any law of the United States, or of any State, which has been or may be organized by an act of Congress, may connect its road with the Union Pacific Railroad, or any of its branches. [R. S.]

Act of July 1, 1862, ch. 120, 12 Stat. L. 496.

Right of state to authorize crossing.—The most that can be claimed under this section is, that Congress intended that no road should be prevented by state legislation from making a connection with the Pacific railroads, if, in the judgment of the President, the necessities of the general government required such connection. It would be a strained and unnatural construction to hold that retaining a right to establish a connection carried with it an implied denial of the power of the state to authorize a crossing. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Leavenworth, etc., R. Co., (1887) 29 Fed. Rep. 728.

Bridge over Missouri river.—The bridge constructed by the Union Pacific Railroad Company over the Missouri river, between Omaha, in Nebraska, and Council Bluffs, in Iowa, is a part of the railroad. The company was authorized to build it only for the use of the road, and is bound to operate and run the whole road, including the bridge, as one connected and continuous line. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Hall, (1875) 91 U. S. 343.

Sec. 5258. [Interstate communication.] Every railroad company in the United States, whose road is operated by steam, its successors and assigns, is hereby authorized to carry upon and over its road, boats, bridges, and ferries, all passengers, troops, Government supplies, mails, freight, and property on their way from any State to another State, and to receive compensation therefor, and to connect with roads of other States so as to form continuous lines for the transportation of the same to the place of destination. But this section shall not affect any stipulation between the Government of the United States and any railroad company for transportation or fares without compensation, nor impair or change the conditions imposed by the terms of any act granting lands to any such company to aid in the construction of its road, nor shall it be construed to authorize any railroad company to build any new road or connection with any other road without authority from the State in which such railroad or connection may be proposed. And Congress may at any time alter, amend, or repeal this section. [R. S.]

Act of June 15, 1866, ch. 124, 14 Stat. L. 66.

The purpose and policy of the Congress has been constantly to promote and often to require the formation and operation of continuous lines of transportation. Almost without exception it has authorized, and generally has required, the owners of railroad bridges built under its authority to allow the use of their bridges and tracks for the passage of trains of connecting companies. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 1892) 51 Fed. Rep. 309.

It is impossible to ignore the great public policy in favor of continuous lines thus declared by Congress, and it is in effectuation of this policy that such business arrangements as will make such connections effective are made. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1896) 163 U. S. 564.

Effect on admiralty jurisdiction.—This section has no bearing upon the question of the jurisdiction of the courts of admiralty. It was passed by Congress under the commercial clause of the Constitution, and authorizes continuous lines of railroad from one state to another state, and thus secures interstate commerce against obstacles even if attempted by state action; and it was not intended to deprive courts of admiralty of any jurisdiction which they otherwise had. The question of jurisdiction is to be considered without regard to this section of the statutes. The St. Louis, (1891) 48 Fed. Rep. 312.

Effect on private contracts.—“The Act of June 15, 1866 (sec. 5258, R. S.), was never intended to invade the domain of private contracts between common carriers, which were valid when made, and are not in conflict with the provisions of the law. In Dubuque, etc., R. Co. v. Richmond, (1873) 19 Wall. (U. S.) 590, the Supreme Court says of such contracts, ‘that the observance of good faith between parties, and the upholding of private contracts and enforcing their obligations, are matters of higher moment and importance to the public welfare, and are far more reaching in their consequences, than the public policy sought to be established in the facilitation of commercial intercourse among the states, which the Act of June 15, 1866, aimed to promote.’” Kentucky, etc., Bridge Co. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., (1889) 37 Fed. Rep. 567.

The power to regulate commerce among the several states was vested in Congress in order to secure equality and freedom in commercial intercourse against discriminating state legislation. It was not intended that the power should be exercised so as to interfere with private contracts not designed at the time they were made to create impediments to such intercourse. Dubuque, etc., R. Co. v. Richmond, (1873) 19 Wall. (U. S.) 584.

Through routes and rates.—This section imposes no duty, but merely permits or authorizes the carriage of traffic from one state to another, and to that end the formation of continuous lines, evidently by mutual agreement. The section was in full force when the cases of Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Denver, etc., R. Co., (1884) 110 U. S. 668, and Dubuque, etc., R. Co. v. Richmond, (1873) 19 Wall. (U. S.) 584, were decided, and was not considered by the Supreme Court as conferring any right to a through route and a joint through rating. It is not a public duty imposed by the Act to regulate commerce that every common carrier, subject to the provisions of that law, shall concede or afford through routing and through rates to all connected lines, whenever and so long as it voluntarily makes or enters into such arrangements with any connecting lines. Kentucky, etc., Bridge Co.

v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., (1889) 37 Fed. Rep. 567.

Compelling performance of duties by state.—“The state may doubtless compel the railroad company to perform the duty imposed by its charter of carrying passengers and goods between its termini within the state. But so long at least as that duty is adequately performed by the company, the state cannot, under the guise of compelling its performance, interfere with the performance of paramount duties to which the company has been subjected by the Constitution and laws of the United States.” Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Illinois, (1896) 163 U. S. 142.

State regulations for public convenience.—The above statutory provision was not intended to interfere with the authority of the states to enact such regulations, with respect at least to a railroad corporation of its own creation, as were not directed against interstate commerce, but which only incidentally or remotely affected such commerce, and were not in themselves regulations of interstate commerce, but were designed reasonably to subserve the convenience of the public. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co. v. Ohio, (1899) 173 U. S. 285, and cases therein cited.

State laws for security of passengers.—The authority conferred upon railroad companies engaged in commerce among the states, whatever may be the extent of such authority, does not interfere in any degree with the passage by the states of laws having for their object the personal security of passengers while traveling within their respective limits from one state to another on cars propelled by steam. New York, etc., R. Co. v. New York, (1897) 165 U. S. 628.

The state may make reasonable regulations to secure the safety of passengers even on interstate trains, within its borders. But the state can do nothing which will directly burden or impede the interstate traffic of the company or impair the usefulness of the facilities for such traffic. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Illinois, (1896) 163 U. S. 142 (citing Smith v. Alabama, (1888) 124 U. S. 465; Stone v. Farmers L. & T. Co., (1885) 116 U. S. 307; Dubuque, etc., R. Co. v. Richmond, (1873) 19 Wall. (U. S.) 584).

State law excluding diseased cattle.—The authority given by that statute to railroad companies to carry “freight and property” over their respective roads from one state to another state did not authorize a railroad company to carry into a state cattle known, or which by due diligence might be known, to be in such condition as to impart or communicate disease to the domestic cattle of such state; and a statute of Kansas prescribing as a rule of civil conduct that a person or corporation should not bring into that state cattle known, or which by proper diligence could be known, to be capable of communicating disease to domestic cattle, could not be regarded as beyond the necessities of the case nor as interfering with any right intended to be given or recognized by this section. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Haber, (1898) 169 U. S. 613.

Sec. 5259. [Compensation of directors, etc., appointed by the United States.] Whenever, in any grant of land or other subsidies, made or hereafter to be made, to railroads or other corporations, the United States has reserved the right, or shall reserve it, to appoint directors, engineers, commissioners, or other agents to examine the roads, or act in conjunction with other officers of such company or companies, all the costs, charges, and pay of such directors, engineers, commissioners, or agents shall be paid by the respective companies. Such directors, engineers, commissioners, or agents shall be paid for such services the sum of ten dollars per day, for each and every day actually and necessarily employed, and ten cents per mile for each and every mile actually and necessarily traveled, in discharging the duties required of them, which per diem and mileage shall be in full compensation for such services. In case any company shall refuse or neglect to make such payments, no more patents for lands or other subsidies shall be issued to such company until these requirements are complied with. [R. S.]

Powers of government directors.—Congress did not vest in the government directors any peculiar powers. They had the same powers as other directors and no more; but as government directors they were to make reports to the secretary of the interior in respect of the affairs and matters mentioned in the Act of 1864. They could not, either by a negative vote or by absenting themselves from the meeting, prevent the transaction of the necessary business of the company in which they were entitled to participate on the same terms as their associates. Congress did not look to any action of theirs for the protection of the public interests, but sought to secure those interests by specific legislation. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1896) 163 U. S. 564.

Effect on control of stockholders.—This provision for government directors did not take the corporation out of the general rule, that, except in cases where the charter imposes a limitation, the stockholders are the proper parties to take final action in the management of the corporate affairs. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1896) 163 U. S. 564.

Sec. 5260. [Secretary of Treasury to withhold payments to certain railroads.] The Secretary of the Treasury is directed to withhold all payments to any railroad company and its assigns, on account of freights or transportation over their respective roads of any kind, to the amount of payments made by the United States for interest upon bonds of the United States issued to any such company, and which shall not have been re-imbursed, together with the five per centum of net earnings due and unapplied, as provided by law. [R. S.]

Effect of other Acts.—The provisions in the Act of March 3, 1877, ch. 101, requiring certain contracts for the transportation of goods for Indian tribes, etc., to be let to the lowest bidder after advertisement, does not supersede or repeal this section touching payments to land-grant railroads for services to the government. Whenever it is practicable to obtain for the government the benefit of the Act of 1877 without yielding the benefits secured to it by the other legislation referred to, this should be done. (1884) 18 Op. Atty-Gen. 41.

Prior ascertainment of law applicable.—Under sections 5260 and 5261, R. S., it is sufficient if previous to the payment of claims for freight and transportation over the railroads of companies to which the United States have issued bonds, the law applicable thereto has been ascertained by a judgment of the Court of Claims, or upon appeal to the Supreme Court. Where the law is thus ascertained in one case, it may be acted upon in all similar cases without further litigation. (1883) 17 Op. Atty-Gen. 512.

Payments included.—The expression "is directed to withhold all payments" refers in the first place to the payments due to such companies at the time of the passage of the Act, but includes also, equitably, all payments thereafter of like sort, the principles governing which shall not previously have been ascertained by the Court of Claims, or upon appeal by the Supreme Court. (1883) 17 Op. Atty-Gen. 512.

Accounts of Sioux City and Pacific railroad.—In the settlement of the accounts of the Sioux City and Pacific Railroad Company (whose road was in part constructed with the aid of subsidy bonds issued under the Acts of July 1, 1862, ch. 120, and July 2, 1864, ch. 216) for government transportation over the subsidized portion of its road, it was advised that the direction in the second section of the Act of March 3, 1873, ch. 266 (sec. 5260, R. S.), "to withhold all payments," etc., was then (Nov. 12, 1886), no longer applicable thereto; that only one-half the amount of compensation due the company for such transportation should be withheld, to be applied as required by the Act of July 2, 1864; and that the remaining one-half should be paid over to the company. (1886) 18 Op. Atty-Gen. 503.

Transportation over Kansas Pacific railroad.—All compensation due for transportation for the quartermaster's department performed over the Kansas Pacific railroad (as well as over that portion which was not built with the aid of the government bonds) should be withheld. (1880) 16 Op. Atty-Gen. 516.

Transportation over Fremont, Elkhorn, and Missouri Valley railroad.—The secretary of the treasury has authority to withhold payments for transportation services rendered by the Sioux City and Pacific Railroad Company to the United States over the Fremont, Elkhorn, and Missouri Valley railroad, a road leased by that company, in case of default on the part of the company to reimburse the government for interest paid upon the bonds of the United States issued thereto. (1874) 14 Op. Atty-Gen. 375.

Bridge at Omaha.—This section extends to the road of the Union Pacific Company over the bridge at Omaha; and when the circumstances exist which bring it into operation—viz., payment of interest by the government and failure to reimburse by the company—all compensation on account of freight and transportation over the bridge is to be withheld; but when those circumstances do not exist the provision in the Act of 1864 requiring a reservation of one-half compensation becomes applicable to such service. Accordingly, one-half of the compensation for transportation performed for the government by said company over its bridge at Omaha should be withheld and applied to the payment of the bonds issued by the government to the company, except in the case provided for in this section, when all compensation for such service must be withheld. (1873) 14 Op. Atty-Gen. 232.

An act providing for the collection of moneys due the United States from the Pacific Railroad Companies.

[Collection of percentage of net earnings of Pacific railroads.] That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and hereby is, directed to require payment of the railroad-companies, their successors and assigns, or the successors or assigns of any or either of said companies, of all sums of money due or to become due, the United States for the five per centum of the net earnings provided for by the act entitled "An act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph-line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes" approved July first, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, or by any other act or acts in relation to the companies therein named, or any other such company or companies, and in case either of said railroad-companies shall neglect or refuse to pay the same within sixty days after demand therefor made upon the treasurer of such railroad company, the Secretary of the Treasury shall certify that fact to the Attorney-General, who shall thereupon institute the necessary suits and proceedings to collect and otherwise obtain redress in respect of the same in the proper circuit courts of the United States, and prosecute the same, with all convenient dispatch to a final determination. [18 Stat. L. 200.]

An act to alter and amend the act entitled "An act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes", approved July first, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, and also to alter and amend the act of Congress approved July second, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, in amendment of said first-named act.

[Preamble.] Whereas, on the first day of July, anno Domini eighteen hundred and sixty-two, Congress passed an act entitled "An act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes"; and

Whereas afterward, on the second day of July, anno Domini eighteen hundred and sixty-four, Congress passed an act in amendment of said first-mentioned act; and

Whereas the Union Pacific Railroad Company, named in said acts, and under the authority thereof, undertook to construct a railway, after the passage thereof, over some part of the line mentioned in said acts; and

Whereas, under the authority of the said two acts, the Central Pacific Railroad Company of California, a corporation existing under the laws of the State of California, undertook to construct a railway, after the passage of said acts, over some part of the line mentioned in said acts; and

Whereas the United States, upon demand of said Central Pacific Railroad Company, have heretofore issued, by way of loan and as provided in said acts, to and for the benefit of said company, in aid of the purposes named in said acts, the bonds of the United States, payable in thirty years from the date thereof, with interest at six per centum per annum, payable half yearly, to the amount of twenty-five million eight hundred and eighty-five thousand one hundred and twenty dollars, which said bonds have been sold in the market or otherwise disposed of by said company; and

Whereas the said Central Pacific Company has issued and disposed of an amount of its own bonds equal to the amount so issued by the United States, and secured the same by mortgage, and which are, if lawfully issued and disposed of, a prior and paramount lien, in the respect mentioned in said acts, to that of the United States, as stated, and secured thereby; and

Whereas, after the passage of said acts, the Western Pacific Railroad Company, a corporation then existing under the laws of California, did, under the authority of Congress, become the assignee of the rights, duties and obligations of the said Central Pacific Railroad Company, as provided in the act of Congress passed on the third of March, anno Domini eighteen hundred and sixty-five, and did, under the authority of the said act and of the acts aforesaid, construct a railroad from the city of San Jose to the city of Sacramento, in California, and did demand and receive from the United States the sum of one million nine hundred and seventy thousand five hundred and sixty dollars of the bonds of the United States, of the description before mentioned as issued to the Central Pacific Company, and in the same manner and under the provisions of said acts; and upon and in respect of the bonds so issued to both said companies, the United States have paid interest to the sum of more than thirteen and a half million dollars, which has not been reimbursed; and

Whereas said Western Pacific Railroad Company has issued and disposed of an amount of its own bonds equal to the amount so issued by the United States to it, and secured the same by mortgage, which are, if lawfully issued and disposed of, a prior and paramount lien to that of the United States, as stated and secured thereby; and

Whereas said Western Pacific Railroad Company has since become merged in, and consolidated with, said Central Pacific Railroad Company, under the name of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, whereby the said Central Pacific Railroad Company has become liable to all the burdens, duties, and obligations before resting upon said Western Pacific Railroad Company; and divers other railroad companies have been merged in and consolidated with said Central Pacific Railroad Company; and

Whereas the United States, upon the demand of the said Union Pacific Railroad Company, have heretofore issued by way of loan to it and as provided in said acts, the bonds of the United States, payable in thirty years from the date thereof, with interest at six per centum per annum, payable half-yearly, the principal sums of which amount to twenty-seven million two hundred and thirty-six thousand five hundred and twelve dollars; on which the United States have paid over ten million dollars interest over and above all reimbursements; which said bonds have been sold in the market or otherwise disposed of by said corporation; and

Whereas said corporation has issued and disposed of an amount of its own bonds equal to the amounts so issued to it by the United States as aforesaid, and secured the same by mortgage, and which are, if lawfully issued and disposed of, a prior and paramount lien, in the respect mentioned in said acts, to that of the United States, as stated, and secured thereby; and

Whereas the total liabilities (exclusive of interest to accrue) to all creditors, including the United States, of the said Central Pacific Company, amount in the aggregate to more than ninety-six million dollars, and those of the said Union Pacific Railroad Company to more than eighty-eight million dollars; and

Whereas the United States, in view of the indebtedness and operations of said several railroad companies respectively, and of the disposition of their respective incomes, are not and cannot, without further legislation, be secure in their interests in and concerning said respective railroads and corporations, either as mentioned in said acts or otherwise; and

Whereas a due regard to the rights of said several companies respectively, as mentioned in said act of eighteen hundred and sixty-two, as well as just security to the United States in the premises, and in respect of all the matters set forth in said act, require that the said act of eighteen hundred and sixty-two be altered and amended as hereinafter enacted; and

Whereas, by reason of the premises also, as well as for other causes of public good and justice, the powers provided and reserved in said act of eighteen hundred and sixty-four for the amendment and alteration thereof ought also to be exercised as hereinafter enacted: Therefore,

[SEC. 1.] [Net earnings, how ascertained.] That the net earnings mentioned in said act of eighteen hundred and sixty-two, of said railroad companies respectively, shall be ascertained by deducting from the gross amount of their earnings respectively the necessary expenses actually paid within the year in operating the same and keeping the same in a state of repair, and also the sum paid by them respectively within the year in discharge of interest on their first mortgage bonds, whose lien has priority over the lien of the United States, and excluding from consideration all sums owing or paid by said companies respectively for interest upon any other portion of their indebtedness; and the foregoing provision shall be deemed and taken as an amendment of said act of eighteen hundred and sixty-four, as well as of said act of eighteen hundred and sixty-two. This section shall take effect on the thirtieth day of June next, and be applicable to all computations of net earnings thereafter; but it shall not affect any right of the United States or of either of said railroad companies existing prior thereto. [20 Stat. L. 58.]

Construed with earlier Acts.—The Acts of July 1, 1862, July 2, 1864, and May 7, 1878, all relate to the same subject. The latter Act is declared by its title to be amendatory of the first two, and its last section provides that each and every of its provisions shall be "held as in alteration and amendment" of the two Acts first mentioned. The three Acts are therefore to be construed together as one Act, and one part to be interpreted by another. U. S. v. Central Pac. R. Co., (1886) 118 U. S. 237.

Validity of Act.—Taken prospectively this Act is to be regarded as valid under the decision in Sinking-Fund Cases, (1878) 99 U. S. 700; U. S. v. Central Pac. R. Co., (1890) 140 U. S. 702.

The words "necessary expenses of operating" extend to the expenses of operating the road in accordance with the demands of the business coming to it, but limit the expenses to such as are conducive to that end and exclude those that are not. The Act accords with the rule previously laid down by the Supreme Court (99 U. S. 402). Union Pac. R. Co. v. U. S., (1885) 20 Ct. Cl. 70, affirmed (1886) 117 U. S. 355.

The "earnings" of the road include all the receipts arising from the company's operations as a railroad company, but not those from the public lands granted, nor fictitious receipts for the transportation of its own property. "Net earnings," within the meaning of the law, are ascertained by deducting from the gross earnings all the ordinary expenses of organizations and of operating the road and the expenditures made bona fide in improvements and paid out of earnings, and not by the issue of bonds or stock; but not deducting interest paid on any of the bonded debt of the company. Union Pac. R. Co. v. U. S., (1878) 99 U. S. 402. See also U. S. v. Central Pac. R. Co., (1878) 99 U. S. 449.

What expenditures to be deducted.—In the case of the Union Pac. R. Co. v. U. S., (1878) 99 U. S. 402, the Supreme Court decided that under the Act of 1862 in determining the net earnings there was to be deducted from the gross earnings expenditures which the company had actually paid out of its earnings for the following objects: 1, station buildings; 2, shops and fixtures; 3, equipment; 4, government commissioners; 5, fencing; 6, snow sheds and fences; 7, express outfit; 8, engineering; 9, bridging; 10, car shops and sheds; 11, roadway and track; 12, hotels; 13, tenements; 14, coal sheds; 15, Omaha depot buildings; 16, Omaha general offices; 17, real estate; 18, Laramie rolling mill; 19, waterworks. Union Pac. R. Co. v. U. S., (1885) 20 Ct. Cl. 70.

Expenses for betterments, etc.—In arriving at the net earnings of the railroad company certain expenses which were not for current expenses and repairs, but were for betterments and improvements on the road, its buildings and equipments, whereby the capital of the company invested in its works was increased in permanent value, may not be allowed under the provisions of the Thurman Act. U. S. v. Central Pac. R. Co., (1890) 140 U. S. 702.

Interest on "Omaha bridge bonds."—Interest on the bonds issued by the Union Pacific Railroad Company under the Act of Feb. 24, 1871, ch. 67, commonly known as the "Omaha bridge bonds," is not to be deducted from the gross earnings of that company in ascertaining its net earnings. (1879) 16 Op. Atty-Gen. 240.

SEC. 2. [Compensation from United States to be retained, etc.] That the whole amount of compensation which may, from time to time, be due to said several railroad companies respectively for services rendered for the Government shall be retained by the United States, one-half thereof to be presently applied to the liquidation of the interest paid and to be paid by the United States upon the bonds so issued by it as aforesaid, to each of said corporations severally, and the other half thereof to be turned into the sinking-fund herein-after provided for the uses therein mentioned. [20 Stat. L. 58.]

Purpose of section.—These and other provisions indicate the extent to which Congress deemed it necessary to make provision for the protection of the United States against liability on its bonds loaned to railroad companies for the purposes indicated in the Act of 1862. The security taken by the government was of course impaired by the Act of 1864, which subordinated the lien of the United States as originally declared to the first mortgages executed by the respective companies under the authority of that Act. U. S. v. Stanford, (1896) 161 U. S. 412.

Reason for Act.—By a prior decision (U. S. v. Union Pac. R. Co., (1875) 91 U. S. 72) it was held that the company did not have to pay interest until the bonds issued by the government matured, except so far as the Act enabled the government to withhold one-half the compensation for transportation performed for it and five per cent. of the net earnings. Out of this situation and on account of the action of the railroads grew the Thurman Act, and its cause and justification appear in the remarks of Chief Justice Waite in the Sinking-Fund Cases, (1878) 99 U. S. 723; Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Railroad Com'rs, (1895) 71 Fed. Rep. 437.

Effect of Act.—The Act of May 7, 1878, merely restored the provisions of the Act of July 1, 1862, and again required all compensation for services rendered the government to be applied to the payment of the bonds. U. S. v. Central Pac. R. Co., (1886) 118 U. S. 237..

Statutory right.—The right of the government to withhold moneys due to the Pacific railroads for services rendered, and apply them upon the subsidy bonds loaned the roads (not yet due), rests not upon any general principle of law, but upon the statute. Pacific Railroad Cases, (1880) 16 Ct. Cl. 353.

Personal liability of stockholders.—The important fact disclosed by the Pacific Railroad Acts is that no one of them contains any clause imposing upon the stockholders of a corporation receiving subsidy bonds personal responsibility for any debt due to the United States from such corporation by reason of its failure to pay those bonds at maturity. It was, of course, competent for Congress when incorporating the Union Pacific Railroad Company to impose such liability on the stockholders of that corporation. But, as it did not do so, as the personal liability of stockholders for the debts of the corporation arises only from statute, it cannot be claimed, nor is it claimed, that the stockholders of that corporation incurred by their subscriptions of stock any liability to the United States or to any other creditor for the debts of that company. They were bound, of course, to make good the amount of their subscriptions; but that being done, their personal responsibility to creditors of the corporate body ceased. U. S. v. Stanford, (1896) 161 U. S. 412.

Services rendered by nonaided road.—The compensation for services rendered the United States, which by this section was required to be applied to the payment of the same bonds, does not include compensation for services rendered by a road the construction of which has not been aided by the issue to the company of government bonds. U. S. v. Central Pac. R. Co., (1886) 118 U. S. 237, affirming 21 Ct. Cl. 80. See also U. S. v. Kansas Pac. R. Co., (1878) 99 U. S. 455.

To what companies applicable.—This section applies only to the companies named in the Act. (1899) 22 Op. Atty-Gen. 396.

The "several companies" referred to in this section cannot be considered to be any other than the companies to which the Act in its terms applies. Pacific Railroad Cases, (1880) 16 Ct. Cl. 353.

The only companies intended to be affected by the Act were manifestly the Union Pacific and the Central Pacific. Pacific Railroad Cases, (1880) 16 Ct. Cl. 353.

These provisions apply not only to the Union Pacific division but also to the 293½ miles of the Kansas Pacific division which were aided by the government. They do not apply to the other 245½ miles of said road, nor to the Denver Pacific division. Union Pac. R. Co. v. U. S., (1885) 20 Ct. Cl. 70.

The bonds referred to in this section are plainly those which had been issued to the Union Pacific and Central Pacific companies and no other. Pacific Railroad Cases, (1880) 16 Ct. Cl. 353.

The Sioux City and Pacific Railroad Company is not within the scope of the Sinking Fund Act. (1886) 18 Op. Atty-Gen. 503.

Kansas Pacific Company.—This Act relates only to the Union and Central Pacific roads, and does not extend to earnings by the road of the Kansas Pacific Company. Pacific Railroad Cases, (1880) 16 Ct. Cl. 353.

Effect of consolidation.—When the Kansas Pacific became consolidated with the Union Pacific the pre-existing legal relations of the former with the government remained unchanged as to compensation for services performed either before or after the consolidation. Pacific Railroad Cases, (1880) 16 Ct. Cl. 353.

Effect of foreclosure and sale.—One-half of the compensation due from time to time for the services rendered by the Central branch road for the government should be withheld and applied upon the bonds issued by the United States in aid of its construction, notwithstanding the foreclosure and sale of the same. (1899) 22 Op. Atty-Gen. 396.

Same services as in prior Acts.—The words "the whole amount of compensation which may from time to time be due to said several railroad companies respectively for services rendered for the government," were intended to apply only to the same services mentioned in the former Acts and were not used for the purpose of introducing a new and additional service not contemplated by those Acts. Central Pac. R. Co. v. U. S., (1886) 21 Ct. Cl. 180, affirmed in (1886) 118 U. S. 235.

Railroad, telegraph, and bridge service.—The requirement that one-half of the compensation for services rendered for the government by that company should be applied to the payment of the bonds issued by the government thereto, embraces not only railroad and telegraph service, but bridge service also. (1873) 14 Op. Atty-Gen. 232.

Transportation for quartermaster's department over aided and nonaided roads.—Under this section all compensation due for transportation for the quartermaster's department performed over such portions of the Union and Central Pacific railroads as were built with the aid of the government bonds should be retained. And all compensation due to the same roads (they being indebted to the United States upon subsidy bonds) for such transportation performed over those portions of roads owned, leased, controlled, and operated thereby which were not built with the aid of government bonds, be also retained, so that the question involved as to such portions of roads can be judicially determined. This advice was also given on similar grounds in regard to compensation due for transportation performed over the Kansas Pacific, Denver Pacific, and Union Pacific consolidated, and in regard to compensation due for transportation performed over the Sioux City and Pacific and the Central branch Union Pacific railroads and over lines owned, leased, controlled, and operated thereby. (1880) 16 Op. Atty-Gen. 516.

Mail service.—This provision is very comprehensive. It includes all mail service, special or other, which may be rendered by the company, either under contract or otherwise, and it forbids a cash payment thereto of any allowance for such service. (1882) 17 Op. Atty-Gen. 393.

Contract for special mail facilities.—If a contract is concluded with the Union Pacific Railway Company for special mail facilities, to be paid out of the so-called special facilities appropriation, the allowance cannot be put in cash, but must be passed to the credit of the company as the regular mail pay is now credited. (1882) 17 Op. Atty-Gen. 393.

Effect of transfer of telegraph lines.—It is clear under the Acts of 1862, 1864, and 1878 that the government was entitled to retain and apply as directed by Congress all sums due on account of services rendered in its behalf by any railroad company named in those Acts that had received the aid of the United States in the construction of its railroad and telegraph lines. All such sums were set apart by Congress for the payment of the principal and interest of any bonds delivered by the United States to such company. The government could therefore have retained and applied, as in the Act of Congress required, all sums due from it on account of messages sent or received by it over the telegraph line constructed by the Union Pacific Railroad Company. Sinking Fund Cases, (1878) 99 U. S. 700. No agreement between the company and the Western Union Telegraph Company transferring to the latter the control of the telegraph line constructed by the railroad company should affect the right of the United States. U. S. v. Western Union Tel. Co., (1895) 160 U. S. 53.

Telegraph line managed by another company.—One-half of the compensation chargeable for sending government dispatches over the telegraph line along the Kansas Pacific railroad should be retained and applied to the payment of the bonds issued by the United States in aid of that railroad, notwithstanding the circumstance that at the time the dispatches were sent the line was managed and operated by the Western Union Telegraph Company, and the service was rendered directly to the government by this company. (1873) 14 Op. Atty-Gen. 313.

Telegraph messages over two lines.—Although the United States is entitled to retain and apply as directed by Congress all sums due from the government on account of the use by the telegraph company for public business of the telegraph line constructed by the railroad company, yet where there is an entire absence of proof as to the extent to which that line was in fact so used, and where it is impossible to ascertain the amount improperly paid to and without right retained by the telegraph company and subsequently divided between it and the railroad company, from the fact that the messages may have been sent over either the railroad line or the line constructed by and belonging to a telegraph company, sums paid by the United States to the telegraph company cannot be recovered by the United States. U. S. v. Western Union Tel. Co., (1495) 160 U. S. 53.

Funds applied to earliest debts.—Applying the familiar rule that in case of payments by a debtor to a creditor upon distinct transactions for distinct accounts when neither party makes an appropriation at the time, the payments are applied by law to liabilities of earliest date; the sums applicable in any one year to the payment of the company's interest debts for that year must be applied in the order in which such debts arise, and the fact that bonds have been issued at various times is of no consequence. (1895) 21 Op. Atty-Gen. 145.

SEC. 3. [Sinking fund—investment.] That there shall be established in the Treasury of the United States a sinking-fund, which shall be invested by the Secretary of the Treasury in bonds of the United States; and the semi-annual income thereof shall be in like manner from time to time invested, and the same shall accumulate and be disposed of as hereinafter mentioned. And in making such investments the Secretary shall prefer the five per centum bonds of the United States, unless, for good reasons appearing to him, and which he shall report to Congress, he shall at any time deem it advisable to invest in other bonds of the United States. All the bonds belonging to said fund shall, as fast as they shall be obtained, be so stamped as to show that they belong to said fund, and that they are not good in the hands of other holders than the Secretary of the Treasury until they shall have been indorsed by him, and publicly disposed of pursuant to this act. [20 Stat. L. 58.]

Constitutionality.—A legislative regulation which does no more than require the companies to submit to their just contribution towards the payment of a bonded debt cannot in any sense be said to deprive them of their property without due process of law. Sinking-Fund Cases, (1878) 99 U. S. 700.

So far as it establishes in the treasury of the United States a sinking fund, this Act is not unconstitutional. Sinking-Fund Cases, (1878) 99 U. S. 700.

The establishment of the fund is a reasonable regulation of the administration of the affairs of the companies, promotive alike of the interests of the public and of the corporations, and is warranted under the authority which Congress has by way of amendment to change or modify the rights, privileges, and immunities granted by it. Sinking-Fund Cases, (1878) 99 U. S. 700.

What investments permissible.—Money paid into the sinking fund of said companies under this Act may be invested (1) in United States bonds; (2) in any United States railroad subsidy bonds of any of the aided railroads described in the Act of July 1, 1862, ch. 120, and its supplements; and (3) in any of the first mortgage bonds of said companies such as are described in section 5 of the Act of March 3, 1887, ch. 345. (1887) 18 Op. Atty-Gen. 598.

Deposit and investment not payment.—The debt of the respective companies therein named to the United States is not paid by depositing and investing the fund in the manner prescribed by that Act. Sinking-Fund Cases, (1878) 99 U. S. 700.

SEC. 4. [Credits to, and payments into, sinking fund.] That there shall be carried to the credit of the said fund, on the first day of February in each year, the one-half of the compensation for services hereinbefore named, rendered for the Government by said Central Pacific Railroad Company, not applied in liquidation of interest; and, in addition thereto, the said company shall, on said day in each year, pay into the Treasury, to the credit of said sinking-fund, the sum of one million two hundred thousand dollars, or so much thereof as shall be necessary to make the five per centum of the net earnings of its said road payable to the United States under said act of eighteen hundred and sixty-two, and the whole sum earned by it as compensation for services rendered for the United States, together with the sum by this section required to be paid, amount in the aggregate to twenty-five per centum of the whole net earnings of said railroad-company, ascertained and defined as hereinbefore provided, for the year ending on the thirty-first day of December next preceding. That there shall be carried to the credit of the said fund, on the first day of February in each year, the one-half of the compensation for services hereinbefore named, rendered for the Government by said Union Pacific Railroad Company, not applied in liquidation of interest; and, in addition thereto, the said company shall, on said day in each year, pay into the Treasury, to the credit of said sinking-fund, the sum of eight hundred and fifty thousand dollars, or so much thereof as shall be necessary to make the five per centum of the net earnings of its said road payable to the United States under said act of eighteen hundred and sixty-two, and the whole sum earned by it as compensation for services rendered for the United States, together with the sum by this section required to be paid, amount in the aggregate to twenty-five per centum of the whole net earnings of said railroad company, ascertained and defined as hereinbefore provided, for the year ending on the thirty-first day of December next preceding. [20 Stat. L. 59.]

How much added.—The annual payment into the sinking fund prescribed by this section adds to the five per cent. of net earnings prescribed by the Act of 1862 so much of $850,000 as will make, with the five per cent. and with the compensation for services performed for the government, an amount equal to twenty-five per cent. of the net earnings of the road and no more. Union Pac. R. Co. v. U. S., (1885) 20 Ct. Cl. 70, affirmed (1886) 117 U. S. 355.

Government not released from payment.—Retaining in the fund the one-half of the earnings for services rendered to the government by the respective companies which, by the Act of July 2, 1864 (13 Stat. L. 356), was to be paid does not release the government from such payment. Although kept in the treasury the fund is owned by them, and they will be entitled to the securities whereof it consists which remain undisposed of when the debts chargeable upon it shall be paid. Under the circumstances, such retaining is, in law, a payment to them. Sinking-Fund Cases, (1878) 99 U. S. 700.

Liquidation of company's debts.—The one-half of the earnings of the company on government business and its yearly payments of five per cent. of its net profits cannot be treated as having liquidated the whole or any part of the company's indebtedness on account of the principal of the subsidy bonds maturing Jan. 16, 1895, but on the other hand, must be regarded as paying interest debts exclusively. (1895) 21 Op. Atty-Gen. 145.

Intervention by government in proceeding to restrain execution of state freight laws.—The payment of twenty-five per cent. of net earnings under this Act gives the government such interest as entitles it to intervene in a proceeding to restrain the execution of an order and resolution of a state board of railway commissioners fixing certain rates for freights. The extent of such interest is that the rates so fixed shall be reasonable. Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Railroad Com'rs, (1895) 71 Fed. Rep. 437.

SEC. 5. [Secretary of Treasury to remit into sinking fund percentage on net earnings.] That whenever it shall be made satisfactorily to appear to the Secretary of the Treasury, by either of said companies, that seventy-five per centum of its net earnings as hereinbefore defined, for any current year are or were insufficient to pay the interest for such year upon the obligations of such company, in respect of which obligations there may exist a lien paramount to that of the United States, and that such interest has been paid out of such net earnings, said Secretary is hereby authorized, and it is made his duty, to remit for such current year so much of the twenty-five per centum of net earnings required to be paid into the sinking-fund, as aforesaid, as may have been thus applied and used in the payment of interest as aforesaid. [20 Stat. L. 59.]

To what moneys applicable. — This section applies to moneys belonging to those funds which are uninvested, and such moneys may be invested as therein provided. (1887) 18 Op. Atty.-Gen. 598.

SEC. 6. [Dividends in case of default, illegal — penalty.] That no dividend shall be voted, made, or paid for or to any stockholder or stockholders in either of said companies respectively at any time when the said company shall be in default in respect of the payment either of the sums required as aforesaid to be paid into said sinking-fund, or in respect of the payment of the said five per centum of the net earnings, or in respect of interest upon any debt the lien of which, or of the debt on which it may accrue, is paramount to that of the United States; and any officer or person who shall vote, declare, make, or pay, and any stockholder of any of said companies who shall receive any such dividend contrary to the provisions of this act, shall be liable to the United States for the amount thereof, which, when recovered, shall be paid into said sinking-fund, and every such officer, person, or stockholder who shall knowingly vote, declare, make, or pay any such dividend, contrary to the provisions of this act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding ten thousand dollars, and by imprisonment not exceeding one year. [20 Stat. L. 59.]

SEC. 7. [Application of sinking fund.] That the said sinking-fund so established and accumulated shall, at the maturity of said bonds so respectively issued by the United States, be applied to the payment and satisfaction thereof, according to the interest and proportion of each of said companies in said fund, and of all interest paid by the United States thereon, and not reimbursed, subject to the provisions of the next section. [20 Stat. L. 60.]

SEC. 8. [Priorities in application of sinking fund.] That said sinking-fund so established and accumulated shall, according to the interest and proportion of said companies respectively therein, be held for the protection, security, and benefit of the lawful and just holders of any mortgage or lien debts of such companies respectively, lawfully paramount to the rights of the United States, and for the claims of other creditors, if any, lawfully chargeable upon the funds so required to be paid into said sinking-fund, according to their respective lawful priorities, as well as for the United States, according to the principles of equity, to the end that all persons having any claim upon said sinking-fund may be entitled thereto in due order; but the provisions of this section shall not operate or be held to impair any existing legal right, except in the manner in this act provided, of any mortgage, lien, or other creditor of any of said companies respectively, nor to excuse any of said companies respectively from the duty of discharging, out of other funds, its debts to any creditor except the United States. [20 Stat. L. 60.]

SEC. 9. [Lien on property of companies.] That all sums due to the United States from any of said companies respectively, whether payable presently or not, and all sums required to be paid to the United States or into the Treasury, or into said sinking-fund under this act, or under the acts hereinbefore referred to, or otherwise, are hereby declared to be a lien upon all the property, estate, rights, and franchises of every description granted or conveyed by the United States to any of said companies respectively or jointly, and also upon all the estate and property, real, personal, and mixed, assets, and income of the said several railroad companies respectively, from whatever source derived, subject to any lawfully prior and paramount mortgage, lien, or claim thereon. But this section shall not be construed to prevent said companies respectively from using and disposing of any of their property or assets in the ordinary, proper and lawful course of their current business, in good faith and for valuable consideration. [20 Stat. L. 60.]

SEC. 10. [Enforcement of rights of United States.] That it is hereby made the duty of the Attorney-General of the United States to enforce, by proper proceeding against the said several railroad companies respectively or jointly, or against either of them, and others, all the rights of the United States under this act and under the acts hereinbefore mentioned, and under any other act of Congress or right of the United States; and in any suit or proceeding already commenced, or that may be hereafter commenced, against any of said companies, either alone or with other parties, in respect of matters arising under this act, or under the acts or rights hereinbefore mentioned or referred to, it shall be the duty of the court to determine the very right of the matter without regard to matters of form, joinder of parties, multifariousness, or other matters not affecting the substantial rights and duties arising out of the matters and acts hereinbefore stated and referred to. [20 Stat. L. 60.]

SEC. 11. [Forfeiture of franchises on failure to comply with this Act.] That if either of said railroad companies shall fail to perform all and singular the requirements of this act and of the acts hereinbefore mentioned, and of any other act relating to said company, to be by it performed, for the period of six months next after such performance may be due, such failure shall operate as a forfeiture of all the rights, privileges, grants, and franchises derived or obtained by it from the United States; and it shall be the duty of the Attorney-General to cause such forfeiture to be judicially enforced. [20 Stat. L. 60.]

SEC. 12. [Alteration, amendment, or repeal of Act.] That nothing in this act shall be construed or taken in any wise to affect or impair the right of Congress at any time hereafter further to alter, amend, or repeal the said acts hereinbefore mentioned; and this act shall be subject to alteration, amendment, or repeal, as, in the opinion of Congress, justice or the public welfare may require. And nothing herein contained shall be held to deny, exclude, or impair any right or remedy in the premises now existing in favor of the United States. [20 Stat. L. 60.]

Power of Congress. — To the extent of the powers, rights, privileges, and immunities thereby granted, Congress retains the right of amendment, and by exercising it may in a manner not inconsistent with the original charter granted by California, as modified by the Act of that state passed in 1864, accepting what has been done by Congress, regulate the administration of affairs of the company in reference to the debts created by it under authority of such legislation. Sinking-Fund Cases, (1878) 99 U. S. 700.

SEC. 13. [Act deemed as amendatory.] That each and every of the provisions in this act contained shall severally and respectively be deemed, taken, and held as in alteration and amendment of said act of eighteen hundred and sixty-two and of said act of eighteen hundred and sixty-four respectively, and of both said acts. [20 Stat. L. 60.]

An act authorizing an investigation of the books, accounts, and methods of railroads which have received aid from the United States, and for other purposes.

[SECS. 1-3.] [Temporary.]

These sections relate to a temporary commission for the investigation of certain railroads.

SEC. 4. [Protection of interests of United States — redemption of prior incumbrances.] That whenever, in the opinion of the President, it shall be deemed necessary to the protection of the interests and the preservation of the security of the United States in respect of its lien, mortgage, or other interest in any of the property of any or all of the several companies upon which a lien, mortgage, or other incumbrance paramount to the right, title, or interest of the United States for the same property, or any part of the same, may exist and be then lawfully liable to be enforced, the Secretary of the Treasury shall, under the direction of the President, redeem or otherwise clear off such paramount lien, mortgage, or other incumbrance by paying the sums lawfully due in respect thereof out of the Treasury; and the United States shall thereupon become and be subrogated to all rights and securities theretofore pertaining to the debt, mortgage, lien, or other incumbrance in respect of which such payment shall have been made. It shall be the duty of the Attorney-General, under the direction of the President, to take all such steps and proceedings, in the courts and otherwise, as shall be needful to redeem such lien, mortgage, or other incumbrance, and to protect and defend the rights and interests of the United States in respect of the matters in this section mentioned, and to take steps to foreclose any mortgages or liens of the United States on any such railroad property. [24 Stat. L. 491.]

SEC. 5. [Sinking funds — investment.] That the sinking-funds which are or may be held in the Treasury for the security of the indebtedness of either or all of said railroad companies may, in addition to the investments now authorized by law, be invested in any bonds of the United States heretofore issued for the benefit of either or all of said companies, or in any of the first-mortgage bonds of either of said companies which have been issued under the authority of any law of the United States and secured by mortgages of their roads and franchises, which by any law of the United States have been made prior and paramount to the mortgage, lien, or other security of the United States in respect of its advances to either of said companies as provided by law. [24 Stat. L. 492.]

[SEC. 1.] [Transportation for government by bond-aided railroads.] * * * That no money shall hereafter be paid to any railroad company for the transportation of any property or troops of the United States over any railroad which in whole or in part was constructed by the aid of a grant of public land on the condition that such railroad should be a public highway for the use of the Government of the United States free from toll or other charge, or upon any other conditions for the use of such road, for such transportation; nor shall any allowance be made for the transportation of officers of the Army over any such road when on duty and under orders as military officers of the United States. But nothing herein contained shall be construed as preventing any such railroad from bringing a suit in the Court of Claims for the charges for such transportation, and recovering for the same if found entitled thereto by virtue of the laws in force prior to the passage of this act; provided that the claim for such charges shall not have been barred by the statute of limitations at the time of bringing the suit, and either party shall have the right of appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States; And provided further, That the foregoing provision shall not apply for the current fiscal year, nor thereafter, to roads where the sole condition of transportation is that the company shall not charge the Government higher rates than they do individuals for like transportation, and when the Quartermaster-General shall be satisfied that this condition has been faithfully complied with. [18 Stat. L. 453.]

This is from the Army Appropriation Act of March 3, 1875, ch. 133.

[Settlement of accounts for Army and mail transportation.] * * *

That for the proper adjustment of the accounts of the Union Pacific, Central Pacific, Kansas Pacific, Western Pacific, and Sioux City and Pacific Railroad Companies, respectively, for services which have been or may be hereafter performed for the government for transportation of the Army and transportation of the mails, the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to make such entries upon the books of the department as will carry to the credit of said companies the amounts so earned or to be earned by them during each fiscal year and withheld under the provisions of section fifty-two hundred and sixty of the Revised Statutes and of the act of Congress approved May seventh, eighteen hundred and seventy-eight: Provided, That this shall not authorize the expenditure of any money from the Treasury nor change the method now provided by law for the auditing of such claims against the government; Provided further, That this paragraph shall not be so construed as to be a disposition of any moneys due or to become due to or from said companies respectively, or to, in any way, affect their rights or duties or the rights of the United States, under existing laws, it being only intended hereby to enable the proper accounting officers to state on the books of the Treasury the accounts between the government and said companies respectively. * * * [20 Stat. L. 420.]

This is from the Deficiencies Appropriation Act of March 3, 1879, ch. 183.

Transportation of enlisted men in navy and marine corps.—The methods adopted in settling accounts for transportation of the army under this Act are not applicable to accounts for the transportation of enlisted men of the navy and marine corps. (1896) 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 297.

Transportation of supplies, public stores, etc.—This Act applies in terms only to accounts "for transportation of the Army and transportation of the mails." While it may be doubtful whether accounts for the transportation of "munitions of war" come under this Act, it is clear that accounts for transportation of "supplies and public stores" do not. (1896) 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 297.

[Settlement of accounts for Navy and Marine Corps transportation.] * * *

That the provisions of the clause contained in the Act of Congress approved March third, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to make such entries upon the books of the Department as will carry to the credit of certain railroad companies named in said Act amounts earned or to be earned by them during each fiscal year on account of transportation of the Army and transportation of the mails be, and the same are hereby, extended and made applicable to the transportation of the Navy and the Marine Corps. * * * [29 Stat. L. 663.]

This is from the Naval Appropriation Act of March 3, 1897, ch. 386.

[SEC. 1.] [Payment for Army transportation over land-grant railroads.]
 * * * For the payment of Army transportation lawfully due such land-grant railroads as have not received aid in government bonds, to be adjusted by the proper accounting officers in accordance with the decisions of the Supreme Court in cases decided under such land-grant acts, but in no case shall more than fifty per centum of the full amount of the service be paid, one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars: Provided, That such compensation shall be computed upon the basis of the tariff rates for like transportation performed for the public at large and shall be accepted as in full for all demands for said services: And provided further, That any such land-grant roads as shall file with the Secretary of the Treasury their written acceptance of this provision shall hereafter be paid for like services as herein provided;

This is from the Army Appropriation Act of June 30, 1882, ch. 254.

[SEC. 1.] [Settlement of accounts for transportation over non-bond-aided lines.] * * * That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to make settlement of the claims growing out of Government transportation over non-bond-aided lines of the Southern Pacific Company and Central Pacific Railroad Company by crediting against the notes of the Central Pacific Railroad Company held in the Treasury of the United States interest on all of said judgment and allowed claims at four per centum per annum, as set forth in his letter to the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate, dated May twelfth, nineteen hundred. * * * [31 Stat. L. 1023.]

This is from the Deficiencies Appropriation Act of March 3, 1901, ch. 831.

Sec. 5261. [Companies may sue in Court of Claims.] Any such company may bring suit in the Court of Claims to recover the price of such freight and transportation, and in such suit the right of such company to recover the same upon the law and the facts of the case shall be determined, and also the rights of the United States upon the merits of all the points presented by it in answer thereto by them; and either party to such suit may appeal to the Supreme Court; and both said courts shall give such cause or causes precedence of all other business. [R. S.]

Act of March 3, 1873, ch. 226, 17 Stat. L. 508.

When right to sue accrues.—The right of one of the Pacific railroads to bring suit for money improperly withheld by the secretary of the treasury as net earnings under the Thurman Act accrues at the time the money is so applied. Central Pac. R. Co. v. U. S., (1889) 24 Ct. Cl. 145.

What included in record sent up.—Special findings which relate to mere incidental facts which amount only to evidence are inadmissible as part of the record to be sent to the Supreme Court. Union Pac. R. Co. v. U. S., (1885) 116 U. S. 154.

What comes up on appeal.—The facts are to be settled by the Court of Claims, and an appeal brings up for review only the decisions of that court upon questions of law arising in the course of the trial or in the application of the law to the facts as finally found. Union Pac. R. Co. v. U. S., (1885) 116 U. S. 154.

Sec. 5262. [Circuit Court to issue mandamus, etc.] The proper circuit court of the United States shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine all cases of mandamus to compel said Union Pacific Railroad Company to operate its road as required by law. [R. S.]

Act of March 3, 1873, ch. 226, 17 Stat. L. 509.

Purpose of Act.—This was an Act which was indispensable in order to give the federal court original jurisdiction in mandamus, and was passed for that purpose. U. S. v. Union Pac. R. Co., (1875) 3 Dill. (U. S.) 524, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,600.

This Act confers original jurisdiction on the proper Circuit Court of the United States of cases of mandamus to compel the Union Pacific Railroad Company to operate its road according to law. U. S. v. Union Pac. R. Co., (1873) 2 Dill. (U. S.) 527, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,599.

Specially conferred jurisdiction.—The Circuit Court of the United States can exercise no original jurisdiction by mandamus except when the jurisdiction is specially conferred by an Act of Congress, as was done by this Act. People v. Colorado Cent. R. Co., (1890) 42 Fed. Rep. 638.

In Iowa.—The Circuit Court of the United States for the district of Iowa under the Acts of Congress relating to the Union Pacific Railroad Company has jurisdiction in mandamus to compel that company to operate its road as required by law if any part of the road is in the district of Iowa. U. S. v. Union Pac. R. Co., (1875) 3 Dill. (U. S.) 524, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,600.

Jurisdiction outside of state.—No court sitting in one state can by mandamus compel the construction or operation of a railroad in any other state or territory of the Union. Nor can a United States court exercise such a jurisdiction, except it be conferred by Act of Congress in respect of a federal corporation as was done by this Act. People v. Colorado Cent. R. Co., (1890) 42 Fed. Rep. 638.

Service necessary.—This Act gives to the proper Circuit Court jurisdiction in mandamus to compel the Union Pacific Railroad Company to operate its road as required by law. There must be jurisdiction over the company by service upon it to enable the court to exercise the power conferred by the Act. Hall v. Union Pac. R. Co., (1875) 3 Dill. (U. S.) 515, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 5,950.

When private persons may move for writ.—Throughout the legislation of Congress respecting the Union Pacific Railroad Company, the fact is recognized that it sustains a special or peculiar relation to the United States in their political capacity and also a relation to the people at large or the general public. Now, as far as the company owes duties to the general government of a nature to be enforced by mandamus, it is clear that private persons cannot institute or set on foot the proceedings. This would be a duty devolved upon the attorney-general by express enactment, or resulting from his station. And where the duty charged to be neglected by the company is one which concerns the public at large as distinguished from the government, the attorney-general, in his official capacity, alone, or on the relation of private persons, might file the necessary suggestion or affidavits and move for the writ. But where the duty said to be neglected is one which the company owes to the public, and where individuals who suffer from such neglect complain of it, the court must not refuse the writ solely because the attorney-general does not move for it. Hall v. Union Pac. R. Co., (1875) 3 Dill. (U. S.) 515, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 5,950, affirmed (1875) 91 U. S. 343.

A private person whose rights are affected in common with those of the public may, without the intervention of the attorney-general, move for a mandamus to compel a railroad company to operate its road as required by law. People v. Colorado Cent. R. Co., (1890) 42 Fed. Rep. 638.

Private persons who suffer damage and inconvenience from the failure of the company to operate its road as required by law may institute proceedings under this Act without the sanction of the attorney-general. Hall v. Union Pac. R. Co., (1875) 3 Dill. (U. S.) 515, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 5,950.

What private person must show.—When a private person moves for a mandamus "on behalf of the people of the state," he must show that he is one of them and that his interests as a citizen of the state are injuriously affected by the wrong complained of. People v. Colorado Cent. R. Co., (1890) 42 Fed. Rep. 638.

If private persons can show that they are interested in the operation of the road, they have a right to come into court under this Act and call the company to account for failing to perform its public duty, to their injury. U. S. v. Union Pac. R. Co., (1875) 3 Dill. (U. S.) 524, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,600.

Effect of void lease.—If a lease is void it imposes no obligation upon a railroad company as lessee to operate the road leased. People v. Colorado Cent. R. Co., (1890) 42 Fed. Rep. 638.

To whom writ may go.—The writ of mandamus may go to the corporation, to the corporate body, and command it to perform its duty (granting that any part of the road is in this district), and if the writ thus commanding this duty is served upon the chief officer of the corporation, its president, or upon any officer who may be indicted and criminally punished if he fails to do his duty in this respect, then the court has jurisdiction over the company and its officers by mandamus to compel the performance of this duty. U. S. v. Union Pac. R. Co., (1875) 3 Dill. (U. S.) 524, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,600.

Operation of bridge.—In U. S. v. Union Pac. R. Co., (1875) 4 Dill. (U. S.) 479, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,601, a peremptory mandamus to compel the Union Pacific Railroad Company to operate its road over the bridge in the same general manner that it operates the other portions of the road was granted, and the device of a separate transfer over the bridge by local trains was held to be in violation of the duty of the company to the public.

Effect of Act upon eastern terminus of Iowa branch.—This Act, construed in connection with the other legislation of Congress, does not change the eastern terminus of the Iowa branch of the Union Pacific Railroad Company from the Iowa shore of the Missouri river nor disconnect the bridge from the road of the company, so as to relieve the company from the duty imposed by its charter and other Acts of Congress to operate its whole railroad as "one continuous line." U. S. v. Union Pac. R. Co., (1875) 4 Dill. (U. S.) 479, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,601.

An act making additions to the fifteenth section of the act approved July 2, 1864, entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes' approved July 1, 1862."

[Pacific railroads and telegraph lines to be used as continuous lines with equal facilities to all.] That there shall be, and is hereby, added to the fifteenth section of the act approved July second, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military and other purposes,' approved July first, eighteen hundred and sixty-two," the following words, namely: "And any officer or agent of the companies authorized to construct the aforesaid roads, or of any company engaged in operating either of said roads, who shall refuse to operate and use the road or telegraph under his control, or which he is engaged in operating for all purposes of communication, travel, and transportation, so far as the public and the Government are concerned, as one continuous line, or shall refuse, in such operation and use, to afford and secure to each of said roads equal advantages and facilities as to rates, time, or transportation, without any discrimination of any kind in favor of, or adverse to, the road or business of any or either of said companies, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not exceeding one thousand dollars, and may be imprisoned not less than six months. In case of failure or refusal of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, or either of said branches, to comply with the requirements of this act and the acts to which this act is amendatory, the party injured or the company aggrieved may bring an action in the district or circuit court of the United States in the Territory, district, or circuit in which any portion of the road of the defendant may be situated, for damages on account of such failure or refusal; and, upon recovery, the plaintiff shall be entitled to judgment for treble the amount of all excess of freight and fares collected by the defendant, and for treble the amount of damages sustained by the plaintiff by such failure or refusal; and for each and every violation of or failure to comply with the requirements of this act, a new cause of action shall arise; and in case of suit in any such Territory, district, or circuit, process may be served upon any agent of the defendant found in the Territory, district, or circuit in which such suit may be brought, and such service shall be by the court held to be good and sufficient; and it is hereby provided that for all the purposes of said act, and of the acts amendatory thereof, the railway of the Denver Pacific Railway and Telegraph Company shall be deemed and taken to be a part and extension of the road of the Kansas Pacific Railroad, to the point of junction thereof with the road of the Union Pacific Railroad Company at Cheyenne, as provided in the act of March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-nine. [18 Stat. L. 111.]

General construction.—This Act enjoins the duty to operate the road as one continuous line, upon the officers engaged in operating the road; if they refuse to do so, they are made indictable. The duty to be performed by them is one which rests upon the officers as well as the corporation; otherwise Congress would not have made it criminal for the officers to refuse to discharge it. It is their duty to obey the law; if they fail, they may be proceeded against criminally, and the public duty may be enforced by mandamus, and this writ may be directed to the corporation and served as required by the Act. U. S. v. Union Pac. R. Co., (1875) 3 Dill. (U. S.) 524, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,600.

Personal liability of officers.—This Act makes it the personal duty of the officers of the road to operate it as one continuous line. Now, if it can be shown that the president of the road is not operating it as a continuous line within the meaning of this Act of Congress, then he is guilty and may be punished, and for the violation of the Act in this respect he cannot be protected by any resolution of the board of directors. U. S. v. Union Pac. R. Co., (1875) 3 Dill. (U. S.) 524, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,600.

What is eastern terminus of Iowa branch of Union Pacific. — The charter of the Union Pacific Railroad Company (12 Stat. L. 489, sec. 12) required its Iowa branch to be constructed westward from a point on the western boundary of the state of Iowa to be fixed by the President of the United States. It was held, on a consideration of various provisions of the charter, that the eastern terminus of said branch was on the Iowa shore of the Missouri river and not on the Nebraska shore nor at a point "on the middle of the main channel" of the river, although that was the legal western boundary of the state of Iowa. U. S. v. Union Pac. R. Co., (1875) 4 Dill. (U. S.) 479, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,601. See also Union Pac. R. Co. v. Hall, (1875) 91 U. S. 343.

The right to establish a bridge across the Missouri river to the eastern terminus of the Iowa branch on the Iowa shore was given to the Pacific Railroad Company by implication in the original charter of the company, and was expressly conferred by the ninth section of the amended charter of the company of July 2, 1864 (13 Stat. L. 356). The powers given and the duties imposed by those Acts in respect to bridges were recognized, increased, and regulated, but not repealed, by the special Act of Feb. 24, 1871, entitled

"An Act to authorize the Union Pacific Railroad Company to issue its bond to construct a bridge across the Missouri river at Omaha, Nebraska, and Council Bluffs, Iowa." U. S. v. Union Pac. R. Co., (1875) 4 Dill. (U. S.) 479, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,601.

Change in route to Denver. — The Act of March 3, 1869, authorized the corporation then known as the Union Pacific eastern division to contract with the Denver Pacific, a Colorado corporation, for the construction of that portion of its line between Denver and Cheyenne (hereby clearly recognizing the validity of the change of location), to adopt its road-bed, to grant the Denver Pacific a "perpetual use of its right of way and depot grounds, and to transfer to it all the rights and privileges subject to all the obligations appertaining to such part of its line." Even supposing that the Act of 1866 did not upon its face authorize the change that was actually made, — that is, westwardly to Cheyenne by the way of Denver, — it is clear that by the Act of March 3, 1869, this line was recognized as a proper compliance with the Act of 1866 and as a valid and continuous line from Kansas City to Cheyenne. U. S. v. Union Pac. R. Co., (1893) 148 U. S. 562.

Service of process in Iowa. — Under this Act service of process may be made upon the president or general superintendent of the company found in the district of Iowa. U. S. v. Union Pac. R. Co., (1875) 3 Dill. (U. S.) 524, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,600.

An act to create an Auditor of Railroad Accounts and for other purposes.

[SEC. 1.] [Repeal of provisions requiring certain reports from railroad companies.] That section twenty of the act entitled "An act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and to secure to the government the use of the same for postal, military and other purposes", approved July first anno Domini eighteen hundred and sixty-two, and the act entitled "An act relative to filing reports of railroad companies" approved June twenty-fifth, anno Domini eighteen hundred and sixty-eight, be, and the same are hereby, repealed. [20 Stat. L. 169.]

SEC. 2. [Auditor of railroad accounts.] That the office of Auditor of Railroad Accounts is hereby established as a bureau of the Interior Department. The said Auditor shall be appointed by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The annual salary of the said Auditor shall be, and is hereby, fixed at the sum of five thousand dollars. To assist the said Auditor to perform the duties of said office, the Secretary of the Interior shall appoint one bookkeeper at an annual salary of two thousand four hundred dollars, one assistant bookkeeper at an annual salary of two thousand dollars, one clerk at an annual salary of one thousand four hundred dollars, and one copyist at an annual salary of nine hundred dollars. Actual and necessary traveling and other expenses incurred in visiting the offices of the railroad companies hereinafter described, and for which vouchers shall be rendered, are hereby allowed, not to exceed the sum of two thousand dollars per annum; and it is hereby specially provided that each of said railroad companies shall furnish transportation over its own road, without expense to the United States, for the said Auditor or any person acting under his direction. Incidental expenses for books, stationery and other material necessary for the use of said bureau are hereby allowed not to exceed the sum of seven hundred dollars per annum. * * * [20 Stat. L. 169.]

The omitted part of the section makes temporary appropriation.

The title of "Auditor of Railroad Accounts" was changed to "Commissioner of Railroads" by Act of March 3, 1881, ch. 130, infra, p. 752. Termination of office, see Act of June 28, 1902, ch. 1301, infra, p. 752.

Inadequate appropriation for salary. — Where one statute establishes the salary of an officer at $5,000 and another appropriates only $3,600 therefor, and the latter contains no provision repealing Acts inconsistent and none declaring that payment of the amounts appropriated shall be in full compensation, it is simply a case of inadequate appropriation, and the officer can recover the difference. French's Case, (1880) 16 Ct. Cl. 419.

SEC. 3. [Duties of auditor.] That the duties of the said Auditor under and subject to the direction of the Secretary of the Interior shall be, to prescribe a system of reports to be rendered to him by the railroad companies whose roads are in whole or in part west, north, or south of the Missouri River, and to which the United States have granted any loan of credit or subsidy in bonds or lands; to examine the books and accounts of each of said railroad companies once in each fiscal year, and at such other times as may be deemed by him necessary to determine the correctness of any report received from them; to assist the government directors of any of said railroad companies in all matters which come under their cognizance whenever they may officially request such assistance; to see that the laws relating to said companies are enforced; to furnish such information to the several departments of the government in regard to tariffs for freight and passengers and in regard to the accounts of said railroad companies as may be by them required, or, in the absence of any request therefor, as he may deem expedient for the interest of the government; and to make an annual report to the Secretary of the Interior, on the first day of November, on the condition of each of said railroad companies, their roads, accounts, and affairs, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth immediately preceding. [20 Stat. L. 170.]

See note to section 2, supra.

SEC. 4. [Aided railroads to make reports and submit books for inspection, etc.] That each and every railroad company aforesaid which has received from the United States any bonds of the said United States, issued by way of loan to aid in constructing or furnishing its road, or which has received from the United States any lands granted to it for a similar purpose, shall make to the said Auditor any and all such reports as he may require from time to time and shall submit its books and records to the inspection of said Auditor or any person acting in his place and stead, at any time that the said Auditor may request, in the office where said books and records are usually kept; and the said Auditor, or his authorized representative, shall make such transcripts from the said books and records as he may desire. [20 Stat. L. 170.]

Railroads aided by states. — This Act does not apply to railroad companies incorporated in a state with the aid of lands which were granted by Acts of Congress to the state to be disposed of by its legislature for purposes of such aid and for no other purpose. U. S. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1895) 69 Fed. Rep. 89, affirmed (C. C. A. 1897) 77 Fed. Rep. 732.

SEC. 5. [Penalty for neglect, etc.] That if any railroad company aforesaid shall neglect or refuse to make such reports as may be called for, or refuse to submit its books and records to inspection, as provided in section four of this act, such neglect or refusal shall operate as a forfeiture, in each case of such neglect or refusal, of a sum not less than one thousand nor more than five thousand dollars, to be recovered by the Attorney-General of the United States in the name and for the use and benefit of the United States; and it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Interior, in all such cases of neglect or refusal as aforesaid, to inform the Attorney-General of the facts, to the end that such forfeiture or forfeitures may be judicially enforced. [20 Stat. L. 170.]

SEC. 6. [Act to apply to assignees of such companies.] This act shall apply to any and all persons or corporations into whose hands either of said railroads may lawfully come, as well as to the original companies. [20 Stat. L. 170.]

SEC. 7. [When Act takes effect.] This act shall take effect on and after the first day of July, anno Domini eighteen hundred and seventy-eight. [20 Stat. L. 171.]

This is from the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Appropriation Act of March 3, 1881, ch. 130.

[SEC. 1.] [Termination of office.] * * * That the office of Commissioner of Railroads is hereby continued until the thirtieth day of June, nineteen hundred and three, when the same shall terminate, and the duties of the Commissioner shall be transferred to the Secretary of the Interior together with the records and files of the office. [32 Stat. L. 456.]

This is from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of June 28, 1902, ch. 1301. It supercedes a provision of the Act of April 17, 1900, ch. 192, 31 Stat. L. 125, terminating the office

June 30, 1901, and a provision of the Act of March 3, 1901, ch. 830, 31 Stat. L. 1000, similar to that in the text continuing the office until June 30, 1902.

[II. SAFETY APPLIANCES — REPORT OF ACCIDENTS.]

An act to promote the safety of employees and travelers upon railroads by compelling common carriers engaged in interstate commerce to equip their cars with automatic couplers and continuous brakes and their locomotives with driving-wheel brakes, and for other purposes.

[Act of March 2, 1893, ch. 196, 27 Stat. L. 531.]

[SEC. 1.] [Driving-wheel brakes — control of train brakes.] That from and after the first day of January, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, it shall be unlawful for any common carrier engaged in interstate commerce by railroad to use on its line any locomotive engine in moving interstate traffic not equipped with a power driving-wheel brake and appliances for operating the train-brake system, or to run any train in such traffic after said date that has not a sufficient number of cars in it so equipped with power or train brakes that the engineer on the locomotive drawing such train can control its speed without requiring brakemen to use the common hand brake for that purpose [27 Stat. L. 531.]

The purpose of this Act is the protection of the lives and limbs of men, and such statutes should be construed to prevent the mischief and advance the remedy. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Voelker, (C. C. A. 1904) 129 Fed. Rep. 526.

Not for freight protection.—The statutes, state and federal, requiring railroad companies to equip their cars with automatic couplers were not enacted to protect the freight transported therein, but for the protection of the life and limb of the employees who were expected to handle these cars. Voelker v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1902) 116 Fed. Rep. 867.

Nature of Act and penalty.—This is a penal statute and it may not be so broadened by judicial construction as to make it cover and permit the punishment of an act which is not denounced by the fair import of its terms. The acts which this statute declares to be unlawful and for the commission of which it imposes a penalty were lawful before its enactment, and their performance subjected to no penalty or liability. It makes that unlawful which was lawful before its passage, and it imposes a penalty for its performance. Nor is this penalty a mere forfeiture for the benefit of the party aggrieved or injured. It is a penalty prescribed by the statute and recoverable by the government. Johnson v. Southern Pac. R. Co., (C. C. A. 1902) 117 Fed. Rep. 462.

Relation to Interstate Commerce Act.—In one sense this Act is in pari materia with the Interstate Commerce Act, and in another not; both relate to the regulation of commerce among the states under the superintendence of the Interstate Commerce Commission. The one deals with the rate and fare, and the other with locomotives and cars; one was intended primarily to protect shippers, the other to protect railroad employees. U. S. v. Geddes, (C. C. A. 1904) 131 Fed. Rep. 452.

Locomotives without couplers.—This statute clearly prohibits the use of any engine in moving interstate commerce not equipped with a power driving-wheel brake and the use of any car not equipped with automatic couplers, under a penalty of $100 for each offense; and it just as plainly omits to forbid, under that or any penalty, the use of any car which is not equipped with a power driving-wheel brake and the use of any engine that is not equipped with automatic couplers. This striking omission to express any intention to prohibit the use of engines unequipped with automatic couplers raises the legal presumption that no such intention existed, and prohibits the court from importing such a purpose into the Act and enacting provisions to give it effect. The familiar rule that the expression of one thing is the exclusion of others points to the same conclusion. Section 2 of the Act does not declare that it shall be unlawful to use any engine or car not equipped with automatic couplers, but that it shall be unlawful only to use any car lacking this equipment. This clear and concise definition of the unlawful act is a cogent and persuasive argument against the contention that the use, without couplers, of locomotives, hand cars, or other means of conducting interstate traffic, was made a misdemeanor by this Act. Johnson v. Southern Pac. R. Co., (C. C. A. 1902) 117 Fed. Rep. 462.

Local traffic.—Where a railroad company did all it could to keep its business local, limited its interests so far as it could to the transportation of freight over its own line, made no arrangement for through carriage either way, was interested in none, shared in none, was interested only in its local charge and any arrangement made was with view to secure that, the fact that certain goods transported by it were marked for other states or received from other states did not make it a party to any arrangement for interstate transportation in either direction, nor is such a company engaged in moving interstate traffic within the meaning of this Act. U. S. v. Geddes, (C. C. A. 1904) 131 Fed. Rep. 452.

SEC. 2. [Automatic couplers required on all cars.] That on and after the first day of January, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, it shall be unlawful for any such common carrier to haul or permit to be hauled or used on its line any car used in moving interstate traffic not equipped with couplers coupling automatically by impact, and which can be uncoupled without the necessity of men going between the ends of the cars. [27 Stat. L. 531.]

Under state or federal law.—A defendant railroad company, clearly shown to be a common carrier engaged in interstate commerce by railroad and to be using a car complained of on its line of railroad in moving interstate traffic, is under this Act of Congress and not under the state Act with regard to the condition of the car coupler. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Voelker, (C. C. A. 1904) 129 Fed. Rep. 526.

Interstate traffic only.—It is not unlawful under this statute for a carrier to haul a car not so equipped which is either used in interstate traffic solely or which is not used in any traffic at all. Johnson v. Southern Pac. R. Co., (C. C. A. 1902) 117 Fed. Rep. 462.

What cars included.—Cars loaded with articles shipped to other states, and started, whether in yards, on sidetrack, or in trains, are used in moving interstate traffic. But vacant cars in yards, on sidetracks, in repair shops, or in trains, which are not loaded with, or in use to move, articles of interstate commerce, do not fall within the terms or meaning of the Act. Johnson v. Southern Pac. R. Co., (C. C. A. 1902) 117 Fed. Rep. 462.

Tender of locomotive.—The word "car" does not include the tender of a locomotive within the meaning of this Act. Larabee v. New York, etc., R. Co., (1902) 182 Mass. 348.

But in Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Winkler, (1903) 4 Penn. (Del.) 387, affirming (1902) 4 Penn. (Del.) 80, it was held that the tender of a locomotive engaged in interstate commerce is a car within the general scope of this Act.

Car on sidetrack.—A dining car standing empty on a sidetrack intermediate station, where it has been left by a train engaged in interstate traffic, until it should be taken by another train engaged in the same traffic, going in the opposite direction, and which the owner intended to use in interstate traffic, was drawn by a freight engine from the sidetrack to the turntable, turned, and placed again upon the sidetrack. It was held that the car was not used in moving interstate traffic while it was on the sidetrack and while it was being turned. Johnson v. Southern Pac. R. Co., (C. C. A. 1902) 117 Fed. Rep. 462.

Sufficient showing of use in interstate traffic.—Whenever cars are designed for interstate traffic the company owning or using them is bound to equip them as required by the Act of Congress; and when it is shown that a railway company is using the car for transportation purposes between states, sufficient is shown to justify the court in ruling that the Act of Congress is applicable to the situation. Voelker v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1902) 116 Fed. Rep. 867.

Car from without state.—If a car being moved had come from a point without the state it would be moving interstate commerce, and this is so even though the car to which another was being coupled was not the one used in the interstate traffic, but was being removed as a necessary step in getting at and moving the interstate car. Winkler v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., (1902) 4 Penn. (Del.) 80.

Coupling and uncoupling included.—This statute applies the test of whether the person operating the coupler is required to go between the ends of the cars to the act of coupling as well as that of uncoupling, and the concluding phrase is applicable to both acts. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Voelker, (C. C. A. 1904) 129 Fed. Rep. 526.

Automatic coupling by impact necessary.—A car equipped with a coupler which did not couple automatically by impact, but required men to go between the cars to make the coupling, does not comply with the provisions of this Act. Winkler v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., (1902) 4 Penn. (Del.) 80.

Liability of railroad company.—The statutory requirement with respect to equipping cars with automatic couplers was enacted in order to protect railway employees, as far as possible, from the risks incurred when engaged in coupling and uncoupling cars. If a railway uses in its business cars which do not conform to the statutory requirements, either because they never were equipped with automatic couplers, or because the company through negligence has permitted the couplers, originally sufficient, to become worn out and inoperative, then the company is certainly not performing the duty and obligation imposed upon it by the statute, and is clearly, therefore, chargeable with negligence in thus using an improperly equipped car; and the company is bound to know that if it calls upon one of its employees to make a coupling with a coupler so defective and inoperative that it will not couple by impact, and that to make the coupling the employee must subject himself to all the risks and dangers that inhered in the old and dangerous link and pin method of coupling, it is subjecting such employee to the very risk and danger which it is the purpose of the statute to protect him against so far as that is reasonably possible. Voelker v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1902) 116 Fed. Rep. 867.

Negligence per se.—The use of a car which is not equipped as provided by this Act is negligence per se. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Winkler, (1903) 4 Penn. (Del.) 387, affirming (1902) 4 Penn. (Del.) 80.

When duty to equip arises.—When companies are engaged in interstate traffic it is their duty, under the Act of Congress, not to use in connection with such traffic cars that are not equipped as required by this Act. This duty of proper equipment is obligatory upon the company before it uses the car in connection with interstate traffic, and it is not a duty which only arises when the car happens to be loaded with interstate freight. Voelker v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1902) 116 Fed. Rep. 867.

Necessity to keep coupler in repair.—Congress must have intended by this Act that the coupler should be kept in proper repair for use. Southern R. Co. v. Carson, (1904) 194 U. S. 140. See also Carson v. Southern R. Co., (1903) 68 S. Car. 55.

Coupler out of repair.—A coupler so out of repair that it required the presence of the body between the ends of the cars, the use of both hands, considerable strength, and more than the usual time, does not satisfy the statute, and constitutes actionable negligence. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Voelker, (C. C. A. 1904) 129 Fed. Rep. 526.

Couplers of different makes.—The equipment of a car with automatic couplers which will couple automatically with those of the same kind or make, is a compliance with the statute. It does not require cars used in interstate commerce to be equipped with couplers which will couple automatically with cars equipped with automatic couplers of other makes. Johnson v. Southern Pac. R. Co., (C. C. A. 1902) 117 Fed. Rep. 462.

The preparation of the coupler and the impact are not isolated acts, but connected and indispensable parts of the larger act which is regulated by this statute and the performance of which is intended to be relieved of unnecessary risk and danger. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Voelker, (C. C. A. 1904) 129 Fed. Rep. 526.

Duty of employee to use couplers.—This Act requiring couplers imposes upon the employee the correlative duty of using these couplers when furnished, and of refraining from unnecessarily going between the ends of the cars to uncouple them. The failure of a servant to discharge this duty, if it directly contributes to his injury, is fatal to an action for damages on account of the injury. Gilbert v. Burlington, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 1904) 128 Fed. Rep. 529.

Calling attention of jury to Act by court. — It was not error on the part of the court to call the attention of the jury to the provisions of the Act of Congress because it was not averred in the petition that the defendant had hauled or permitted to be used on its lines the car in question, or that it was hauled or used in connection with interstate traffic. Voelker v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1902) 116 Fed. Rep. 867.

New trial on ground of surprise. — Where the defendant well knew that the condition of the coupler was an issue of fact in the case, and had full opportunity to introduce all the evidence at its command on this point, it certainly is not entitled to a new trial upon the theory that if it had been foreseen that the court was going to cite the Act of Congress upon the question of the legal obligation resting upon the defendant, it might perhaps have had further evidence on the issue of fact. Voelker v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1902) 116 Fed. Rep. 867.

SEC. 3. [Companies complying, etc., may refuse insufficiently equipped cars from connecting lines.] That when any person, firm, company, or corporation engaged in interstate commerce by railroad shall have equipped a sufficient number of its cars so as to comply with the provisions of section one of this act, it may lawfully refuse to receive from connecting lines of road or shippers any cars not equipped sufficiently, in accordance with the first section of this act, with such power or train brakes as will work and readily interchange with the brakes in use on its own cars, as required by this act. [27 Stat. L. 531.]

SEC. 4. [Grab irons, etc.] That from and after the first day of July, eighteen hundred and ninety-five, until otherwise ordered by the Interstate Commerce Commission, it shall be unlawful for any railroad company to use any car in interstate commerce that is not provided with secure grab irons or handholds in the ends and sides of each car for greater security to men in coupling and uncoupling cars. [27 Stat. L. 531.]

Both loaded and empty cars. — This statute applies not only to cars that are loaded, but to all cars whether empty or loaded which are being used in interstate commerce. Malott v. Hood, (1903) 201 Ill. 202.

Ordinary prudence of employee. — A failure to provide such grab irons does not excuse a brakeman from failure to use ordinary prudence in a particular case where he observes the absence of such appliances; nor does this Act change the rule as to the liability of the master where the failure to comply with the statute was not the cause of the injury. Hodges v. Kimball, (C. C. A. 1900) 104 Fed. Rep. 745, citing Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Baker, (C. C. A. 1899) 91 Fed. Rep. 225.

dence in a particular case where he observes the absence of such appliances; nor does this Act change the rule as to the liability of the master where the failure to comply with the statute was not the cause of the injury. Hodges v. Kimball, (C. C. A. 1900) 104 Fed. Rep. 745, citing Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Baker, (C. C. A. 1899) 91 Fed. Rep. 225.

SEC. 5. [Determination of standard height of drawbars — certificate and notice — noncomplying cars excluded.] That within ninety days from the passage of this act the American Railway Association is authorized hereby to designate to the Interstate Commerce Commission the standard height of drawbars for freight cars, measured perpendicular from the level of the tops of the rails to the centers of the drawbars, for each of the several gauges of railroads in use in the United States, and shall fix a maximum variation from such standard height to be allowed between the drawbars of empty and loaded cars. Upon their determination being certified to the Interstate Commerce Commission, said Commission shall at once give notice of the standard fixed upon to all common carriers, owners, or lessees engaged in interstate commerce in the United States by such means as the Commission may deem proper. But should said association fail to determine a standard as above provided, it shall be the duty of the Interstate Commerce Commission to do so, before July first, eighteen hundred and ninety-four, and immediately to give notice thereof as aforesaid. And after July first, eighteen hundred and ninety-five, no cars, either loaded or unloaded, shall be used in interstate traffic which do not comply with the standard above provided for. [27 Stat. L. 531.]

SEC. 6. [Penalty for violation of law — recovery.] That any such common carrier using any locomotive engine, running any train, or hauling or permitting to be hauled or used on its line any car in violation of any of the provisions of this Act, shall be liable to a penalty of one hundred dollars for each and every such violation, to be recovered in a suit or suits to be brought by the United States district attorney in the district court of the United States having jurisdiction in the locality where such violation shall have been committed; and it shall be the duty of such district attorney to bring such suits upon duly verified information being lodged with him of such violation having occurred; and it shall also be the duty of the Interstate Commerce Commission to lodge with the proper district attorneys information of any such violations as may come to its knowledge: Provided, That nothing in this Act contained shall apply to trains composed of four-wheel cars or to trains composed of eight-wheel standard logging cars where the height of such car from top of rail to center of coupling does not exceed twenty-five inches, or to locomotives used in hauling such trains when such cars or locomotives are exclusively used for the transportation of logs. [29 Stat. L. 85.]

This section was amended to read as above by the Act of April 1, 1896, ch. 87, 29 Stat. L. 85. The amendment consists in striking out the proviso of the section as originally enacted, as follows: "Provided, That nothing in this Act contained shall apply to trains composed of four-wheel cars or to locomotives used in hauling such trains," and inserting the proviso as given in the text.

SEC. 7. [Time for compliance may be extended.] That the Interstate Commerce Commission may from time to time upon full hearing and for good cause extend the period within which any common carrier shall comply with the provisions of this act. [27 Stat. L. 532.]

SEC. 8. [Employees injured by noncomplying cars, etc., do not assume the risk.] That any employee of any such common carrier who may be injured by any locomotive, car, or train in use contrary to the provision of this act shall not be deemed thereby to have assumed the risk thereby occasioned, although continuing in the employment of such carrier after the unlawful use of such locomotive, car, or train had been brought to his knowledge. [27 Stat. L. 532.]

It is competent for Congress to say that a common carrier which has not fulfilled the provisions of this Act may not avail itself of the doctrine of assumed risk. Kansas City, etc., R. Co. v. Flippo, (1903) 138 Ala. 487.

Effect of Act on common law.—This Act of Congress changes the common law. Before its enactment servants coupling cars used in interstate commerce without automatic couplers assumed the risk and danger of that employment, and carriers were not liable for injuries which their employees suffered in the discharge of this duty. Since the passage, the employees no longer assume this risk, and if they are free from contributory negligence they may recover for the damages they sustain in this work. A statute which thus changes the common law must be strictly construed. The common or the general law is not further abrogated by such a statute than the clear import of its language necessarily requires. Johnson v. Southern Pac. R. Co., (C. C. A. 1902) 117 Fed. Rep. 462.

Locomotive without automatic coupler.—

The language of this statute does not require the abrogation of the common law that the servant assumes the risk of coupling a locomotive without automatic couplers with a car which is provided with them, Johnson v. Southern Pac. R. Co., (C. C. A. 1902) 117 Fed. Rep. 462.

Known absence of grab irons.—The meaning of the Act is, that by remaining in his employment the servant does not assume the risks generally incident to the absence of such irons, but not that in a particular case of voluntary action, with full knowledge of the situation, the character of the act is not to be determined according to all the facts and circumstances. The known absence of the grab irons is a circumstance which the jury should consider in determining whether the defendant in error was guilty of contributory negligence or intended to assume the risk of the attempt to uncouple. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Baker, (C. C. A. 1899) 91 Fed. Rep. 224.

Unmarked car in bad order.—Where a car is in bad order, not so marked, used on a track for handling active freight trains and cars, and where there is no evidence that an employee injured was engaged in moving the car as one in bad order with a view to its isolation or repair, working under such circumstances with a car in use in a condition contrary to the Act of Congress does not amount to an assumption of the risk arising therefrom. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Voelker, (C. C. A. 1904) 129 Fed. Rep. 526.

Necessary showing by plaintiff.—The plaintiff in an action for damages for injuries claimed to have been received because the car was not equipped according to this Act, must show by preponderance of evidence that he was engaged in moving interstate commerce at the time of the accident and that at such time the cars then in use were not equipped with automatic couplers. Winkler v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., (1902) 4 Penn. (Del.) 80.

Averment of law violated.—It was not necessary, nor indeed permissible under the rules of pleading, that the petition should set forth the law which had been violated. Voelker v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1902) 116 Fed. Rep. 867.

Contributory negligence.—If, in using an unlawful coupler, an employee by his own carelessness contributed to an accident, he cannot recover, notwithstanding the fact that the coupling was unlawful. Winkler v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., (1902) 4 Penn. (Del.) 80.

Availability of defense of contributory negligence.—The railroad company is not deprived of the defense of contributory negligence by this Act. Such defense is available to the company, now as well as before the passage of the Act, although the company may not have complied with the statutory requirements. Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Arrighi, (C. C. A. 1904) 129 Fed. Rep. 347.

Negligence per se.—It cannot be affirmed to be negligence per se for a brakeman to go in between the cars and the engine in order to make a coupling. Kansas City, etc., R. Co. v. Flipppo, (1903) 138 Ala. 487.

An Act Requiring common carriers engaged in interstate commerce to make full reports of all accidents to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

[SEC. 1.] [Common carriers to report accidents to Interstate Commerce Commission.] It shall be the duty of the general manager, superintendent, or other proper officer of every common carrier engaged in interstate commerce by railroad to make to the Interstate Commerce Commission, at its office in Washington, District of Columbia, a monthly report, under oath, of all collisions of trains or where any train or part of a train accidentally leaves the track, and of all accidents which may occur to its passengers or employees while in the service of such common carrier and actually on duty, which report shall state the nature and causes thereof, and the circumstances connected therewith. [31 Stat. L. 1446.]

SEC. 2. [Penalty for failure to report.] That any common carrier failing to make such report within thirty days after the end of any month shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof by a court of competent jurisdiction, shall be punished by a fine of not more than one hundred dollars for each and every offense and for every day during which it shall fail to make such report after the time herein specified for making the same. [31 Stat. L. 1446.]

SEC. 3. [Report inadmissible as evidence.] That neither said report nor any part thereof shall be admitted as evidence or used for any purpose against such railroad so making such report in any suit or action for damages growing out of any matter mentioned in said report. [31 Stat. L. 1446.]

SEC. 4. [Form of reports.] That the Interstate Commerce Commission is authorized to prescribe for such common carriers a method and form for making the reports in the foregoing section provided. [31 Stat. L. 1446.]

[III. TRAIN ROBBERIES.]

An Act For the suppression of train robbery in the Territories of the United States and elsewhere, and for other purposes.

[Act of July 1, 1902, ch. 1876, 32 Stat. L. 727.]

[SEC. 1.] [Train robberies, etc. — punishment.] That if any person shall willfully and maliciously trespass upon or enter upon any railroad train, railroad car, or railroad locomotive, within any Territory of the United States, or any place subject to the exclusive jurisdiction or control thereof, with the intent to commit murder, robbery, or any unlawful violence upon or against any passenger on said train or car, or upon or against any engineer, conductor, fireman, brakeman, or any officer or employee connected with said locomotive, train, or car, or upon or against any express messenger or mail agent on said train, or in any such car thereof, or to commit any crime or offense against any person or property thereon, such person shall be punished by imprisonment not exceeding twenty years, or by fine not exceeding five thousand dollars, or both, at the discretion of the court. [32 Stat. L. 727.]

SEC. 2. [Aiding and abetting.] That any person who shall counsel, aid, abet, and assist in the perpetration of any of the offenses set forth in the preceding section shall be deemed to be principals therein. [32 Stat. L. 728.]

SEC. 3. [Proofs.] That upon the trial of any person charged with any offense set forth in this Act it shall not be necessary to set forth or prove the particular person against whom it was intended to commit the offense, or that it was intended to commit such offense against any particular person. [32 Stat. L. 728.]

Verdict may be qualified.—See CRIMES AND OFFENSES, vol. 2, p. 356.

In Indian country.—The crime of rape is not provided for in R. S. sec. 2145, and it is a crime for which the general laws of the United States provide a punishment, when committed in a place within the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States, and hence must be an offense against such laws when committed in the Indian country by a white man against a white woman. U. S. v. Partello, (1891) 48 Fed. Rep. 670.

Does not include Indians.—If the defendant is an Indian, he is not embraced by this section, for this section is one of the general laws of the United States in relation to crimes committed in places within their exclusive jurisdiction, from which, by virtue of sections 2145 and 2146 of the Revised Statutes, crimes committed in the Indian country, by one Indian against the person or property of another Indian, were excluded. U. S. v. Ward, (1890) 42 Fed. Rep. 320.

SEC. 5. [Punishment of offense by Indians.] That any Indian who shall commit the offense of rape within the limits of any Indian reservation shall be punished by imprisonment at the discretion of the court. So much of the ninth section of chapter three hundred and forty one of the acts of the year eighteen hundred and eighty-five as is inconsistent herewith is herewith [sic] repealed. [29 Stat. L. 487.]

This is from the Act of Jan. 15, 1897, ch. 29, set forth in CRIMES AND OFFENSES, vol. 2, p. 356. The provision to which the text refers is set forth in INDIANS, vol. 3, p. 388, which see for other provisions on this subject.

An act to punish, as a felony, the carnal and unlawful knowing of any female under the age of sixteen years.

[Carnal knowledge of female under sixteen years of age.] That every person who shall carnally and unlawfully know any female under the age of sixteen years, or who shall be accessory to such carnal and unlawful knowledge before the fact in the District of Columbia or other place, except the territories, over which the United States has exclusive jurisdiction; or on any vessel within the admiralty or maritime jurisdiction of the United States, and out of the jurisdiction of any State or Territory, shall be guilty of a felony, and when convicted thereof shall be punished by imprisonment at hard labor, for the first offense for not more than fifteen years, and for each subsequent offense not more than thirty years. [25 Stat. L. 658.]

The words "except the territories" have reference exclusively to that system of organized government long existing within the United States by which certain regions of the country have been erected into civil governments. These governments have an executive, a legislative, and a judicial system. They have the powers which all these departments of government have exercised, which are conferred upon them by Act of Congress, and their legislative acts are subject to the disapproval of the Congress of the United States. They are not in any sense independent governments. They have no senators in Congress, and no representatives in the lower house of that body except what are called "delegates," with limited functions. Yet they exercise nearly all the powers of the government under what was generally called "organic Acts," passed by Congress conferring such powers on them. It is this class of governments long known by the name of "territories" that the Act of Congress excepts from the operation of this statute, while it extends to all other places over which the United States have exclusive jurisdiction. Oklahoma was not of this class of territories. In re Lane, (1890) 135 U. S. 443.

Indictment containing double charge.—Where an indictment contains the double charge of a rape at common law and of the statutory offense under the Act of Feb. 9, 1889, and where it is quite obvious that both these offenses can be made out from the language of the indictment, which is in a single count, the allegation that the offense was by violence and against the will of the woman with the other allegations in the indictment describing the offense of rape, and the allegation that the defendant had carnal knowledge of a female under sixteen years of age making out the offense under the statute of 1889, the allegation that the carnal knowledge was against the will of the woman may be rejected as surplusage, and the rest of the indictment be good under the statute referred to; and as the court instructed the jury in accordance with that view of the subject, and as the jury found the prisoner guilty not of the crime of rape but of the smaller crime of carnal knowledge of a female under sixteen years of age, the action of the court on the subject was probably correct. At all events the court had jurisdiction of the prisoner, and it had jurisdiction both of the offense of rape and of carnal knowledge of a female under sixteen years of age. It was its duty to decide whether there was a sufficient indictment to subject the party to trial for either or both of these offenses. As no motion was made to compel the prosecuting attorney to elect on which of the charges he would try the prisoner, there was no error in its rulings on this subject. If there were it was not an error which went to the jurisdiction of the court to try and sentence the prisoner. In re Lane, 135 U. S. 443.

Sec. 5357. [Receiving stolen goods.] Every person who, upon the high seas, or in any place under the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States, buys, receives, or conceals any money, goods, bank-notes, or other thing which may be the subject of larceny, and which has been feloniously taken or stolen from any other person, knowing the same to have been taken or stolen, shall be punished by a fine of not more than one thousand dollars, and by imprisonment at hard labor not more than three years. [R. S.]

Act of March 3, 1825, ch. 65, 4 Stat. L. 116; Act of April 30, 1790, ch. 9, 1 Stat. L. 116.

Error in instruction.—In instructing the jury it is not error that the court fails to use the word "feloniously" as applied to "stolen." Harless v. U. S., (1898) 1 Indian Ter. 447.

What must appear for conviction.—In order to convict a person for the crime of receiving stolen property it must appear, first, that the property was stolen by some person other than the defendant; second, that the defendant received the property and converted it to his own use; and third, that the defendant knew that the property when he received it had been stolen. Harless v. U. S., (1898) 1 Indian Ter. 447.

SEC. 2. [Receiving stolen property of the United States.] That if any person shall receive, conceal, or aid in concealing, or have, or retain in his possession with intent to convert to his own use or gain, any money, property, record, voucher, or valuable thing whatever, of the moneys, goods, chattels, records, or property of the United States, which has theretofore been embezzled, stolen, or purloined from the United States by any other person, knowing the same to have been so embezzled, stolen, or purloined, such person shall, on conviction before the circuit or district court of the United States in the district wherein he may have such property, be punished by a fine not exceeding five thousand dollars, or imprisonment at hard labor in the penitentiary not exceeding five years, one or both, at the discretion of the court before which he shall be convicted; and such receiver may be tried either before or after the conviction of the principal felon, but if the party has been convicted, then the judgment against him shall be conclusive evidence in the prosecution against such receiver that the property of the United States therein described has been embezzled, stolen, or purloined. [18 Stat. L. 479.]

This is from the Act of March 3, 1875, ch. 144, "An act to punish certain larcenies, and the receivers of stolen goods." See LARCENY, vol. 4, p. 790.

Constitutionality.—"So much of the above Act * * * as declares that the judgment of conviction against the principal felons shall be evidence in the prosecution against the receiver that the property of the United States alleged to have been embezzled, stolen, or purloined had been embezzled, stolen, or purloined, is in violation of the clause of the Constitution of the United States declaring that in all criminal prosecutions the accused shall be confronted with the witnesses against him." Kirby v. U. S., (1899) 174 U. S. 47.

Averment of name of principal.—An objection to an indictment on the ground that the indictment does not show from whom the accused received the stolen goods, nor state that the name of such person was unknown to the grand jurors, is not well taken. If the goods were in fact stolen from the United States and if they were received by the accused, no matter from whom, with intent to convert them to his own use or gain, and knowing that they had been stolen from the United States, he could be found guilty of the crime, even if it were not shown by the evidence from whom he received such goods. Kirby v. U. S., (1899) 174 U. S. 47.

Record of conviction of principals as evidence.—“Where the statute makes the conviction of the principal thief a condition precedent to the trial and punishment of a receiver of the stolen property, the record of the trial of the former would be evidence in the prosecution against the receiver to show that the principal felon had been convicted; for a fact of that nature could only be established by a record. The record of the conviction of the principals could not, however, be used to establish, against the alleged receiver charged with the commission of another and substantive crime the essential fact that the property alleged to have been feloniously received by him was actually stolen from the United States.” Kirby v. U. S., (1899) 174 U. S. 47.

Sec. 5403. [Destroying, etc., public records.] Every person who willfully destroys or attempts to destroy, or, with intent to steal or destroy, takes and carries away any record, paper, or proceeding of a court of justice, filed or deposited with any clerk or officer of such court, or any paper, or document, or record filed or deposited in any public office, or with any judicial or public officer, shall, without reference to the value of the record, paper, document, or proceeding so taken, pay a fine of not more than two thousand dollars, or suffer imprisonment, at hard labor, not more than three years, or both. [R. S.]

The object of the statute is to preserve the public records and papers intact from all kinds of spoliation, mutilation, or destruction. U. S. v. De Groat, (1887) 30 Fed. Rep. 764.

Necessity of intent to destroy a record.—The specific intent to destroy a record must be present, and its absence, through want of knowledge of the fact that the paper or document destroyed constituted a record, relieves the defendants of any criminal offense under this statute, however guilty they may be under the state laws, of larceny, or under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1875, ch. 144, 18 Stat. L. 479, which was passed to further protect the records and other property of the United States from the simple crime of theft or larceny, without regard to any specific intent to destroy them as records. U. S. v. De Groat, (1887) 30 Fed. Rep. 764.

From what place taken.—This offense may be committed by taking the records from any place whatever, wherever they may be found, no matter how private or unusual the place; but the intent to destroy a record must exist from whatever place the papers are taken. U. S. v. De Groat, (1887) 30 Fed. Rep. 764.

Larceny of records as property.—"It is manifest that this statute is not broad enough and was not intended to punish the mere larceny or theft of the papers or documents as property, but that the essential element of the offense is the specific intent to destroy them as records of a public office; or, in other words, to obliterate or conceal them as the evidence of that which constitutes their value as public records, or to destroy or impair their legal effect or usefulness as a record of our governmental affairs, be that effect or usefulness what it may." U. S. v. De Groat, (1887) 30 Fed. Rep. 764.

Where public records were stored in a barn, and the defendants stole them as old paper and not as public records, and sold them to junk dealers, they are not guilty of the offense described in this statute, as the intent to destroy a public record is not present. U. S. v. De Groat, (1887) 30 Fed. Rep. 764.

Abandoned records.—The government or its officials may throw away papers, abandon them, send them to the junk dealer, or otherwise emancipate them from the category of records, as well as other people; and if its officials so deal with the records and so keep them that they appear to be abandoned, that fact may be sufficient to justify others in treating them as abandoned in relation to their character as records. U. S. v. De Groat, (1887) 30 Fed. Rep. 764.

Record as evidence of its character.—"Because a paper bears on its face indications of once having been a public record, or that possibly or probably it was such a record, it cannot be fairly implied as a fact that it always continues to be so wherever or under whatever circumstances it may be found by one charged with an intention to destroy it as a record." U. S. v. De Groat, (1887) 30 Fed. Rep. 764.

Sec. 5408. [Destroying records by officer in charge.] Every officer, having the custody of any record, document, paper, or proceeding specified in section fifty-four hundred and three, who fraudulently takes away, or withdraws, or destroys any such record, document, paper, or proceeding filed in his office or deposited with him or in his custody, shall pay a fine of not more than two thousand dollars, or suffer imprisonment at hard labor not more than three years, or both; and shall, moreover, forfeit his office and be forever afterward disqualified from holding any office under the Government of the United States. [R. S.]

Sec. 5411. [Altering, etc., records in surveyor-general's office in California.] Every person who, without lawful authority, willfully takes from the archives of the surveyor-general's office in California, any expediente, map, diseño, book, paper, writing, record, document, seal, stamp, or die; or willfully alters, defaces, mutilates, injures, or destroys any expediente, book, paper, map, diseño, instrument of writing, document, record, seal, stamp, or die, deposited in such archives; or conceals or unlawfully withholds from the possession of the surveyor-general, or on demand refuses to deliver to him any expediente, map, diseño, official book, paper, writing, document, archive, record, seal, stamp, or die relating to or used in the administration of government in the Department of Upper California, and belonging to the Government during the existence of Spanish or Mexican authority in that department; or who willfully alters, defaces, mutilates, makes away with, or destroys any such official book, expediente, map, diseño, paper, writing, document, archive, record, seal, stamp, or die, shall pay a fine of not more than ten thousand dollars, and be imprisoned for a term not more than ten years. Sec. 5412. [Deposit of fraudulent papers in archives.] Every person who secretly or fraudulently places, or causes to be placed, in or among the archives of the surveyor-general's office in California, any expediente, book, paper, diseño, map, draught, record, or any instrument of writing purporting to be a petition, decree, order, report, concession, grant, confirmation, map, diseño, expediente or part of an expediente, denouncement, title-paper, or evidence of right, title, or claim to any land, mine, or mineral, or any book, writing, paper, or document whatever, shall pay a fine of not more than five thousand dollars, or be imprisoned for a term not more than three years; or be both fined and imprisoned within such limits. Sec. 934. [Property taken under revenue laws irrepleviable.] All property taken or detained by any officer or other person, under authority of any revenue law of the United States, shall be irrepleviable, and shall be deemed to be in the custody of the law, and subject only to the orders and decrees of the courts of the United States having jurisdiction thereof. [R. S.]

Act of July 13, 1866, ch. 184, 14 Stat. L. 172.

Effect on powers of customs officers.—In the case of seized goods, and particularly in the case of goods liable for forfeiture, this section and R. S. sec. 938 leave nothing for customs officers to decide or control in the regular line of the duties imposed upon them as such officers. In re Chichester, (1891) 48 Fed. Rep. 281.

Power of court to take possession.—Where the authority of the court to proceed with regard to property seized by a collector is denied by the collector, a marshal of the court may, under the provisions of this section and the general powers of the court and under its explicit order, take the property out of the possession of the officers of customs into his exclusive custody. The Conqueror, (1892) 49 Fed. Rep. 99.

Bill in equity.—Goods in charge of a collector under this section are irrepleviable, although subject to the orders and decrees of the courts of the United States having appropriate jurisdiction. There is no form of action at common law which would give possession of them, but a bill in equity is the only and therefore an appropriate method of proceeding therefor. Pollard v. Reardon, (1895) 65 Fed. Rep. 848.

Seizure under state process.—Distilled liquors in a United States bonded warehouse cannot be seized under state process. (1894) 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 73.

Property seized as belonging to another.—Under this Act replevin does not lie for property of the plaintiff seized under a warrant by a collector of internal revenue as the property of another. Treat v. Staples, (1870) Holmes (U. S.) 1, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,162.

Liquors in bonded warehouse.—The legal status of distilled liquors in a bonded warehouse of the United States, and under the control of the collector of internal revenue, is definitely stated and settled by this section. (1894) 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 73.

Jurisdiction over yacht seized as imported.—Under this section the determination of the question whether a pleasure yacht brought from a foreign country to this country was an imported article or not, is within the jurisdiction of the District Court, where she had been seized by the collector of the port as liable to duty and thereupon libeled by the owner averring that the seizure of the yacht by the collector was illegal and wrongful. In re Fassett, (1892) 142 U. S. 479.

Nominal damages should only be allowed on judgment for defendant in replevin where he has failed to show right in himself to the property in controversy. Treat v. Staples, (1870) Holmes (U. S.) 1, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,162.

After duty paid.—After the duty on imported goods which have been deposited in a private bonded warehouse has been paid and a withdrawal permit issued, the government has no further concern with the goods, and the right to withhold or deliver them rests with the warehouseman alone. An act to amend section six hundred and eighty-three of the Revised Statutes relating to the distribution of the reports of the Supreme Court.

[SEC. 1.] [Distribution of Supreme Court reports to Circuit and District Courts.] That section six hundred and eighty-three of the Revised Statutes of the United States be, and the same is hereby, so amended as to provide for the distribution, by the Secretary of the Interior, of one set of the official reports of the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, or an exact reprint of the same, comprising volumes one to one hundred and twenty-two, inclusive, or so many volumes as may be needed with those already supplied to make one such set, to each of the places where the circuit and district courts of the United States are regularly held: Provided, That where a circuit court and district court are both holden at the same place, only one such set, or so many volumes as may be needed with those already supplied to make one such set, shall be distributed to that place: Provided further, That for the sets or parts of sets distributed as aforesaid not exceeding two dollars per volume shall be paid; and said report shall be kept by the clerks of said courts and their successors in office for the use of said courts and the officers thereof; and the sum of twenty-eight thousand dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated to carry out the above provision. [25 Stat. L. 661.]

SEC. 2. [Additional copies from publishers — who to make distribution.] That, beginning with volume one hundred and twenty-three, the reporter of the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States shall deliver to the Secretary of the Interior, in addition to the number heretofore required by law to be so delivered by him, seventy-six copies of each volume of the reports of said decisions, for which additional copies he shall be allowed not exceeding two dollars per volume. And hereafter all the copies of said reports furnished by said reporter shall be distributed by the Secretary of the Interior in the manner heretofore authorized by law: Provided, That the Secretary of the Interior shall also distribute to each of the places where the circuit and district courts of the United States are regularly holden one copy of the reports so furnished, to be kept by the clerks of said courts and their successors in office, for the use of said courts and the officers thereof: Provided further, That where a circuit court and a district court are both holden at the same place, only one copy shall be distributed to that place, and the residue of the copies shall be deposited in the Library of Congress. And the said reports, in all cases where the same are distributed as aforesaid, shall remain the property of the United States, and be preserved as such by the above-named officers, and by them to be turned over to their successors in office: And so much of section three hundred and eighty-six of the Revised Statutes as charges the Department of Justice with the distribution thereof is hereby repealed. [25 Stat. L. 661.]

R. S. secs. 386, 387, relate to the distribution of statutes and reports to judges, and a register thereof. See PUBLIC DOCUMENTS, ante, p. 153,

An Act For the further distribution of the reports of the Supreme Court, and for other purposes.

[SEC. 1.] [Further distribution of Supreme Court reports.] That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to distribute to each of the following-named officers of the United States, additional to those named in section six hundred and eighty-three of the Revised Statutes, namely: Each assistant Attorney-General; the Solicitor of the Department of State; the Comptroller of the Currency; the Judge-Advocate-General, Navy Department; the Interstate Commerce Commission; the clerk of the Supreme Court of the United States; the marshal of the Supreme Court of the United States, and the attorney for the District of Columbia, one copy of each volume of the Official Reports of the Supreme Court of the United States, including those already published and those hereafter to be published, or a reprint of the same, or so many of said volumes as with those already in the possession of any of those officers will make a complete set; and he shall also distribute of the same reports to the law library of the Department of the Interior and the library of the Department of Justice each two sets, and to the marshal of said court, as custodian of public property used by same, three copies of said reports hereafter printed, for use in the conference room, the robing room, and the court room of said court for the use of the justices thereof, and to each United States circuit and district judge and to each judge of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia who has not already been supplied, one set; and he shall also distribute to each additional United States judge hereafter appointed one complete set of said reports, which shall in all cases be transmitted to their successors in office, and to the Secretary of the Senate for the use of the committees of the Senate ten complete sets of said reports, and to the Clerk of the House of Representatives, to be distributed to and for the use of the committees of said House, ten complete sets of said reports. [32 Stat. L. 630.]

What reports authorized.—This section authorizes the distribution of the official edition only of those reports, together with reprints of such earlier volumes as are out of print or are otherwise difficult to procure. (1902) 24 Op. Atty.-Gen. 106.

What constitutes "reprint."—While a reprint of the official reports of the Supreme Court need not be a facsimile, yet it is not a reprint unless it contains the same matter as the official edition. The official edition contains more than the opinion of the court. It contains a preliminary statement of facts which is often prepared by the justices, a syllabus and headline, indices, and occasionally footnotes; at times it contains addresses made on the occasion of the death of members of the court. And unless the so-called "reprint" contains all of these, it is not a reprint even though it reproduces verbatim et literatim the text of the decisions. (1902) 24 Op. Atty.-Gen. 106.

SEC. 2. [Same subject.] That the Secretary of the Interior shall likewise distribute to each of the places where circuit and district courts of the United States are now holden, including the Indian Territory, islands of Hawaii and Porto Rico, to which they have not already been supplied under the provisions of the Act of Congress approved February twelfth, eighteen hundred and eighty-nine, and to the Naval Academy at Annapolis and to the Military Academy at West Point, one complete set of the Reports of the Supreme Court, including those already published and those hereafter to be published, or a reprint of the same, or such volumes as with those already furnished will make one complete set, the judges holding such courts to select the edition of such reports to be supplied for such courts; and he shall also distribute to the Secretary of War twelve complete sets for the use of the proper courts and offices of the Philippine Islands and of the headquarters of military departments in the United States, in his discretion, and to each and every place where a new circuit and district court may be hereafter established one complete set of said reports; and the clerks of said courts shall, in all cases, keep these reports for the use of the courts and the officers thereof: Provided, however, That no distribution of reports under this section shall be made to any place where the court is not held in a building owned by the United States, or where there is no United States officer to whose responsible custody they can be committed. [32 Stat. L. 630.]

This right of selection is limited to judges of the Circuit and District Courts, and does not extend to the other distributees mentioned in this section. It is also limited to the copies to be supplied for the courts, and does not include reports intended for the individual use of the judges. (1902) 24 Op. Atty-Gen. 106.

Official or other editions.—Under this section the Circuit and District judges are authorized to select the editions, whether official or otherwise, for their respective courts, provided that no volumes of the reports have been previously furnished by such court. (1902) 24 Op. Atty-Gen. 106.

SEC. 3. [Additional copies from publishers.] That, beginning with volume one hundred and eighty-three, the publishers of the decisions of the Supreme Court shall deliver to the Secretary of the Interior, in addition to the number heretofore supplied by law, one hundred and four copies of each and every volume of such decisions, and they shall also deliver the seventy-six additional copies provided for in the Act of February twelfth, eighteen hundred and eighty-nine, heretofore delivered by the reporter of the Supreme Court, twenty-five copies of which shall be deposited in the law library of the Supreme Court. [32 Stat. L. 631.]

By whom furnished.—The copies to be distributed under this section are to be furnished by the publishers of the official reports. (1902) 24 Op. Atty-Gen. 106.

SEC. 4. [Distribution of digest of decisions of Supreme Court.] That the Secretary of the Interior shall likewise distribute to each United States judge to whom and to each place to which the Decisions of the Supreme Court are sent under the provisions of this Act or of prior laws, a copy of such digest now published, or in course of publication, of the Supreme Court Reports in four volumes covering the decisions of said court to the end of the October Term, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, or a later period, and to cost not more than twenty-six dollars, as the several Judges and officials shall select respectively. [32 Stat. L. 631.]

To whom distributed.—By this section the digests are to be distributed to each judge or other official entitled to receive the decisions either under this Act or prior legislation. (1902) 24 Op. Atty-Gen. 106.

SEC. 5. [Distribution of Revised Statutes and Supplements. See STATUTES.]

SEC. 6. [Price of Reports and Digests.] That such sum of money as is required to pay for the reports of the Supreme Court and for the digest, and for the Revised Statutes and supplements thereto, the delivery and distribution of which are provided for in this Act, is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated: Provided, That not to exceed two dollars per volume shall be paid for such reports and twenty-six dollars per set for such digest, the said moneys to be disbursed under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, and the Secretary of the Interior shall include in his annual estimates submitted to Congress an estimate for both the current volumes of reports and the additional sets of reports and digest, the distribution of which is provided for in this Act. [32 Stat. L. 631.]

Sec. 383. [Publication of opinions of attorney-general.] The Attorney-General shall from time to time cause to be edited, and printed at the Government Printing-Office, an edition of one thousand copies of such of the opinions of the law-officers herein authorized to be given as he may deem valuable for preservation in volumes, which shall be, as to size, quality of paper, printing, and binding, of uniform style and appearance, as nearly as practicable, with volume eight of such opinions, published, by Robert Farnham, in the year eighteen hundred and sixty-eight. Each volume shall contain proper head-notes, a complete and full index, and such foot-notes as the Attorney-General may approve. Such volumes shall be distributed in such manner as the Attorney-General may from time to time prescribe. [R. S.] consent of the Senate. (1897) 21 Op. Atty-Gen. 551.

This and sections 5-9 following supersede the provisions of Act of March 2, 1895, ch. 189, which read as follows:

"That the President of the United States is hereby authorized to convene a board, to be composed of three surgeons of the Marine-Hospital Service, to examine and report upon all officers now in the Revenue-Cutter Service who, through no vicious habits of their own, are now incapacitated by reason of the infirmities of age or physical or mental disability to efficiently perform the duties of their respective offices. And such officers as, under the terms of this Act, may be reported by said board to be so permanently incapacitated shall be placed on waiting orders

The proceedings and decisions of the board shall be transmitted to the Secretary of the Treasury, and shall by him be laid before the President for his approval or disapproval and his orders in the case. [I. NAVIGABLE WATERS AND REGULATION OF USE.]

Sec. 2476. [Navigable rivers within public lands to be public highways.]

All navigable rivers, within the territory occupied by the public lands, shall remain and be deemed public highways; and, in all cases where the opposite banks of any streams not navigable belong to different persons, the stream and the bed thereof shall become common to both. [R. S.]

Act of May 18, 1796, ch. 29, 1 Stat. L. 468;
Act of March 3, 1803, ch. 27, 2 Stat. L. 235.

Power of government.—The power vested in the general government to regulate interstate and foreign commerce involves the control of the waters of the United States which are navigable in fact, so far as it may be necessary to insure their free navigation, when by themselves or their connection with other waters they form a continuous channel for commerce among the states or with foreign countries. Escanaba, etc., Transp. Co. v. Chicago, (1882) 107 U. S. 678.

The intention of Congress has been clearly manifested to ordain all rivers actually navigable, as common-law rivers, whether or not the tide ebbs and flows. Russell v. The Brig Empire State, (1857) Newb. Adm. 541, 21 Fed. Cas. No. 12,145.

The common-law test of the navigability of waters, that they are subject to the ebb and flow of the tide, grew out of the fact that in England there are no waters navigable in fact, or to any great extent, which are not also affected by the tide. That test has long since been discarded in this country. Escanaba, etc., Transp. Co. v. Chicago, (1882) 107

What are navigable waters.—All our waters are navigable waters of the United States within the meaning of the Acts of Congress, in contradistinction from the navigable waters of the states, where they form in their ordinary condition by themselves or by uniting with other waters a continued highway over which commerce is or may be carried on with other states or foreign countries in the customary modes in which such commerce is conducted by water. (1891) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 101. See also The Daniel Ball, (1870) 10 Wall. (U. S.) 557; The Montello, (1870) 11 Wall. (U. S.) 411; (1874) 20 Wall. (U. S.) 430; Cardwell v. American Bridge Co., (1885) 113 U. S. 205.

"Those rivers are regarded as public navigable rivers in law, which are navigable in fact. * * * 'They are navigable in fact when they are used, or are susceptible of being used, in their ordinary condition, as highways for commerce, over which trade and travel are or may be conducted in the customary modes of trade and travel on water.'"

Packer v. Bird, (1891) 137 U. S. 661. See also Rhea v. Newport, etc., R. Co., (1892) 50 Fed. Rep. 16.

What determines navigability.—It is not of consequence that the stream was originally non-navigable, or that it was artificially constructed, or that it is wholly within one state, or that it has always been practically controlled by the state or city. The use now actually made of the waterway, its practical dedication to the public, the importance, amount, and nature of its commerce, and the source and destination of the commodities borne upon it, establish the character of the navigation. (1891) 20 Op. Atty-Gen. 101.

The mere fact that logs, poles, and rafts are floated down a stream occasionally, and in times of high water, does not make it a navigable river. U. S. v. Rio Grande Dam, etc., Co., (1899) 174 U. S. 707.

The fact that it is a physical possibility to navigate a stream by boats, or the mere capacity to pass a boat of any size, however small, from one stream or rivulet to another, is not sufficient to constitute a navigable water of the United States. Leovy v. U. S., (1900) 177 U. S. 621, reversing (C. C. A. 1899) 92 Fed. Rep. 344.

The navigability of a stream for the purpose of bringing it within the terms "navigable waters of the United States" does not depend upon the mode by which commerce is conducted upon it, as whether by steamers or sailing vessels, or Durham boats; nor upon the difficulties attending navigation, such as those made by falls, rapids, and sandbars, even though these be so great that while they last they prevent the use of the best means, such as steamboats, for carrying on commerce. It depends upon the fact whether the river in its natural state affords a channel for useful commerce. The Montello, (1874) 20 Wall. (U. S.) 430.

An obstruction such as natural falls, etc., does not destroy the character of the river above them, if it be navigable. Spooner v. McConnell, (1838) 1 McLean (U. S.) 337, 22 Fed. Cas. No. 13,245.

The Rio Grande within the limits of New Mexico is not navigable. U. S. v. Rio Grande Dam, etc., Co., (1899) 174 U. S. 707.

Fox river, Wis., is within the rule prescribed by the Supreme Court to determine whether a river is navigable water of the United States. It has always been navigable in fact, and not only capable of use but actually used as a highway for commerce in the only mode in which commerce could be conducted before the navigation of the river was improved. The Montello, (1874) 20 Wall. (U. S.) 430.

The Chicago river and its branches must be deemed navigable waters of the United States, over which Congress, under its commercial power, may exercise control to the extent necessary to protect, preserve, and improve their free navigation. Escanaba, etc., Transp. Co. v. Chicago, (1882) 107 U. S. 678; (1891) 20 Op. Atty-Gen. 101.

No right was reserved by this Act to the beds of non-navigable streams, and it was not the policy of the government to be a landowner in the states. Indiana v. Milk, (1882) 11 Fed. Rep. 389.

Effect of repealing Act declaring navigability.—An Act repealing a prior Act declaring a stream navigable does not invest the riparian owners with title to the bed of the river, nor are the boundaries of their lands extended thereby. Chicago, etc., R. Co., v. Porter, (1887) 72 Iowa 426; Serrin v. Grefe, (1885) 67 Iowa 196; Steele v. Sanchez, (1887) 72 Iowa 65; Wood v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1883) 60 Iowa 456.

Application of common-law rules of riparian ownership.—Congress, in providing as it does, in one or more Acts relating to the survey and sale of public lands bordering upon rivers, that navigable rivers within the territory to be surveyed should be deemed to be public highways, and that where the opposite banks of any stream, not navigable, should belong to different persons, the stream and the bed thereof should become common to both, meant to enact that the common-law rules of riparian ownership should apply in the latter case, but that the title to lands bordering on navigable streams should stop at the stream, and not come to the medium filum. But such riparian proprietors have the same right to construct suitable landings and wharves, for the convenience of commerce and navigation, as riparian proprietors on navigable waters, affected by the ebb and flow of tide. St. Paul, etc., R. Co. v. Schurmeir, (1868) 7 Wall. (U. S.) 272. See also Packer v. Bird, (1891) 137 U. S. 661.

Grant on pond or lake.—"While a general grant of land on a river or stream, non-navigable, extends the line of the grantee to the middle or thread of the current, a grant to a natural pond or lake extends only to the water's edge." Indiana v. Milk, (1882) 11 Fed. Rep. 389, citing Wheeler v. Spinola, (1873) 54 N. Y. 377; Canal Com'rs v. People, (1830) 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 423; Dillingham v. Smith, (1849) 30 Me. 370; Mansur v. Blake, (1873) 62 Me. 38; Paine v. Woods, (1871) 108 Mass. 160; State v. Gilmanton, (1838) 9 N. H. 461; Mariner v. Schulte, (1861) 13 Wis. 692; Delaplaine v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1877) 42 Wis. 214; Boorman v. Sunnuchs, (1877) 42 Wis. 233; Seaman v. Smith, (1860) 24 Ill. 521; Austin v. Rutland R. Co., (1872) 45 Vt. 215.

Non-navigable streams are usually narrow, and the lines of riparian owners can be extended into them at right angles without interference or confusion, and without serious injustice to any one. It was therefore natural when such streams were called for as boundaries, to hold that the real line between opposite shore owners was the thread of the current. The rights of the riparian proprietors in the bed of the stream itself were thus clearly defined. But when this rule is attempted to be applied to lakes and ponds, practical difficulties are encountered. They have no current, and being more or less circular, it would hardly be possible to run the boundary lines beyond the water's edge, so as to define the rights of shore owners in the beds. Indiana v. Milk, (1882) 11 Fed. Rep. 389.

In the case of land bounded on a non-navigable lake the United States assumes the position of a private owner subject to the general law of the state so far as its conveyances are concerned. Such cases are not affected by R. S. secs. 2476, 5251. Hardin v. Shedd, (1903) 190 U. S. 508.

Holding in severalty.—In St. Paul, etc., R. Co. v. Schurmeir, (1868) 7 Wall. (U. S.) 272, this section was interpreted to mean that instead of the owners of opposite banks of a non-navigable stream being tenants in common of the bed, each held in severalty to the centre of the stream.

Sec. 5244. [Certain rivers in Alabama to be free from tolls.] The Tennessee, Coosa, Cahawba, and Black Warrior Rivers, within the State of Alabama, shall be forever free from toll for all property belonging to the United States, and for all persons in their service, and for all citizens of the United States, except as to such tolls as may be allowed by act of Congress. [R. S.]

Act of May 23, 1828, ch. 75, 4 Stat. L. 290. the Revised Statutes, entitled "Rivers and Sections 5244-5255 constitute title 63 of Harbors."

Sec. 5245. [Toll on canals on the Tennessee.] The assent of the United States is hereby given to any act which the legislature of the State of Alabama may pass for imposing a toll on the use of such parts of the canal or canals which have been, or may be, constructed at or around the Muscle and Colbert's Shoals of the river Tennessee. Such tolls shall be expended exclusively on the canals, and shall not exceed in amount the sum required to keep them in repair, and to defray the expenses of lock-tenders, collectors, superintendents, and managers. This section shall not affect the exemption of the property of the United States, and all persons in their service, from any toll whatever. An annual report shall be made to the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, of the rate and amount of tolls charged or collected on said canals, and their application. [R. S.]

Act of June 23, 1836, ch. 119, 5 Stat. L. 57.

Sec. 5246. [The Des Moines river.] The Des Moines River shall forever remain free from any toll, or other charge whatever, for any property of the United States, or persons in their service, passing along the same. [R. S.]

Act of Aug. 8, 1846, ch. 103, 9 Stat. L. 78; Act of Jan. 20, 1870, ch. 7, 16 Stat. L. 61.

Sec. 5247. [Michigan City harbor.] The passage of vessels to and from the harbor of Michigan City, in Indiana, shall be free and not subject to toll or charge. [R. S.]

Act of June 23, 1866, ch. 138, 14 Stat. L. 73; Act of March 2, 1867, ch. 144, 14 Stat. L. 421.

Sec. 5248. [The Iowa river.] So much of the Iowa River within the State of Iowa as lies north of the town of Wapello shall not be deemed a navigable river or public highway, but dams and bridges may be constructed across it. [R. S.]

Res. of July 13, 1868, No. 55, 15 Stat. L. 257; Act of May 6, 1870, ch. 92, 16 Stat. L. 121.

Sec. 5249. [Wisconsin and Fox rivers.] All tolls and revenues derived from the improvements made or acquired in the Wisconsin River and the line of water communication between the Wisconsin River and the Fox River, after providing for the current expenses of operating and keeping the same in repair, shall be paid into the Treasury; and whenever the United States shall be reimbursed for all sums advanced for the same, with interest thereon, then the tolls shall be reduced to the least sum which, together with other revenues properly applicable thereto, if any, shall be sufficient to operate and keep the improvements in repair. [R. S.]

Act of July 7, 1870, ch. 210, 16 Stat. L. 190.
Tolls abolished.— See Act of July 5, 1884, ch. 229, sec. 4, infra, p. 791. "The effect of this enactment," said Attorney-General Garland, 18 Atty.-Gen. 191, "was to abolish the tolls theretofore levied by the government upon vessels passing through the works of the Fox and Wisconsin Rivers improvement."

Sec. 5250. [Maquoketa river.] The assent of Congress is given to the construction of bridges across the Maquoketa River, within the State of Iowa, with or without draws, as may be provided by the laws of that State. [R. S.]

Res. of July 13, 1868, No. 55, 15 Stat. L. 257.

Sec. 5251. [Rivers in Louisiana.] All the navigable rivers and waters in the former Territories of Orleans and Louisiana shall be and forever remain public highways. [R. S.]

Act of March 3, 1811, ch. 46, 2 Stat. L. 666.

Sec. 5254. [Piers and cribs on the Mississippi and St. Croix rivers.] The owners of saw-mills on the Mississippi River and the Saint Croix River in the States of Wisconsin and Minnesota, are authorized and empowered, under the direction of the Secretary of War, to construct piers or cribs in front of their mill property on the banks of the river, for the protection of their mills and rafts against damage by floods and ice: Provided, however, That the piers or cribs so constructed shall not interfere with or obstruct the navigation of the river. And in case any pier or crib constructed under authority of this section shall at any time, and for any cause, be found to obstruct the navigation of the river, the Government expressly reserves the right to remove or direct the removal of it, at the cost and expense of the owners thereof. [R. S.]

Act of March 3, 1873, ch. 278, 17 Stat. L. 606.

This section was amended by the Act of May 1, 1882, ch. 112, 22 Stat. L. 52, by adding after the words "Mississippi River" the words "and the Saint Croix River in the States of Wisconsin and Minnesota," as above given.

Sec. 5255. [Louisville and Portland canal.] The Secretary of the Treasury is directed to assume, on behalf of the United States, the control and management of the Louisville and Portland Canal in conformity with the terms of the joint resolution of the legislature of the State of Kentucky, approved March twenty-eighth, eighteen hundred and seventy-two, at such time and in such manner as in his judgment the interests of the United States, and the commerce thereof, may require: Provided, That after the United States shall assume control of said canal, the tolls thereon on vessels propelled by steam shall be reduced to twenty-five cents per ton, and on all other vessels in proportion. [R. S.]

By the Act of May 11, 1874, ch. 165, 18 Stat. L. 43, provision was made for the payment of the bonds of the canal company, for a reduction of tolls, and for management by the secretary of war. By the Act of July 5, 1884, ch. 229, sec. 7, 23 Stat. L. 148, authority is given to the secretary of war, to make, post, and enforce regulations for the use of the canal, and these latter provisions were re-enacted by the Act of Sept. 30, 1888, ch. 1041, 25 Stat. L. 497. By the Act of May 1, 1886, ch. 70, 24 Stat. L. 17, partition was allowed of certain adjoining lands. By the Act of Sept. 30, 1890, ch. 1130, 26 Stat. L. 554, the use of a part of the property by private parties was permitted and conditions fixed for its termination.

Tolls abolished.— See the following text.
Volume VI.

An act to abolish all tolls at the Louisville and Portland Canal.

[Act of May 18, 1880, ch. 95, 21 Stat. L. 141.]

[Tolls on Louisville and Portland Canal abolished — expenses, how paid.] That after the first day of July, eighteen hundred and eighty, no tolls shall be charged or collected at the Louisville and Portland Canal, but the Secretary of War shall be authorized to draw his warrant from time to time upon the Secretary of the Treasury to pay the actual expenses of operating and keeping said canal in repair. [21 Stat. L. 141.]

Authority of secretary of treasury to pay warrants. — This Act, in authorizing the secretary of war to draw warrants from time to time upon the secretary of the treasury for the purpose indicated, empowered the latter to pay the warrants so drawn, by legal and almost necessary inference, as fully as if it had been expressly stated that they should be paid out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated. (1880) 16 Op. Atty.-Gen. 557.

SEC. 4. [Tolls on canals or other improvements of United States abolished—expenses of operating—reports.] That no tolls or operating charges whatsoever shall be levied or collected upon any vessel or vessels, dredges, or other passing water-craft through any canal or other work for the improvement of navigation belonging to the United States; and for the purpose of preserving and continuing the use and navigation of said canals, rivers, and other public works without interruption, the Secretary of War, upon the application of the chief engineer in charge of said works, is hereby authorized to draw his warrant or requisition from time to time upon the Secretary of the Treasury to pay the actual expenses of operating and keeping said works in repair, which warrants or requisitions shall be paid by the Secretary of the Treasury, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated: Provided, however, That an itemized statement of said expenses shall accompany the annual report of the chief of engineers. [23 Stat. L. 147.]

This is from the River and Harbor Appropriation Act of July 5, 1884, ch. 229. The provision abolishing tolls was repeated from the Act of Aug. 2, 1882, ch. 375, 22 Stat. L. 209.

What works included. — The words "said canals, rivers, and other public works" and "said works" were not meant to include all those public works which are described in the preceding parts of the same Act. (1885) 18 Op. Atty.-Gen. 188.

Appropriation applicable to what works. — The indefinite appropriation made by this section is not applicable to river and harbor improvements generally, but only to a particular class of public works, such as canals, locks, etc., in the use of which, both operating expenses and expenses for repairs are necessarily incurred. (1885) 18 Op. Atty.-Gen. 188.

Appropriation for Fox and Wisconsin rivers. — A necessity existed for making some provision to meet the current expenses of operating and keeping in repair the works of the Fox and Wisconsin rivers improvement, since the abolishment of tolls thereon; and there can be no doubt that the indefinite appropriation provided by this section was meant to apply to those works. (1885) 18 Op. Atty.-Gen. 188.

SEC. 14. [Des Moines Rapids Canal dry dock.] That the dry dock constructed at the Des Moines Rapids Canal under the provisions of acts of Congress approved August second, eighteen hundred and eighty-two, July fifth, eighteen hundred and eighty-four, August fifth, eighteen hundred and eighty-six, and August eleventh, eighteen hundred and eighty-eight, shall be considered an integrant part of the Des Moines Rapids Canal, and the act of Congress approved March third, eighteen hundred and eighty-one, which provides for expenses of operating and care of Des Moines Rapids and other canals, and the act of Congress approved July fifth, eighteen hundred and eighty-four, which provides penalties for violation of rules and regulations prescribed by the Secretary of War, shall also apply to the said dry-dock. [26 Stat. L. 455.]

This and section 16 following are from the River and Harbor Appropriation Act of Sept. 19, 1890, ch. 907.

SEC. 16. [Buffalo Bayou Ship-Channel, Galveston Bay, Tex., free to navigation, etc.] That whereas the United States, in compliance with its obligation to the Buffalo Bayou Ship-Channel Company, has constructed a ship-channel through Galveston Bay from the Bolivar Channel to the channel constructed by said Buffalo Bayou Ship-Channel Company, known as Morgan's Cut, for vessels of twelve feet draught, it is therefore declared that the ship-channel through Galveston Bay from Bolivar Channel to the point where the San Jacinto River enters what is known as the Morgan Channel, excavated through Morgan's Point, is now the property of the United States and is declared to be free to navigation; and the Secretary of War is hereby directed to keep said ship-channel free to navigation: * * * [26 Stat. L. 456.]

See note to section 14, supra.

The omitted part of the section relates to the payment to the Buffalo Bayou Ship Channel Co., for property taken.

SEC. 5. [Regulations for navigation of South Pass, Mississippi river — violation — penalty.] That the Secretary of War be, and is hereby, authorized to make such rules and regulations for the navigation of the South Pass of the Mississippi River as to him shall seem necessary or expedient for the purpose of preventing any obstruction to the channel through said South Pass and any injury to the works therein constructed. The term "South Pass," as herein employed, shall be construed as embracing the entire extent of channel between the upper ends of the works at the head of the Pass and the outer or sea end of the jetties at the entrance from the Gulf of Mexico; and any willful violation of any rule or regulation made by the Secretary of War in pursuance of this act shall be deemed a misdemeanor, for which the owner or owners, agent or agents, master or pilot of the vessel so offending shall be separately or collectively responsible, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not exceeding two hundred and fifty dollars or by imprisonment not exceeding three months, at the discretion of the court. [26 Stat. L. 452.]

This is from the River and Harbor Appropriation Act of Aug. 11, 1888, ch. 800, 25 Stat. L. 424, as amended by the Act of Sept. 19, 1890, ch. 907, sec. 3, 26 Stat. L. 452.

SEC. 4. [Regulations for use of canals — penalty for violation.]. That it shall be the duty of the Secretary of War to prescribe such rules and regulations for the use, administration, and navigation of any or all canals and similar works of navigation that now are, or that hereafter may be, owned, operated, or maintained by the United States as in his judgment the public necessity may require; and he is also authorized to prescribe regulations to govern the speed and movement of vessels and other water craft in any public navigable channel which has been improved under authority of Congress, whenever, in his judgment, such regulations are necessary to protect such improved channels from injury, or to prevent interference with the operations of the United States in improving navigable waters or injury to any plant that may be employed in such operations. Such rules and regulations shall be posted, in conspicuous and appropriate places, for the information of the public; and every person and every corporation which shall violate such rules and regulations shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and, on conviction thereof in any district court of the United States within whose territorial jurisdiction such offense may have been committed, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment (in the case of a natural person) not exceeding six months, in the discretion of the court. [32 Stat. L. 374.]

This is from the River and Harbor Appropriation Act of Aug. 18, 1894, ch. 299, sec. 4, 28 Stat. L. 362, as amended by the Appropriation Act of June 13, 1902, ch. 1079, sec. 11, 32 Stat. L. 374. The section originally read as follows:

"SEC. 4. That it shall be the duty of the Secretary of War to prescribe such rules and regulations for the use, administration, and navigation of any or all canals and similar works of navigation that now are, or that hereafter may be, owned, operated, or maintained by the United States as in his judgment the public necessity may require. Such rules and regulations shall be posted, in conspicuous and appropriate places, for the information of the public; and every person and every corporation which shall knowingly and willfully violate such rules and regulations shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and, on conviction thereof in any district court in the United States within whose territorial jurisdiction such offense may have been committed, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment (in the case of a natural person) not exceeding six months, in the discretion of the court." [28 Stat. L. 362.]

The above section superseded the provisions of the Act of July 5, 1884, ch. 229, sec. 7, 23 Stat. L. 148, as amended by the Act of

"SEC. 7. That it shall be the duty of the Secretary of War to prescribe such rules and regulations in respect to the use and administration of the Des Moines Rapids Canal, the Saint Mary's Falls Canal, the Louisville and Portland Canal, and the Saint Clair Flats Ship Canal as in his judgment the public necessity may require, which rules and regulations shall be posted in some conspicuous place for the information of the public; any person knowingly and willfully violating such rules and regulations shall be liable to a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, or imprisonment not exceeding six months, to be enforced in any district court in the United States within whose territorial jurisdiction such offense may have been committed." [25 Stat. L. 497.]

Nature and effect of rules.—The rules and regulations prescribed under this section are clearly of administrative rather than legislative nature and may be relegated entirely to any executive agency, either with or without direct provisions by Congress, and such regulations have the force of law when adopted and promulgated as directed by the Act. U. S. v. Ormsbee, (1896) 74 Fed. Rep. 207.

SEC. 5. [Rules and regulations governing drawbridges — penalty for violation — proceedings.] That it shall be the duty of all persons owning, operating, and tending the drawbridges now built, or which may hereafter be built across the navigable rivers and other waters of the United States, to open, or cause to be opened, the draws of such bridges under such rules and regulations as in the opinion of the Secretary of War the public interests require to govern the opening of drawbridges for the passage of vessels and other water crafts, and such rules and regulations, when so made and published, shall have the force of law. Every such person who shall willfully fail or refuse to open, or cause to be opened, the draw of any such bridge for the passage of a boat or boats, or who shall unreasonably delay the opening of said draw after reasonable signal shall have been given, as provided in such regulations, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not more than two thousand dollars nor less than one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment (in the case of a natural person) for not exceeding one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court: Provided, That the proper action to enforce the provisions of this section may be commenced before any commissioner, judge, or court of the United States, and such commissioner, judge, or court shall proceed in respect thereto as authorized by law in case of crimes against the United States: Provided further, That whenever, in the opinion of the Secretary of War, the public interests require it, he may make rules and regulations to govern the opening of drawbridges for the passage of vessels and other water crafts, and such rules and regulations, when so made and published, shall have the force of law, and any violation thereof shall be punished as hereinbefore provided. [28 Stat. L. 362.]

Effect of section.—This section does not add anything to the law previously in force upon this subject except that it gives authority to the secretary of war to adopt rules and regulations to govern the opening of such drawbridges for the passage of vessels and other water craft, which rules and regulations, when made and published, shall have the force of law. (1899) 22 Op. Atty-Gen. 312.

Closing drawbridge for repairs.—It is the duty of all persons operating such draw-bridges to open or cause them to be opened in a reasonable manner and at a reasonable time, consistent with the uses for which drawbridges are constructed for the passage of vessels. The repair of such draws and of the bridges with which they are connected is also necessary for their maintenance. It is reasonable that a sufficient time should be allowed for such repairs, and if they cannot be prosecuted without closing the bridge for a number of successive days, such closing cannot be considered as unreasonable interference with navigation. (1899) 22 Op. Atty-Gen. 312.

Sec. 6. [Enforcing regulations — procedure.] That any regulations heretofore or hereafter prescribed by the Secretary of War in pursuance of the fourth and fifth sections of the river and harbor Act of August eighteenth, eighteen hundred and ninety-four, and any regulations hereafter prescribed in pursuance of the aforesaid section four as amended by section eleven of this Act, may be enforced as provided in section seventeen of the river and harbor Act of March third, eighteen hundred and ninety-nine, the provisions whereof are hereby made applicable to the said regulations. An Act declaring Cuivre River to be not a navigable stream.

[Cuivre River, Missouri, declared non-navigable.] That Cuivre River, in the counties of Lincoln and Saint Charles, in the State of Missouri, being the dividing line, is hereby declared not to be a navigable stream, and shall be so treated by the Secretary of War and all other authorities. [31 Stat. L. 50.]

An Act To declare a branch of the Mississippi River opposite the city of La Crosse, Wisconsin, and known as West Channel, to be unnavigable, and that the said city be relieved of necessity of maintaining a draw or pontoon bridge over said West Channel.

[West Channel of Mississippi River opposite La Crosse, Wisconsin, declared non-navigable.] That the branch of the Mississippi River flowing between Grand Island and the mainland opposite the city of La Crosse, State of Wisconsin, and known as the West Channel, be, and the same is hereby, declared unnavigable. * * * [31 Stat. L. 804.]

The omitted part of the Act relates to discontinuance of the drawbridge.

An Act Declaring the Osage River to be not a navigable stream above the point where the line between the counties of Benton and Saint Clair crosses said river.

[Act of June 24, 1902, ch. 1154, 32 Stat. L. 398.]

[Osage River, Missouri, above Benton and St. Clair counties, non-navigable.] That the Osage River in the State of Missouri, above the point where the dividing line between the counties of Benton and Saint Clair crosses said river, is hereby declared not to be a navigable stream and shall be so treated by the Secretary of War and all other authorities. [32 Stat. L. 398.]

[II. PRESERVATION OF NAVIGABLE WATERS: STRUCTURES OR IMPROVEMENTS THEREON.]

SEC. 3. [Injuring river and harbor improvements, how punished.] * * * Any person who shall willfully and unlawfully injure any pier, breakwater, or other work of the United States for the improvement of rivers or harbors, or navigation in the United States, shall, on conviction thereof, be punished by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars. [19 Stat. L. 139.]

This is from the River and Harbor Appropriation Act of Aug. 14, 1876, ch. 267.

[SEC. 1.] [Lights on bridges for security of navigation.] * * * That all parties owning, occupying, or operating bridges over any navigable river shall maintain at their own expense, from sunset to sunrise, throughout the year, such lights on their bridges as may be required by the Light-House Board for the security of navigation: and in addition thereto all persons owning, occupying, or operating any bridge over any navigable river shall, in any event, maintain all lights on their bridge that may be necessary for the security of navigation. * * * [22 Stat. L. 309.]

SEC. 8. [Obstruction of navigation by bridges — remedies.] That whenever the Secretary of War shall have good reason to believe that any railroad or other bridge now or hereafter to be constructed over any of the navigable waters of the United States, under authority of the United States or of any State or Territory, is an obstruction to the free navigation of such waters, by reason of difficulty in passing the draw-opening or the raft-span of said bridge, by rafts, steamboats, or other water-craft, it shall be the duty of the said Secretary, on satisfactory proof thereof, to require the company or persons owning, controlling, or operating said bridge to cause such aids to the passage of said draw-opening or of said raft-span, or of both said draw-opening and raft-span to be constructed, placed, and maintained, at their own cost and expense, in the form of booms, dikes, piers, or other suitable and proper structures for the guiding of said rafts, steamboats, and other water-craft safely through said opening or span, or both said opening or span, as shall be specified in his order in that behalf; and on failure of the company or persons aforesaid to make and establish such additional structures within a reasonable time, the said Secretary shall proceed to cause the same to be built or made at the expense of the United States, and shall refer the matter without delay to the Attorney-General of the United States, whose duty it shall be to institute, in the name of the United States, proceedings in any circuit or district court of the United States in which such bridge, or any part thereof, is located, for the recovery of the cost thereof; and all moneys accruing from such proceedings shall be covered into the Treasury of the United States: Provided, That no greater sum than fifteen thousand dollars shall be required to be expended upon any one bridge in a single year: Provided further, That such sum of money as may be necessary to execute the provisions of this act is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, to be paid on the requisition of the Secretary of War. [23 Stat. L. 148.]

This is from the River and Harbor Appropriation Act of July 5, 1884, ch. 229.

This was the first general law which clothed the secretary of war with such power. U. S. v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., (1886) 26 Fed. Rep. 113.

SEC. 2. [Establishment of harbor lines—deposits of debris.] That in places where harbor-lines have not been established, and where deposits of debris of mines or stamp works can be made without injury to navigation, within lines to be established by the Secretary of War, said officer may, and is hereby authorized to, cause such lines to be established; and within such lines such deposits may be made, under regulations to be from time to time prescribed by him. [24 Stat. L. 329.]

This is from the River and Harbor Appropriation Act of Aug. 5, 1886, ch. 929.

An act to prevent obstructive and injurious deposits within the harbor and adjacent waters of New York City, by dumping or otherwise, and to punish and prevent such offenses.

[Act of June 29, 1888, ch. 496, 25 Stat. L. 209.]

[SEC. 1.] [Depositing refuse, etc., in New York harbor and adjacent waters prohibited—penalty.] That the placing, discharging, or depositing, by any process or in any manner, of refuse, dirt, ashes, cinders, mud, sand, dredgings, sludge, acid, or any other matter of any kind, other than that flowing from streets, sewers, and passing therefrom in a liquid state, in the tidal waters of the harbor of New York, or its adjacent or tributary waters, or in those of Long Island Sound, within the limits which shall be prescribed by the supervisor of the harbor, is hereby strictly forbidden, and every such act is made a misdemeanor, and every person engaged in or who shall aid, abet, authorize, or instigate a violation of this section, shall, upon conviction, be punishable by fine or imprisonment, or both, such fine to be not less than two hundred and fifty dollars nor more than two thousand five hundred dollars, and the imprisonment to be not less than thirty days nor more than one year, either or both united, as the judge before whom conviction is obtained shall decide, one half of said fine to be paid to the person or persons giving information which shall lead to conviction of this misdemeanor. [25 Stat. L. 209.]

This Act supersedes the provisions of the Act of Aug. 5, 1886, ch. 929, as follows:

"SEC. 3. It shall not be lawful to cast, throw, empty, or unlade, or cause, suffer, or procure to be cast, thrown emptied, or unladen, either from or out of any ship, vessel, lighter, barge, boat, or other craft, or from the shore, pier, wharf, or mills of any kind whatever, any ballast, stone, slate, gravel, earth, slack, rubbish, wreck, filth, slabs, edgings, sawdust, slag, or cinders, or other refuse or mill-waste of any kind, into New York Harbor: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, to the casting out, unloading, or throwing out of any ship or vessel, lighter, barge, boat, or other craft, any stones, rocks, bricks, lime, or other materials used, or to be used, in or toward the building, repairing, or keeping in repair any quay, pier, wharf, weir, bridge, building, or other work lawfully erected or to be erected on the banks or sides of said harbor, or to the casting out unloading or depositing of any material excavated for the improvement of navigable waters, into such places and in such manner as may be deemed by the United States officer supervising the improvement of said harbor most judicious and practicable and for the best interests of such improvement." [24 Stat. L. 529.]

Constitutionality.—The necessities of commerce required the protection and preservation of the harbor of the chief commercial city of the country, and an Act to protect the waters of the harbor for the purposes of navigation was within the constitutional power of Congress. Randall v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1901) 107 Fed. Rep. 935.

The purpose of the Act is to prevent dumping where it will injure the harbor and to prevent it nowhere else. To insure this result, the supervisor, taking the waters enumerated in the Act as the theatre of his operations, is required to draw protecting lines around the harbor. When these lines are fixed the Act becomes operative. Within them are the harbor of New York and such waters as are necessary for the protection of the harbor. Within these limits, says the Act, no dumping shall be done; without them, it is not prohibited. The supervisor had no power to issue his ukase commanding that all dumping shall be done within limits fixed by him far out in the Atlantic; limits which include waters not mentioned in the Act. The G. L. Garlic, (1891) 45 Fed. Rep. 380.

Not an infamous crime.—This offense is not punishable by imprisonment for a term of over one year, or at hard labor, and persons convicted thereof cannot be sentenced to imprisonment in a penitentiary. Therefore, it is not an infamous crime. Ansburo v. U. S., (1895) 159 U. S. 695.

What waters included.—The bodies of water referred to are (a) the harbor of New York, (b) waters adjacent to the harbor of New York, (c) waters tributary to the harbor of New York, (d) Long Island Sound; and as to each of these bodies of water there is a restriction of the application of the Act to such waters only as are tidal. This enumeration covers not only the harbor proper but also water-ways by which commerce reaches that harbor, and it covers all such water-ways as are tidal. U. S. v. The Sadie, (1890) 41 Fed. Rep. 396. But see U. S. v. The Sadie, (1890) 41 Fed. Rep. 823.

In (1889) 19 Op. Atty.-Gen. 317, it was advised that the term "tributary waters" must be restricted so as to cover only such parts of the river as, in a broad sense, can be regarded as connected with the harbor of New York, and that the authority conferred did not extend to the waters of the Hudson river as far distant from New York harbor as Troy, Albany, and New Baltimore.

Statute, not supervisor, prohibits.—Under the statute it is not the supervisor of the harbor who is to prohibit dumping, etc., in the tidal waters named in the Act. The Act itself prohibits such dumping "within the limits which shall be prescribed" by that officer. These limits which he is to prescribe are the lines or boundaries on one side and the other of which respectively, such material may and may not be dumped. U. S. v. The Sadie, (1890) 41 Fed. Rep. 396.

Extent of power granted to supervisor.—Congress did not delegate to the supervisor any of its power "to regulate commerce," and the included control of the navigable waters of the United States. The supervisor is not authorized to declare that dumping refuse of various kinds is obstructive or injurious to navigation and punishable. He is merely directed to overlook the detailed operation of such dumping, to the end that the deposit shall not be hurtful to navigation. U. S. v. Romard, (1898) 89 Fed. Rep. 156.

Limits fixed by supervisor.—The limits in either direction were not designed to be fixed by the statute itself but by the supervisor. Those limits were to be within the tributary waters, i. e., to embrace less than the whole of such tributary waters, and only such as the supervisor should specify by fixing a northerly as well as a southerly limit. U. S. v. The Sadie, (1890) 41 Fed. Rep. 823.

Dumping prohibited, where.—This section does not prohibit the deposit of refuse, etc., anywhere except "in the tidal waters of New York harbor or its adjacent or tributary waters, or in those of Long Island Sound, within the limits which shall be prescribed by the supervisor." It does not prohibit deposit of such material on land anywhere; nor in all the "tributary waters," but only in such parts of the tributary waters, etc., as are "within the limits to be prescribed," i. e., not embracing the whole tributary waters. U. S. v. The Sadie, (1890) 41 Fed. Rep. 823.

The primary condition of the practical application of this Act is the designation by the supervisor of fixed and certain limits, within the tributary and other waters of New York harbor and of Long Island Sound, within which the deposit of refuse, etc., is prohibited. The Act contemplates, first of all, a certain prohibited area within those waters marked by definite, certain, and intelligible limits. Refuse, dirt, mud, etc., dredged, found, or brought within those limits, becomes thenceforth prohibited material, and subject to the operation of the Act. Similar materials while outside of the prohibited limits are wholly outside of the scope of the Act. They are not prohibited materials nor within the operation of the statute. U. S. v. The Sadie, (1890) 41 Fed. Rep. 823.

Deposits which do not injuriously affect the harbor are not prohibited by the Act. It was the harbor that the lawmakers had in view; it was the harbor that they sought to protect. Recognizing the fact that the usefulness of the harbor would be destroyed if its approaches were obstructed, the Act is careful to designate all waters adjacent or tributary to the harbor, where the dumping of deposits can in any manner affect it injuriously. It will be observed, however, that dumping is not forbidden in all parts of the enumerated waters, but only in such parts of these waters as are "within the limits which shall be prescribed by the supervisor of the harbor." The G. L. Garlic, (1891) 45 Fed. Rep. 380.

Designation of high-water mark.—Congress has confided full power to the designated officer to fix limits for the dumping or deposit of material. The designation of a line coincident with high-water mark of the waters named in the Act as the limit within which dumping should not be allowed would be within the power conferred by the Act. U. S. v. The Sadie, (1890) 41 Fed. Rep. 396.

Sufficient designation by meridian and parallel.—An order by the supervisor designating two lines, one running north and the other west from a point at the intersection of a certain meridian and a certain parallel, and expressly stating that the deposit of refuse material must take place to the east and south of those lines, prescribe the limits within which material shall not be dumped within the meaning of the Act. U. S. v. The Sadie, (1890) 41 Fed. Rep. 396. See also U. S. v. Romard, (1898) 89 Fed. Rep. 156.

In U. S. v. The Sadie, (1890) 41 Fed. Rep. 823, it was held that an order of the supervisor which designates a place of deposit instead of designating with definiteness and certainty the limits of prohibition is void as an implied prohibition for unreasonableness, indefiniteness, and uncertainty, and not authorized by this section.

Where ashes were dumped in a prohibited place from the deck of an ocean steamer by her fireman, presumably acting under orders from some superior officer, the steamer at the time being engaged in performing a freight-voyage at sea and the dumping of the ashes accumulated at her furnaces being a necessary incident to her navigation, under such circumstances the statute takes effect and renders the steamer liable as having herself violated the law. The Bombay, (1891) 46 Fed. Rep. 665.

The fact, however, that an employee on board of a steamship threw overboard a single scuttle of ashes at a prohibited place will not render the vessel liable, such act being a mere technical violation, which, while rendering the employee liable, will not affect the vessel, as a vessel can only be used or employed with the consent of the person who has the legal right to use and employ. The Anjer Head, (1890) 46 Fed. Rep. 664.

SEC. 2. [Liability of officers of vessel towing scow, etc., loaded with prohibited matter.] That any and every master and engineer, or person or persons acting in such capacity, respectively, on board of any boat or vessel, who shall knowingly engage in towing any scow, boat, or vessel loaded with any such prohibited matter to any point or place of deposit, or discharge in the waters of the harbor of New York, or in its adjacent, or tributary waters, or in those of Long Island Sound, or to any point or place elsewhere than within the limits defined and permitted by the supervisor of the harbor hereinafter mentioned, shall be deemed guilty of a violation of this act, and shall, upon conviction, be punishable as hereinbefore provided for offenses in violation of section one of this act, and shall also have his license revoked or suspended for a term to be fixed by the judge before whom tried and convicted. [25 Stat. L. 209.]

SEC. 3. [Permit to transport matter to dumping ground—penalty for failure to obtain.] That in all cases of receiving on board of any scows or boats such forbidden matter or substance as herein described, the owner or master, or person acting in such capacity on board of such scows or boats, before proceeding to take or tow the same to the place of deposit, shall apply for and obtain from the supervisor of the harbor appointed hereunder a permit defining the precise limits within which the discharge of such scows or boats may be made; and it shall not be lawful for the owner or master, or person acting in such capacity, of any tug or towboat to tow or move any scow or boat so loaded with such forbidden matter until such permit shall have been obtained; and every person violating the foregoing provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not more than one thousand nor less than five hundred dollars, and in addition thereto the master of any tug or towboat so offending shall have his license revoked, or suspend for a term to be fixed by the judge before whom tried and convicted. [28 Stat. L. 360.]

[Penalty for discharging at other places — persons liable.] And any deviation from such dumping or discharging place specified in such permit shall be a misdemeanor, and the owner and master, or person acting in the capacity of master, of any scows or boats dumping or discharging such forbidden matter in any place other than that specified in such permit shall be liable to punishment therefor as provided in section one of the said Act of June twenty-ninth, eighteen hundred and eighty-eight; and the owner and master, or person acting in the capacity of master, of any tug or towboat towing such scows or boats shall be liable to equal punishment with the owner and master, or person acting in the capacity of master, of the scows or boats; and, further, every scowman or other employee on board of both scows and towboats shall be deemed to have knowledge of the place of dumping specified in such permit, and the owners and masters, or persons acting in the capacity of masters, shall be liable to punishment, as aforesaid, for any unlawful dumping, within the meaning of this Act or of the said Act of June twenty-ninth, eighteen hundred and eighty-eight, which may be caused by the negligence or ignorance of such scowman or other employee; and, further, neither defect in machinery nor avoidable accidents to scows or towboats, nor unfavorable weather, nor improper handling or moving of scows or boats of any kind whatsoever, shall operate to release the owners and masters and employees of scows and towboats from the penalties hereinbefore mentioned. [28 Stat. L. 361.]

[Boats to have name, etc., painted.] Every scow or boat engaged in the transportation of dredgings, earth, sand, mud, cellar dirt, garbage, or other offensive material of any description shall have its name or number and owner's name painted in letters and numbers at least fourteen inches long on both sides of the scow or boat; these names and numbers shall be kept distinctly legible at all times, and no scow or boat not so marked shall be used to transport or dump any such material. [28 Stat. L. 361.]

[Inspectors — powers and duties — arrest and prosecution of offenders.] The supervisor of the harbor of New York, designated as provided in section five of the said Act of June twenty-ninth, eighteen hundred and eighty-eight, is authorized and directed to appoint inspectors and deputy inspectors, and, for the purpose of enforcing the provisions of this Act and of the Act aforesaid, and of detecting and bringing to punishment offenders against the same, the said supervisor of the harbor, and the inspectors and deputy inspectors so appointed by him, shall have power and authority:

First. To arrest and take into custody, with or without process, any person or persons who may commit any of the acts or offenses prohibited by this section and by the Act of June twenty-ninth, eighteen hundred and eighty-eight, aforesaid, or who may violate any of the provisions of the same: Provided, That no person shall be arrested without process for any offense not committed in the presence of the supervisor or his inspectors or deputy inspectors, or either of them: And provided further, That whenever any such arrest is made the person or persons so arrested shall be brought forthwith before a commissioner, judge, or court of the United States for examination of the offenses alleged against him; and such commissioner, judge, or court shall proceed in respect thereto as authorized by law in case of crimes against the United States.

Second. To go on board of any scow or towboat engaged in unlawful dumping of prohibited material, or in moving the same without a permit as required in this section of this Act, and to seize and hold said boats until they are discharged by action of the commissioner, judge, or court of the United States before whom the offending persons are brought.

Third. To arrest and take into custody any witness or witnesses to such unlawful dumping of prohibited material, the said witnesses to be released under proper bonds.

Fourth. To go on board of any towboat having in tow scows or boats loaded with such prohibited material, and accompany the same to the place of dumping, whenever such action appears to be necessary to secure compliance with the requirements of this Act and of the Act aforesaid.

Fifth. To enter gas and oil works and all other manufacturing works for the purpose of discovering the disposition made of sludge, acid, or other injurious material, whenever there is good reason to believe that such sludge, acid, or other injurious material is allowed to run into the tidal waters of the harbor in violation of section one of the aforesaid Act of June twenty-ninth, eighteen hundred and eighty-eight. [28 Stat. L. 361.]

[Bribery of inspectors, etc.] Every person who, directly or indirectly, gives any sum of money or other bribe, present, or reward or makes any offer of the same to any inspector, deputy inspector, or other employee of the office of the supervisor of the harbor with intent to influence such inspector, deputy inspector, or other employee to permit or overlook any violation of the provisions of this section or of the said Act of June twenty-ninth, eighteen hundred and eighty-eight, shall, on conviction thereof, be fined not less than five hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars, and be imprisoned not less than six months nor more than one year. [28 Stat. L. 362.]

[Return of permits — indorsement — penalty.] Every permit issued in accordance with the provisions of this section of this Act which may not be taken up by an inspector or deputy inspector shall be returned within forty-eight hours after issuance to the office of the supervisor of the harbor; such permit shall bear an indorsement by the master of the towboat, or the person acting in such capacity, stating whether the permit has been used, and if so the time and place of dumping. Any person violating the provisions of this section shall be liable to a fine of not more than five hundred dollars nor less than one hundred dollars. [28 Stat. L. 362.]

This section was amended to read as above by the Act of Aug. 18, 1894, ch. 299, 28 Stat. L. 360. The section originally read as follows:

"SEC. 3. That in all cases of receiving on board of any scows or boats such forbidden matter or substance as herein described, it shall be the duty of the owner or master, or person acting in such capacity, on board of such scows or boats, before proceeding to take or tow the same to the place of deposit, to apply for and obtain from the supervisor of the harbor appointed hereunder a permit defining the precise limits within which the discharge of such scows or boats may be made; and any deviation from such dumping or discharging place specified in such permit shall be a misdemeanor within the meaning of this act; and the master and engineer, or person or persons acting in such capacity, on board of any tow-boat towing such scows or boats, shall be equally guilty of such offense with the master or person acting in the capacity of master of the scow, and be liable to equal punishment." [25 Stat. L. 209.]

Constitutionality — criminal intent. — The statute is not beyond the constitutional power of Congress if it is to be construed as making a person who is innocent of criminal intent criminally liable for the act of another. The presence of a criminal intent is not an essential element of a statutory offense. Jaycox v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1901) 107 Fed. Rep. 938.

Power of supervisor to select dumping ground. — The Act is tantamount to a legislative direction that such deposit shall not be made within spaces prescribed by the supervisor, and shall be made within spaces prescribed by him. Under it the supervisor may withdraw certain sections of water from the injurious effects of dumping. Such preclusion of persons from dumping within designated localities might be a sufficient protection; but the Act supplements the direction for indicating prohibited sections by providing that the supervisor shall assign to each person desiring to dump in the harbor a place where the same may be done. It confides to him a power of selecting the spots where at various times, during different years or months, or days or hours, refuse might be deposited with the least injury to the use of the water for navigation and commerce and for the best protection of adjacent shores. U. S. v. Romard, (1898) 89 Fed. Rep. 156.

Including certain places excludes others. — The statute is so framed that the inclusion of certain places for dumping is the exclusion of other places for such purposes. U. S. v. Romard, (1898) 89 Fed. Rep. 156.

Necessary statements in permit and indictment. — It was not necessary to state in the permit limits within which the deposit could not be made, nor to charge in the indictment that the deposit was made within limits prohibited by the supervisor. U. S. v. Romard, (1898) 89 Fed. Rep. 156.

Diligence required. — As experience has shown the necessity of a rigid observance of prohibitory measures against the obstruction of the harbor, there was occasion for an Act which would cast rigid responsibilities upon persons who permitted a violation of the statute, but the Act in question did not mean that there was no excuse in any event for a deviation from the specified dumping ground. The Act required the captain of the tug, who was in the general charge of both tug and tow, to exercise the highest diligence to prevent a deviation from the dumping place specified in the permit; and, therefore, he could not set up in discharge of this obligation, defects in machinery, because the machinery could have been tested before the voyage commenced; or avoidable accidents; or mere unfavorable weather, because the expedition need not have been entered upon in such weather; or lack of seamanship. The same duty of diligence was imposed upon the captain of the scow to see that the load was discharged at the proper time and place. Randall v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1901) 107 Fed. Rep. 935.

Offense of scowmen is offense of master of tug. — It is the apparent meaning of the statute that the unlawful act of the scowmen shall be regarded as the act of the master of the towboat, if committed upon the dumping voyage, and consequently as one and the same offense. Jaycox v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1901) 107 Fed. Rep. 938.

The statute does not make any person criminally liable for an act committed without his participation. The participation of the master of the towboat and the masters of the scows is found in the circumstance that they are assisting in the general undertaking in the course of which the forbidden act is done. Neither one of them is under any obligation to engage in such an enterprise, and if he chooses to engage in it he does so at the peril of incurring criminal responsibility if it is not pursued lawfully; and no principle of natural justice is violated by a statute which makes him responsible for the conduct of his coadjutor. Jaycox v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1901) 107 Fed. Rep. 938.

Responsibility of masters for unavoidable accidents. — "The concluding clause of section 3 * * * by implication absolves the masters of towboats and scows from criminal responsibility for violations of the statute caused by unavoidable accidents, but not from those caused by negligence or ignorance of the employees of the scows." Jaycox v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1901) 107 Fed. Rep. 938.

Master of tug asleep. — The fact that the master of the towboat was asleep, and therefore not actively managing her navigation at the time when the forbidden act was committed, cannot relieve him, in view of the explicit language of the statute. Jaycox v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1901) 107 Fed. Rep. 938.

Deviation by perils of sea. — This Act should not be construed to require a conviction even though perils of the sea compel a deviation from the dumping ground. Such a construction would violate the principles of natural justice. Randall v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1901) 107 Fed. Rep. 935.

Necessary deviation a question for jury. — The question whether under all the circumstances of the case the weather was so unfavorable that life and property would have been jeopardized in attempting to manoeuvre out in the water is to be determined by a jury where there was a deviation and the cargo was not all dumped at the specified place, owing to the stress of weather. Randall v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1901) 107 Fed. Rep. 935.

SEC. 4. [Disposal of dredged matter — legal proceedings for violation of act.] That all mud, dirt, sand, dredgings, and material of every kind and description whatever taken, dredged, or excavated from any slip, basin, or shoal in the harbor of New York, or the waters adjacent or tributary thereto, and placed on any boat, scow, or vessel for the purpose of being taken or towed upon the waters of the harbor of New York to a place of deposit, shall be deposited and discharged at such place or within such limits as shall be defined and specified by the supervisor of the harbor, as in the third section of this act prescribed, and not otherwise.

Every person, firm, or corporation being the owner of any slip, basin, or shoal, from which such mud, dirt, sand, dredgings, and material shall be taken, dredged, or excavated, and every person, firm, or corporation in any manner engaged in the work of dredging or excavating any such slip, basin, or shoal, or of removing such mud, dirt, sand, or dredgings therefrom, shall severally be responsible for the deposit and discharge of all such mud, dirt, sand, or dredgings at such place or within such limits so defined and prescribed by said supervisor of the harbor; and for every violation of the provisions of this section the person offending shall be guilty of an offense against this act, and shall be punished by a fine equal to the sum of five dollars for every cubic yard of mud, dirt, sand, dredgings, or material not deposited or discharged as required by this section.

Any boat or vessel used or employed in violating any provision of this act, shall be liable to the pecuniary penalties imposed thereby, and may be proceeded against, summarily by way of libel in any district court of the United States, having jurisdiction thereof. [25 Stat. L. 210.]

Relation to other sections of Act.—The last sentence of this section, although forming a part of this section, is equally applicable to all sections of the Act. The previous parts of the section, however, are confined exclusively to violations of this section. The Emperor, (1892) 49 Fed. Rep. 751.

Proof of connection with illegal act necessary.—The last clause of the second paragraph of this section is a qualification and limitation upon the "responsibility" enacted by the previous clause, in so far at least as to prevent any conviction of an offense or any punishment by fine of any person who is not in some way connected by proof with the performance of the illegal act. The Emperor, (1892) 49 Fed. Rep. 751.

"Used or employed."—The emphatic words in the last clause of this section are "used" and "employed." Practically they are synonymous and they mean "to make use of," "put to a purpose." The clause, therefore, renders every boat or vessel put to the purpose of violating the provisions of this statute liable to the penalty. The Anjer Head, (1890) 46 Fed. Rep. 664.

Scowmen acting against orders—liability of tug.—Where scows loaded with mud were being towed to the dumping ground by a tug, and, while the tug was on the way to the dumping ground in the usual course, but before arriving there, and while within the prohibited limits, the scows were dumped by the men on the scows of their own volition and without the knowledge of those in charge of the tug, and without any signal from the tug and contrary to the captain's previous orders, the scowmen were in no way connected with the tug and neither the captain nor any person on board the tug was the "person offending" under this Act, nor was the tug "used or employed" in the illegal act of the scowmen. The Emperor, (1892) 49 Fed. Rep. 751.

Limited to New York harbor.—This section is limited to materials placed on any boat "for the purpose of being taken or towed upon the waters of the harbor of New York to a place of deposit," and has no application to refuse taken and dumped at Newburgh, because the waters of the Hudson river at Newburgh are not "waters of the harbor of New York." The subsequent words, "such mud, dirt," etc., refer to mud, dirt, etc., loaded for the purpose of being towed upon the waters of New York harbor. U. S. v. The Sadie, (1890) 41 Fed. Rep. 823.

SEC. 5. [Supervisor of harbor.] That a line officer of the Navy shall be designated by the President of the United States as supervisor of the harbor, to act under the direction of the Secretary of War in enforcing the provisions of this act, and in detecting offenders against the same. This officer shall receive the sea-pay of his grade, and shall have personal charge and supervision under the Secretary of War, and shall direct the patrol boats and other means to detect and bring to punishment offenders against the provisions of this act. [25 Stat. L. 210.]

SEC. 6. [Makes appropriation.]

SEC. 2. [Deflections of currents by bridge piers or abutments—remedies.] That whenever complaint shall be made to the Secretary of War that by reason of the placing in any navigable waters of the United States of any bridge pier or abutment, the current of such waters has been so deflected from its natural course as to cause by producing caving of banks or otherwise serious damage or danger to property, it shall be his duty to make inquiry, and if it shall be ascertained that the complaint is well founded, he shall cause the owners or persons operating such bridge to repair such damage or prevent such danger to property by such means as he shall indicate and within such time as he may name, and in default thereof the owners or persons operating such bridge shall be liable in any court of competent jurisdiction to the persons injured in a sum double the amount of said injury: Provided, however, That nothing herein contained shall be construed so as to affect any rights of action which may exist at the time of the passage of this act. [25 Stat. L. 423.]

SEC. 7. [Permanent appropriation for snag boats on Upper Mississippi river — reports.] That for the purpose of securing the uninterrupted work of operating snag boats on the Upper Mississippi River, and of removing snags, wrecks, and other obstructions in the Mississippi River, the Secretary of War, upon the application of the Chief of Engineers, is hereby authorized to draw his warrant or requisition from time to time upon the Secretary of the Treasury for such sums as may be necessary to do such work, not to exceed in the aggregate for each year the amounts appropriated in this act for such purposes: Provided, however, That an itemized statement of said expenses shall accompany the annual report of the Chief of Engineers. [25 Stat. L. 424.]

[Fishing or dredging for shell fish, or interference with navigation in New York harbor forbidden — penalty — proceedings.] It shall be unlawful for any person or persons to engage in fishing or dredging for shell fish in any of the channels leading to and from the harbor of New York, or to interfere in any way with the safe navigation of those channels by ocean steamships and ships of deep draft. Any person or persons violating the foregoing provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by fine or imprisonment, or both, such fine to be not more than two hundred and fifty dollars nor less than fifty dollars, and the imprisonment to be not more than six months nor less than thirty days, either or both united, as the judge before whom conviction is obtained shall decide. It shall be the duty of the United States Supervisor of the harbor to enforce this Act, and the deputy inspectors of the said supervisor shall have authority to arrest and take into custody, with or without process, any person or persons who may commit any of the acts or offenses prohibited by this Act: Provided, That no person shall be arrested without process for any offense not committed in the presence of the supervisor or his inspector or deputy inspectors, or either of them: And provided further, That whenever any such arrest is made the person or persons so arrested shall be brought forthwith before a commissioner, judge, or court of the United States for examination of the offenses alleged against him; and such commissioner, judge or court shall proceed in respect thereto as authorized by law in case of crimes against the United States. See note to section 8, supra.

This and the following sections of this Act superseded the provisions of the River and Harbor Appropriation Act of Sept. 19, 1890, ch. 907, which read as follows:

"SEC. 4. That section nine of the river and harbor act of August eleventh, eighteen hundred and eighty-eight, be amended and re-enacted so as to read as follows:

That whenever the Secretary of War shall have good reason to believe that any railroad or other bridge now constructed, or which may hereafter be constructed over any of the navigable water-ways of the United States is an unreasonable obstruction to the free navigation of such waters on account of insufficient height, width of span, or otherwise, or where there is difficulty in passing the draw-opening or the draw-span of such bridge by rafts, steam boats, or other water-craft, it shall be the duty of the said Secretary, first giving the parties reasonable opportunity to be heard, to give notice to the persons or corporations owning or controlling such bridge so to alter the same as to render navigation through or under it reasonably free, easy, and unobstructed; and in giving such notice he shall specify the changes required to be made, and shall prescribe in each case a reasonable time in which to make them. If at the end of such time the alteration has not been made, the Secretary of War shall forthwith notify the United States district attorney for the district in which such bridge is situated, to the end that the criminal proceedings mentioned in the succeeding section may be taken." [26 Stat. L. 453.]

"SEC. 5. That section ten of the river and harbor act of August eleventh, eighteen hundred and eighty-eight, be amended and re-enacted so as to read as follows:

That if the persons, corporation, or association owning or controlling any railroad or other bridge shall, after receiving notice to that effect as hereinbefore required from the Secretary of War and within the time prescribed by him, willfully fail or refuse to remove the same, or to comply with the lawful order of the Secretary of War in the premises such persons, corporation or association shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five thousand dollars, and every month such persons, corporation, or association shall remain in default in respect to the removal or alteration of such bridge shall be deemed a new offense, and subject the persons, corporation, or association so offending to the penalties above prescribed." [26 Stat. L. 453.]

"SEC. 6. That it shall not be lawful to cast, throw, empty, or unlade, or cause, suffer, or procure to be cast, thrown, emptied, or unladen, either from or out of any ship, vessel, lighter, barge, boat, or other craft, or from the shore, pier, wharf, furnace, manufacturing establishments, or mills of any kind whatever, any ballast, stone, slate, gravel, earth, rubbish, wreck, filth, slabs, edgings, sawdust, slag, cinders, ashes, refuse, or other waste of any kind, into any port, road, roadstead, harbor, haven, navigable river, or navigable waters of the United States which shall tend to impede or obstruct navigation, or to deposit or place or cause, suffer, or procure to be deposited or placed, any ballast, stone, slate, gravel, earth, rubbish, wreck, filth, slabs, edgings, sawdust, or other waste in any place or situation on the bank of any navigable waters where the same shall be liable to be washed into such navigable waters, either by ordinary or high tides, or by storms or floods, or otherwise, whereby navigation shall or may be impeded or obstructed: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall extend or be construed to extend to the casting out, unloading, or throwing out of any ship or vessel, lighter, barge, boat, or other craft, any stones, rocks, bricks, lime, or other materials used, or to be used, in or toward the building, repairing, or keeping in repair any quay, pier, wharf, weir, bridge, building, or other work lawfully erected or to be erected on the banks or sides of any port, harbor, haven, channel, or navigable river, or to the casting out, unloading, or depositing of any material excavated for the improvement of navigable waters, into such places and in such manner as may be deemed by the United States officer supervising said improvement most judicious and practicable and for the best interests of such improvements, or to prevent the depositing of any substance above mentioned under a permit from the Secretary of War, which he is hereby authorized to grant, in any place designated by him where navigation will not be obstructed thereby." [26 Stat. L. 453.]

"SEC. 7. That it shall not be lawful to build any wharf, pier, dolphin, boom, dam, weir, breakwater, bulkhead, jetty or structure of any kind outside established harbor lines, or in any navigable waters of the United States where no harbor lines are or may be established, without the permission of the Secretary of War, in any port, roadstead, haven, harbor, navigable river, or other waters of the United States, in such manner as shall obstruct or impair navigation, commerce, or anchorage of said waters; and it shall not be lawful hereafter to commence the construction of any bridge, bridge draw, bridge piers and abutments, causeway, or other works over or in any port, road, roadstead, haven, harbor, navigable river or navigable waters of the United States, under any act of the legislative assembly of any State, until the location and plan of such bridge or other works have been submitted to and approved by the Secretary of War, or to excavate or fill, or in any manner to alter or modify the course, location, condition or capacity of any port, roadstead, haven, harbor, harbor of refuge, or inclosure within the limits of any breakwater, or of the channel of any navigable water of the United States, unless approved and authorized by the Secretary of War: Provided: That this section shall not apply to any bridge, bridge draw, bridge piers and abutments the construction of which has been heretofore duly authorized by law, or be so construed as to authorize the construction of any bridge, draw bridge, bridge piers and abutments or other works under an act of the legislature of any State, over or in any stream, port, roadstead, haven or harbor or other navigable water not wholly within the limits of such State." [27 Stat. L. 88.]

This section was amended to read as above by the Act of July 13, 1892, ch. 158, sec. 3.

"SEC. 8. That all wrecks of vessels and other obstructions to the navigation of any port, roadstead, harbor, or navigable river, or other navigable waters of the United States, which may have been permitted by the owners thereof or the parties by whom they were caused to remain to the injury of commerce and navigation for a longer period than two months, shall be subject to be broken up and removed by the Secretary of War, without liability for any damage to the owners of the same." [26 Stat. L. 454.]

"SEC. 9. That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to take possession of or make use for any exclusive purpose, or build upon, alter, deface, destroy, injure, obstruct, or in any other manner impair the usefulness of any sea-wall, bulkhead, jetty, dike, levee, wharf, pier, or other work built by the United States in whole or in part, for the preservation and improvement of any of its navigable waters, or to prevent floods, or as boundary marks, tide-gauges, surveying-stations, buoys, or other established marks, nor remove for ballast or other purposes any stone or other material composing such works." [26 Stat. L. 454.]

"SEC. 10. That the creation of any obstruction, not affirmatively authorized by law, to the navigable capacity of any waters, in respect of which the United States has jurisdiction, is hereby prohibited. The continuance of any such obstruction, except bridges, piers, docks and wharves, and similar structures erected for business purposes, whether heretofore or hereafter created, shall constitute an offense and each week's continuance of any such obstruction shall be deemed a separate offense. Every person and every corporation which shall be guilty of creating or continuing any such unlawful obstruction in this act mentioned, or who shall violate the provisions of the last four preceding sections of this act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five thousand dollars, or by imprisonment (in the case of a natural person) not exceeding one year, or by both such punishments, in the discretion of the court, the creating or continuing of any unlawful obstruction in this act mentioned may be prevented and such obstruction may be caused to be removed by the injunction of any circuit court exercising jurisdiction in any district in which such obstruction may be threatened or may exist; and proper proceedings in equity to this end may be instituted under the direction of the Attorney-General of the United States." [26 Stat. L. 454.]

"SEC. 12. That section twelve of the river and harbor act of August eleventh, eighteen hundred and eighty-eight, be amended and re-enacted so as to read as follows:

Where it is made manifest to the Secretary of War that the establishment of harbor-lines is essential to the preservation and protection of harbors, he may, and is hereby authorized, to cause such lines to be established, beyond which no piers, wharves, bulkheads or other works shall be extended or deposits made, except under such regulations as may be prescribed from time to time by him; and any person who shall willfully violate the provisions of this section, or any rule or regulation made by the Secretary of War in pursuance of this section, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or imprisonment not exceeding one year, at the discretion of the court for each offense." [26 Stat. L. 455.]

The section in the text and the following sections also superseded the provisions of the River and Harbor Appropriation Act of Aug. 18, 1894, ch. 299, as follows:

"SEC. 6. That it shall not be lawful to place, discharge, or deposit, by any process or in any manner, ballast, refuse, dirt, ashes, cinders, mud, sand, dredgings, sludge, acid, or any other matter of any kind other than that flowing from streets, sewers, and passing therefrom in a liquid state, in the waters of any harbor or river of the United States, for the improvement of which money has been appropriated by Congress, elsewhere than within the limits defined and permitted by the Secretary of War; neither shall it be lawful for any person or persons to move, destroy, or injure in any manner whatever any sea wall, bulkhead, jetty, dike, levee, wharf, pier, or other work built by the United States, in whole or in part, for the preservation and improvement of any of its navigable waters, or to prevent floods, or as boundary marks, tide gauges, surveying stations, buoys, or other established marks; any and every such act is made a misdemeanor, and every person knowingly engaged in or who shall knowingly aid, abet, authorize, or instigate a violation of this section shall, upon conviction, be punishable by fine or imprisonment, or both, such fine to be not less than two hundred and fifty dollars nor more than twenty-five hundred dollars, and the imprisonment to be not less than thirty days nor more than one year, either or both united, as the judge before whom conviction is obtained shall decide, one-half of said fine to be paid to the person or persons giving information which shall lead to conviction of this misdemeanor." [28 Stat. L. 363.]

"SEC. 7. That any and every master, pilot, and engineer, or person or persons acting in such capacity, respectively, on board of any boat or vessel who may willfully injure or destroy any work of the United States contemplated in section six of this Act, or who shall knowingly engage in towing any scow, boat, or vessel loaded with any such prohibited matter to any point or place of deposit or discharge in any harbor contemplated in section six of this Act, elsewhere than within the limits defined and permitted by the Secretary of War, shall be deemed guilty of a violation of this Act and shall, upon conviction, be punishable as hereinbefore provided for offenses in violation of section six of this Act, and shall also have his license revoked or suspended for a term to be fixed by the judge before whom tried and convicted." [28 Stat. L. 363.]

"SEC. 8. Any boat, vessel, scow or other craft used or employed in violating any of the provisions of sections six and seven of this Act shall be liable to the pecuniary penalties imposed thereby, and in addition thereto to the amount of the damages done by said boat, vessel, scow, or other craft, which latter sum shall be placed to the credit of the appropriation for the improvement of the harbor in which the damage occurred, and said boat, vessel, scow, or other craft may be proceeded against summarily by way of libel in any district court of the United States having jurisdiction thereof." [28 Stat. L. 363.]

"SEC. 9. That whenever the Secretary of War grants to any person or persons permission to extend piers, wharves, bulkheads, or other works, or to make deposits in any tidal harbor or river of the United States beyond any harbor lines established under authority of the United States, he shall cause to be ascertained the amount of tide water displaced by any such structure or by any such deposits, and he shall, if he deem it necessary, require the parties to whom the permission is given to make compensation for such displacement either by excavating in some part of the harbor, including tide-water channels between high and low water mark, to such an extent as to create a basin for as much tide water as may be displaced by such structure or by such deposits, or in any other mode that may be satisfactory to him: Provided, That all such dredging or other improvement shall be carried on under the direction of the Secretary of War, and shall in no wise injure any existing channels." [28 Stat. L. 364.]

State and federal control.—Where the subjects on which the power may be exercised are local in their nature or operation, or constitute mere aids to commerce, the authority of the state may be exerted for their regulation and management until Congress interferes and supersedes it. Bridges over navigable streams which are entirely within the limits of a state are of this class. The local authority can better appreciate their necessity, and can better direct the manner in which they should be used and regulated, than a government at a distance. It is, therefore, a matter of good sense and practical wisdom to leave their control and management with the states, Congress having the power at all times to interfere and supersede their authority whenever they act arbitrarily and to the injury of commerce. Escanaba, etc., Transp. Co. v. Chicago, (1882) 107 U. S. 678; Willamette Iron Bridge Co. v. Hatch, (1888) 125 U. S. 1; Sands v. Manistee River Imp. Co., (1887) 123

U. S. 293; Huse v. Glover, (1886) 119 U. S. 543; Hamilton v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co., (1886) 119 U. S. 281; Cardwell v. American Bridge Co., (1885) 113 U. S. 205; Miller v. New York, (1883) 109 U. S. 385; Mobile County v. Kimball, (1880) 102 U. S. 691; Northern Transp. Co. v. Chicago, (1878) 99 U. S. 643; Pound v. Turck, (1877) 95 U. S. 462; Gilman v. Philadelphia, (1865) 3 Wall. (U. S.) 721; Mississippi, etc., R. Co. v. Ward, (1862) 2 Black (U. S.) 494; Palmer v. Cuyahoga County, (1843) 3 McLean (U. S.) 226; Willson v. Black Bird Creek Marsh Co., (1829) 2 Pet. (U. S.) 245; Columbus Ins. Co. v. Curtienius, (1854) 6 McLean (U. S.) 209, 6 Fed. Cas. No. 3,045; (1891) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 101.

Navigable waters entirely within the limits of a state stand upon the same footing and are subject to the same controlling authority of Congress as those extending through or reaching beyond the state. The right of the state, in the absence of congressional regulation to the contrary, to authorize the erection of bridges over such portion of navigable waters as may be embraced within its limits does not depend upon the length of such waters, nor is the state's authority restricted or affected by the fact that some portion of the stream may extend beyond its territorial jurisdiction. Rhea v. Newport, etc., R. Co., (1892) 50 Fed. Rep. 16.

The power of Congress over navigable streams is supreme and grows out of the power to regulate commerce. (1896) 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 430.

Under the power conferred upon Congress by the Constitution to regulate commerce, the United States has the right to control all structures and works which interfere in any manner with the navigable capacity of the navigable waters of the United States which either by themselves, or in connection with other waters, form channels for interstate commerce. (1899) 22 Op. Atty.-Gen. 332.

The right of the state to erect or authorize bridges over the river which should not interfere with its navigation is conceded, and such bridges are lawful structures. But they are built subject to the power of Congress at any time to act upon the matter of the navigation of the river and to define what structures should be regarded as interfering with that navigation. U. S. v. Rider, (1892) 50 Fed. Rep. 406.

Effect of state authorization.—Any obstruction to a waterway, in the face of a mandate of Congress that the river shall be used as one of its interstate waterways, is open to removal by the proper authorities of the United States government. The fact that the state may have authorized the structure is of no avail from the moment that the government of the United States determines to employ the river as such an interstate highway. U. S. v. Moline, (1897) 82 Fed. Rep. 592.

Bridge erected prior to federal control.—Where a bridge was erected by authority of a state before Congress assumed actual jurisdiction over the river for the purposes of navigation, and it is declared to be an obstruction to navigation, such obstruction may be removed without compensation from the United States, and such removal cannot be regarded as a "taking of private property," within the meaning of the Constitution. (1896) 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 430.

Constitutionality.—There is in the Act no delegation of judicial power to the secretary that is not open to review in the courts. Therefore, the Act, so far as it is applicable to the case in hand, is constitutional and valid. U. S. v. Moline, (1897) 82 Fed. Rep. 592.

It is not an unconstitutional delegation of the legislative function for Congress to intrust to the secretary of war the power to declare what is an unreasonable obstruction to navigation. (1896) 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 430.

Congress itself is not required to consider each case of alleged obstruction to navigation and determine the facts and declare that an obstruction exists, but it may generally define the offense and leave the facts to be determined by a court or special tribunal. (1896) 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 430.

In U. S. v. Keokuk, etc., Bridge Co., (1891) 45 Fed. Rep. 178, it was held that Congress cannot without abdicating its paramount and conclusive authority in the regulation of the commercial highways of the country confer upon the secretary of war the right to declare that bridges lawfully erected are obstructions to free navigation and must be remodeled or removed.

In U. S. v. Rider, (1892) 50 Fed. Rep. 406, it was held that sections 4 and 5 of the River and Harbor Act of Sept. 19, 1890, are unconstitutional.

Change of authorized bridge.—In U. S. v. Keokuk, etc., Bridge Co., (1891) 45 Fed. Rep. 178, it was held that if a bridge is constructed in accordance with the provision of an Act of Congress authorizing its erection, it is, when thus constructed, a legal structure, and its status in this particular cannot be changed by judicial action, or by any power short of that which legalized it in the beginning.

Nature of statute.—The statute is revisory and defensive in its nature; it clears the way for interstate and foreign commerce, but does not assume the police powers or local control. (1891) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 101.

Strict construction.—It is one of those statutes which, being against common right, is to be strictly construed, and which is to be interpreted and applied in accordance with the constitutional rights of individuals. Willink v. U. S., (1903) 38 Ct. Cl. 693.

It is the duty of the secretary of war to ascertain whether the bridge across the river is an unreasonable obstruction to the free navigation of said river, and if he comes to the conclusion that it is such an obstruction it is his duty to proceed as required by that statute. (1891) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 101.

Questions to be considered by secretary.—In deciding whether any given bridge is an "unreasonable" obstruction, the secretary must necessarily take into account not only the interests of navigation, but also those of intersecting locomotion and transportation. (1891) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 101.

The rights of intersecting lines of freight and of travel, the needs and the convenience of residents, and the business movements of all who come and all who go, are elements which help to constitute the reasonableness of an interfering structure built for their use, but to some extent obstructive to the waterway. (1891) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 101.

Replacing bridge.—If the company itself voluntarily prostrates its bridge with the intention of constructing another in its place, the secretary of war has the right to prescribe conditions as to height, length of span, etc. (1899) 22 Op. Atty.-Gen. 343.

What obstructions included.—The "obstructions" referred to in sections 9 and 10 of the Act of Aug. 11, 1888, ch. 860, are such as appertain to the structure of the bridge and its plan, in view of its location. They are such as, under the language of the sections, can be remedied by "alterations." (1899) 19 Op. Atty.-Gen. 395.

Illegal obstruction necessary.—The bridge owner cannot be made liable to a fine or for damages simply because the bridge may be in fact an obstruction to the navigation of the river, but only in case the obstruction is illegal. U. S. v. Keokuk, etc., Bridge Co., (1891) 45 Fed. Rep. 178.

Obstructions below low-water mark.—The pains and penalties prescribed for erecting obstructions must be restricted to obstructions below low-water mark, to obstructions erected, not as an owner of private property on his land, but obstructions erected on public waters on land which if it belongs to any one belongs to the United States. Willink v. U. S., (1903) 38 Ct. Cl. 693.

Failure to open draw promptly.—Obstructions caused by failure to promptly open the draw of the bridge for passing vessels are not within those sections. (1899) 19 Op. Atty.-Gen. 395.

Nature of obstruction and changes required must be shown.—It certainly could not be permitted to the secretary, without any hearing afforded to the company, to declare that the bridge was an obstruction, and then to notify the company that the bridge must be altered or remodeled, without either pointing out the character of the obstruction or the changes deemed necessary to be made in order to meet the views of the secretary. U. S. v. Keokuk, etc., Bridge Co., (1891) 45 Fed. Rep. 178.

Notice of changes required and time therefor.—Section 4 of this Act provides that whenever the secretary of war determines that a bridge over a navigable waterway of the United States is an unreasonable obstruction to the free navigation of such waterway, it shall be his duty, after giving the parties an opportunity to be heard, to direct that the bridge be so altered as to render navigation reasonably unobstructive, and in giving such notice he shall specify the changes required and the time within which to be made. (1896) 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 430.

Notice served on company subsequently insolvent.—Where a notice was served on a railroad company that a certain bridge over a navigable river was an obstruction and its alteration was required, and thereafter, but before the time fixed in the notice as a limit of the time during which the alteration must be made, the company was dispossessed of its property, not voluntarily, but against its will, by decree of a court of competent jurisdiction, the company cannot be held liable for noncompliance with the order of the secretary of war. And where the receivers of such company had received no notice in their capacity as receivers they cannot be held liable, although they had notice prior to their appointment and acceptance of the office that the railway company had been notified to make such alteration. U. S. v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., (1890) 43 Fed. Rep. 415.

Reasonable notice a question for court.—Where the facts are clear, what is reasonable notice or reasonable time is always a question exclusively for the court. U. S. v. Rider, (1892) 50 Fed. Rep. 406.

County commissioners without funds to make change.—A notice by the secretary to the commissioners of a certain county to institute a draw in a certain bridge over a navigable river is unreasonable and does not give due time where the commissioners had no funds applicable to such a purpose, nor could they obtain any through the legislature, and where their only method of raising such funds was by submitting the question to the people at a general election, which under the laws of the state could not be done within the time required in the notice of the secretary. U. S. v. Rider, (1892) 50 Fed. Rep. 406.

Compensation for removal.—Structures which are unauthorized by law may be summarily removed and without compensation. Those which are authorized by law can only be removed by making just compensation, unless the authorization by the federal government was accompanied with a reservation of a right to change, modify, or remove. (1899) 22 Op. Atty.-Gen. 343.

The right of Congress to remove the obstruction does not of itself exempt the government of the United States from the duty of making just compensation for such property rights as are taken. U. S. v. Moline, (1897) 82 Fed. Rep. 592.

The following cases construed the superseded Act of Sept. 19, 1890, section 5:

State not included.—The words "persons, corporation, or association" in the statute do not include a sovereign state, and it is not the duty of the department of war to serve the notice provided for in section 4 on a state with regard to a bridge owned by the state. (1893) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 606.

Jurisdiction of District Court.—This Act gives the District Court jurisdiction of a criminal action against the owner of a bridge to recover a fine of five thousand dollars at the suit of the district attorney, when the secretary of war shall find that such bridge is an unreasonable obstruction to the free navigation of the water which it crosses, and when said owner shall fail or neglect to obey the order of the secretary thereabout. Oregon City Transp. Co. v. Columbia St. Bridge Co., (1892) 53 Fed. Rep. 549.

The following cases construed the superseded Act of Sept. 19, 1890, section 6.

Prohibition of deposit, where.—The depositing and placing of ballast, stone, and other articles mentioned in any place or situation on the bank of a navigable river is not absolutely prohibited; the prohibition applies only to such places where the same shall be liable to be washed into such navigable river by ordinary or high tides, or by storms or floods or otherwise, and not even then unless navigation shall or may be impeded or obstructed. U. S. v. Burns, (1893) 54 Fed. Rep. 351.

Floating logs or rafts.—This Act is directed against the casting into or constructing upon the beds of navigable streams anything which may create obstructions more or less permanent in character, diminishing the navigable capacity of the streams. It is not directed against the floating of logs or rafts thereon which may obstruct the surface of the streams, but which necessarily are temporary in their effect. U. S. v. Marthinson, (1893) 58 Fed. Rep. 765.

Only one offense should be charged.—The language of a statute creates or describes several separate offenses, and in charging one of them, only the words applicable to the one intended to be set forth should be used in the count charging the violation, and all of the language used in describing all the offenses should not be employed. U. S. v. Burns, (1893) 54 Fed. Rep. 351.

Allegation of character of deposit.—The defendants should be advised clearly as to the character of the article or waste matter they so threw into the river, and as to the place where it was done. U. S. v. Burns, (1893) 54 Fed. Rep. 351.

Allegation of place.—“Place is of the utmost importance, and the allegation as to the location should be clear and unequivocal.”

“The defendants should not be liable to be surprised as to the place, but should be fully advised and an opportunity given them to show by witnesses who have examined the place designated that it is not such a situation where the articles enumerated were liable to be washed into the river and navigation impeded thereby.” U. S. v. Burns, (1893) 54 Fed. Rep. 351.

The following cases construed the superseded Act of Sept. 19, 1890, section 7.

The evident intention of Congress was to take exclusive charge of such matters in the future for the United States, and to place them under the charge of the secretary of war, leaving it to his discretion to authorize or prohibit the building of the structure and the creation of the impairment of navigation; thus rendering it unnecessary to apply to Congress for permission or special legislation in particular cases, as had frequently been done theretofore. U. S. v. Burns, (1893) 54 Fed. Rep. 351.

Exclusive control of United States.—The Act was intended to place the navigable waters of the United States under the exclusive control of the United States and thereafter prevent any interference with their navigability, whether by bridges, dams, or other obstructions, except by express permission of the United States granted through its agent, the secretary of war. (1898) 22 Op. Atty.-Gen. 52; (1894) 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 41.

State authority.—Full power resides in the states as to the erection of bridges and other works in navigable streams wholly within their jurisdiction, in the absence of the exercise by Congress of authority to the contrary. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., v. Ohio, (1897) 165 U. S. 365. See also Shively v. Bowlby, (1894) 152 U. S. 33; Willamette Iron Bridge Co. v. Hatch, (1888) 125 U. S. 1; Cardwell v. American Bridge Co., (1885) 113 U. S. 205; Withers v. Buckley, (1857) 20 How. (U. S.) 84; Willson v. Black Bird Creek Marsh Co., (1829) 2 Pet. (U. S.) 245; Kansas City, etc., R. Co. v. Wiygul, (1903) 82 Miss. 228; Oregon City Transp. Co. v. Columbia St. Bridge Co., (1892) 53 Fed. Rep. 549.

Bridges built under state authority.—Even conceding arguendo that the words “navigable waters” as used in the Act were intended to apply to streams wholly within a state, its obvious purpose was not to deprive the states of authority to grant power to bridge such streams or to render lawful all bridges previously built without authority, but simply to create an additional and cumulative remedy to prevent such structures, although lawfully authorized, from interfering with commerce. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co. v. Ohio, (1897) 165 U. S. 365.

Navigable waters only.—This statute relates solely to navigable waters. Egan v. Hart, (1897) 165 U. S. 188.

The Mississippi river in Minnesota, both above and below the Falls of St. Anthony, is a navigable river not wholly within the limits of any particular state, and cannot be bridged without the permission of the United States, expressed through the approval of the plans by the secretary of war. (1898) 22 Op. Atty.-Gen. 52.

The expression “affirmatively authorized by law” does not refer to Acts of Congress alone, but also includes laws of state legislation. Kansas City, etc., R. Co. v. Wiygul, (1903) 82 Miss. 228.

Bridges over waters within state only.—The authority conferred upon the secretary of war by this section is limited to the cases of bridges authorized by the state law to be erected over waters the navigable portions of which lie wholly within the limits of the state. (1892) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 488. See also (1892) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 479.

Waters extending into two states.—No general law exists providing for or permitting bridges to be built over navigable waters which divide or extend into two or more states, nor does any general legislation confer the power of approval upon the secretary of war as to bridges over such waters. (1892) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 488.

The contemplated approval of the secretary must be confined to waters lying wholly within the limits of one state, and navigable waters extending beyond the limits of a state should not be bridged without explicit authority from Congress. (1892) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 488.

Bridge over boundary waters authorized by both states.—The secretary of war would not be prohibited from approving the plan and location of a bridge across boundary waters if acts of authorization were passed by the legislatures of the states interested. (1899) 22 Op. Atty.-Gen. 332.

Clause 2 of the proviso does not limit the authority of the secretary of war to grant permission for the construction of a work of this character to navigable waters which lie wholly within the limits of one state. (1899) 22 Op. Atty.-Gen. 332.

Extent of power granted.—The provision that it shall not be lawful to thereafter erect any bridge "in any navigable river or navigable waters of the United States, under any act of the legislative assembly of any state, until the location and plan of such bridge * * * have been submitted to and approved by the secretary of war," contemplated that the function of the secretary should extend only to the form of future structures. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co. v. Ohio, (1897) 165 U. S. 365.

A bridge authorized before this Act does not need the authority of the secretary of war for its erection. Adams v. Ulmer, (1897) 91 Me. 47.

Authority to determine place and time of building.—The mere delegation of power to direct a change in lawful structures so as to cause them not to interfere with commerce cannot be construed as conferring on the officer named the right to determine when and where a bridge may be built. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co. v. Ohio, (1897) 165 U. S. 365.

Authority to authorize building not included.—The mere delegation to the secretary of the right to determine whether a structure authorized by law has been so built as to impede commerce, and to direct, when reasonably necessary, its modification so as to remove such impediment, does not confer upon the officer power to give original authority to build bridges, nor does it presuppose that Congress conceived that it was lodging in the secretary power to that end. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co. v. Ohio, (1897) 165 U. S. 365.

The words "or other works" in this Act are not to be interpreted according to their natural and usual sense, but are restricted to things of the same kind as those just enumerated. (1899) 22 Op. Atty.-Gen. 332.

Permanent constructions intended.—The excavating and filling, altering and modifying of the course, location, and capacity of the channel, as described in this section, must have reference to such permanent construction as tends to obstruct navigation, the building of which must have the approval and authorization of the secretary of war. U. S. v. Burns, (1893) 54 Fed. Rep. 351.

Purchasers of right to erect bridge.—Where a state has granted authority to construct a bridge over a navigable river, and the location and plan have been approved by the secretary of war, the question whether the purchasers of such right are authorized to proceed is one which does not concern the government. (1896) 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 293.

Rights of parties.—The action of a state with reference to the rights of parties among themselves concerning the construction of a bridge does not affect the interests of the United States so long as the directions concerning the location and plan of the bridge are respected. (1896) 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 293.

Consent of owner of submerged land necessary for wharf.—This Act is a mere regulation for the benefit of commerce and navigation, and the license or permission of the secretary of war is only a finding and declaration of such officer that such proposed structure would not interfere with or be detrimental to navigation, and it is not equivalent to a positive declaration by authority of Congress that the licensee may build the wharf or other structure without first obtaining the consent of the owner of the submerged land on which it is his purpose to build. Cobb v. Lincoln Park, (1903) 202 Ill. 427.

Power of secretary of interior to authorize dams.—The secretary of the interior has no power under the Act of March 3, 1891, providing for the location and selection of reservoir sites on the public lands of the United States and rights of way for irrigating ditches and canals, to grant a right to construct dams across the Rio Grande for the purpose of checking the flow of water and distributing it for irrigation purposes. The control and supervision of the navigable waters of the United States is vested in the secretary of war. (1897) 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 518.

Definite allegation of place required.—If the defendants are to be required to answer to the charge of excavating the banks of the river and filling the bed and channel of the same, the place or places where it is alleged they so excavated and filled should be given with more definiteness than "at the district of West Virginia." U. S. v. Burns, (1893) 54 Fed. Rep. 351.

Definite allegation of place required.—It is not an offense under this section to build any of the structures without the permission of the secretary of war unless the structures so built are constructed so as to obstruct or impair navigation, commerce, and anchorage in the waters where they are located. Consequently the place where the structure is located should be given in an indictment with more definiteness than "in, along, upon, and across a certain river." U. S. v. Burns, (1893) 54 Fed. Rep. 351.

The following cases construed the superseded Act of Sept. 19, 1890, section 10.

Constitutionality.—The adoption of this section was an exercise of the constitutional right of Congress to regulate commerce between the states. U. S. v. Bellingham Bay Boom Co., (C. C. A. 1897) 81 Fed. Rep. 658.

Direct statute necessary. — There must be a direct statute of the United States in order to bring within the scope of its laws, as administered by the courts of law and equity, obstructions and nuisances in navigable streams within the states. Such obstructions and nuisances are offenses against the laws of the state within which the navigable waters lie, and may be indicted or prohibited as such, but they are not offenses against the United States laws which do not exist, and none such exist except what are to be found on the statute book. U. S. v. Bellingham Bay Boom Co., (C. C. A. 1897) 81 Fed. Rep. 658.

General effect. — Whatever may be said in reference to obstructions existing at the time of the passage of the Act under the authority of the state statutes it is obvious that Congress meant that thereafter no state should interfere with the navigability of a stream without the condition of national assent. It did not, of course, disturb any of the provisions of prior statutes in respect to the mere appropriation of water of non-navigable streams in disregard of the old common-law rule of continuous flow, and its only purpose, as is obvious, was to affirm that as to navigable waters nothing should be done to obstruct their navigability without the assent of the national government. It was an exercise by Congress of the power oftentimes declared by the court to belong to it, of national control over navigable streams. U. S. v. Rio Grande Dam, etc., Co., (1899) 174 U. S. 707.

The object was to take control of the navigable waters of the United States, so as to protect the interests of the government and prevent obstructions in the free navigation of said waters. It was intended to apply to all cases where the states had failed to pass any laws in regard thereto and to prohibit obstructions not authorized by law. But it was not intended by Congress to be retroactive in its results. U. S. v. Bellingham Bay Boom Co., (C. C. A. 1897) 81 Fed. Rep. 658.

"Not affirmatively authorized by law." — The expression contained in this section in regard to obstructions "not affirmatively authorized by law," meant not only a law of Congress, but a law of the state in which the river was situated, which had been passed before Congress had itself legislated upon the subject. An obstruction created under the authority of a state statute under such circumstances was an obstruction "affirmatively authorized by law." When, therefore, the section continues and provides that "any such obstruction, * * * whether heretofore or hereafter created," shall constitute an offense, it referred to an obstruction as described in the first sentence of the section, namely an "obstruction not affirmatively authorized by law." If the obstruction were affirmatively authorized by a law of the state, it did not come within the condemnation of the section, and its continuance was, therefore, valid. U. S. v. Bellingham Bay Boom Co., (1900) 176 U. S. 211.

Right of federal court to construe state law. By the passage of the river and harbor bill, containing the above-mentioned 10th section, Congress had acted upon the subject, and has provided for the removal of any obstruction to a navigable river with the exception named in the section. When the attorney-general, therefore, acts under the authority conferred by this statute, he has the right to call upon the court, upon proper proofs being made to enjoin the continuance of an obstruction not authorized by the statute, and the court has jurisdiction, and it is its duty, to decide the question whether the existing obstruction is or is not affirmatively authorized by law. In such inquiry the court is bound to decide whether the boom as existing is authorized by any law of the state, when such law is claimed to be a justification for its creation or continuance. That question is not for the state alone, but must necessarily be decided by the federal court in the course of exercising the jurisdiction conferred upon it by the federal statute. U. S. v. Bellingham Bay Boom Co., (1900) 176 U. S. 211, reversing (C. C. A. 1897) 81 Fed. Rep. 658.

Not within limits of navigation. — It would be to improperly ignore the scope of this language to limit it to the acts done within the very limits of navigation of a navigable stream. U. S. v. Rio Grande Dam, etc., Co., (1899) 174 U. S. 707.

A dam constructed in a river above its navigable limits which interferes with or impairs the navigability of the lower portion of the river is such an obstruction as may be enjoined by the attorney-general under the provisions of this section. U. S. v. Rio Grande Dam, etc., Co., (1899) 174 U. S. 707.

What obstructions prohibited. — The language is general and must be given full scope. It is not a prohibition of any obstruction to the navigation, but any obstruction to the navigable capacity by anything, wherever done, or however done, within the limits of the jurisdiction of the United States, which tends to destroy the navigable capacity of one of the navigable waters of the United States, is within the terms of the prohibition. U. S. v. Rio Grande Dam, etc., Co., (1899) 174 U. S. 707.

Section 10 was intended to apply to all obstructions of a permanent character not affirmatively authorized by law, wilfully, wantonly, carelessly, or voluntarily created in the navigable waters over which the United States has jurisdiction, not covered by the specific provisions of the preceding sections in the same chapter. U. S. v. Hall, (C. C. A. 1894) 63 Fed. Rep. 472.

The obstructions contemplated by the 10th section — those that have not been affirmatively authorized by law, and are, therefore, prohibited — are such obstructions as are permanent in their nature, as are created for special purposes by the usual modes of construction. U. S. v. Burns, (1893) 54 Fed. Rep. 351.

Hulls of vessels sunk in harbors, not through perils at sea, but through voluntary act of owners or their authorized agents, are obstructions within the meaning of this section of the statute. U. S. v. Hall, (C. C. A. 1894) 63 Fed. Rep. 472.

Rafts, logs, etc., floating.—It was not the intention of Congress by this tenth section to prohibit the floating of rafts, logs, timber, boats, and vessels, loose and adrift, in and upon the navigable waters of the United States. U. S. v. Burns, (1893) 54 Fed. Rep. 351.

Bulging embankment.—Where a railroad company by an embankment placed such an increased burden on its right of way along a river that it forced out a plastic stratum of clay into the river, causing it to bulge up in the channel, thereby causing a bar and a consequent obstruction to navigation, the prohibition contained in this section will govern such a case, and such act is clearly unlawful. Northern Pac. R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1900) 104 Fed. Rep. 691.

Obstructions authorized previous to Act.—Congress recognized that in the exercise of the legitimate powers of the state government, Acts had been passed allowing individuals and corporations to build and construct booms, wharves, piers, and other structures upon the rivers, and it was not the intention of Congress to interfere with such works as had been "affirmatively authorized by law," either by the legislature of the state or by Acts of Congress. U. S. v. Bellingham Bay Boom Co., (C. C. A. 1897) 81 Fed. Rep. 658.

Injunction at suit of damaged party.—The United States courts will interfere by injunction to restrain the obstruction of navigation by a bridge at the suit of a party who had sustained a special damage. Pennsylvania v. Wheeling, etc., Bridge Co., (1851) 13 How. (U. S.) 518.

Question of fact to be determined.—When such proceedings are instituted, it becomes a question of fact whether the act sought to be enjoined is one which fairly and directly tends to obstruct (that is, interfere with or diminish) the navigable capacity of a stream. It does not follow that the courts would be justified in sustaining any proceedings by the attorney-general to restrain any appropriation of the upper waters of a navigable stream. The question always is one of fact whether such appropriation substantially interferes with the navigable capacity within the limits where navigation is a recognized fact. U. S. v. Rio Grande Dam, etc., Co., (1899) 174 U. S. 707.

Insufficient indictment.—A count charging the defendants with unlawfully creating an obstruction not affirmatively authorized by law, to the navigable capacity of the river, but giving not the slightest notice or description of the acts done by them, which they are called upon to defend, is bad. U. S. v. Burns, (1893) 54 Fed. Rep. 351.

The following cases construed the superseded Act of Sept. 19, 1890, section 12.

Discretion of secretary.—The establishment of a certain line as essential to the preservation and protection of a harbor rests in the discretion of the secretary of war alone, and his judgment in the matter must be final and conclusive until modified by him. (1894) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 740.

Authority of local government.—While section 12 of the Act of 1890 forbade the construction or extension of piers, wharves, bulkheads, or other works beyond the harbor lines established under the direction of the secretary of war in navigable waters of the United States, "except under such regulations as may be prescribed from time to time by him," it does not follow that Congress intended in such matters to disregard altogether the wishes of the local authorities. Its general legislation so far means nothing more than that the regulations established by the secretary in respect of waters the navigation and commerce upon which may be regulated by Congress, shall not be disregarded even by the states. Congress has not, however, indicated its purpose to ignore wholly the original power of the states to regulate the use of navigable waters entirely within their respective limits. Montgomery v. Portland, (1903) 190 U. S. 89.

The following cases construed the superseded Act of Aug. 18, 1894, section 6.

The discretion given to the secretary of war is very broad and no principles governing it are declared. There is no appeal from his action. These facts impose the obligation of a careful scrutiny of the considerations which should control his judgment. (1896) 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 305.

It is the duty of the secretary of war to act upon a petition to have designated the portion of a river within which refuse matter may be discharged in accordance with the provisions of the Act of Aug. 18, 1894, ch. 299, sec. 6, although navigability of the river will not be affected. The secretary of war in deciding this question should be governed only by considerations affecting the present or future navigation of the river. (1896) 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 305.

Obstruction by hydraulic mining.—Obstruction to navigation of certain rivers within the state of California, caused by hydraulic mining, is one calling for the interposition of the restraining arm of equity in an appropriate action on behalf of the United States, with a view to remedying the evil. (1886) 18 Op. Atty.-Gen. 404.

SEC. 10. [Obstruction of navigable waters forbidden — approval of plans for wharves, etc. — excavations and fillings.] That the creation of any obstruction not affirmatively authorized by Congress, to the navigable capacity of any of the waters of the United States is hereby prohibited; and it shall not be lawful to build or commence the building of any wharf, pier, dolphin, boom, weir, breakwater, bulkhead, jetty, or other structures in any port, roadstead, haven, harbor, canal, navigable river, or other water of the United States, outside established harbor lines, or where no harbor lines have been established, except on plans recommended by the Chief of Engineers and authorized by the Secretary of War; and it shall not be lawful to excavate or fill, or in any manner to alter or modify the course, location, condition, or capacity of, any port, roadstead, haven, harbor, canal, lake, harbor of refuge, or inclosure within the limits of any breakwater, or of the channel of any navigable water of the United States, unless the work has been recommended by the Chief of Engineers and authorized by the Secretary of War prior to beginning the same. [30 Stat. L. 1151.]

See note to section 8, supra.

Intent to supersede state authority.—“If it had intended by the Act of 1899 to assert the power to take under national control for every purpose and to the fullest possible extent the erection of structures in the navigable waters of the United States, that were wholly within the limits of the respective states, and to supersede entirely the authority which the states in the absence of any action by Congress have in such matters, such a radical departure from the previous policy of the government would have been manifested by clear and explicit language. In the absence of such language it should not be assumed that any such departure was intended.” Cummings v. Chicago, (1903) 188 U. S. 410.

State and federal assent both necessary.—This Act does not manifest the purpose of Congress to go to the extent of authorizing the erection of docks and like structures in navigable waters that are entirely within the territorial limits of the several states, under its power to regulate foreign and interstate commerce, and thereby to supersede the original authority of the state. The effect of this Act reasonably interpreted is to make the erection of a structure in a navigable river within the limits of a state dependent upon the concurrent or joint assent of both the national government and the state government. Montgomery v. Portland, (1903) 190 U. S. 89. See also Cummings v. Chicago, (1903) 188 U. S. 410.

The secretary of war acting under the authority conferred by Congress may assent to the erection by private parties of such a structure. Without such assent the structure cannot be erected by them. But under the existing legislation they must, before proceeding under such an authority, obtain also the assent of the state acting by its constituted agencies. Cummings v. Chicago, (1903) 188 U. S. 410.

The right of private persons to erect structures in a navigable water of the United States that is entirely within the limits of a state cannot be said to be complete and absolute without the concurrent or joint assent of both the general and state government. Montgomery v. Portland, (1903) 190 U. S. 89.

Porto Rican waters.—The coastal waters, harbors, and other navigable waters of the island of Porto Rico are waters of the United States within the meaning and intent of this section, although the ratifications of the treaty whereby that island was ceded by Spain to the United States were not exchanged until after the passage of that Act. (1901) 23 Op. Atty.-Gen. 551.

Prior to the passage of the Porto Rican Act of April 12, 1900 (31 Stat. L. 77), the secretary of war had authority under this section to issue a license for the building and maintenance of a wharf in the harbor of San Juan, P. R., and the rules imposed by section 3 of the resolution of May 1, 1900 (31 Stat. L. 715), upon the grant of franchises by the executive council of that island, do not extend to an antecedent license granted by him. The power to revoke the license so granted is vested in the secretary of war, and so long as it is unrevoked the rebuilding of the wharf, under such license, is subject to his control and supervision and not to that of the executive council. (1901) 23 Op. Atty.-Gen. 551.

The concluding clause of this section seems to refer rather to alterations in the location or capacity of a port, short of the obstructions which are absolutely prohibited. (1901) 23 Op. Atty.-Gen. 551.

Right to make repairs.—Congress had no intention by this section, which is prospective purely, of taking away from a railroad company, the construction of whose bridge had been “affirmatively authorized by law” as provided by the Act of Sept. 19, 1890, the necessary power embraced in and carried by the grant to construct the bridge, of making necessary repairs, provided such repairs are made with due care and within reasonable time. Kansas City, etc., R. Co. v. Wiygul, (1903) 82 Miss. 228.

Evidence necessary.—Where the record does not contain evidence of a material character, and the absence of such evidence is due to the action of the trial court in not giving sufficient time to the government to prepare the case and make the proper inquiry as to whether certain acts in the construction of a dam and in appropriating the waters of a river would substantially diminish the navigability of that stream, a decree of a District Court will be reversed and the cause remanded with liberty to both parties to take further evidence. U. S. v. Rio Grande Dam, etc., Co., (1902) 184 U. S. 416.

SEC. 11. [Establishment of harbor lines — displacements by fillings, etc.] That where it is made manifest to the Secretary of War that the establishment of harbor lines is essential to the preservation and protection of harbors he may, and is hereby, authorized to cause such lines to be established, beyond which no piers, wharves, bulkheads, or other works shall be extended or deposits made, except under such regulations as may be prescribed from time to time by him: Provided, That whenever the Secretary of War grants to any person or persons permission to extend piers, wharves, bulkheads, or other works, or to make deposits in any tidal harbor or river of the United States beyond any harbor lines established under authority of the United States, he shall cause to be ascertained the amount of tide water displaced by any such structure or by any such deposits, and he shall, if he deem it necessary, require the parties to whom the permission is given to make compensation for such displacement either by excavating in some part of the harbor, including tide-water channels between high and low water mark, to such an extent as to create a basin for as much tide water as may be displaced by such structure or by such deposits, or in any other mode that may be satisfactory to him. [30 Stat. L. 1151.]

The absolute power of Congress to regulate commerce, being without limit or extent, includes the power to regulate the use of all means and instrumentalities used in commerce, whether on sea, navigable rivers, and lakes, in harbors, or on land, irrespective of whether a state has attempted to regulate the same matter or not. (1899) 22 Op. Atty-Gen. 501.

Whenever Congress in the exercise of its power to regulate commerce makes any rule or regulation in harbors or elsewhere, whether in establishing harbor lines or otherwise, such regulation necessarily supersedes any that a state may have made upon the same subject within its limits. (1899) 22 Op. Atty-Gen. 501.

Effect of state lines. — The power to regulate commerce includes the power to regulate harbor lines. It may be exercised without reference to state action, and in establishing such lines the general government may do so either by adopting in whole or in part lines established by the state, or by making other and different lines. (1899) 22 Op. Atty-Gen. 501.

Authority of secretary of war. — This section in express terms confers upon the secretary of war authority to establish harbor lines whenever and wherever they are authorized by that Act; and, under the authority thus conferred, he is authorized to establish harbor lines whenever the interests of commerce require them, to restrict the encroachment of wharves, piers, etc., upon the waters of harbors, and to protect commerce therein; and this, notwithstanding the objection sometimes urged that this and kindred legislation are attempts to confer legislative or judicial power upon heads of departments or executive officers. Navigable Waters, (1899) 22 Op. Atty-Gen. 501.

Right to continuance of established lines. — In view of the frequently changing conditions which require changes of harbor lines, it cannot be claimed that the establishment of such a line gives to any one a vested right in its permanent continuance. (1899) 22 Op. Atty-Gen. 501.

Re-establishment of lines. — The fact that harbor lines have once been established is no bar to the exercise of the same power as often as the needs of commerce require. (1899) 22 Op. Atty-Gen. 501.

SEC. 12. [Penalty for violations of Act — removal of structures.] That every person and every corporation that shall violate any of the provisions of sections nine, ten, and eleven of this Act, or any rule or regulation made by the Secretary of War in pursuance of the provisions of the said section eleven, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding twenty-five hundred dollars nor less than five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment (in the case of a natural person) not exceeding one year, or by both such punishments, in the discretion of the court. And further, the removal of any structures or parts of structures erected in violation of the provisions of the said sections may be enforced by the injunction of any circuit court exercising jurisdiction in any district in which such structures may exist, and proper proceedings to this end may be instituted under the direction of the Attorney-General of the United States. [30 Stat. L. 1151.]

This section was amended by the Act of Feb. 20, 1900, ch. 23, sec. 2, 31 Stat. L. 32, by striking out, after the words "in pursuance of the provisions of the said section," the word "fourteen," appearing in the section as originally enacted, and inserting the word "eleven" as above given.

SEC. 13. [Depositing refuse in or on banks of navigable waters forbidden — permits to deposit.] That it shall not be lawful to throw, discharge, or deposit, or cause, suffer, or procure to be thrown, discharged, or deposited either from or out of any ship, barge, or other floating craft of any kind, or from the shore, wharf, manufacturing establishment, or mill of any kind, any refuse matter of any kind or description whatever other than that flowing from streets and sewers and passing therefrom in a liquid state, into any navigable water of the United States, or into any tributary of any navigable water from which the same shall float or be washed into such navigable water; and it shall not be lawful to deposit, or cause, suffer, or procure to be deposited material of any kind in any place on the bank of any navigable water, or on the bank of any tributary of any navigable water, where the same shall be liable to be washed into such navigable water, either by ordinary or high tides, or by storms or floods, or otherwise, whereby navigation shall or may be impeded or obstructed: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall extend to, apply to, or prohibit the operations in connection with the improvement of navigable waters or construction of public works, considered necessary and proper by the United States officers supervising such improvement or public work: And provided further, That the Secretary of War, whenever in the judgment of the Chief of Engineers anchorage and navigation will not be injured thereby, may permit the deposit of any material above mentioned in navigable waters, within limits to be defined and under conditions to be prescribed by him, provided application is made to him prior to depositing such material; and whenever any permit is so granted the conditions thereof shall be strictly complied with, and any violation thereof shall be unlawful. [30 Stat. L. 1152.]

Power of Congress.—Congress has power to regulate and improve the harbors of the navigable waters of the United States, and this carries with it the right to deposit the material removed in making the improvements in any other part of the harbor or navigable waters or other place within its control. (1899) 22 Op. Atty.-Gen. 646.

Sufficient indictment.—An indictment alleging that the defendants "did unlawfully dump, discharge, and deposit, and aid and abet in the dumping," and that the place of such wrongful act was "at the southern district of New York, within the admiralty and maritime jurisdiction of the United States and within the jurisdiction of this court," and that the discharge was "into the tidal waters of the harbor of New York and the waters adjacent thereto," is a sufficient charge to fall within the provisions of this Act as well as within the provisions of the earlier Act of June 29, 1888, as amended by the Act of Aug. 18, 1894. U. S. v. Moran, (1901) 113 Fed. Rep. 172.

SEC. 14. [Use, etc., of government wharves, levees, etc., or materials therefrom forbidden.] That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to take possession of or make use of for any purpose, or build upon, alter, deface, destroy, move, injure, obstruct by fastening vessels thereto or otherwise, or in any manner whatever impair the usefulness of any sea wall, bulkhead, jetty, dike, levee, wharf, pier, or other work built by the United States, or any piece of plant, floating or otherwise, used in the construction of such work under the control of the United States, in whole or in part, for the preservation and improvement of any of its navigable waters or to prevent floods, or as boundary marks, tide gauges, surveying stations, buoys, or other established marks, nor remove for ballast or other purposes any stone or other material composing such works; Provided, That the Secretary of War may, on the recommendation of the Chief of Engineers, grant permission for the temporary occupation or use of any of the aforementioned public works when in his judgment such occupation or use will not be injurious to the public interest. [30 Stat. L. 1152.]

See note to section 8, supra.

SEC. 15. [Obstruction of navigation by anchored or sunken vessels, floating logs, etc. — sunken vessels to be marked and removed.] That it shall not be lawful to tie up or anchor vessels or other craft in navigable channels in such a manner as to prevent or obstruct the passage of other vessels or craft; or to voluntarily or carelessly sink, or permit or cause to be sunk, vessels or other craft in navigable channels; or to float loose timber and logs, or to float what is known as sack rafts of timber and logs in streams or channels actually navigated by steamboats in such manner as to obstruct, impede, or endanger navigation. And whenever a vessel, raft, or other craft is wrecked and sunk in a navigable channel, accidentally or otherwise, it shall be the duty of the owner of such sunken craft to immediately mark it with a buoy or beacon during the day and a lighted lantern at night, and to maintain such marks until the sunken craft is removed or abandoned, and the neglect or failure of the said owner so to do shall be unlawful; and it shall be the duty of the owner of such sunken craft to commence the immediate removal of the same, and prosecute such removal diligently, and failure to do so shall be considered as an abandonment of such craft, and subject the same to removal by the United States as hereinafter provided for. [30 Stat. L. 1152.]

See note to section 8, supra.

See annotations under section 9, supra.

Vessel anchored in wide channel. — A liberal interpretation of the Act implies that navigation shall not be hindered or interfered with by obstruction, either by anchoring or otherwise, in such a manner as to prevent its safe accomplishment. This, however, has no application to a vessel anchored in a navigable channel over four miles in width. The Northern Queen, (1902) 117 Fed. Rep. 906.

Shallow-draft vessel anchoring in deep channel. — It is a violation of this section where a dredge anchors in a deep navigable portion of the channel, when by reason of her draft she could have gone into shallower water, and out of a dangerous position. The Itasca, (1901) 117 Fed. Rep. 885.

Anchoring in fog. — Where by reason of a fog it was necessary for a vessel to anchor in the Hudson river, and before doing so she made her way toward the anchorage grounds as far as was deemed safe, and on taking soundings there deemed that she was within the anchorage grounds, she will not be held liable under this section, as she had taken due precaution. The Newburgh, (C. C. A. 1904) 130 Fed. Rep. 321.

SEC. 16. [Penalties for violation of sections 13–15.] That every person and every corporation that shall violate, or that shall knowingly aid, abet, authorize, or instigate a violation of the provisions of sections thirteen, fourteen, and fifteen of this Act shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding twenty-five hundred dollars nor less than five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment (in the case of a natural person) for not less than thirty days nor more than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court, one-half of said fine to be paid to the person or persons giving information which shall lead to conviction. And any and every master, pilot, and engineer, or person or persons acting in such capacity, respectively, on board of any boat or vessel who shall knowingly engage in towing any scow, boat, or vessel loaded with any material specified in section thirteen of this Act to any point or place of deposit or discharge in any harbor or navigable water, elsewhere than within the limits defined and permitted by the Secretary of War, or who shall willfully injure or destroy any work of the United States contemplated in section fourteen of this Act, or who shall willfully obstruct the channel of any waterway in the manner contemplated in section fifteen of this Act, shall be deemed guilty of a violation of this Act, and shall upon conviction be punished as hereinbefore provided in this section, and shall also have his license revoked or suspended for a term to be fixed by the judge before whom tried and convicted. And any boat, vessel, scow, raft, or other craft used or employed in violating any of the provisions of sections thirteen, fourteen, and fifteen of this Act shall be liable for the pecuniary penalties specified in this section, and in addition thereto for the amount of the damages done by said boat, vessel, scow, raft, or other craft, which latter sum shall be placed to the credit of the appropriation for the improvement of the harbor or waterway in which the damage occurred, and said boat, vessel, scow, raft, or other craft may be proceeded against summarily by way of libel in any district court of the United States having jurisdiction thereof. SEC. 17. [Proceedings for violations of Act.] That the Department of Justice shall conduct the legal proceedings necessary to enforce the foregoing provisions of sections nine to sixteen, inclusive, of this Act; and it shall be the duty of district attorneys of the United States to vigorously prosecute all offenders against the same whenever requested to do so by the Secretary of War or by any of the officials hereinafter designated, and it shall furthermore be the duty of said district attorneys to report to the Attorney-General of the United States the action taken by him against offenders so reported, and a transcript of such reports shall be transmitted to the Secretary of War by the Attorney-General; and for the better enforcement of the said provisions and to facilitate the detection and bringing to punishment of such offenders, the officers and agents of the United States in charge of river and harbor improvements, and the assistant engineers and inspectors employed under them by authority of the Secretary of War, and the United States collectors of customs and other revenue officers, shall have power and authority to swear out process and to arrest and take into custody, with or without process, any person or persons who may commit any of the acts or offenses prohibited by the aforesaid sections of this Act, or who may violate any of the provisions of the same: Provided, That no person shall be arrested without process for any offense not committed in the presence of some one of the aforesaid officials: And provided further, That whenever any arrest is made under the provisions of this Act, the person so arrested shall be brought forthwith before a commissioner, judge, or court of the United States for examination of the offenses alleged against him; and such commissioner, judge, or court shall proceed in respect thereto as authorized by law in case of crimes against the United States. [30 Stat. L. 1153.]

See note to section 8, supra.

SEC. 18. [Obstruction of navigation by bridges — notice to alter — criminal proceedings and penalty on failure to alter — power to Supreme Court.] That whenever the Secretary of War shall have good reason to believe that any railroad or other bridge now constructed, or which may hereafter be constructed, over any of the navigable waterways of the United States is an unreasonable obstruction to the free navigation of such waters on account of insufficient height, width of span, or otherwise, or where there is difficulty in passing the draw opening or the draw span of such bridge by rafts, steamboats, or other water craft, it shall be the duty of the said Secretary, first giving the parties reasonable opportunity to be heard, to give notice to the persons or corporations owning or controlling such bridge so to alter the same as to render navigation through or under it reasonably free, easy, and unobstructed; and in giving such notice he shall specify the changes recommended by the Chief of Engineers that are required to be made, and shall prescribe in each case a reasonable time in which to make them. If at the end of such time the alteration has not been made, the Secretary of War shall forthwith notify the United States district attorney for the district in which such bridge is situated, to the end that the criminal proceedings hereinafter mentioned may be taken. If the persons, corporation, or association owning or controlling any railroad or other bridge shall, after receiving notice to that effect, as hereinbefore required, from the Secretary of War, and within the time prescribed by him willfully fail or refuse to remove the same or to comply with the lawful order of the Secretary of War in the premises, such persons, corporation, or association shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five thousand dollars, and every month such persons, corporation, or association shall remain in default in respect to the removal or alteration of such bridge shall be deemed a new offense, and subject the persons, corporation, or association so offending to the penalties above prescribed: Provided, That in any case arising under the provisions of this section an appeal or writ of error may be taken from the district courts or from the existing circuit courts direct to the Supreme Court either by the United States or by the defendants. [30 Stat. L. 1153.]

See note to section 8, supra.

See annotations under section 9, supra.

The right of appeal to the judiciary in all questions in their nature judicial is preserved in the sections of the statute. The secretary of war has no power to carry out his decisions respecting these obstructions except through a court. Any question, whether of law or fact, essentially judicial, may be raised under these informations. A court of the United States stands always, by the clear provisions of the Act, between the decision of the secretary and its execution. There is, therefore, in the Act no delegation of judicial power to the secretary that is not open to review in the courts. The Act is constitutional and valid. E. A. Chatfield Co. v. New Haven, (1901) 110 Fed. Rep. 788; U. S. v. Moline, (1897) 82 Fed. Rep. 592.

Power delegated.—The section does not delegate to the secretary all the power of Congress in regard to the construction of bridges over navigable waters and to declare where bridges shall be built; it delegates the power only to determine whether an existing bridge is an unreasonable obstruction to navigation and to direct the manner in which the injury can be obviated. E. A. Chatfield Co. v. New Haven, (1901) 110 Fed. Rep. 788.

The unconstitutionality of this section upon the ground that it delegated to the secretary of war either judicial or legislative power was sustained in respect to section 9 of the River and Harbor Bill of 1888, a statute of different provisions, in U. S. v. Keokuk, etc., Bridge Co., (1891) 45 Fed. Rep. 178, a case involving peculiar circumstances. A similar opinion was expressed, obiter, in U. S. v. Rider, (1892) 50 Fed. Rep. 406.

Jurisdiction of Circuit Court.—The right of private parties to invoke the aid of the courts of the United States, to prevent an unreasonable obstruction to navigation, which produces an especial injury to them, depends upon the effect which may be given to this statute. It is therefore a case arising under the laws of the United States, and the Circuit Court has jurisdiction to determine whether the bill has stated a cause of action which entitles the complainant to relief. E. A. Chatfield Co. v. New Haven, (1901) 110 Fed. Rep. 788. (Citing New Orleans, etc., R. Co. v. Mississippi, (1880) 102 U. S. 135; Tennessee v. Davis, (1879) 100 U. S. 257; Little York Gold-Washing, etc., Co. v. Keyes, (1877) 96 U. S. 199.)

Temporary obstruction during repair of bridge.—Where a bridge built by a railroad company, properly authorized so to do by law, was blown down, and the company during the time in which they were repairing the bridge maintained a structure which was an obstruction to navigation, but made arrangements with the lines of steamboats carrying the freight on the river for the transferring of the freight at the place of obstruction without extra charge to shippers, this does not constitute such an unreasonable obstruction of the river as will entitle a shipper to recover damages by reason of greater amounts paid, extra labor, etc., in shipping his goods by railroad, especially where the traffic on the railroad over the bridge largely exceeded the traffic on the river, and the public convenience was therefore subserved by the mode of construction which was pursued. Rhea v. Newport, etc., R. Co., (1892) 50 Fed. Rep. 16.

SEC. 19. [Removal of sunken vessels, etc. — advertisement, proposals, and contract — proceeds.] That whenever the navigation of any river, lake, harbor, sound, bay, canal, or other navigable waters of the United States shall be obstructed or endangered by any sunken vessel, boat, water craft, raft, or other similar obstruction, and such obstruction has existed for a longer period than thirty days, or whenever the abandonment of such obstruction can be legally established in a less space of time, the sunken vessel, boat, water craft, raft, or other obstruction shall be subject to be broken up, removed, sold, or otherwise disposed of by the Secretary of War at his discretion, without liability for any damage to the owners of the same: Provided, That in his discretion, the Secretary of War may cause reasonable notice of such obstruction of not less than thirty days, unless the legal abandonment of the obstruction can be established in a less time, to be given by publication, addressed "To whom it may concern," in a newspaper published nearest to the locality of the obstruction, requiring the removal thereof: And provided also, That the Secretary of War may, in his discretion, at or after the time of giving such notice, cause sealed proposals to be solicited by public advertisement, giving reasonable notice of not less than ten days, for the removal of such obstruction as soon as possible after the expiration of the above specified thirty days' notice, in case it has not in the meantime been so removed, these proposals and contracts, at his discretion, to be conditioned that such vessel, boat, water craft, raft, or other obstruction, and all cargo and property contained therein, shall become the property of the contractor, and the contract shall be awarded to the bidder making the proposition most advantageous to the United States: Provided, That such bidder shall give satisfactory security to execute the work: Provided further, That any money received from the sale of any such wreck, or from any contractor for the removal of wrecks, under this paragraph shall be covered into the Treasury of the United States. [30 Stat. L. 1154.]

See note to section 8, supra.

See annotations under section 9, supra.

This section supersedes, besides the section noted under sec. 9, supra, the provisions of the River and Harbor Appropriation Act of June 14, 1880, ch. 211, as follows:

"SEC. 4. Whenever hereafter the navigation of any river, lake, harbor, or bay, or other navigable water of the United States, shall be obstructed or endangered by any sunken vessel or water-craft, it shall be the duty of the Secretary of War, upon satisfactory information thereof, to cause reasonable notice, of not less than thirty days, to be given, personally or by publication, at least once a week in the newspaper published nearest the locality of such sunken vessel or craft, to all persons interested in such vessel or craft, or in the cargo thereof, of the purpose of said Secretary, unless such vessel or craft shall be removed as soon thereafter as practicable by the parties interested therein, to cause the same to be removed. If such sunken vessel or craft and cargo shall not be removed by the parties interested therein as soon as practicable after the date of the giving of such notice by publication, or after such personal service of notice, as the case may be, such sunken vessel or craft shall be treated as abandoned and derelict, and the Secretary of War shall proceed to remove the same. Such sunken vessel or craft and cargo and all property therein when so removed shall, after reasonable notice of the time and place of sale, be sold to the highest bidder or bidders for cash, and the proceeds of such sales shall be deposited in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of a fund for the removal of such obstructions to navigation, under the direction of the Secretary of War, and to be paid out for that purpose on his requisition therefor. The provisions of this act shall apply to all such wrecks whether removed under this act or under any other act of Congress. Such sum of money as may be necessary to execute this section of this act is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, to be paid out on the requisition of the Secretary of War." [21 Stat. L. 197.]

It also supersedes the provisions of the River and Harbor Appropriation Act of Aug. 2, 1882, ch. 375, as follows:

"* * * "That the power and authority granted to the Secretary of War under and by virtue of section four of the act of Congress approved June fourteenth, eighteen hundred and eighty, relating to wrecks and sunken vessels be, and the same are hereby enlarged so that the Secretary of War may, in his discretion, sell and dispose of any such sunken craft, vessel, or cargo, or property therein, before the raising or removal thereof, according to the same regulations that are in the said act prescribed for the sale of the same after the removal thereof; and all laws and parts of laws inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed." * * * [22 Stat. L. 208.]

secretary of war to remove sunken vessels or craft which obstruct the navigation of a "navigable" water of the United States, do not apply to the coastal waters of Cuba, as such waters do not become waters of the United States by reason of the temporary jurisdiction of the United States over that island. (1900) 23 Op. Atty.-Gen. 76.

SEC. 20. [Removal of sunken or grounded vessels, etc., in emergency cases — expenses — sale — proceeds.] That under emergency, in the case of any vessel, boat, water craft, or raft, or other similar obstruction, sinking or grounding, or being unnecessarily delayed in any Government canal or lock, or in any navigable waters mentioned in section nineteen, in such manner as to stop, seriously interfere with, or specially endanger navigation, in the opinion of the Secretary of War, or any agent of the United States to whom the Secretary may delegate proper authority, the Secretary of War or any such agent shall have the right to take immediate possession of such boat, vessel, or other water craft, or raft, so far as to remove or to destroy it and to clear immediately the canal, lock, or navigable waters aforesaid of the obstruction thereby caused, using his best judgment to prevent any unnecessary injury; and no one shall interfere with or prevent such removal or destruction: Provided, That the officer or agent charged with the removal or destruction of an obstruction under this section may in his discretion give notice in writing to the owners of any such obstruction requiring them to remove it: And provided further, That the expense of removing any such obstruction as aforesaid shall be a charge against such craft and cargo; and if the owners thereof fail or refuse to reimburse the United States for such expense within thirty days after notification, then the officer or agent aforesaid may sell the craft or cargo, or any part thereof that may not have been destroyed in removal, and the proceeds of such sale shall be covered into the Treasury of the United States.

Such sum of money as may be necessary to execute this section and the preceding section of this Act is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be paid out on the requisition of the Secretary of War.

That all laws or parts of laws inconsistent with the foregoing sections nine to twenty, inclusive, of this Act are hereby repealed: Provided, That no action begun or right of action accrued prior to the passage of this Act shall be affected by this repeal: Provided further, That nothing contained in the said foregoing sections shall be construed as repealing, modifying, or in any manner affecting the provisions of an Act of Congress approved June twenty-ninth, eighteen hundred and eighty-eight, entitled "An Act to prevent obstructive and injurious deposits within the harbor and adjacent waters of New York City, by dumping or otherwise, and to punish and prevent such offenses," as amended by section three of the river and harbor Act of August eighteenth, eighteen hundred and ninety-four. [30 Stat. L. 1154, 32 Stat. L. 375.]

See note to section 8, supra.

See annotations under section 9, supra.

This section was amended by the Appropriation Act of June 13, 1902, ch. 1079, sec. 12, 32 Stat. L. 375, by adding the last paragraph as above given in place of the last paragraph of the section as originally enacted, which was as follows: "That all laws or parts of laws inconsistent with the foregoing sections ten to twenty, inclusive, of this Act are hereby repealed: Provided, That no action begun, or right of action accrued, prior to the passage of this act shall be affected by this repeal."

Prior to the above amendment the clause stricken out had been amended by the Act of Feb. 20, 1900, ch. 23, 31 Stat. L. 32, by striking out the word "ten" after the word "sections," and inserting in place thereof the word "nine."

SEC. 11. [Enforcement of Act directed.] That it shall be the duty of officers and agents having the supervision, on the part of the United States, of the works in progress for the preservation and improvement of said navigable waters, and, in their absence, of the United States collectors of customs and other revenue officers to enforce the provisions of this act by giving information to the district attorney of the United States for the district in which any violation of any provision of this act shall have been committed: Provided, That the provisions of this act shall not apply to Torch Lake, Houghton County, Michigan. [26 Stat. L. 455.]

This is from the River and Harbor Appropriation Act of Sept. 19, 1890, ch. 907. The provisions in question are secs. 4-10 of the above Act, which are set forth supra, pp. 806,

An Act Authorizing the Secretary of War to make regulations governing the running of loose logs, steamboats, and rafts on certain rivers and streams.

[SEC. 1.] [Floating logs and rafts on navigable waters.] That the prohibition contained in section fifteen of the river and harbor Act, approved March third, eighteen hundred and ninety-nine, against floating loose timber and logs, or sack rafts, so called, of timber and logs in streams or channels actually navigated by steamboats, shall not apply to any navigable river or waterway of the United States or any part thereof whereon the floating of loose timber and logs and sack rafts of timber and logs is the principal method of navigation. But such method of navigation on such river or waterway or part thereof shall be subject to the rules and regulations prescribed by the Secretary of War as hereinafter provided. [31 Stat. L. 172.]

SEC. 2. [Regulations — publication — penalty for violation — procedure for enforcement.] That the Secretary of War shall have power, and he is hereby authorized and directed, within the shortest practicable time after the passage hereof, to prescribe rules and regulations, which he may at any time modify, to govern and regulate the floating of loose timber and logs, and sack rafts, (so called) of timber and logs and other methods of navigation on the streams and waterways, or any thereof, of the character, as to navigation, in section one hereof described. The said rules and regulations shall be so framed as to equitably adjust conflicting interests between the different methods or forms of navigation; and the said rules and regulations shall be published at least once in such newspaper or newspapers of general circulation as in the opinion of the Secretary of War shall be best adapted to give notice of said rules and regulations to persons affected thereby and locally interested therein. And all modifications of said rules and regulations shall be similarly published. And such rules and regulations when so prescribed and published as to any such stream or waterway shall have the force of law, and any violation thereof shall be a misdemeanor, and every person convicted of such violation shall be punished by a fine of not exceeding two thousand five hundred dollars nor less than five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment (in case of a natural person) for not less than thirty days nor more than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court: Provided, That the proper action to enforce the provisions of this section may be commenced before any commissioner, judge, or court of the United States, and such commissioner, judge or court shall proceed in respect thereto as authorized by law in the case of crimes or misdemeanors committed against the United States. [31 Stat. L. 172.]

SEC. 3. [Amendments.] That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this Act at any time is hereby reserved. [31 Stat. L. 172.]

SEC. 4. [Pending actions not affected.] That this Act shall not, nor shall any rules or regulations prescribed thereunder, in any manner affect any civil action or actions heretofore commenced and now pending to recover damages claimed to have been sustained by reason of the violation of any of the terms of said section fifteen, as originally enacted, or in violation of any other law. [31 Stat. L. 172.]

SEC. 10. [Provisions for authority for construction of bridges, extended to Illinois and Mississippi Canal.] That the provisions of section nine of the river and harbor Act of March third, eighteen hundred and ninety-nine, are hereby made applicable alike to the completed and uncompleted portions of the Illinois and Mississippi Canal. Whenever the Secretary of War shall approve plans for a bridge to be built across said canal he may, in his discretion, and subject to such terms and conditions as in his judgment are equitable, expedient, and just to the public, grant to the person or corporation building and owning such bridge a right of way across the lands of the United States on either side of and adjacent to the said canal; also the privilege of occupying so much of said lands as may be necessary for the piers, abutments, and other portions of the bridge structure and approaches. [III. ANCHORAGE AND HARBOR REGULATIONS.]'

An act relating to the anchorage of vessels in the port of New York.

[SEC. 1.] [Anchorage grounds and regulations for port of New York.] That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized, empowered, and directed to define and establish an anchorage ground for vessels in the bay and harbor of New York, and in the Hudson and East Rivers, to adopt suitable rules and regulations in relation thereto, and to take all necessary measures for the proper enforcement of such rules and regulations. [25 Stat. L. 151.]

SEC. 2. [Penalty for violating regulations.] That in the event of the violation of any such rules or regulations by the owner, master, or person in charge of any vessel, such owner, master, or person in charge of such vessel shall be liable to a penalty of one hundred dollars, and the said vessel may be holden for the payment of such penalty, and may be seized and proceeded against summarily by libel for the recovery of the same in any United States district court for the district within which such vessel may be, and in the name of the officer designated by the Secretary of the Treasury. Aiding vessel in distress.—A vessel approaching another vessel in distress and mooring to her for the purpose of immediate removal, though the vessel in distress may touch the bottom, is not within the contemplation of this Act of Congress. The Monarch, (1898) 89 Fed. Rep. 875. See also The Chauncey M. Depew, (1894) 59 Fed. Rep. 791.

Permit to anchor to raise wreck.—It is customary, when raising wrecks in navigable channels, to obtain a permit to anchor from the secretary of the treasury, and for revenue cutters to visit the vessels found at anchor off the prescribed anchorage ground to see if such permits have been secured. The Chauncey M. Depew, (1894) 59 Fed. Rep. 791.

Rights and liabilities of derrick raising wreck.—The raising of sunken vessels and the use of the river for such purpose are legitimate and lawful, and the mere anchoring of a derrick in a channel for the purpose of raising a wreck is not an unlawful obstruction of navigation, except perhaps in the case of a passage so narrow that navigation is so completely obstructed as to amount to a nuisance, and where reasonable room remains for ordinary navigation the derrick cannot be held liable for damages sustained by vessels colliding with it; on the other hand, the derrick, not lying upon any authorized anchorage ground, is not entitled to all the immunity of vessels so anchored and lying out of the usual channel-way. The Chauncey M. Depew, (1894) 59 Fed. Rep. 791.

[SEC. 1.] [Extension of preceding Act.] * * * That the Act of May sixteenth, eighteen hundred and eighty-eight, relating to anchorage of vessels in the port of New York, is hereby extended to include the waters of Kill von Kull, Newark Bay, Arthur Kill, and Raritan Bay. * * * [30 Stat. L. 1081.]

An act relating to the anchorage and movement of vessels in the port of Chicago.

[SEC. 1.] [Anchorage grounds and regulations for port of Chicago.] That the Secretary of the Treasury be authorized and directed to define and establish anchorage grounds for vessels in the harbors of Chicago, and waters of Lake Michigan adjacent thereto, to adopt suitable rules and regulations in relation to the same, and also to adopt suitable rules and regulations governing the use of marked inshore channels in Lake Michigan in front of the city of Chicago, and to take all necessary measures for the proper enforcement of such rules and regulations. [27 Stat. L. 431.]

SEC. 2. [Penalty for violating regulations.] That in the event of the violation of any such rules or regulations by the owner, master, or person in charge of any vessel, such owner, master, or person in charge of such vessel shall be liable to a penalty of one hundred dollars, and the said vessel may be holden for the payment of such penalty, and may be seized and proceeded against summarily by libel for the recovery of the same in any United States district court for the district within which such vessel may be, and in the name of the officer designated by the Secretary of the Treasury. [27 Stat. L. 431.]

An act to establish harbor regulations for the District of Columbia.

[SEC. 1.] [Harbor regulations for District of Columbia — anchored or moored vessels — sunken vessels.] That every vessel coming to anchor in the Potomac River between the junction of the Washington and Georgetown channels of said river and the extension of the south line of P street southwest, in the city of Washington, shall anchor as near the flats in said river as possible, so that the channel of said river will not be obstructed; and if such vessel is to remain over twelve hours it shall be moored with both anchors, so as to give room for passing vessels and so as not to swing and obstruct said channel. No vessel shall be permitted to anchor in the Washington channel of the Potomac River between the extended lines of P or K streets south. Vessels coming to anchor above the line of K street south, aforesaid, shall come to anchor as near the flats as possible and so that the channel will not be obstructed; and all vessels coming to anchor shall be so moored by the use of both anchors as to prevent obstruction of the channel within four hundred feet of the nearest wharf, the said anchorage to continue only twenty-four hours, unless otherwise ordered or directed by the harbor master. No vessel shall be permitted to lie in Seventeenth Street Canal, New Jersey Avenue Canal, or James Creek Canal, or at the entrance thereof, so as to obstruct the passage of any vessel going into or out of the same or moving from one place to another therein, unless such obstructing vessel is actually engaged in loading or unloading, and shall then, if deemed expedient by the harbor master, be removed to such place as shall be necessary to give room to passing vessels. Any captain or owner of, or anyone in charge of, any barge, sand scow, or any vessel that may sink in said canals, shall raise and remove the same in five days. Any vessels at the end of wharves or in docks shall, when required by the harbor master, haul either way to accommodate vessels going in or coming out from such wharves or docks. They shall not occupy regular steamers' or sailing packets' berths without permission from the recognized occupants of such wharves and docks. And they are required to rig in all fore-and-aft spars, have boats hoisted up under the bow, and davits turned up, as the harbor master may direct. Vessels when not engaged in loading or discharging cargo shall give place to such vessels as are ready to receive or deliver freights. And if the captain or person in charge of any vessel refuse to move said vessel when notified by the occupant of the wharf at which she is lying, the harbor master shall order him to haul to some other berth, or into the stream. [28 Stat. L. 740.]

SEC. 2. [Performance of harbor master's duties by pilot of police boat — penalty for violation of Act.] That the powers and authority herein conferred upon the harbor master may, in his absence or temporary disability, be exercised by the pilot of the harbor police boat. Any person refusing to obey the instructions of the harbor master, or, in case of his absence or temporary disability, the said pilot of the harbor police boat, or any person failing to comply with any of the provisions of this Act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof in the police court of the District of Columbia shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment not exceeding six months, or by both such punishments, in the discretion of the court. [28 Stat. L. 741]

SEC. 3. [Repeal.] That all Acts or parts of Acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed. [28 Stat. L. 741.]

An Act Relating to the anchorage and movements of vessels in Saint Marys River.

[Act of March 6, 1896, ch. 49, 29 Stat. L. 54.]

[SEC. 1.] [Regulations for anchorage and movements of vessels in St. Mary's River.] That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to adopt and prescribe suitable rules and regulations governing the movements and anchorage of vessels and rafts in Saint Marys River, from Point Iroquois, on Lake Superior, to Point Detour, on Lake Huron, and for the purpose of enforcing the observance of such regulations the said Secretary is hereby authorized to detail one or more revenue cutters for duty on said river. [29 Stat. L. 54.]

When special or general rules apply. — Such special rules for a particular locality, upon the principles of statutory construction, must take precedence over general rules where the special rules apply, while at all other places and even in the special places where the special rules do not cover the situation, the general rules of navigation must dictate the movements of vessels. The North Star, (1901) 108 Fed. Rep. 436.

Presumed knowledge of rules. — Navigators of vessels on the lakes must be presumed to have knowledge of the rules and laws governing St. Mary's river. The North Star, (1901) 108 Fed. Rep. 436.

SEC. 2. [Revenue-cutter service to enforce regulations.] That all officers of the Revenue-Cutter Service who are directed to enforce the regulations prescribed by the above rules are hereby empowered and directed, in case of necessity, or when a proper notice has been disregarded, to use the force at their command to remove from channels or stop any vessel found violating the prescribed rules. [29 Stat. L. 55.]

SEC. 3. [Penalty for violation of rules.] That in the event of the violation of any such regulations or rules of the Secretary of the Treasury by the owners, master, or person in charge of such vessel, such owners, master, or person in charge shall be liable to a penalty of two hundred dollars, and the vessel, its tackle, apparel, furniture, and cargo, at any time used or employed in violation of such regulations, shall be forfeited to the United States: Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury may remit said fine or release said vessel on such terms as he may prescribe: Provided also, That nothing in this Act shall be construed to amend or repeal the Act entitled "An Act to regulate navigation on the Great Lakes and connecting tributary waters as far east as Montreal." [29 Stat. L. 55.]

SEC. 2. [Penalty for violation — procedure.] That in the event of the violation of any such rules or regulations by the owner, master, or person in charge of any vessel, such owner, master, or person in charge of such vessel shall be liable to a penalty of one hundred dollars; and the said vessel may be holden for the payment of such penalty, and may be seized and proceeded against summarily by libel for the recovery of the same in any United States district court for the district within which said vessel may be, and in the name of the officer designated by the Secretary of the Treasury. And said Commission may, with the approval of the Secretary of War, employ such additional force and assistants, and provide, by purchase or otherwise, such additional vessels, boats, machinery, instruments, and means, as may be deemed necessary; to be paid for by appropriations made or to be made for said river. [23 Stat. L. 144.]

"[Expenditure of appropriations — report of proceedings — detail of a secretary.] That the said Commission shall, under the direction and with the approval of the Secretary of War, superintend, control, and expend for the purposes of this act all appropriations or unexpended balances heretofore made for the improvement of said river, and which may hereafter be made for said river, or so much thereof as may be necessary, and shall prepare and submit, through the Chief of the Engineer Corps to the Secretary of War, to be by him transmitted to Congress at the beginning of the regular session in December of each year, a full and detailed report of all their proceedings and actions, and of all such plans and systems of work as may now be devised and in progress and carried out by them, and of all such additional plans and systems of works as may be devised and matured by them, with full and detailed estimates of the cost thereof, and statements of all expenditures made by them; and the Secretary of War may detail from the Corps of Engineers or other corps of the Army an officer to act as secretary of the Commission, to aid them in their work; and all money hereby or hereafter appropriated for the improvement of said Missouri River shall be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War in accordance with the plans, specifications, and recommendations of said Commission when such plans, specifications, and recommendations shall have been approved by Congress." * * * [23 Stat. L. 145.]

[VI. ISTHMIAN CANAL.]

An Act To provide for the construction of a canal connecting the waters of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

[Act of June 28, 1902, ch. 1302, 32 Stat. L. 481.]

[SEC. 1.] [Isthmian canal — purchase of rights, etc., of new Panama Canal Company authorized.] That the President of the United States is hereby authorized to acquire, for and on behalf of the United States, at a cost not exceeding forty millions of dollars, the rights, privileges, franchises, concessions, grants of land, right of way, unfinished work, plants, and other property, real, personal, and mixed, of every name and nature, owned by the New Panama Canal Company, of France, on the Isthmus of Panama, and all its maps, plans, drawings, records on the Isthmus of Panama and in Paris, including all the capital stock, not less, however, than sixty-eight thousand eight hundred and sixty-three shares of the Panama Railroad Company, owned by or held for the use of said canal company, provided a satisfactory title to all of said property can be obtained. [32 Stat. L. 481.]

For an elaborate discussion of the title to the Panama canal property, the histories of the prior companies, and the Acts of the foreign countries under which such companies were established, the validity of the title received by the United States and the obligations of the United States to the stockholders, etc., of the vending companies, see (1902) 24 Op. Atty.-Gen. 144.

SEC. 2. [Acquisition of right of way from Colombia — jurisdiction — police regulations, etc.] That the President is hereby authorized to acquire from the Republic of Colombia, for and on behalf of the United States, upon such terms as he may deem reasonable, perpetual control of a strip of land, the territory of the Republic of Colombia, not less than six miles in width, extending from the Caribbean Sea to the Pacific Ocean, and the right to use and dispose of the waters thereon, and to excavate, construct, and to perpetually maintain, operate, and protect thereon a canal, of such depth and capacity as will afford convenient passage of ships of the greatest tonnage and draft now in use, from the Caribbean Sea to the Pacific Ocean, which control shall include the right to perpetually maintain and operate the Panama Railroad, if the ownership thereof, or a controlling interest therein, shall have been acquired by the United States, and also jurisdiction over said strip and the ports at the ends thereof to make such police and sanitary rules and regulations as shall be necessary to preserve order and preserve the public health thereon, and to establish such judicial tribunals as may be agreed upon thereon as may be necessary to enforce such rules and regulations.

The President may acquire such additional territory and rights from Colombia as in his judgment will facilitate the general purpose hereof. [32 Stat. L. 481.]

SEC. 3. [Payments — construction of canal, terminals, defenses, etc. — employees.] That when the President shall have arranged to secure a satisfactory title to the property of the New Panama Canal Company, as provided in section one hereof, and shall have obtained by treaty control of the necessary territory from the Republic of Colombia, as provided in section two hereof, he is authorized to pay for the property of the New Panama Canal Company forty millions of dollars and to the Republic of Colombia such sum as shall have been agreed upon, and a sum sufficient for both said purposes is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be paid on warrant or warrants drawn by the President.

The President shall then through the Isthmian Canal Commission hereinafter authorized cause to be excavated, constructed, and completed, utilizing to that end as far as practicable the work heretofore done by the New Panama Canal Company, of France, and its predecessor company, a ship canal from the Caribbean Sea to the Pacific Ocean. Such canal shall be of sufficient capacity and depth as shall afford convenient passage for vessels of the largest tonnage and greatest draft now in use, and such as may be reasonably anticipated, and shall be supplied with all necessary locks and other appliances to meet the necessities of vessels passing through the same from ocean to ocean; and he shall also cause to be constructed such safe and commodious harbors at the termini of said canal, and make such provisions for defense as may be necessary for the safety and protection of said canal and harbors. That the President is authorized for the purposes aforesaid to employ such persons as he may deem necessary, and to fix their compensation. 32 Stat. I. 482.]

SEC. 4. [Alternative Nicaragua route — appropriation — surveys.] That should the President be unable to obtain for the United States a satisfactory title to the property of the New Panama Canal Company and the control of the necessary territory of the Republic of Colombia and the rights mentioned in sections one and two of this Act, within a reasonable time and upon reasonable terms, then the President, having first obtained for the United States perpetual control by treaty of the necessary territory from Costa Rica and Nicaragua, upon terms which he may consider reasonable, for the construction, perpetual maintenance, operation, and protection of a canal connecting the Caribbean Sea with the Pacific Ocean by what is commonly known as the Nicaragua route, shall through the said Isthmian Canal Commission cause to be excavated and constructed a ship canal and waterway from a point on the shore of the Caribbean Sea near Greytown, by way of Lake Nicaragua, to a point near Brito on the Pacific Ocean. Said canal shall be of sufficient capacity and depth to afford convenient passage for vessels of the largest tonnage and greatest draft now in use, and such as may be reasonably anticipated, and shall be supplied with all necessary locks and other appliances to meet the necessities of vessels passing through the same from ocean to ocean; and he shall also construct such safe and commodious harbors at the termini of said canal as shall be necessary for the safe and convenient use thereof, and shall make such provisions for defense as may be necessary for the safety and protection of said harbors and canal; and such sum or sums of money as may be agreed upon by such treaty as compensation to be paid to Nicaragua and Costa Rica for the concessions and rights hereunder provided to be acquired by the United States, are hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be paid on warrant or warrants drawn by the President.

The President shall cause the said Isthmian Canal Commission to make such surveys as may be necessary for said canal and harbors to be made, and in making such surveys and in the construction of said canal may employ such persons as he may deem necessary, and may fix their compensation.

In the excavation and construction of said canal the San Juan River and Lake Nicaragua, or such parts of each as may be made available, shall be used. [32 Stat. L. 482.]

SEC. 5. [Preliminary appropriation — contracts — limit of expenditures.] That the sum of ten million dollars is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, toward the project herein contemplated by either route so selected.

And the President is hereby authorized to cause to be entered into such contract or contracts as may be deemed necessary for the proper excavation, construction, completion, and defense of said canal, harbors, and defenses, by the route finally determined upon under the provisions of this Act. Appropriations therefor shall from time to time be hereafter made, not to exceed in the aggregate the additional sum of one hundred and thirty-five millions of dollars should the Panama route be adopted, or one hundred and eighty millions of dollars should the Nicaragua route be adopted. [32 Stat. L. 483.]

SEC. 6. [Use of canal, etc., by Colombia, Nicaragua and Costa Rica.] That in any agreement with the Republic of Colombia, or with the States of Nicaragua and Costa Rica, the President is authorized to guarantee to said Republic or to said States the use of said canal and harbors, upon such terms as may be agreed upon, for all vessels owned by said States or by citizens thereof. [32 Stat. L. 483.]

SEC. 7. [Isthmian Canal Commission — compensation — engineers — reports — offices.] That to enable the President to construct the canal and works appurtenant thereto as provided in this Act, there is hereby created the Isthmian Canal Commission, the same to be composed of seven members, who shall be nominated and appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and who shall serve until the completion of said canal unless sooner removed by the President, and one of whom shall be named as the chairman of said Commission. Of the seven members of said Commission at least four of them shall be persons learned and skilled in the science of engineering, and of the four at least one shall be an officer of the United States Army, and at least one other shall be an officer of the United States Navy, the said officers respectively being either upon the active or the retired list of the Army or of the Navy. Said commissioners shall each receive such compensation as the President shall prescribe until the same shall have been otherwise fixed by the Congress. In addition to the members of said Isthmian Canal Commission, the President is hereby authorized through said Commission to employ in said service any of the engineers of the United States Army at his discretion, and likewise to employ any engineers in civil life, at his discretion, and any other persons necessary for the proper and expeditious prosecution of said work. The compensation of all such engineers and other persons employed under this Act shall be fixed by said Commission, subject to the approval of the President. The official salary of any officer appointed or employed under this Act shall be deducted from the amount of salary or compensation provided by or which shall be fixed under the terms of this Act. Said Commission shall in all matters be subject to the direction and control of the President, and shall make to the President annually and at such other periods as may be required, either by law or by the order of the President, full and complete reports of all their actings and doings and of all moneys received and expended in the construction of said work and in the performance of their duties in connection therewith, which said reports shall be by the President transmitted to Congress. And the said Commission shall furthermore give to Congress, or either House of Congress, such information as may at any time be required either by Act of Congress or by the order of either House of Congress. The President shall cause to be provided and assigned for the use of the Commission such offices as may, with the suitable equipment of the same, be necessary and proper, in his discretion, for the proper discharge of the duties thereof. [32 Stat. L. 483.]

SEC. 8. [Bond issue to defray expenses.] That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to borrow on the credit of the United States from time to time, as the proceeds may be required to defray expenditures authorized by this Act (such proceeds when received to be used only for the purpose of meeting such expenditures), the sum of one hundred and thirty million dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary, and to prepare and issue therefor coupon or registered bonds of the United States in such form as he may prescribe, and in denominations of twenty dollars or some multiple of that sum, redeemable in gold coin at the pleasure of the United States after ten years from the date of their issue, and payable thirty years from such date, and bearing interest payable quarterly in gold coin at the rate of two per centum per annum; and the bonds herein authorized shall be exempt from all taxes or duties of the United States, as well as from taxation in any form by or under State, municipal, or local authority: Provided, That said bonds may be disposed of by the Secretary of the Treasury at not less than par, under such regulations as he may prescribe, giving to all citizens of the United States an equal opportunity to subscribe therefor, but no commissions shall be allowed or paid thereon; and a sum not exceeding one-tenth of one per centum of the amount of the bonds herein authorized is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to pay the expense of preparing, advertising, and issuing the same. Sec. 1794. [Secretary of State to keep and use the seal.] The Secretary of State shall keep such seal, and shall make out and record, and shall affix the same to, all civil commissions for officers of the United States, to be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, or by the President alone. But the seal shall not be affixed to any commission before the same has been signed by the President of the United States, nor to any other instrument, without the special warrant of the President therefor. [R. S.]

Act of Sept. 15, 1789, ch. 14, 1 Stat. L. 68.
See also similar provisions of R. S. sec. 203 under STATE DEPARTMENT.

Nature of secretary's duty.—The commission being signed, the subsequent duty of the secretary of state is prescribed by law, and not to be guided by the will of the President. He is to affix the seal of the United States to the commission, and is to record it. This is not a proceeding which may be varied if the judgment of the executive shall suggest one more eligible; but is a precise course accurately marked out by law, and is to be strictly pursued. It is the duty of the secretary of state to conform to law, and in this he is an officer of the United States, bound to obey the laws. He acts, in this respect, under the authority of law, and not by the instructions of the President. It is a ministerial act which the law enjoins on a particular officer for a particular purpose. Marbury v. Madison, (1803) 1 Cranch (U. S.) 137.

The signature is a warrant for affixing the great seal to a commission; and the great seal is only to be affixed to an instrument which is complete. It attests, by an act supposed to be of public notoriety, the verity of the presidential signature. Marbury v. Madison, (1803) 1 Cranch (U. S.) 137.

When seal is to be affixed.—The seal is never to be affixed till the commission is signed, because the signature which gives force and effect to the commission is conclusive evidence that the appointment is made. Marbury v. Madison, (1803) 1 Cranch (U. S.) 137.

Effect of fixing seal. — When the seal is affixed the appointment is made, and the commission is valid. No other solemnity is required by law; no other act is to be performed on the part of the government. Marbury v. Madison, (1803) 1 Cranch (U. S.) 137.

Commissions of postmasters. — See POSTAL SERVICE, vol. 5, p. 793.

[Seal of Department of Agriculture.] The Secretary of Agriculture is hereby authorized and directed to procure a proper seal, with such suitable inscriptions and devices as he may approve, to be known as the official seal of the Department of Agriculture, and to be kept and used to verify official documents, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe. [28 Stat. L. 272.]

SEC. 31. [Seal of Census Office.] That the Director of the Census shall provide the Census Office with a seal containing such device as he may select, and he shall file a description of such seal with an impression thereof in the office of the Secretary of State. Such seal shall remain in the custody of the Director of the Census, and shall be affixed to all certificates and attestations that may be required from the Census Office. [30 Stat. L. 1021.]

[I. SHIPPING COMMISSIONERS.]

Sec. 4501. [Appointment of shipping commissioners — receipts and expenses — reports — auditing — compensation — clerks — fees.] The Secretary of the Treasury shall appoint a commissioner for each port of entry, which is also a port of ocean navigation, and which, in his judgment, may require the same; such commissioner to be termed a shipping commissioner, and may, from time to time, remove from office any such commissioner whom he may have reason to believe does not properly perform his duty, and shall then provide for the proper performance of his duties until another person is duly appointed in his place: Provided, That Shipping Commissioners now in office shall continue to perform the duties thereof until others shall be appointed in their places. Shipping Commissioners shall monthly render a full, exact, and itemized account of their receipts and expenditures to the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall determine their compensation, and shall from time to time determine the number and compensation of the clerks appointed by such commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, subject to the limitations now fixed by law. The Secretary of the Treasury shall regulate the mode of conducting business in the shipping offices to be established by the shipping commissioners as hereinafter provided, and shall have full and complete control over the same, subject to the provisions herein contained; and all expenditures by shipping commissioners shall be audited and adjusted in the Treasury Department in the mode and manner provided for expenditures in the collection of customs. All fees of Shipping Commissioners shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States and shall constitute a fund which shall be used under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury to pay the compensation of said Commissioners and their clerks and such other expenses as he may find necessary to ensure the proper administration of their duties. [R. S.]

This section was amended "so as to read as" above by the Act of June 26, 1884, ch. 121, sec. 27, 23 Stat. L. 59. Originally it read as follows:

"Sec. 4501. The several circuit courts within the jurisdiction of which there is a port of entry which is also a port of ocean navigation, shall appoint a commissioner for each such port which in their judgment may require the same, such commissioners to be termed shipping-commissioners; and may, from time to time, remove from office any commissioner whom the court may have reason to believe does not properly perform his duties, and shall then provide for the proper performance of his duties until another person is duly appointed in his place. Such courts shall regulate the mode of conducting business in the shipping-offices to be established by the shipping-commissioners as hereinafter provided; and shall have full and complete control over the same, subject to the provisions herein contained." Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 262.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following, infra, p. 850.

Collection of fees abolished, disposition thereof, and payment of shipping commissioners. See Act of June 19, 1886, ch. 421, sec. 1, given under SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION.

Sections 4501-4612 constitute title 53 of the Revised Statutes, entitled "Merchant Seamen."

Sections 4501-4508 constitute chapter 1, entitled "Shipping Commissioners."

Sections 4509-4523 constitute chapter 2, entitled "Shipment."

Sections 4524-4548 constitute chapter 3, entitled "Wages and Effects."

Sections 4549-4563 constitute chapter 4, entitled "Discharge."

Sections 4564-4591 constitute chapter 5, entitled "Protection and Relief."

Sections 4592-4595 constitute chapter 6, entitled "Fees of Shipping Commissioners."

Sections 4596-4612 constitute chapter 7, entitled "Offenses and Punishments."

Coasting vessels.—The Act providing for the appointment of shipping commissioners does not apply to the shipping of seamen upon vessels engaged only in and for voyages coastwise between the Atlantic ports. U. S. v. Smith, (1877) 95 U. S. 536.

Foreign vessels.—This section could not include in its operation foreign ships. The very title of the Act of June 7, 1872, limits the action of the shipping commissioners to a superintendence of the shipment on ships belonging to the United States. The Montapedia, (1882) 14 Fed. Rep. 427.

The internal structure of the statute also shows that it was intended to operate only upon the manner of shipping crews upon our own vessels. The Montapedia, (1882) 14 Fed. Rep. 427.

Effect of later Acts.—The Act of June 19, 1886, ch. 421, sec. 1, did not repeal the provisions of this section as respects expenditures by shipping commissioners other than for clerks. There is no repealing clause, there is no reference to such expenditures nor any implication of any intention to impose the burden of maintaining suitable premises for the transaction upon the commissioner, and the commissioner is not required under the Act of 1886 to pay out of his compensation expenses of the office which before that Act were paid by the government. U. S. v. Reed, (1897) 167 U. S. 664, affirm- ing (C. C. A. 1894) 69 Fed. Rep. 841, (C. C. A. 1894) 61 Fed. Rep. 414.

Expenses incidental to office.—Where a statute which renders an expenditure a necessary incident to an office does not expressly, or by clear implication, provide that it shall be paid by the incumbent of the office, out of his compensation, it is a proper charge against the United States. U. S. v. Reed, (C. C. A. 1894) 61 Fed. Rep. 414, affirmed (1897) 167 U. S. 664.

The compensation of the commissioner of the port of New York was fixed by the secretary of the treasury under the provisions of this section at four thousand dollars per annum and one-half the net surplus of fees collected, less salaries and expenses paid, the compensation being limited, however, to the sum of five thousand dollars in any one year. Subsequently, under the provisions of the Act of June 19, 1886, section 1, the commissioner was allowed and paid five thousand dollars as salary. It was held that the commissioner was not required to pay from such compensation the incidental expenses of the office, such as rent and clerk hire. U. S. v. Reed, (1897) 167 U. S. 664, affirming (C. C. A. 1894) 61 Fed. Rep. 414, (C. C. A. 1894) 69 Fed. Rep. 841.

Expenses of clerk hire.—But where the shipping commissioner had been formally notified by the secretary of the treasury that his compensation would be limited to one hundred dollars per month and that no additional compensation would be allowed, and when his vouchers were presented, including the item of clerk hire, the secretary approved them only for one hundred dollars per month, with the indorsement, "the services enumerated appear to have been necessarily rendered," under the provisions of the Act of June 19, 1886, section 1, it was held that the shipping commissioner could not recover anything additional as compensation for clerk hire. U. S. v. Gunnison, (1894) 155 U. S. 389, reversing (1891) 26 Ct. Cl. 382.

Early cases on subject of compensation. See In re Shipping Com'rs, (1876) 13 Blatchf. (U. S.) 339, 21 Fed. Cas. No. 12,792.

Merchant seamen "are simply seamen in private vessels as distinguished from seamen in the navy or public vessels." Deady, J., in U. S. v. Sullivan, (1890) 43 Fed. Rep. 604.

"Master and crew" defined.—Wherever in a statute the words "master and crew" occur in connection with each other, the word "crew" embraces all the officers as well as the common seamen. U. S. v. Winn, (1838) 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 209, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,740.

Domestic vessels.—The Act for the regulation of seamen exclusively applies to seamen engaged in the merchant service of the United States. Grant v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1893) 58 Fed. Rep. 694; U. S. v. Minges, (1883) 16 Fed. Rep. 657; The Montapedia, (1882) 14 Fed. Rep. 427; U. S. v. Kellum, (1881) 7 Fed. Rep. 843; Ex p. D'Olivera, (1813) 1 Gall. (U. S.) 474. Contra, U. S. v. Sullivan, (1890) 43 Fed. Rep. 602; U. S. v. McArdle, (1873) 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 367;

U. S. v. Anderson, (1872) 10 Blatchf. (U. S.) 226.

Title 53 of the Revised Statutes has been held inapplicable to the employment of seamen on foreign vessels. U. S. v. Kellum, (1881) 7 Fed. Rep. 843.

Sec. 4502. [Bond and oath of commissioner.] Every shipping-commissioner so appointed shall give bond to the United States, conditioned for the faithful performance of the duties of his office, for a sum, in the discretion of the circuit judge, of not less than five thousand dollars, with two good and sufficient sureties therefor, to be approved by such judge; and shall take and subscribe the following oath before entering upon the duties of his office: "I do solemnly swear (or affirm, as the case may be) that I will support the Constitution of the United States, and that I will truly and faithfully discharge the duties of a shipping-commissioner to the best of my ability, and according to law." Such oath shall be indorsed on the commission or certificate of appointment, and signed by him, and certified by the officer before whom such oath shall have been taken. [R. S.]

Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 262.

260, note thereunder, and provisions following, infra, p. 850.

Sec. 4503. [When officers of the customs shall act as commissioners.] In any port in which no shipping-commissioner shall have been appointed, the whole or any part of the business of a shipping-commissioner shall be conducted by the collector or deputy collector of customs of such port; and in respect of such business such custom-house shall be deemed a shipping-office, and the collector or deputy collector of customs to whom such business shall be committed, shall, for all purposes, be deemed a shipping-commissioner within the meaning of this Title. [R. S.]

Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 263.

260, note thereunder, and provisions following, infra, p. 850.

Sec. 4504. [Penalty for unlawfully acting as commissioner.] Any person other than a commissioner under this Title, who shall perform or attempt to perform, either directly or indirectly, the duties which are by this Title set forth as pertaining to a shipping-commissioner, shall be liable to a penalty of not more than five hundred dollars. Nothing in this Title, however, shall prevent the owner, or consignee, or master of any vessel except vessels bound from a port in the United States to any foreign port, other than vessels engaged in trade between the United States and the British North American possessions, or the West India Islands, or the republic of Mexico, and vessels of the burden of seventy-five tons or upward bound from a port on the Atlantic to a port on the Pacific, or vice versa, from performing, himself, so far as his vessel is concerned, the duties of shipping-commissioner under this Title. Whenever the master of any vessel shall engage his crew, or any part of the same, in any collection-district where no shipping-commissioner shall have been appointed, he may perform for himself the duties of such commissioner. [R. S.]

Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 263; Act of Jan. 15, 1873, ch. 35, 17 Stat. L. 410.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following, infra, p. 850.

Master as shipping commissioner.—The discharge of a mariner employed on a vessel engaged in a voyage to "the West Indies and return" need not be signed in the presence of the shipping commissioner. Burton v. Frye, (1885) 139 Mass. 131.

This section authorizes the master, owner, or consignee of a ship about to make a voyage not mentioned in section 4511 to be his own shipping commissioner; and this provision is not affected by sections 4512-4515. The Grace Lothrop, (1874) Holmes (U. S.) 342 10 Fed. Cas. No. 5,653, affirmed in (1877) 95 U. S. 527.

Third person as shipping commissioner.—Coastwise voyages not being within the operation of section 4511, the agreement is not required to be signed in the presence of such a commissioner. Instead of that, the owner, or consignee, or the master of the ship, so far as the ship is concerned, may himself, in such a case, perform the duties of such a commissioner, but third persons possess no such authority in any case. U. S. v. Smith, (1877) 95 U. S. 536.

Defense to suit for penalty.—A person when sued for the penalty for shipping seamen without authority must show himself within the exception of the Act of June 9, 1874. It is not incumbent on the plaintiff to negative the existence of the exculpatory facts. U. S. v. Rose, (1882) 12 Fed. Rep. 576.

Sec. 4505. [Clerks of commissioner.] Any shipping-commissioner may engage clerks to assist him in the transaction of the business of the shipping-office, at his own proper cost, and may, in case of necessity, depute such clerks to act for him in his official capacity; but the shipping-commissioner shall be held responsible for the acts of every such clerk or deputy, and will be personally liable for any penalties such clerk or deputy may incur by the violation of any of the provisions of this Title; and all acts done by a clerk, as such deputy, shall be as valid and binding as if done by the shipping-commissioner. [R. S.]

Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 262. See, however, R. S. sec. 4501, as amended, supra.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following, infra, p. 850.

Deputy commissioners.—The shipping commissioner has the power to appoint clerks with the title of deputy commissioners. In re Shipping Com'r, (1879) 16 Blatchf. (U. S.) 92, 21 Fed. Cas. No. 12,793.

Sec. 4506. [Seal of commissioner.] Each shipping-commissioner shall provide a seal with which he shall authenticate all his official acts, on which seal shall be engraved the arms of the United States, and the name of the port or district for which he is commissioned. Any instrument, either printed or written, purporting to be the official act of a shipping-commissioner, and purporting to be under the seal and signature of such shipping-commissioner, shall be received as presumptive evidence of the official character of such instrument, and of the truth of the facts therein set forth. [R. S.]

Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 262.

260, note thereunder, and provisions following, infra, p. 850.

Sec. 4507. [Office of commissioners.] The Secretary of the Treasury shall assign in public buildings or otherwise procure suitable offices and rooms for the shipment and discharge of seamen, to be known as shipping commissioners' offices, and shall procure furniture, stationery, printing, and other requisites for the transaction of the business of such offices. [R. S.]

This section was amended to read as above by the Act of March 3, 1897, ch. 389, sec. 1, 29 Stat. L. 687.

The section originally read as follows:

"Sec. 4507. Every shipping-commissioner shall lease, rent, or procure, at his own cost, suitable premises for the transaction of business, and for the preservation of the books and other documents connected therewith; and these premises shall be styled the shipping-commissioner's office." Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 263.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following, infra, p. 850.

Expenses.—See notes to R. S. sec. 4501, supra.

Sec. 4508. [Duties of commissioner.] The general duties of a shipping-commissioner shall be:

First. To afford facilities for engaging seamen by keeping a register of their names and characters.

Second. To superintend their engagement and discharge, in manner prescribed by law.

Third. To provide means for securing the presence on board at the proper times of men who are so engaged.

Fourth. To facilitate the making of apprenticeships to the sea service.

Fifth. To perform such other duties relating to merchant seamen or merchant ships as are new or may hereafter be required by law. [R. S.]

Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following, infra.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch.

An act in reference to the operations of the Shipping Commissioners' Act, approved June seventh eighteen hundred and seventy-two.

[Vessels in coastwise trade, with certain exceptions, exempt from provisions of shipping commissioners' act.] That none of the provisions of an act entitled "An act to authorize the appointment of shipping commissioners by the several circuit courts of the United States to superintend the shipping and discharge of seamen engaged in merchant ships belonging to the United States, and for the further protection of seamen" shall apply to sail or steam vessels engaged in the coastwise trade, except the coastwise trade between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, or in the lake-going trade touching at foreign ports or otherwise, or in the trade between the United States and the British North American possessions, or in any case where the seamen are by custom or agreement entitled to participate in the profits or result of a cruise, or voyage. [18 Stat. L. 64.]

The provisions of the Shipping Commissioners' Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 262, are incorporated into the Revised Statutes as sections 2174, 4290-4292, 4501-4520, 4523-4529, 4531-4536, 4538-4545, 4549-4555, 4565-4572, 4592-4597, 4599-4600, 4602-4607, 4609, 4610, 4612. For further provisions on this subject, superseding in part the provisions in the text, see the provisions in the text following.

Effect of Act.—"This language is so broad and comprehensive that its effect must be to strike from the Revised Statutes every provision therein which was taken from the Act of 1872 relative to such coastwise vessels; and their operation must be restricted to vessels sailing on long foreign voyages, or from the Atlantic to the Pacific coasts. All the regulations found in the Act of 1872 and transferred to the Revised Statutes relative to the shipment of crews, which might otherwise, perhaps, be applicable to coastwise voyages, are no longer in force." U. S. v. Bain, (1880) 5 Fed. Rep. 192. But see following text.

Fishing and whaling voyages.—The effect of this Act is to take fishing and whaling voyages, where the seamen receive as their compensation a share or lay in the catchings, wholly out of the operation of the Act of June 7, 1872. Ross v. Bourne, (1883) 14 Fed. Rep. 858, citing Scott v. Rose, (1874) 2 Lowell (U. S.) 381, 21 Fed. Cas. No. 12,545; U. S. v. Bain, (1880) 5 Fed. Rep. 192; Eddy v. O'Hara, (1882) 132 Mass. 756.

Fees of commissioner.—It was held under this Act that a shipping commissioner has no authority to ship seamen on "sail or steam vessels engaged in the coastwise trade" unless such vessels come within the exceptions named therein; nor will the consent of the master and seamen operate to give such authority. He should not receive fees for shipping seamen on coasting vessels not within said exceptions. Anything received by a shipping commissioner for such service is not required to be accounted for by the terms of R. S. sec. 4501. (1884) 18 Op. Atty-Gen. 54. But see following text.

SEC. 2. [Shipping and discharging crews in coast trade, etc.—fees.] That shipping commissioners may ship and discharge crews for any vessel engaged in the coastwise trade, or the trade between the United States and the Dominion of Canada, or Newfoundland, or the West Indies, or the Republic of Mexico, at the request of the master or owner of such vessel, the shipping and discharging fees in such cases to be one-half that prescribed by section forty-six hundred and twelve of the Revised Statutes, for the purpose of determining the compensation of shipping commissioners. [24 Stat. L. 80.]

This is from the Act of June 19, 1886, ch. 421, "An act to abolish certain fees for official services to American vessels, and to amend the laws relating to shipping commissioners, seamen, and owners of vessels, and for other purposes."

Collection of fees abolished.—See section 1 of the above Act, given under SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION.

Effect as to offenses.—See notes to R. S. sec. 4596, infra, div. VII.

Section not mandatory.—It is to be observed that this Act is not mandatory and did not require seamen to ship before a shipping commissioner. However, it was deemed advisable that if the master or crew, from motives of convenience or otherwise, should desire to ship before a shipping commissioner, they should be able to do so; and it was for this reason that the authority of the shipping commissioner was thus enlarged. The J. D. Peters, (1896) 78 Fed. Rep. 368.

Coastwise trade defined.—The words "any vessel engaged in the coastwise trade," as used in this section, include vessels engaged in the carrying trade on navigable rivers, and are not to be limited to vessels engaged in the carrying trade along the sea-coast. Ravesies v. U. S., (1889) 37 Fed. Rep. 447, reversing (1888) 35 Fed. Rep. 917.

Vessels engaged in making voyages in the inland river trade, from and to points exclusively within the state of Alabama, for the transportation of merchandise and other subjects of trade and commerce between the state of Alabama and other states of the United States, are engaged in the coastwise trade within the meaning of this section. Ravesies v. U. S., (1889) 37 Fed. Rep. 447, reversing (1888) 35 Fed. Rep. 917.

An act to amend the laws relative to shipping commissioners.

[Shipping crews for vessels in coastwise trade, etc. — agreements — discharge — wages — clothing exempt from attachment.] When a crew is shipped by a shipping commissioner for any American vessel in the coastwise trade, or the trade between the United States and the Dominion of Canada, or New Foundland, or the West Indies, or Mexico, as authorized by section two of an Act approved June nineteenth, eighteen hundred and eighty-six, entitled "An act to abolish certain fees for official services to American vessels, and to amend the laws relating to shipping commissioners, seamen, and owners of vessels, and for other purposes," an agreement shall be made with each seaman engaged as one of such crew in the same manner as is provided by Sections four thousand five hundred and eleven and four thousand five hundred and twelve of the Revised Statutes, not however including the sixth, and eighth items of Section four thousand five hundred and eleven; and such agreement shall be posted as provided in Section four thousand five hundred and nineteen, and such seamen shall be discharged and receive their wages as provided by the first clause of Section four thousand five hundred and twenty-nine and also by Sections four thousand five hundred and twenty-six, four thousand five hundred and twenty-seven, four thousand five hundred and twenty-eight, four thousand five hundred and thirty, four thousand five hundred and thirty-five, four thousand five hundred and thirty-six, four thousand five hundred and forty-two, four thousand five hundred and forty-three, four thousand five hundred and forty-four, four thousand five hundred and forty-five, four thousand five hundred and forty-six, four thousand five hundred and forty-seven, four thousand five hundred and forty-nine, four thousand five hundred and fifty, four thousand five hundred and fifty-one, four thousand five hundred and fifty-two, four thousand five hundred and fifty-three, four thousand five hundred and fifty-four, and four thousand six hundred and two of the Revised Statutes; but in all other respects such shipment of seamen and such shipping agreement shall be regarded as if both shipment and agreement had been entered into between the master of a vessel and a seaman without going before a shipping commissioner: Provided, That the clothing of any seaman shall be exempt from attachment, and that any person who shall detain such clothing when demanded by the owner shall be liable to a penalty of not exceeding one hundred dollars." [28 Stat. L. 667, 29 Stat. L. 689.]

This statute was amended to read as above by the Act of Feb. 18, 1895, ch. 97, 28 Stat. L. 667, as amended by the Act of March 3, 1897, ch. 389, sec. 8, 29 Stat. L. 689.

The statute originally read as follows:

"That when a crew is shipped by a shipping commissioner for any American vessel in the coastwise trade, or the trade between the United States and the Dominion of Canada, or Newfoundland, or the West Indies, or Mexico, as authorized by section two of an act approved June nineteenth, eighteen hundred and eighty-six, entitled an act to abolish certain fees for official services to American vessels, and to amend the laws relating to shipping commissioners, seamen, and owners of vessels, and for other purposes, an agreement shall be made with each seaman engaged as one of such crew, in the same manner and form as is provided by sections forty-five hundred and eleven and forty-five hundred and twelve of the Revised Statutes for the shipment of the crews of other vessels; and the provisions of sections forty-five hundred and twenty-two, forty-five hundred and twenty-four, forty-five hundred and twenty-five, forty-five hundred and twenty-six, forty-five hundred and twenty-seven, forty-five hundred and twenty-eight, forty-five hundred and fifty-four, forty-five hundred and ninety-six, forty-five hundred and ninety-seven, forty-five hundred and ninety-eight, forty-five hundred and ninety-nine, forty-six hundred and one, forty-six hundred and two, forty-six hundred and three, forty-six hundred and four, forty-six hundred and five, forty-six hundred and ten, and forty-six hundred and twelve of the Revised Statutes shall extend to and embrace such vessels in the coastwise trade and the trade between the United States and the Dominion of Canada, or Newfoundland, or the West Indies, or Mexico, where their crews have been shipped by a shipping commissioner, to the same extent and with the same force and effect as if said vessels had been mentioned and embraced in the language and terms of said sections." [26 Stat. L. 320.]

The amendment of March 3, 1897, ch. 389, struck out the word "seventh" following the words "not however including the sixth" in the text, and added the words "and four thousand six hundred and two" following the words "four thousand five hundred and fifty-four" as set out above.

So much of the Act of Feb. 18, 1895, ch. 97, being the section given in the text, "as relates to allotment" is repealed by the Act of Dec. 21, 1898, ch. 28, sec. 25, infra, p. 870.

Effect as to offenses.—See notes to R. S. sec. 4596, infra, div. VII.

Effect as to amendment of R. S. sec. 4511. See notes to such section.

Contracts with seamen.—The last clause of this section prior to the proviso preserves to master and seamen the right to enter into such contractual relations not otherwise provided by the sections of the Revised Statutes made applicable to seamen shipping in the coastwise trade, and not contrary to law. The J. D. Peters, (1896) 78 Fed. Rep. 368.

Detention of clothing.—A civil action and not an information in a criminal case is the proper proceeding to recover a penalty for violating the provision as to the detention of seamen's clothing. U. S. v. Younger, (1899) 92 Fed. Rep. 672.

[II. SHIPMENT.]

Sec. 4509. [Apprentices.] Every shipping-commissioner appointed under this Title shall, if applied to for the purpose of apprenticing boys to the sea-service, by any master or owner of a vessel, or by any person legally qualified, give such assistance as is in his power for facilitating the making of such apprenticeships; but the shipping-commissioner shall ascertain that the boy has voluntarily consented to be bound, and that the parents or guardian of such boy have consented to such apprenticeship, and that he has attained the age of twelve years, and is of sufficient health and strength, and that the master to whom such boy is to be bound is a proper person for the purpose. Such apprenticeship shall terminate when the apprentice becomes eighteen years of age. The shipping-commissioner shall keep a register of all indentures of apprenticeship made before him. [R. S.]

Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 263.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch.

260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

Sec. 4510. [Indenture of apprentice to be produced to commissioner.]

The master of every foreign-going vessel shall, before carrying any apprentice to sea from any place in the United States, cause such apprentice to appear before the shipping-commissioner before whom the crew is engaged, and shall produce to him the indenture by which such apprentice is bound, and the assignment or assignments thereof, if any; and the name of the apprentice, with the date of the indenture and of the assignment or assignments thereof, if any, shall be entered on the agreement; which shall be in the form as near as may be given in the table marked "A" in the schedule annexed to this Title; and no such assignment shall be made without the approval of a commissioner, of the apprentice, and of his parents or his guardian. For any violation of this section, the master shall be liable to a penalty of not more than one hundred dollars. [R. S.]

260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch.

Sec. 4511. [Shipping articles.]

The master of every vessel bound from a port in the United States to any foreign port other than vessels engaged in trade between the United States and the British North American possessions, or the West India Islands, or the republic of Mexico, or of any vessel of the burden of seventy-five tons or upward, bound from a port on the Atlantic to a port on the Pacific, or vice versa, shall, before he proceeds on such voyage, make an agreement, in writing or in print, with every seaman whom he carries to sea as one of the crew, in the manner hereinafter mentioned; and every such agreement shall be, as near as may be, in the form given in the table marked A, in the schedule annexed to this Title, and shall be dated at the time of the first signature thereof, and shall be signed by the master before any seaman signs the same, and shall contain the following particulars:

First. The nature and, as far as practicable, the duration of the intended voyage or engagement, and the port or country at which the voyage is to terminate.

Second. The number and description of the crew, specifying their respective employments.

Third. The time at which each seaman is to be on board, to begin work.

Fourth. The capacity in which each seaman is to serve.

Fifth. The amount of wages which each seaman is to receive.

Sixth. A scale of the provisions which are to be furnished to each seaman.

Seventh. Any regulations as to conduct on board, and as to fines, short allowance of provisions, or other lawful punishments for misconduct, which may be sanctioned by Congress or authorized by the Secretary of the Treasury not contrary to or not otherwise provided for by law, which the parties agree to adopt.

Eighth. Any stipulations in reference to advance and allotment of wages, or other matters not contrary to law. [R. S.]

Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 264; Act of Jan. 15, 1873, ch. 35, 17 Stat. L. 410.

This section was amended by the Act of March 3, 1897, ch. 389, sec. 19, 29 Stat. L. 691, by substituting in paragraph seventh the words "or authorized by the Secretary of the Treasury not contrary to or not otherwise provided for by law," for the words "as proper to be adopted, and" appearing in the section as originally enacted, the amendment taking effect July 1, 1897.

Subdivision 8 of this section "in so far as the same relates to the domestic trade as defined in section 19 of" the Act of Dec. 21, 1898, ch. 28, is repealed by section 25 of such Act. See infra, p. 870.

This section with the exception of the sixth and eighth items thereof, and R. S. sec. 4512, are applicable to crews "shipped by a shipping commissioner for any American vessel in the coastwise trade, or the trade between the United States and the Dominion of Canada, or New Foundland, or the West Indies, or Mexico," by Act of Aug. 19, 1890, ch. 801, supra, p. 851. For decisions prior to this Act, see U. S. v. The Grace Lothrop, (1877) 95 U. S. 527; U. S. v. Smith, (1877) 95 U. S. 536.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, c. 1. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

What voyages excepted.—This section does not apply to vessels bound for the West Indies, Mexico, and British North America. Smith v. Chase, (1876) 2 Hask. (U. S.) 106, 22 Fed. Cas. No. 13,023.

Coasting voyage.—A vessel engaged in a coastwise voyage from one Atlantic port to another on our coast does not fall within the operation of the section. U. S. v. Smith, (1877) 95 U. S. 536.

Extension of section.—The provisions of this section have been made applicable to contracts for shipping crews for American vessels in the coastwise trade and between the United States and Canada. The Occidental, (1898) 87 Fed. Rep. 485. See also The Lillian, (1904) 131 Fed. Rep. 375.

In writing.—The maritime law requires that contracts touching the service of seamen should be in writing. Smith v. Chase, (1876) 2 Hask. (U. S.) 106, 22 Fed. Cas. No. 13,023.

Filling in blanks.—The failure to insert in shipping articles before they are executed the time at which each seaman is to be on board to commence work cannot be justified by a custom not to make a memorandum of the time until it is definitely fixed after the execution of the article, and in the meantime leave a blank space to be filled in by the master on sailing. This is a violation of law, as the articles constitute a contract, and it is not competent for the master to fill in blank spaces after the signing of the seamen and bind the seamen thereto. Bark Shetland v. Johnson, (1903) 21 App. Cas. (D. C.) 416.

Time of making articles.—We have no law requiring the master to make his contract with the seamen before receiving them on board his vessel; in both sorts of voyage, foreign and domestic, the command is to make the contract before proceeding on the voyage. U. S. v. The Thomas W. Haven, (1880) 3 Fed. Rep. 347.

Voyage must be specified.—It is the intention of law to prohibit the shipment of seamen without their consent; and to make it appear that the seamen have consented to enter the service of the vessel for a voyage or for a specified term, it is essential, and the law requires, that the shipping articles specify clearly the nature of the intended voyage. The Occidental, (1900) 101 Fed. Rep. 997.

A voyage is sufficiently described where it is set forth in the shipping articles as "from the port of San Francisco, Cal., to any port or ports on Puget Sound or British Columbia for orders. At Puget Sound or British Columbia vessel may be ordered to load cargo for any port or ports in Alaska as the master may direct. If the vessel is ordered to Alaska, the trips between Puget Sound or British Columbia and Alaska to be repeated one or more times; thence to San Francisco for final discharge, either direct or via one or more ports on the Pacific coast, for a term of time not exceeding six months." The Occidental, (1898) 87 Fed. Rep. 485.

Shipping articles are not so defective under the law as to be void where they describe the voyage in the following words: "To ports in the district of Alaska within the Behring sea and Arctic ocean, and also other ports and places in any part of the world, as the master may direct, and back to a final port of discharge in the United States, for a term of time not exceeding six calendar months." The Mermaid, (C. C. A. 1902) 115 Fed. Rep. 13, reversing (1900) 104 Fed. Rep. 301.

Shipping articles are sufficiently definite where they describe a voyage as "from the port of San Francisco, Cal., to San Francisco, Cal., to Puget Sound; thence to San Diego or any other port on the Pacific coast of the United States; thence to Puget Sound or Shoal Water bay again, or to any other port or ports on the Pacific coast of the United States; thence to San Francisco, Cal., for final discharge and as directed by the master." The Roy Somers, (1900) 107 Fed. Rep. 750.

Voyage and term.—A contract contained in the shipping articles, providing for a term of service and not merely for service upon a specified voyage, describing the terms as "from the port of Tacoma to Honolulu, H. I., and back to San Francisco, Cal., as a final port of discharge, either direct or via one or more ports on the Pacific coast, for a term of time not exceeding nine calendar months," fairly and fully meets the requirements of this section. The C. F. Sargent, (1899) 95 Fed. Rep. 180.

Definiteness.—Shipping articles described the voyage to be from Boston to one or more ports south, thence to one or more ports in Europe, and back to a port of discharge in the United States. It was held that the description was sufficiently certain to bind the parties to the performance of the voyage. Thompson v. The Oakland, (1841) 4 Law. Rep. 349, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,971.

A description of the voyage in the articles as being "from the port of Boston to Valparaiso, and other ports in the Pacific ocean, at and from thence home, direct, or via ports in the East Indies or Europe," is not sufficient. Snow v. Wope, (1855) 2 Curt. (U. S.) 301, 22 Fed. Cas. No. 13,149, affirming (1855) 1 Sprague (U. S.) 300, 30 Fed. Cas. No. 18,042.

Discretionary voyages.—The captain may lawfully hire a crew to proceed in a vessel from one port of the United States to another, and then to a foreign port and return to the port of discharge, via a number of intermediate ports, but the law does not permit such duplicity in shipping contracts where by the specified terms of the shipping articles the master is given full control to take the vessel and her crew on a long voyage to one or more foreign ports, or make a short run to a nearby domestic port and return to the port of discharge. The Occidental, (1900) 101 Fed. Rep. 997.

Discretion to touch at other ports.—It was not the intention of Congress in enacting the statute to require owners of sailing vessels engaged in the coastwise trade to specify at the inception of each voyage all the ports at which the vessel might touch or to deprive the master of the power to exercise a reasonable discretion in touching at other convenient ports and availing himself of the opportunities afforded by the exigencies of trade. If such had been the intention of the statute it would undoubtedly have been expressed in terms. All that is exacted is that the nature of the intended voyage be described. The Mermaid, (C. C. A. 1902) 115 Fed. Rep. 13, reversing (1900) 104 Fed. Rep. 301.

Deviation.—Where San Francisco, by the terms of the contract, was the port of final discharge, and the vessel was to go there from Port Hadlock either directly or by one or more ports to the Pacific coast, the words "via one or more ports of the Pacific coast" did not authorize the vessel to sail by San Francisco to a port not intermediate between Port Hadlock and San Francisco but several hundred miles to the south of the latter port and then return or make a second voyage to Port Hadlock. The J. M. Griffith, (1895) 71 Fed. Rep. 317.

A parol understanding that the vessel was not to complete the voyage described in the shipping articles is not admissible. Thompson v. The Oakland, (1841) 4 Law. Rep. 349, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,971.

Substitution of vessel.—A Chinese crew that shipped at Hong Kong on a vessel belonging to a company chartered under the laws of the United States for a trip to San Francisco and return by the same vessel, or any other vessel belonging to that company, which crew, owing to an accident to the ship, was brought to San Francisco on a vessel belonging to a different company, may be transferred to another vessel, substituted for the one injured, after having duly signed for that service before a United States shipping commissioner. (1902) 24 Op. Atty-Gen. 111.

Time when service begins.—Shipping articles not stipulating the time when service shall begin are valid, and the service is to commence in a reasonable time, and parol evidence is competent to show what that would be. Smith v. Chase, (1876) 2 Hask. (U. S.) 106, 22 Fed. Cas. No. 13,023.

Where the shipping articles do not specify the precise hour of the day at which a seaman is to be on board to commence work, it is the duty of the court to adopt that construction of the shipping articles which is most favorable to the seaman. If it is the desire of the owner or master to have the seaman become bound to go on board to begin work at some particular hour of a day named, the shipping articles should so state.

If, through negligence or design, the articles executed do not make such special provision, the court is not authorized by construction to supply such omission, and hold that a seaman who reports himself ready for duty on the day named in the articles, and several hours before the time appointed for the departure of the vessel, has forfeited his rights under the articles because he did not appear at an earlier hour of the day. The Alice Blanchard, (1899) 92 Fed. Rep. 519.

See also notes to R. S. secs. 4511, 4520, 4524, 4530, 4596.

Wages.—Shipping articles entered into for a whaling voyage, and contemplating the payment of the officers and crew by "lays" or shares in the vessel's earnings, contained a stipulation that either of the officers or crew who might be prevented by any cause from performing their duty during the whole of the voyage should receive of his lay only in proportion that the time served by him should be to the whole time of the voyage. It was held that this stipulation would be sustained, even without evidence that special explanation of it was made to the seaman. The Atlantic, (1849) Abb. Adm. 451, 2 Fed. Cas. No. 620.

As a general rule, seamen are competent to bind themselves by a contract with the master and owners; and in the ordinary case of a hiring for money wages at a specified rate, the contract of the seamen in respect to the rate will be upheld. The Atlantic, (1849) Abb. Adm. 451, 2 Fed. Cas. No. 620.

The contract of a seaman in respect to his compensation will likewise be upheld where the mode of compensation contemplated is by a proportional division of the earnings of the vessel among the owners, officers, and crew. The Atlantic, (1849) Abb. Adm. 451, 2 Fed. Cas. No. 620.

Advances and allotments.—The purpose of this section "was to provide what the shipping articles or agreement should contain, and the section was imperative in its demands that it should state, among other things, 'any stipulations in reference to advance and allotment of wages, or other matters not contrary to law.' Obviously, it simply related to the form and contents of the shipping agreement. It did not purport to provide what the law should be with reference to the several particulars required to be stated in the shipping agreement." The J. D. Peters, (1896) 78 Fed. Rep. 368.

Forfeitures.—In so far as articles provide for a forfeiture of wages in excess of that provided by law for the same offense, it is contrary to law, and not in conformity with section 4511. The San Marcos, (1886) 27 Fed. Rep. 567.

Parol evidence.—The well-established rule of common law, viz., that a written instrument cannot be varied by parol, has been abrogated with regard to seamen, though remaining in full force as against the shipowner. The Triton, (1832) Blatchf. & H. Adm. 282, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,181; The Exchange, (1833) Blatchf. & H. Adm. 366, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,594; The Cypress, (1829) 1 Blatchf. & H. Adm. 83, 6 Fed. Cas. No. 3,550.

A mariner may allege and prove that the shipping articles do not truly describe the voyage for which he was shipped, and may recover wages upon the ground that the voyage for which he contracted was different in length from that described in the articles, and that he was wrongfully discharged at the expiration of the voyage specified in the articles; and a mate is within the same rule. Page v. Sheffield, (1855) 2 Curt. (U. S.) 377, 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,667.

Effect of later Acts. — It is evident from a consideration of the various statutes, that in providing in the Act of Feb. 18, 1895, that items 6, 7, and 8 should be omitted from section 4511, R. S., in its applicability to the shipping agreement, Congress deemed section 4511, R. S., so far as items 6, 7, and 8 were concerned, obsolete, unnecessary, and superfluous legislation. The J. D. Peters, (1896) 78 Fed. Rep. 368.

Congress in providing (by Act of Aug. 19, 1890, ch. 801, as amended) for the omission of item No. 8 of R. S. sec. 4511 in its application to the form and contents of the shipping agreement in the coastwise trade, did not repeal the positive enactments permitting allotments contained in the Acts of 1884 and 1886. (See supra, p. 851.) The J. D. Peters, (1896) 78 Fed. Rep. 368.

SEC. 19. [Voyage or term for which seaman may be shipped — reshipment.] That a master of a vessel in the foreign trade may engage a seaman at any port in the United States, in the manner provided by law, to serve on a voyage to any port, or for the round trip from and to the port of departure, or for a definite time, whatever the destination. The master of a vessel making regular and stated trips between the United States and a foreign country may engage a seaman for one or more round trips, or for a definite time, or on the return of said vessel to the United States may reship such seaman for another voyage in the same vessel, in the manner provided by law, without the payment of additional fees to any officer for such reshipment or re-engagement. [23 Stat. L. 58.]

This is from the Act of June 26, 1884, ch. 121, "An act to remove certain burdens on the American merchant marine and encourage the American foreign carrying trade and for other purposes."

Reshipment defined. — A reshipment is an agreement to continue or the continuance of the relation theretofore existing between the seamen and the vessel, without any interruption in that relation by a discharge and release. This may be by the mutual agreement between seaman and master at or before the expiration of the original term of service, and it may be evidenced by an indorsement to that effect on the original shipping articles, or new articles may be signed, at the option of the parties. But it is a continuing by the seamen in the service of the vessel when there has been no interruption in that service by a discharge. It does not apply to a case in which each of the members of the crew shipped had been duly and formally discharged and released before the shipping commissioner. Ravesies v. U. S., (1888) 35 Fed. Rep. 917. See also note to R. S. sec. 4513.

Coastwise voyage. — Neither this section nor R. S. sec. 4501 applies to the case of a shipment of seamen on vessels engaged in the coastwise trade under Act of June 19, 1886, ch. 421, sec. 2, though the shipment was made on the same vessel from which the seamen had been previously discharged. Ravesies v. U. S., (1888) 35 Fed. Rep. 919.

Sec. 4512. [Rules for shipping articles.] The following rules shall be observed with respect to agreements:

First. Every agreement, except such as are otherwise specially provided for, shall be signed by each seaman in the presence of a shipping-commissioner.

Second. When the crew is first engaged the agreement shall be signed in duplicate, and one part shall be retained by the shipping-commissioner, and the other part shall contain a special place or form for the description and signatures of persons engaged subsequently to the first departure of the ship, and shall be delivered to the master.

Third. Every agreement entered into before a shipping-commissioner shall be acknowledged and certified under the hand and official seal of such commissioner. The certificate of acknowledgment shall be indorsed on or annexed to the agreement; and shall be in the following form:

"State of ———, County of ———:

"On this _____ day of _____, personally appeared before me, a shipping-commissioner in and for the said county, A. B., C. D., and E. F., severally known to me to be the same persons who executed the foregoing instrument, who each for himself acknowledged to me that he had read or had heard read the same; that he was by me made acquainted with the conditions thereof, and understood the same; and that, while sober and not in a state of intoxication, he signed it freely and voluntarily, for the uses and purposes therein mentioned." [R. S.]

Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 265.

See note under R. S. sec. 4511, supra.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

Scope of section.—Section 4512 requiring agreements of seamen to be signed in the presence of the shipping commissioner refers only to the agreements mentioned in section 4511. The Grace Lothrop, (1874) Holmes (U. S.) 342, 10 Fed. Cas. No. 5,653, affirmed (1877) 95 U. S. 527.

In the year 1873 a steamship bound from

New York to the West Indies and Mexico caused a crew to be shipped for that voyage by written shipping articles executed on board the ship before a notary public, and not before a shipping commissioner. It was held that that was in violation of Act of June 7, 1872, sec. 13 (R. S. 4512), and that the ship had incurred the penalty provided by sec. 14 (R. S. 4514). The Steamship City of Mexico, (1873) 7 Ben. (U. S.) 31, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,756, affirmed in (1874) 11 Blatchf. (U. S.) 489, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 14,797.

Sec. 4513. [Exception as to shipping articles.] The section forty-five hundred and eleven shall not apply to masters of vessels where the seamen are by custom or agreement entitled to participate in the profits or result of a cruise or voyage, nor to masters of coastwise nor to masters of lake-going vessels that touch at foreign ports; but seamen may, by agreement, serve on board such vessels a definite time, or, on the return of any vessel to a port in the United States, may reship and sail in the same vessel on another voyage, without the payment of additional fees to the shipping-commissioner, by either the seamen or the master. [R. S.]

Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 264.

This section was amended by the Act of Feb. 27, 1877, ch. 69, 19 Stat. L. 252, by striking out the words "preceding section" appearing in the section as originally enacted, and inserting in lieu thereof the words "section forty-five hundred and eleven," as above given.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch.

260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

Reshipment.—The exemption from payment of fees on the reshipment is not limited to the reshipment for one other voyage and to that immediately following the one at which the fees were paid. The exemption applies to a reshipment for all voyages succeeding the first one in regular order. Young v. Steamship Co., (1881) 105 U. S. 41.

Sec. 4514. [Penalty for shipping without agreement.] If any person shall be carried to sea, as one of the crew on board of any vessel making a voyage as hereinbefore specified, without entering into an agreement with the master of such vessel, in the form and manner, and at the place and times in such cases required, the vessel shall be held liable for each such offense to a penalty of not more than two hundred dollars. But the vessel shall not be held liable for any person carried to sea, who shall have secretly stowed away himself without the knowledge of the master, mate, or of any of the officers of the vessel, or who shall have falsely personated himself to the master, mate, or officers of the vessel, for the purpose of being carried to sea. [R. S.]

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch.

260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

Sec. 4515. [Penalty for knowingly shipping seamen without articles.] If any master, mate, or other officer of a vessel knowingly receives, or accepts, to be entered on board of any merchant-vessel, any seaman who has been engaged or supplied contrary to the provisions of this Title, the vessel on board of which such seaman shall be found shall, for every such seaman, be liable to a penalty of not more than two hundred dollars. [R. S.]

Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 265.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following supra, p. 850.

Voyages not covered by section 4511.—The clause which provides for penalty for receiving to be entered on board a merchant ship any seaman engaged or supplied contrary to the provisions of the title, does not refer to seamen who have agreed to make a voyage not mentioned in section 4511 and have not signed the agreement in the presence of a shipping commissioner. The Grace Lothrop, (1874) Holmes (U. S.) 342, 10 Fed. Cas. No. 5,653, affirmed (1877) 95 U. S. 527.

Coasting voyages.—This section being placed at the end of the provisions concerning foreign voyages, if it can mean anything, means to punish a breach of those provisions, as if it read, seamen engaged or supplied contrary to the provisions hereinbefore made. The subject of coasting voyages is taken up later, and distinct penalties are provided in section 4521, which deals with that subject. U. S. v. The Thomas W. Haven, (1880) 3 Fed. Rep. 347.

Time of engaging seaman.—Any hiring of a seaman may be called engaging him, and he is engaged when he is contracted with. The word has that meaning in some parts of our shipping Acts and in some parts of the Merchant Shipping Act. It cannot have it in section 4515, because the statutes provide that the written contract or "engagement" in that broad sense is to be made at any time before the vessel proceeds to sea; therefore, no oral engagement can be illegal until the last moment has elapsed in which a written engagement must be made, which is the moment before the anchor is weighed. U. S. v. The Thomas W. Haven, (1880) 3 Fed. Rep. 347.

The offense of receiving on board ship a seaman who has been engaged contrary to title 53 is an impossible one, because there is nothing in that title which requires an engagement to be made before the seamen are received on board. U. S. v. The Thomas W. Haven, (1880) 3 Fed. Rep. 347.

Sec. 4516. [Lost seamen may be replaced.] In case of desertion or casualty resulting in the loss of one or more seamen, the master must ship, if obtainable, a number equal to the number of those whose services he has been deprived of by desertion or casualty, who must be of the same grade or rating and equally expert with those whose place or position they refill, and report the same to the United States consul at the first port at which he shall arrive, without incurring the penalty prescribed by the two preceding sections. [R. S.]

This section was amended "so as to read as" above by the Act of Dec. 21, 1898, ch. 28, sec. 1, 30 Stat. L. 755, infra, p. 869.

The section originally read as follows:

"Sec. 4516. In case of desertion, or of casualty resulting in the loss of one or more seamen, the master may ship a number equal to the number of whose services he has been deprived by desertion or casualty, and report the same to the United States consul at the first port at which he shall arrive, without incurring the penalty prescribed by the two preceding sections." Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 265.

Section 26 of the amendatory Act above noted provides that sec. 1, which contains the amendment in the text, "shall not apply to fishing or whaling vessels or yachts." See infra, p. 870.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following supra, p. 850.

Effect of failure to replace.—The fact that a master did not replace a second mate who had been paid off at an intermediate port does not excuse the crew's total refusal to work, and the master is justified in putting them in irons for such refusal. The Cora F. Cressey, (1904) 131 Fed. Rep. 144.

Seaman of lower grade.—Where a seaman became ill and was discharged and another shipped in his place, and thereafter the other seamen deserted, claiming that the substitute was not an able seaman, they were not justified in so doing, and the defense of desertion should be sustained against their libel of the vessel for wages, where such new man, although not of the same grade as the others, was an ordinary seaman and able to work acceptably to the master. The Moonlight, (1903) 125 Fed. Rep. 429.

Sec. 4517. [Shipping seamen in foreign ports.] Every master of a merchant-vessel who engages any seaman at a place out of the United States, in which there is a consular officer or commercial agent, shall, before carrying such seaman to sea, procure the sanction of such officer, and shall engage seamen in his presence; and the rules governing the engagement of seamen before a shipping-commissioner in the United States, shall apply to such engagements made before a consular officer or commercial agent; and upon every such engagement the consular officer or commercial agent shall indorse upon the agreement his sanction thereof, and an attestation to the effect that the same has been signed in his presence, and otherwise duly made. [R. S.]

Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 265.

Sec. 4518. [Penalty for violating preceding section.] Every master who engages any seaman in any place in which there is a consular officer or commercial agent, otherwise than as required by the preceding section, shall incur a penalty of not more than one hundred dollars, for which penalty the vessel shall be held liable. [R. S.]

Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 265.

SEC. 20. [Voyage or term of seamen shipped in foreign port — reshipment — bond for return.] That every master of a vessel in the foreign trade may engage any seaman at any port out of the United States, in the manner provided by law, to serve for one or more round trips from and to the port of departure, or for a definite time, whatever the destination; and the master of a vessel clearing from a port of the United States with one or more seamen engaged in a foreign port as herein provided shall not be required to reship in a port of the United States the seamen so engaged, or to give bond, as required by section forty-five hundred and seventy-six of the Revised Statutes, to produce said seamen before a boarding officer on the return of said vessel to the United States. [23 Stat. L. 58.]

This is from the Act of June 26, 1884, ch. 121, "An Act to remove certain burdens on the American merchant marine and encourage the American foreign carrying trade, and for other purposes."

Sec. 4519. [Posting copy of agreement.] The master shall, at the commencement of every voyage or engagement, cause a legible copy of the agreement, omitting signatures, to be placed or posted up in such part of the vessel as to be accessible to the crew; and on default shall be liable to a penalty of not more than one hundred dollars. [R. S.]

Act of July 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 266. the Dominion of Canada, or New Foundland, or the West Indies, or Mexico," by Act of Aug. 19, 1890, ch. 801, supra, p. 851.

This section is applicable to crews "shipped by a shipping commissioner for any American vessel in the coastwise trade, or the trade between the United States and For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

Sec. 4520. [Shipping articles for vessels in coasting trade.] Every master of any vessel of the burden of fifty tons or upward, bound from a port in one State to a port in any other than an adjoining State, except vessels of the burden of seventy-five tons or upward, bound from a port on the Atlantic to a port on the Pacific, or vice versa, shall, before he proceeds on such voyage, make an agreement in writing or in print, with every seaman on board such vessel except such as shall be apprentice or servant to himself or owners, declaring the voyage or term of time for which such seaman shall be shipped. [R. S.]

Act of July 20, 1790, ch. 29, 1 Stat. L. 131; Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 264.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 160, note thereunder, and provisions following. supra, p. 850.

Effect of later Acts.—The provisions of this section and those of the following section were not repealed by the Act of June 9, 1874, and are still in force. The Lizzie M. Dunn, (1887) 30 Fed. Rep. 927; U. S. v. Bain, (1880) 5 Fed. Rep. 192.

River navigation.—The provisions of this section and section 4523 are applicable to seamen or boats engaged in navigating the Monongahela and Ohio rivers. The Pacific, (1885) 23 Fed. Rep. 154.

Lake navigation.—The provisions of the law requiring shipping articles apply to lake navigation. The Theodore Perry, (1878) 24 Int. Rev. Rec. 54, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,880; Wolverton v. Lacey, (1856) 18 Law. Rep. 672, 30 Fed. Cas. No. 17,932.

"Adjoining states."—Illinois and Michigan are "adjoining states" within the meaning of this statute. The boundary line is the middle of Lake Michigan. Thorson v. Peterson, (1881) 9 Fed. Rep. 517.

Judicial notice of location of port.—The court is bound to take notice of the legally established boundaries of the different states. Thorson v. Peterson, (1881) 9 Fed. Rep. 517.

New York to Mexico.—The master of a vessel making a voyage from New York to a port in Mexico is required by section 4520 to make the agreement therein required, and is also required to see that such agreement is signed, acknowledged, and certified before a shipping commissioner. Such vessel is liable to the penalty provided if her master receives a seaman on board who had been engaged otherwise than under an agreement so signed, acknowledged, and certified. U. S. v. The Steamship City of Mexico, (1874) 11 Blatchf. (U. S.) 489, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 14,797, affirming (1873) 7 Ben. (U. S.) 31, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,756.

Time of signing articles.—The articles must be signed before leaving the port of departure, and if not so signed, the shipment is void by the express language of section 4523. The Theodore Perry, (1878) 24 Int. Rev. Rec. 54, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,880.

Duress.—If the articles are signed under duress they are invalid. Mayshaw v. Terry, (1861) 1 Sprague (U. S.) 584, 16 Fed. Cas. No. 9,361; Stratton v. Babbage, (1855) 18 Law. Rep. 94, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,527.

Seaman defined.—The wife of a cook on board a vessel, engaged as second cook, is a part of the crew, and it is the duty of the master to make an agreement reduced to writing and signed by her as provided herein. The James H. Shrigley, (1892) 50 Fed. Rep. 287.

Description of voyage.—Articles describing a voyage as from Philadelphia to Portland, thence to one or more ports east, if required, and back to a western port of discharge, the term not to exceed two months, were sufficiently precise and definite to be obligatory upon the parties. U. S. v. Bain, (1880) 5 Fed. Rep. 192.

Collateral attack on articles.—Shipping articles are required to be signed under this section; and though their correctness may be attacked, and they may be shown by parol to be incorrect, fraudulent, or void, unless this be satisfactorily established the seamen will be held bound by the terms prescribed in them. There must be such clear and satisfactory proof of either fraud or mistake to justify the court in disregarding them. The Elvine, (1884) 19 Fed. Rep. 528.

Sec. 4521. [Penalty for shipping without articles.] If any master of such vessel of the burden of fifty tons or upward shall carry out any seaman or mariner, except apprentices or servants, without such contract or agreement being first made and signed by the seamen, such master shall pay to every such seaman the highest price or wages which shall have been given at the port or place where such seaman was shipped, for a similar voyage, within three months next before the time of such shipping, if such seaman shall perform such voyage; or if not, then for such time as he shall continue to do duty on board such vessel; and shall moreover be liable to a penalty of twenty dollars for every such seaman, recoverable, one-half to the use of the person prosecuting for the same, and the other half to the use of the United States. Any seaman who has not signed such a contract shall not be bound by the regulations nor subject to the penalties and forfeitures contained in this Title. [R. S.]

Act of July 20, 1790, ch. 29, 1 Stat. L. 131.

See also R. S. sec. 4523 and cases there given.

To what voyages applicable.—The Act of 1790 allowing to seamen shipped without a contract in writing the highest wages, notwithstanding any parol contract, is confined to cases of vessels bound on a foreign voyage or to a domestic port other than that of an adjoining state. It does not extend to the trade between ports of the same state, nor with ports of an adjoining state, nor can it be made to reach an ordinary fishing voyage without doing violence to the language of interpolating words which the legislature have not seen fit to use. The Ianthe, (1856) 3 Ware (U. S.) 126, 12 Fed. Cas. No. 6,992.

The intention of this statute is to make it to the interest of the owner of the boat to make a written or printed agreement with the seamen in order to avoid disputes as to the rate of wages, and the positive provisions of this statute cannot be affected by the equities of the case. The Lud Keefer, (1892) 49 Fed. Rep. 650.

Mariners are wards of the court, and as such are to be protected, not to the injury of the respondents, but to secure them their just wages. It is very easy for officers of vessels to engage mariners at a fixed rate, and if they do not do so the courts must allow them the highest rates existing at the time of departure. Rollins v. Steamer E. O. Standard, (1880) 4 Fed. Rep. 750.

Rights of seamen.—Where seamen go on board a vessel voluntarily, not having signed the shipping articles, they are not bound to continue in the service of the vessel during the voyage, nor for any definite term, but the master can require them to do work necessary to be done in the proper navigation of the vessel while she is at sea. Such seamen are free to leave the vessel at any place, and having served as mariners they are entitled to receive compensation therefor, but not having any valid contract entitling them to be returned to a certain port, they have no just claim for expenses in so doing, nor for any compensation except wages while they were doing the work required of them. The Occidental, (1900) 101 Fed. Rep. 997. To the same effect, Graham v. The Exporter, (1875) 21 Int. Rev.

Rec. 110, 10 Fed. Cas. No. 5,667; The Ianthe, (1856) 3 Ware (U. S.) 126, 12 Fed. Cas. No. 6,992; The Australia, (1859) 3 Ware (U. S.) 240, 2 Fed. Cas. No. 667.

Election to prove agreement.—Where no wages are stipulated in shipping articles, a seaman may either prove by parol evidence what wages were agreed to be given, or may under the statute claim the highest rate payable at the port of shipment within the three months next preceding the date of the articles. The Warrington, (1832) Blatchf. & H. Adm. 335, 29 Fed. Cas. No. 17,208; Graham v. The Exporter, (1875) 21 Int. Rev. Rec. 110, 10 Fed. Cas. No. 5,667.

Where two distinct contracts for service on two distinct voyages are made at the same time, and one only is reduced to writing, the other may be proved by parol. Page v. Sheffield, (1855) 2 Curt. (U. S.) 377, 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,667.

Libel.—Though it be assumed that a pilot of a steam vessel who is a licensed and sworn officer is a seaman within the meaning of this section and the previous one, whose hiring must be by shipping articles, yet these sections have no application to a steamboat libeled for wages by pilots under this section, where the libel does not allege, nor is any proof adduced tending to show, that the steamboat was a "vessel of the burden of fifty tons or upwards," and the libelants are in no position to claim the benefits of this statute. The Lud Keefer, (1892) 49 Fed. Rep. 650.

Sec. 4522. [Penalty for omitting to begin voyage.] At the foot of every such contract to ship upon such a vessel of the burden of fifty tons or upward there shall be a memorandum in writing of the day and the hour when such seaman who shipped and subscribed shall render himself on board to begin the voyage agreed upon. If any seaman shall neglect to render himself on board the vessel for which he has shipped at the time mentioned in such memorandum without giving twenty-four hours' notice of his inability to do so, and if the master of the vessel shall, on the day in which such neglect happened, make an entry in the log book of such vessel of the name of such seaman, and shall in like manner note the time that he so neglected to render himself after the time appointed, then every such seaman shall forfeit for every hour which he shall so neglect to render himself one-half of one day's pay, according to the rate of wages agreed upon, to be deducted out of the wages. If any such seaman shall wholly neglect to render himself on board of such vessel, or having rendered himself on board shall afterwards desert, he shall forfeit all of his wages or emoluments which he has then earned. [R. S.]

This section was amended "so as to read as" above by the Act of Dec. 21, 1898, ch. 28, sec. 2, 30 Stat. L. 755, set forth, infra, p. 869.

The section originally read as follows:

"Sec. 4522. At the foot of every such contract to ship upon such a vessel of the burden of fifty tons or upward, there shall be a memorandum in writing of the day and the hour on which the seamen who ship and subscribe shall render themselves on board to begin the voyage agreed upon. If any such seaman shall neglect to render himself on board the vessel, for which he has shipped, at the time mentioned in such memorandum, and if the master of the vessel shall, on the day on which such neglect happened, make an entry in the log-book of such vessel, of the name of such seaman, and shall in like manner note the time that he so neglected to render himself, after the time appointed, every such seaman shall forfeit for every hour which he shall so neglect to render himself, one day's pay, according to the rate of wages agreed upon, to be deducted out of his wages. If any such seaman shall wholly neglect to render himself on board of such vessel, or having rendered himself on board, shall afterwards desert and escape, so that the vessel proceed to sea without him, he shall be liable to pay to the master, owner, or consignee of the vessel, a sum equal to that paid to him by advance at the time of signing the contract, over and besides the sum so advanced, both which sums shall be recoverable in any court, or before any justice of any State, city, town, or county within the United States, which, by the laws thereof, have cognizance of debts of equal value, against such seaman or mariner, or his surety or sureties, in case he shall have given surety to proceed the voyage." Act of July 20, 1790, ch. 29, 1 Stat. L. 131.

Sec. 4523. [Unlawful shipments void.] All shipments of seamen made contrary to the provisions of any act of Congress shall be void; and any seaman so shipped may leave the service at any time, and shall be entitled to recover the highest rate of wages of the port from which the seaman was shipped, or the sum agreed to be given him at his shipment. [R. S.]

See also R. S. sec. 4521, supra, and notes.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

This section is declaratory of the general rule that legal rights cannot be founded upon unlawful contracts. The Troop, (1902) 117 Fed. Rep. 557.

Fishing vessels.—This section is not applicable to fishermen who ship under an oral agreement for a "lay" or shares in the catch. Fishermen are not seamen in the sense of this section. The Cornelia M. Kingsland, (1885) 25 Fed. Rep. 856.

Lake navigation.—This section applies to a seaman on a lake vessel, and where he shipped under a verbal agreement without signing shipping articles, he may leave the vessel at any time. The City of Fremont, (1871) 2 Biss. (U. S.) 415, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,746.

It is the duty of every master navigating the lakes to have his seamen sign shipping articles, specifying the ports or places at which his vessel trades, and the trip or season for which they are shipped, and the wages to be paid. In cases of such neglect every legal intentment will be taken against the master and owners. It is not the fault of the seaman that shipping articles are not signed, but of the master. The City of Fremont, (1871) 2 Biss. (U. S.) 415, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,746.

River navigation.—See note to R. S. sec. 4520.

Foreign vessels.—This section is applicable to seamen shipped in American ports on foreign vessels. The Troop, (1902) 117 Fed. Rep. 557.

Time of signing articles.—Shipping articles signed after the vessel has left her port of departure are not binding upon the seaman, and he may leave the vessel at any time without incurring the penalties of desertion. The Theodore Perry, (1878) 24 Int. Rev. Rec. 54, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,880. See also note to R. S. sec. 4520.

Right to leave service.—Where a seaman is hired without any shipping articles being signed he has the right to quit the boat at any time without being chargeable with desertion. The Pacific, (1885) 23 Fed. Rep. 154.

The imprisonment of a seaman for refusing to remain on board, where the shipping articles did not sufficiently describe the voyage, is a tort. Snow v. Wope, (1855) 2 Curt. (U. S.) 301, 22 Fed. Cas. No. 13,149, affirming (1855) 1 Sprague (U. S.) 300, 30 Fed. Cas. No. 18,042.

Election as to wages.—A vessel employed on the lakes between Chicago and the port of Sarnia, in Canada, having shipped a seaman on verbal promise of certain wages and no shipping articles having been signed, the seaman may leave the vessel at any time. But having drawn the full wages promised and not demanding more before leaving, the seaman cannot recover a larger amount. The Fremont, (1871) 9 Fed. Cas. No. 5,093; The City of Fremont, (1871) 2 Biss. (U. S.) 415, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,746.

Contract binding on vessel.—While a seaman shipped contrary to the provisions of this title may leave the service at any time, yet where he does continue or is ready to continue in the service of the vessel and is prevented by the master, he is to be paid either the wages agreed upon, or the highest pay to any seaman shipped for the voyage. The master cannot discharge him at will. Page v. Sheffield, (1855) 2 Curt. (U. S.) 377, 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,667.

[III. WAGES AND EFFECTS.]

Sec. 4524. [Commencement of wages.] A seaman's right to wages and provisions shall be taken to commence either at the time at which he commences work, or at the time specified in the agreement for his commencement of work or presence on board, whichever first happens. [R. S.]

Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 268.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

Contract as to commencement. — This section does not warrant a construction that takes from a seaman his right of contracting as to when he shall begin to claim his wages, so long as an agreement to that effect is reasonable and for the mutual benefit of master and seaman. The Lillian, (1904) 131 Fed. Rep. 375.

Detention of vessel. — An agreement by the seamen not to claim wages if the vessel was detained or prevented from beginning her voyage by reason of ice is not unreasonable, and, if inserted with the knowledge and understanding of the seamen, it is a part of the contract and binding. The Lillian, (1904) 131 Fed. Rep. 375.

See also notes to R. S. sec. 4511, supra.

Sec. 4525. [Wages not dependent on freight.] No right to wages shall be dependent on the earning of freight by the vessel; but every seaman or apprentice who would be entitled to demand and receive any wages if the vessel on which he has served had earned freight, shall, subject to all other rules of law and conditions applicable to the case, be entitled to claim and recover the same of the master or owner in personam, notwithstanding that freight has not been earned. But in all cases of wreck or loss of vessel, proof that any seaman or apprentice has not exerted himself to the utmost to save the vessel, cargo, and stores, shall bar his claim. [R. S.]

Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 268.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

"Freight, mother of wages." — The rule, freight is the mother of wages, does not apply to a fishing or sealing voyage, and is abolished altogether by this section. The Ocean Spray, (1876) 4 Sawy. (U. S.) 105, 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,412.

The principal object of this and the following section was to abolish the ancient rule of the sea which made the right of wages depend upon the earnings of freight by the vessel. Brown v. Chandler, (1877) 4 Fed. Cas. No. 1,998; The Nippon's Crew, (1849) Brun. Col. Cas. (U. S.) 577, 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,277; The Ocean Spray, (1876) 4 Sawy. (U. S.) 105, 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,412; The Saratoga, (1814) 2 Gall. (U. S.) 164, 21 Fed. Cas. No. 12,355.

Salvage services can be performed only by persons not bound by their legal duty to render them, and seamen are not allowed to become salvors, whatever may have been the perils or hardships or gallantry of their services in saving the ship or cargo, unless their connection with the ship is dissolved.

The C. F. Bielman, (1901) 108 Fed. Rep. 878; Hobart v. Drogan, (1836) 10 Pet. (U. S.) 108; The C. P. Minch, (C. C. A. 1896) 73 Fed. Rep. 859; Cartwell v. The Ship John Taylor, (1842) Newb. Adm. 341, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,482.

In the C. P. Minch, (C. C. A. 1896) 73 Fed. Rep. 859, affirming (1894) 61 Fed. Rep. 511, it was said by Lacombe, J., after an exhaustive review of the authorities, that "in every case where compensation in the nature of salvage has been awarded to seamen, the voyage has terminated by the shipwreck of the vessel, which has either gone to the bottom or left her bones on shore, or she has been abandoned by all, or by all except the salvors, under circumstances which show conclusively that the abandonment was absolute, without hope or expectation of recovery, or the seaman has been by the master unmistakably discharged from the service of the shipowner."

Promise of pay for salvage services. — If the master under such stress of circumstances promised the seamen better pay at the expense of the insurers the promise is unwarranted. The C. F. Bielman, (1901) 108 Fed. Rep. 878.

Sec. 4526. [Termination of wages by loss of vessel — transportation to place of shipment.] In cases where the service of any seaman terminates before the period contemplated in the agreement, by reason of the loss or wreck of the vessel, such seaman shall be entitled to wages for the time of service prior to such termination, but not for any further period. Such seaman shall be considered as a destitute seaman and shall be treated and transported to port of shipment as provided in sections forty-five hundred and seventy-seven, forty-five hundred and seventy-eight, and forty-five hundred and seventy-nine of the Revised Statutes of the United States. [R. S.]

Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 269.

This section was amended "so as to read as" above by the Act of Dec. 21, 1898, ch. 28, sec. 3, 30 Stat. L. 755, set forth, infra, p. 869. The amendment consists in the addition of all matter after the words "for any further period," and the change in the order of the words "wreck or loss," as they appeared in the section as originally enacted, to "loss or wreck," as given in the text.

By section 26 of the amendatory Act the amending section above noted "shall not apply to fishing or whaling vessels or yachts." See infra, p. 870.

This section is made applicable to seamen "shipped by a shipping commissioner for any American vessel in the coastwise trade, or the trade between the United States and the Dominion of Canada, or New Foundland, or the West Indies, or Mexico," by the Act of Aug. 19, 1890, ch. 801, as amended by Acts of Feb. 18, 1895, ch. 97, and March 3, 1897, ch. 389, sec. 8, supra, p. 851.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

Cause of loss.—If a vessel is lost to her owners without fault on their part, or if she is so injured by encountering ordinary perils of navigation as to be unfit to complete the particular voyage commenced, the terms of the statute are met, and the seamen receive all they can legally claim when they are paid wages at the contract rate for the time of actual service. The Charles D. Lane, (1901) 106 Fed. Rep. 746.

Fault of master.—If the stranding of the steamer was caused by the intoxication of the master, it was none the less a case of a termination of the seamen's service by reason of the wreck of the vessel within the meaning of this section. Flanagan v. U. S., etc., Mail Steamship Co., (1886) 30 Fed. Rep. 202.

Capture.—Where a vessel is captured and condemned, wages were due the seamen up to the date of condemnation. Vandever v. Tilghman, (1836) Crabbe (U. S.) 66, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,846.

A capture unless followed by condemnation does not dissolve the contract for mariners' wages. During the prize proceedings it is suspended, and upon a decree of restoration it revives. The Saratoga, (1814) 2 Gall. (U. S.) 164, 21 Fed. Cas. No. 12,355.

A survey is not a necessary ingredient of wreck. Flanagan v. U. S., etc., Mail Steamship Co., (1886) 30 Fed. Rep. 202.

Time of termination.—In case of a wreck by stranding it must be left to the discretion of the master to fix the day of the actual termination of the seamen's services, and his decision will be supported unless some wrong or injustice be practiced on the seamen. Flanagan v. U. S., etc., Mail Steamship Co., (1886) 30 Fed. Rep. 202.

The seamen were bound to continue their service as long as there was any hope of saving the ship; and the master must be held to have the power, as a general rule, to determine whether there is any hope of getting the ship afloat, and until he gives it up, the owners cannot object to paying wages on the ground that there was no chance of saving the ship. Tarleton v. Mallory, (1878) 10 Ben. (U. S.) 46, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,753.

Navigation closed by ice.—Where a vessel on the Great Lakes is laid up at an intermediate point in a voyage by reason of the closing of navigation on account of winter, the contract of service with the seamen shipped for a single voyage is at an end and they are at liberty to abandon the voyage, and the vessel has the right to employ other seamen in the spring when navigation opens. But where on the close of navigation such seamen are discharged they are entitled to their wages up to the time of their discharge and to their expenses in returning to the place of departure, and also to their wages during the time occupied in the journey to such place of departure. Boulton v. Moore, (1883) 14 Fed. Rep. 922.

Time of payment.—A stipulation in the articles, that seamen shall not demand wages until the arrival of the vessel at her final port of destination, does not bar the seamen of their wages in case the vessel is lost before arriving at that port. The Gen. Chamberlain, (1872) 1 Hask. (U. S.) 432, 10 Fed. Cas. No. 5,310.

Sec. 4527. [Wages in case of improper discharge.] Any seaman who has signed an agreement and is afterward discharged before the commencement of the voyage or before one month's wages are earned, without fault on his part justifying such discharge, and without his consent, shall be entitled to receive from the master or owner, in addition to any wages he may have earned, a sum equal in amount to one month's wages as compensation, and may, on adducing evidence satisfactory to the court hearing the case, of having been improperly discharged, recover such compensation as if it were wages duly earned. [R. S.]

Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 266.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

Coastwise voyages.—This section has been repealed so far as vessels engaged in the coastwise trade are concerned. Dary v. The Caroline Miller, (1888) 36 Fed. Rep. 507.

Where articles not signed.—Where seamen are engaged, but no shipping articles are signed and no services are rendered, they may not on their discharge recover as provided in this statute. The Glenesslin, (1899) 96 Fed. Rep. 768.

Justification for discharge.—Where seamen were insolent, lazy, and disobedient to orders, while their conduct did not amount to mutiny, it would have been full justification in the captain discharging them from the ship. The Schooner Jefferson Borden, (1881) 6 Fed. Rep. 301.

The master is not ordinarily justified in dissolving the contract with a seaman and discharging him for a single fault, unless it is of a highly aggravated character. The causes for which a seaman may be discharged are ordinarily such as amount to a disqualification, and show him to be an unsafe or an unfit man to have on board the vessel. The Villa Y Herman, (1900) 101 Fed. Rep. 132.

Lateness in tendering services.—Where the shipping articles do not specify the precise hour at which a seaman is to be on board to begin work, he substantially complies with his agreement in tendering his services on the day named in the articles, and the master is not justified in refusing to allow him to go to work even though he had directed him to be on board several hours earlier in that day. Such oral directions cannot be allowed to change the legal effect of the articles, and for such improper discharge the seaman may recover as provided in the above section. The Alice Blanchard, (1899) 92 Fed. Rep. 519.

A seaman who has signed articles and does not report for duty on board ship at the stipulated time, or if no time is stipulated, within a reasonable time, may be discharged from further service. Smith v. Chase, (1876) 2 Hask. (U. S.) 106, 22 Fed. Cas. No. 13,023.

Time when services commence.—See R. S. secs. 4511, 4524, and notes, supra, pp. 853, 863.

Disabling of vessel.—The provisions of this section are applicable to seamen who signed shipping articles for a voyage aboard a steamship and presented themselves on three successive days at the dock where the ship lay prepared to enter upon their work, but were discharged before the voyage began because of the disabling of the vessel by a break in a steampipe, and they are entitled to recover in rem wages for one month or so much thereof as the voyage would have required. The St. Paul, (1897) 77 Fed. Rep. 998.

Unseaworthy vessel.—The provisions of this section are applicable to seamen shipping on vessels known by the owners to be unseaworthy and which were unable to proceed in pleasant weather and on a smooth sea and were compelled to return in a state of wreck. The Staghound, (1899) 97 Fed. Rep. 973.

Perils of seas.—Every contract of shipment made by seamen is made in view of the contingency of terminating the voyage by reason of encountering perils of navigation which all mariners understand may happen to any ship on any voyage, and when the contingency happens and the voyage is broken up without fault on the part of the captain or the ship, but wholly by force of the natural elements, it must be assumed that the contract is terminated in a manner contemplated and impliedly consented to by the parties, and the case does not come within the provisions of this section. The Charles D. Lane, (1901) 106 Fed. Rep. 746.

Waiver by new employment.—If it be assumed that this statute becomes immediately operative upon a seaman's discharge and that he became entitled to a month's wages, his right is one which he can waive for a sufficient consideration, and the acceptance of a new employment procured for him by the agents of the owners, which was in every respect equal to that from which he was discharged, must be regarded as a relinquishment of his right to resort to the statute. The John R. Berrgen, (1903) 122 Fed. Rep. 98.

Lien for wages.—Where services have not in fact been rendered, there can be no lien for wages except in the cases provided for in section 4527, where the shipping agreement has been signed and the seaman is thereafter unwarrantably discharged by the master. The Glenesslin, (1899) 96 Fed. Rep. 768.

Jurisdiction.—The provision for one month's extra pay for a wrongful discharge does not impose a penalty, but establishes a rule of damages for breach of contract, and a Circuit Court has jurisdiction of an action at common law to recover such compensation within R. S. sec. 4547. Calvin v. Huntley, (1901) 178 Mass. 31.

Burden of proof.—Where seamen libeling a vessel under the provisions of this section have shown the contract of shipping, their discharge having not only been shown, but admitted, and the libelants having for their part shown that their discharge was without their fault and against their consent, the burden is cast on the claimant to show that they were in fault and were discharged for good cause. The Villa Y Herman, (1900) 101 Fed. Rep. 133.

Sec. 4528. [Suspension of wages.] No seaman or apprentice shall be entitled to wages for any period during which he unlawfully refuses or neglects to work when required, after the time fixed by the agreement for him to begin work, nor, unless the court hearing the case otherwise directs, for any period during which he is lawfully imprisoned for any offense committed by him. [R. S.]

Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 269.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

Neglect to work.—In this section Congress evidently intended that no seaman neglecting to do his work should receive pay for that period. The Schooner Jefferson Borden, (1881) 6 Fed. Rep. 301.

Habitual drunkenness, if it goes to establish general incapacity to perform duty, is a ground of forfeiture of wages, otherwise it goes only to diminish compensation for the voyage. Orne v. Townsend, (1827) 4 Mason (U. S.) 541, 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,583.

Entries in the log book, showing that a seaman lost two days' work by intoxication and consequent illness, do not amount to satisfactory evidence of unlawful refusal or neglect to work when required, and a master is not justified in fining him twelve days' pay. (1898) 22 Op. Atty.-Gen. 212.

Sec. 4529. [Time for payment.] The master or owner of any vessel making coasting voyages shall pay to every seaman his wages within two days after the termination of the agreement under which he shipped, or at the time such seaman is discharged, whichever first happens; and in the case of vessels making foreign voyages, or from a port on the Atlantic to a port on the Pacific, or vice versa, within twenty-four hours after the cargo has been discharged, or within four days after the seaman has been discharged, whichever first happens; and in all cases the seaman shall, at the time of his discharge, be entitled to be paid, on account of wages, a sum equal to one-third part of the balance due him. Every master or owner who refuses or neglects to make payment in manner hereinbefore mentioned without sufficient cause shall pay to the seaman a sum equal to one day's pay for each and every day during which payment is delayed beyond the respective periods, which sum shall be recoverable as wages in any claim made before the court; but this section shall not apply to the masters or owners of any vessel the seamen on which are entitled to share in the profits of the cruise or voyage. [R. S.]

This section was amended "so as to read as" above by the Act of Dec. 21, 1898, ch. 28, sec. 4, 30 Stat. L. 756, set forth, infra, p. 869.

The section originally read as follows:

SEC. 4529. The master or owner of every vessel making voyages from a port on the Atlantic to a port on the Pacific, or vice versa, shall pay to every seaman his wages, within two days after the termination of the agreement, or at the time such seaman is discharged, whichever first happens; and, in the case of vessels making foreign voyages, within three days after the cargo has been delivered, or within five days after the seaman's discharge, whichever first happens; and in all cases the seaman shall, at the time of his discharge, be entitled to be paid, on account, a sum equal to one-fourth part of the balance due to him. Every master or owner who neglects or refuses to make payment in manner hereinbefore mentioned, without sufficient cause, shall pay to the seaman a sum not exceeding the amount of two days' pay for each of the days, not exceeding ten days, during which payment is delayed beyond the respective periods; which sum shall be recoverable as wages in any claim made before the court. But this section shall not apply to the masters or owners of any vessel the seaman on which are entitled to share in the profits of the cruise or voyage." Act of July 20, 1790, ch. 29, 1 Stat. L. 133; Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 269.

It is provided by section 26 of the amending Act that section 4, above noted, "shall not apply to fishing or whaling vessels or yachts." See infra, p. 870.

The first clause of this section is made applicable to seamen "shipped by a shipping commissioner for any American vessel in the coastwise trade, or the trade between the United States and the Dominion of Canada, or New Foundland, or the West Indies, or Mexico," by Act of Aug. 19, 1890, ch. 801, as amended by Acts of Feb. 18, 1895, ch. 97, and March 3, 1897, ch. 389, sec. 8, infra, p. 851.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

Discharge on condemnation of vessel.—Where seamen are discharged by the master upon the condemnation of the vessel and are returned home by him, they are entitled to wages up to the time of their discharge, and if withheld the owners are liable to the penalty provided by this section. Gallagher v. Murray, (1879) 10 Ben. (U. S.) 290, 9 Fed. Cas. No. 5,193.

Leaving before term ended.—Where seamen are employed by the month and leave the service before the end of that time, without a sufficient cause, they may not recover the penalty fixed by this section for the neglect to pay their wages when due, without sufficient cause. The Express, (1904) 129 Fed. Rep. 655.

"Without sufficient cause."—The phrase "without sufficient cause" is to be construed as equivalent to "without reasonable cause," and there is reasonable cause for delay where there is a dispute as to the legality under R. S. sec. 4536 of an order to pay wages to a third person, though such order is subsequently declared to be invalid as an assignment of wages made prior to the accruing thereof. The George W. Wells, (1902) 118 Fed. Rep. 761.

Dispute as to days.—A dispute as to the seaman's right to wages for the day on which he signed shipping articles at a distance from the vessel, he not having arrived on board until six P. M., where the question was submitted to the shipping commissioner, who decided in favor of the master, although such decision was erroneous, is a sufficient cause for delay within the meaning of this section. The Alice B. Phillips, (1901) 106 Fed. Rep. 956.

Want of funds.—The master of a vessel having fraudulently used her for his own purposes in violation of orders from her managing owner, and converted a large amount of her cargo to his own use, and the vessel owners having been under heavy expenses in recovering possession of the vessel and bringing her within reach of judicial process, so that all having claims against her might be protected, and in view and because of such facts not having sufficient funds to pay off the crew, it was held that this was a sufficient excuse for delay, within the meaning of the section. The Gen. McPherson, (1900) 100 Fed. Rep. 860.

Seamen cannot recover the penalty provided by this section for the nonpayment of wages then due them when the net proceeds from the sale of the vessel for unseaworthiness are insufficient to pay the officers and crew, and it does not appear that the master could have raised a sufficient sum for the purpose. The Wenonah, (1875) 1 Hask. (U. S.) 606, 29 Fed. Cas. No. 17,412.

Attachment against wages.—It is no excuse for a delay to pay wages that an attachment has been served upon the master, who was one of the owners of the vessel, in a suit brought against the seamen, for under R. S. sec. 4536 wages due a seaman cannot be attached, and a payment of wages to a seaman notwithstanding an attachment is valid. The Bark John E. Holbrook, (1874) 7 Ben. (U. S.) 356, 13 Fed. Cas. No. 7,339.

Fractions of days.—Seamen are entitled to wages for both the day on which they were shipped and the day on which they were discharged, without regard to the hour. The Alice B. Phillips, (1901) 106 Fed. Rep. 956.

A seaman having signed shipping articles at Boston for service on board a vessel at Fall River was supplied with his railroad fare and arrived at the vessel at six P. M., the same day, and it was held that he was entitled to wages for that day. The Alice B. Phillips, (1901) 106 Fed. Rep. 956.

See also notes to R. S. secs. 4511, 4520, supra, pp. 853, 859.

Services under wrongful master.—The legal authority of a master to bind the ship by his contracts ceases when he unlawfully and piratically takes control of her adversely to her owners. The Gen. McPherson, (1900) 100 Fed. Rep. 860.

Services after piratical conversion by master.—A seaman is justified in staying by the vessel after a fraudulent deviation by the master and a conversion of the cargo to his own use, until such seaman arrives at the port of discharge, and can collect his wages for the entire period. The Gen. McPherson, (1900) 100 Fed. Rep. 860.

Immediate suit.—Where a vessel has fully discharged her cargo in her port of delivery and leaves that port on other voyages, without payment of wages, the seamen, although accompanying her, are entitled to an action for such wages immediately. The Edward, (1832) 1 Blatchf. & H. Adm. 286, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,289.

Wages on prior voyage.—So if she returns to the same port of delivery a seaman may institute an action at once for wages earned on the previous voyage, though the vessel be not discharged of her second cargo. The Edward, (1832) 1 Blatchf. & H. Adm. 286, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,289.

Premature filing of libel.—The provision for extra pay was designed as compensation for delay. The failure to wait before filing the libel for wages will not prevent its recovery where no one has been injured thereby. The Chas. L. Baylis, (1885) 25 Fed. Rep. 863.

See also secs. 4546, 4547, infra, p. 879 et seq.

Lien for extra pay.—The extra pay provided by statute is an incident to the claim for wages, and ranks with the claim for wages as a prior lien. The Chas. L. Baylis, (1885) 25 Fed. Rep. 863.

Sec. 4530. [Payment of wages at ports, etc.] Every seaman on a vessel of the United States shall be entitled to receive from the master of the vessel to which he belongs one-half part of the wages which shall be due him at every port where such vessel, after the voyage has commenced, shall load or deliver cargo before the voyage is ended unless the contrary be expressly stipulated in the contract; and when the voyage is ended every such seaman shall be entitled to the remainder of the wages which shall then be due him as provided in section forty-five hundred and twenty-nine of the Revised Statutes. [R. S.]

This section was amended "to read as" above by the Act of Dec. 21, 1898, ch. 28, sec. 5. 30 Stat. L. 756, set forth infra, p. 869.

The section originally read as follows:

"SEC. 4530. Every seaman shall be entitled to receive from the master of the vessel to which he belongs, one-third part of the wages which shall be due to him at every port where such vessel shall unlade and deliver her cargo before the voyage is ended, unless the contrary be expressly stipulated in the contract; and as soon as the voyage is ended, and the cargo or ballast is fully discharged at the last port of delivery, he shall be entitled to the wages which shall be then due." Act of July 20, 1790, ch. 29, 1 Stat. L. 133.

It is provided by section 26 of the amending Act that section 5, above set out, "shall not apply to fishing or whaling vessels or yachts." See infra, p. 870.

This section is made applicable to seamen "shipped by a shipping commissioner for any American vessel in the coastwise trade, or the trade between the United States and the Dominion of Canada, or New Foundland, or the West Indies, or Mexico," by the Act of Aug. 19, 1890, ch. 801, as amended by Acts of Feb. 18, 1895, ch. 97, and March 3, 1897, ch. 389, sec. 8, supra, p. 851.

Termination of voyage.—There must be some other act besides the discharge of the crew in order to effect a termination of the voyage at a port of refuge. Schermacher v. Yates, (1893) 57 Fed. Rep. 668.

The voyage is ended and a seaman's wages become due when the vessel is moored at her final port of destination, and if such wages are not paid within ten days thereafter, the seaman is entitled to admiralty process against the vessel. The Annie M. Smull, (1872) 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 226, 1 Fed. Cas. No. 423.

In Granon v. Hartshorne, (1834) Blatchf. & H. Adm. 454, 10 Fed. Cas. No. 5,689, it was held that when the ship had reached her port of final destination and was safely moored at the berth, that the voyage was then terminated and all sea services on board connected therewith.

Discharge of cargo not essential.—A seaman is not bound to stay by the ship after her arrival at the final port of destination, and assist in discharging her cargo, unless the shipping articles contain a contract to that effect or the established custom of the port requires it. The Annie M. Smull, (1872) 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 226, 1 Fed. Cas. No. 423.

After some conflict of opinion the clause in this section prior to the amendment, "and the cargo or ballast is fully discharged," has been construed by the courts as being applicable only "to those cases in which, either by express terms of the contract or by the established custom of the port, the crew are bound to stay by and unload the ship, and are actually retained in service for that purpose." But where there is no such contract or usage the wages become due on the day of the termination of the voyage—the seaman's discharge—and he is entitled to process against the vessel on the eleventh day thereafter; the ten days being computed from the termination of the voyage, when the wages become due without reference to the discharge of the cargo or ballast. The Annie M. Smull, (1872) 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 226, 1 Fed. Cas. No. 423.

Necessity of unlading of cargo.—Without the aid of an express stipulation, a seaman cannot sue for wages earned on a foreign voyage until the full completion of that voyage by the unlading of the cargo or ballast. If the master or owner defers, beyond a reasonable time, to unload the vessel, such laches may be regarded equivalent to a discharge of the seaman. The burden of proof to show a discharge before the unlading of the cargo rests upon the seaman. His own oath is not sufficient evidence. The Schooner Eagle, (1846) Olc. Adm. 232, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,233.

Capture of vessel on return voyage.—The shipping articles provided for a voyage to "Surinam, and at and from thence back to the port of Philadelphia or to any port in Europe," and it was further agreed that no seaman "shall demand or be entitled to his wages, or any part thereof, until the arrival of the said ship at the above-mentioned port of discharge in Philadelphia." It was held, where the vessel was captured after unloading a part of her cargo at a foreign port and while returning to Philadelphia with the residue, that the seamen were entitled to wages to the foreign port and for half the time the vessel stayed there. Johnson v. Sims, (1800) 1 Pet. Adm. 215, 13 Fed. Cas. No. 7,413.

Intermediate port for repairs.—A crew were shipped from New York to a port in Africa "and such other ports and places in any part of the world as the master may direct, and back to a final port of discharge in the United States." The vessel proceeded from New York to Sierra Leone and thence to Jamaica. On the way from the latter port for New York in ballast she was disabled and bore away for Key West, where the crew were discharged before a shipping commissioner and the wages paid at such time. After temporary repairs were made, she proceeded with the same ballast and without cargo to New York. It was held that New York and not Key West was her "final port of discharge," and the seamen having demanded passage money to such port were entitled to the same. Schermacher v. Yates, (1893) 57 Fed. Rep. 668.

Termination of voyage by deviation.—The announcement by the master of a vessel at an outward port after the cargo is finally discharged, that he intends to return to a port not authorized by the shipping articles, and a demand thereupon made by seamen for their wages, constitutes a termination of the voyage so far as such seamen are concerned and entitles them to an immediate payment of their wages, and the fact that the vessel is about to proceed to sea before the end of the ten days gives them the right to sue immediately under R. S. sec. 4547. The Laura Madsen, (1897) 84 Fed. Rep. 362.

Navigation suspended by ice.—In the case of The Hudson, (1881) 8 Fed. Rep. 167, where the libellants, without any written articles, shipped on board of a packet running between Pittsburgh and Cincinnati, on the Ohio river, and on the arrival of the packet at Pittsburgh, the river being frozen over and navigation by reason of ice having been suspended for eight days, were discharged, the court held that they were entitled to their wages up to the time of their return to the place of shipment, as well as their expenses during their return. Boulton v. Moore, (1883) 14 Fed. Rep. 922.

Substitution of vessel.—Seamen were shipped at Boston for a voyage "to port or ports in Hayti one or more times, or other West India ports, and back to port or ports in the United States on this or any other vessel, term not to exceed six months." Upon their arrival at a port in Hayti they were boarded on shore at the owner's expense and brought home in another vessel, their wages and all other expenses being paid to the time of their arrival at Boston. It was held that they were not entitled to two months' extra wages, as having been discharged abroad, for their discharge was at Boston. Rogers v. Lewis, (1868) 1 Lowell (U. S.) 297, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 12,014.

Secs. 4531–4534. [Repealed.]

These sections were as follows:

"SEC. 4531. [Allotment of wages.] All stipulations for the allotment of any part of the wages of a seaman, during his absence, which are made at the commencement of the voyage shall be inserted in the agreement, and shall state the amounts and times of the payments to be made, and the persons to whom such payments are to be made." Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 266.

"SEC. 4532. [Advances.] No advance of wages shall be made, or advance security given to any person, but to the seaman himself, or to his wife or mother; and no advance of wages shall be made, or advance security given, unless the agreement contains a stipulation for the same, and an accurate statement of the amount thereof; and no advance wages or advance security shall be given to any seaman except in the presence of the shipping-commissioner." Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 266.

For cases construing this section, see Duncan v. Shaw, (1884) 19 Fed. Rep. 521.

"SEC. 4533. [Recovery in case of unlawful advance.] If any advance of wages is made or advance security given to any seaman in any such manner as to constitute a breach of any of the provisions of the two preceding sections, the wages of such seaman shall be recoverable by him, as if no such advance had been made or promised; and in the case of any advance security so given, no person shall be sued thereon, unless he was a party to such breach." Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 266.

For cases construing this section, see

Smith v. Pendergast, (1882) 22 Fed. Cas. No. 13,090a.

"SEC. 4534. [Discount of advance security.] Whenever any advance security is discounted for any seaman, such seaman shall sign or set his mark to a receipt indorsed on the security, stating the sum actually paid or accounted for to him by the person discounting the same; and if the seaman sails in the vessel from the port of departure mentioned in the security, and is then duly earning his wages, or is previously discharged with the consent of the master, but not otherwise, the person discounting the security may, ten days after the final departure of the vessel from the port of departure mentioned in the security, sue for and recover the amount promised by the security, with costs, either from the owner or from any agent who has drawn or authorized the drawing of the security; and in any such proceeding it shall be sufficient for such person to prove that the security was given by the owner or master, or some other authorized agent, and that the same was discounted to and receipted by the seaman; and the seaman shall be presumed to have sailed in the vessel from such port, and to be duly earning his wages, unless the contrary is proved." Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 266.

For cases construing this section, see Duncan v. Shaw, (1884) 19 Fed. Rep. 521; Smith v. Pendergast, (1882) 22 Fed. Cas. No. 13,090a; Greefe v. Cortis, (1882) 13 Fed. Rep. 299.

These sections were expressly repealed by the Act of Dec. 21, 1898, ch. 28, sec. 25, 30 Stat. L. 764, set forth below.

Foreign vessels. — This Act is applicable to seamen shipping in a port of the United States on a foreign vessel. Kennedy v. Blake, (C. C. A. 1903) 125 Fed. Rep. 672, affirming (1902) 117 Fed. Rep. 557; The Alnwick, (1904) 132 Fed. Rep. 117; Patterson v. Bark Eudora, (1903) 190 U. S. 189.

SEC. 26. [In effect — vessels excepted.] That this Act shall take effect sixty days after its approval, and shall apply to all vessels not herein specifically exempted, but sections one, two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight, nine, ten, eleven, thirteen, fourteen, fifteen, twenty-three, and twenty-four shall not apply to fishing or whaling vessels or yachts. [30 Stat. L. 764.]

SEC. 10. [Advances and allotment of wages.] (a) That it shall be, and is hereby, made unlawful in any case to pay any seaman wages in advance of the time when he has actually earned the same, or to pay such advance wages to any other person. Any person paying such advance wages shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be punished by a fine not less than four times the amount of the wages so advanced, and may also be imprisoned for a period not exceeding six months, at the discretion of the court. The payment of such advance wages shall in no case, excepting as herein provided, absolve the vessel or the master or owner thereof from full payment of wages after the same shall have been actually earned, and shall be no defense to a libel, suit, or action for the recovery of such wages. If any person shall demand or receive, either directly or indirectly, from any seaman or other person seeking employment as seaman, or from any person on his behalf, any remuneration whatever for providing him with employment, he shall for every such offense be liable to a penalty of not more than one hundred dollars.

(b) That it shall be lawful for any seaman to stipulate in his shipping agreement for an allotment of any portion of the wages which he may earn to his grand parents, parents, wife, sister, or children. But no allotment whatever shall be allowed in the trade between the ports of the United States (except as provided in subdivision C of this section) or in trade between ports of the United States and the Dominion of Canada, Newfoundland, the West Indies and Mexico.

(c) That it shall be lawful for any seaman engaged in a vessel bound from a port on the Atlantic to a port on the Pacific or vice versa, or in a vessel engaged in foreign trade, except trade between the United States and the Dominion of Canada or Newfoundland or the West Indies or the Republic of Mexico, to stipulate in his shipping agreement for an allotment of an amount, to be fixed by regulation of the Commissioner of Navigation, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, not exceeding one month's wages, to an original creditor in liquidation of any just debt for board or clothing which he may have contracted prior to engagement.

(d) That no allotment note shall be valid unless signed by and approved by the shipping commissioner. It shall be the duty of said commissioner to examine such allotments and the parties to them and enforce compliance with the law. All stipulations for the allotment of any part of the wages of a seaman during his absence which are made at the commencement of the voyage shall be inserted in the agreement, and shall state the amounts and times of the payments to be made and the persons to whom the payments are to be made.

(e) That no allotment except as provided for in this section shall be lawful. Any person who shall falsely claim to be such relation as above described of a seaman under this section or shall make a false statement of the nature or amount of any debt claimed to be due from any seaman under this section shall for every such offense be punishable by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars or imprisonment not exceeding six months, at the discretion of the court.

(f) That this section shall apply as well to foreign vessels as to vessels of the United States; and any master, owner, consignee, or agent of any foreign vessel who has violated its provisions shall be liable to the same penalty that the master, owner, or agent of a vessel of the United States would be for a similar violation: Provided, That treaties in force between the United States and foreign nations do not conflict.

(g) That under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury the Commissioner of Navigation shall make regulations to carry out this section. [30 Stat. L. 763.]

This is from the Act of June 26, 1884, ch. 121, sec. 10, 23 Stat. L. 55, as amended by the Act of June 19, 1886, ch. 421, sec. 3, 24 Stat. L. 80, and the Act of Dec. 21, 1898, ch. 28, sec. 24, 30 Stat. L. 763.

The section as originally enacted read as follows:

"SEC. 10. That it shall be, and is hereby, made unlawful in any case to pay any seamen wages before leaving the port at which such seaman may be engaged in advance of the time when he has actually earned the same, or to pay such advance wages to any other person, or to pay any person, other than an officer authorized by act of Congress to collect fees for such service, any remuneration for the shipment of seamen. Any person paying such advance wages or such remuneration shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be punished by a fine not less than four times the amount of the wages so advanced or remuneration so paid, and may be also imprisoned for a period not exceeding six months, at the discretion of the court. The payment of such advanced wages or remuneration shall in no case, except as herein provided, absolve the vessel, or the master or owner thereof, from full payment of wages after the same shall have been actually earned, and shall be no defense to a libel, suit, or action for the recovery of such wages: Provided, That this section shall not apply to whaling-vessels: And provided further, That it shall be lawful for any seaman to stipulate in his shipping agreement for an allotment of any portion of the wages which he may earn to his wife, mother, or other relative, but to no other person or corporation. And any person who shall falsely claim such relationship to any seaman in order to obtain wages so allotted shall, for every such offense, be punishable by a fine of not exceeding five hundred dollars, or imprisonment not exceeding six months, at the discretion of the court. This section shall apply as well to foreign vessels as to vessels of the United States; and any foreign vessel the master, owner, consignee, or agent of which has violated this section, or induced or connived at its violation, shall be refused a clearance from any port of the United States." [23 Stat. L. 56.]

It was first amended by the Act of June 19, 1886, ch. 421, as follows:

"SEC. 3. That section ten of the act entitled 'An act to remove certain burdens on the American merchant marine and encourage the American foreign carrying trade, and for other purposes,' approved June twenty-six, eighteen hundred and eighty-four, be amended by striking out the words 'That it shall be lawful for any seaman to stipulate in his shipping agreement for an allotment of any portion of the wages which he may earn to his wife, mother, or other relative, but to no other person or corporation,' and inserting in lieu thereof the following: That it shall be lawful for any seaman to stipulate in his shipping agreement for an allotment of all or any portion of the wages which he may earn to his wife, mother, or other relative, or to an original creditor in liquidation of any just debt for board or clothing which he may have contracted prior to engagement, not exceeding ten dollars per month for each month of the time usually required for the voyage for which the seaman has shipped, under such regulations at the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, but no allotment to any other person or corporation shall be lawful. And said section ten is further amended by striking out all of the last paragraph after the words 'vessels of the United States,' and inserting in lieu of such words stricken out the following: 'And any master, owner, consignee, or agent of any foreign vessel who has violated this section shall be liable to the same penalty that the master, owner, or agent of a vessel of the United States would be for a similar violation.'" [24 Stat. L. 80.]

It was again amended by the Act of Dec. 21, 1898, ch. 28, sec. 24, to read as set forth in the text, and by sec. 25 of the same Act (supra, p. 870), sec. 3 of the amendatory Act of June 19, 1886, ch. 421, above given, was expressly repealed.

Constitutionality.—The provisions of this section do not violate the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution providing for liberty of contract. Patterson v. Bark Eudora, (1903) 190 U. S. 169. See also The Kestor, (1901) 110 Fed. Rep. 432.

It is within the power of Congress to prescribe the penal provisions of this section, and such provisions are constitutional and valid, and no one within the jurisdiction of the United States can escape liability for a violation of these provisions on the plea that he is a foreign citizen or an officer of a foreign merchant vessel. Patterson v. Bark Eudora, (1903) 190 U. S. 169, reversing (1901) 110 Fed. Rep. 430. See to the same effect, The Alnwick, (1904) 132 Fed. Rep. 117; Kenney v. Blake, (C. C. A. 1903) 125 Fed. Rep. 672. affirming (1902) 117 Fed. Rep. 557; The Kestor, (1901) 110 Fed. Rep. 432.

Application of section.—The provisions of this section are applicable to vessels engaged in the coastwise trade and in trade between the Atlantic ports and the Dominion of Canada and the Pacific ports and British Columbia. The Eclipse, (1892) 53 Fed. Rep. 276.

Coasting voyages.—This section is applicable by analogy to a vessel which sails from a port of the United States to a port in Alaska. The J. D. Peters, (1896) 78 Fed. Rep. 368.

River navigation.—In U. S. v. King, (1885) 23 Fed. Rep. 138, it was held by Bruce, J., that the provisions of this section are not applicable to the shipment of seamen (deckhands) on steamboats navigating rivers such as the Alabama, Tombigbee, and Warrior.

Shipments in foreign ports.—The provisions of this section prohibiting advances of wages to seamen do not apply to the shipment of seamen in foreign ports, for such shipments and advances are acts done and completed wholly upon foreign soil, and are therefore wholly beyond the jurisdiction of this country. The State of Maine, (1884) 22 Fed. Rep. 734.

The provision that "this section shall apply as well to foreign vessels as to vessels of the United States" furnishes a specific indication that Congress did not intend in this section to refer to the shipment of seamen in foreign ports, but had in view acts done in this country alone. The State of Maine, (1884) 22 Fed. Rep. 734.

Foreign vessels.—This section applies to all American seamen whether shipping on a domestic or a foreign vessel. U. S. v. Nelson, (1900) 100 Fed. Rep. 125.

This section is applicable to the payment on American soil or in American waters of the wages of seamen, who are British subjects, shipping in American ports on British merchant vessels; there being no treaty between the United States and Great Britain inconsistent with such application. The Keator, (1901) 110 Fed. Rep. 432.

The provisions of this section 10, prohibiting the payment of advance wages to seamen hired in our ports, in so far as these provisions apply to foreign shipping are not in conflict with the stipulations of article 8 of the consular convention with France of Feb. 23, 1853. Nor do such provisions come in conflict with any rights which, upon principles of international law, other nations are entitled to exercise within our ports as regards their merchant vessels. (1885) 18 Op. Atty.-Gen. 253.

Evasion by oral agreement.—Where seamen were to receive partly in advance and partly at the end of the voyage wages verbally agreed upon, and shipping articles were signed, making no provision for advances but showing a rate of wages which with the sums advanced gave the seamen what they were entitled to under the oral agreement, such arrangement having been made under authority of the owners and being perfectly understood and assented to by the seamen, it was held that such an arrangement was an evasion of the statute, and the entire amount of wages could be recovered without any deduction for the advances made. The Samuel E. Spring, (1886) 27 Fed. Rep. 764.

Effect of release.—But such advances cannot be recovered by seamen who have received their wages as provided in the shipping articles, and given a release therefor. The Samuel E. Spring, (1886) 27 Fed. Rep. 764.

Effect of advance payments.—The payment of a seaman's wages in advance except as provided by the Act of June 26, 1884, ch. 121, sec. 10, being forbidden by such section, and a discharge and settlement of wages except in the presence of a duly authorized shipping commissioner being punishable under R. S. sec. 4549, such payments cannot be set up as a defense to a libel for the recovery of wages actually earned by the libellant. The Alexander M. Lawrence, (1900) 101 Fed. Rep. 135.

"It is claimed * * * that an advance of wages represented by an advance note is invalid and money paid under it cannot be deducted from a seaman's wages. [But a rule] made in the interest of the seaman in order to protect him from his improvidence and from imposition, is not to be turned against him, so as to defeat his right of recovery or the right of recovery by his assignee where services have actually been performed and the wages earned." The Staghound, (1899) 97 Fed. Rep. 973.

Effect of later Acts.—When the Act of Feb. 18, 1895, was passed, providing that item No. 8 should be omitted from section 4511 in its applicability to the agreement to be made between the master and each seaman, it did not affect the right to make an allotment under the conditions prescribed by the Act of 1884, as amended by the Act of 1886. In other words, it does not repeal these two Acts by implication. The J. D. Peters, (1896) 78 Fed. Rep. 368.

False statement of debt due.—The provision prohibiting under penalty the making of a false claim or statement refers to making a claim against the sum allotted in the stipulation inserted in the agreement, and does not apply to the making of false claims against seamen generally. U. S. v. Nelson, (1900) 100 Fed. Rep. 125.

Sec. 4535. [Loss of lien.] No seaman shall, by any agreement other than is provided by this Title, forfeit his lien upon the ship, or be deprived of any remedy for the recovery of his wages to which he would otherwise have been entitled; and every stipulation in any agreement inconsistent with any provision of this Title, and every stipulation by which any seaman consents to abandon his right to his wages in the case of the loss of the ship, or to abandon any right which he may have or obtain in the nature of salvage, shall be wholly inoperative. [R. S.]

This section is made applicable to seamen "shipped by a shipping commissioner for any American vessel in the coastwise trade, or the trade between the United States and the Dominion of Canada, or New Foundland, or the West Indies, or Mexico," by the Act of Aug. 19, 1890, ch. 801, as amended by Acts of Feb. 18, 1895, ch. 97, and March 3, 1897, ch. 389, sec. 8. supra, p. 851.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following. supra, p. 850.

A sealer is to be considered a mariner, and therefore entitled to a lien upon the vessel for his wages. The Ocean Spray, (1876) 4 Sawy. (U. S.) 105, 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,412.

Foreign vessels.—This section is inapplicable to a contract for employment on a foreign vessel made in a foreign port. The Yacht Countess of Dufferin, (1878) 10 Ben. (U. S.) 155, 6 Fed. Cas. No. 3,280.

Effect of charter party.—It is the statutory policy to preserve the seaman's lien for wages against any implication of waiver by the fact that the seaman had knowledge that the vessel was chartered under an agreement by which the crew were to be paid by the charterers. The L. L. Lamb, (1887) 31 Fed. Rep. 29. Citing The Sirocco, (1881) 7 Fed. Rep. 599; The Schooner Highlander, (1859) 1 Sprague (U. S.) 510, 12 Fed. Cas. No. 6,476; The Adelphi, (1862) 1 Fed. Cas. No. 80; The Erie, (1859) 3 Ware (U. S.) 225, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,512; The Schooner Montauk, (1879) 10 Ben. (U. S.) 455, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 9,717; The Galloway C. Morris, (1870) 2 Abb. (U. S.) 164, 9 Fed. Cas. No. 5,204; The Samuel Ober, (1883) 15 Fed. Rep. 621; The Clayton, (1870) 5 Biss. (U. S.) 162, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,870; The International, (1887) 30 Fed. Rep. 375, and cases cited.

Vessel in receiver's hands.—Prima facie, the rendition of mariner's services imports a lien, and the mere fact that a vessel is navigated by a receiver appointed by a state court does not necessarily negative such lien although there may be facts in the particular case to show that the above statute does not apply, or that credit was expressly given to the owner, to the charterer, or to some third person. In fact, the question of lien or no lien is not one of jurisdiction, but of merits. The Resolute, (1897) 168 U. S. 437.

Lien on freight.—The seamen have a lien by the maritime law on the freight as well as the vessel for their wages, which is not taken away by the provisions of the law allowing process against the vessel, and where the charterers are owners for the voyage, the seamen have a lien on the cargo shipped on account of the charterers for a charge in the nature of freight. Poland v. The Brig Spar- tan, (1828) 1 Ware (U. S.) 130, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,246.

Right to salvage.—It may perhaps be possible to hold that the provision in section 4535 was not intended to apply in cases where a seaman with full knowledge, by an express agreement, undertakes to engage in a salvage service, and to waive any compensation therefor other than his regular wages; yet, where a seaman was hired at monthly wages in the ordinary manner and nothing whatever was at any time said by either party in regard to an abandonment or waiver of any right to claim salvage, the nature of the employment of the vessel does not compel the inference that it was understood that the monthly wages agreed to be paid should be in lieu of any share in any salvage award to which otherwise he might become entitled as a part of the crew. The Cetewayo, (1881) 9 Fed. Rep. 717.

Release of salvage.—“While the owners of a ship may release, by express or implied contract, a claim for salvage, yet the seamen of a vessel which saves another are rendered incapable, by section 4535 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, of releasing their claim to participate in any salvage that may accrue from the enterprise.” Baker Salvage Co. v. The Taylor Dickson, (1888) 40 Fed. Rep. 261.

Liability of seaman as mortgagor.—The liability of a seaman who was mortgagor of a vessel when a prior owner, for a deficiency on the mortgage, cannot be set off against his claim for wages. The Schooner Uncle Tom, (1879) 10 Ben. (U. S.) 234, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,335.

A part owner of a vessel who has given a purchase-money mortgage has a lien for wages enforceable in rem in admiralty where there are no innocent creditors or purchasers involved. The M. M. Morrill, (1897) 78 Fed. Rep. 509.

Seaman as part owner.—The fact that a seaman is a part owner in a vessel will not deprive him of his lien for wages and the right to enforce the same by a process in rem in admiralty. The Schooner Uncle Tom, (1879) 10 Ben. (U. S.) 234, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,335.

Sec. 4536. [No attachment or assignment of wages.] No wages due or accruing to any seaman or apprentice shall be subject to attachment or arrestment from any court; and every payment of wages to a seaman or apprentice shall be valid in law, notwithstanding any previous sale or assignment of wages, or of any attachment, incumbrance, or arrestment thereon; and no assignment or sale of wages, or of salvage, made prior to the accruing thereof, shall bind the party making the same, except such advance securities as are authorized by this Title. [R. S.]

See Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260. supra, p. 850, and note thereunder.

This section is made applicable to seamen “shipped by a shipping commissioner for any American vessel in the coastwise trade, or the trade between the United States and the Dominion of Canada, or New Foundland, or the West Indies, or Mexico,” by the Act of Aug. 19, 1890, ch. 801, as amended by Acts of Feb. 18, 1895, ch. 97, and March 3, 1897, ch. 389, sec. 8. supra, p. 851.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

Fishermen. — One shipping as a fisherman on a voyage to Behring Sea and return, and receiving, instead of monthly wages, compensation for his services at a certain amount per thousand fish caught by him, is not a seaman within the meaning of this section. Telles v. Lynde, (1891) 47 Fed. Rep. 912.

This provision is general in its terms, and is applicable to all wages earned by seamen, whatever the nature of the voyage. But by the Act of June 9, 1874, fishing and whaling voyages where the seamen receive as their compensation a share or lay in the catchings, are taken out of the operation of the section. Ross v. Bourne, (1883) 14 Fed. Rep. 858.

Seal hunters. — Hunters on a sealing voyage are mariners within the meaning of this section, and an agreement by them on the purchase of an interest in the vessel to apply one-half of their earnings on the prospective voyage, to pay their indebtedness on notes given for the purchase price, comes within the provisions of the section as an assignment of wages. The M. M. Morrill, (1897) 78 Fed. Rep. 509.

Coastwise voyages. — It was held in McCarty v. Steam-Propeller City of New Bedford, (1880) 4 Fed. Rep. 818, prior to the Act of Aug. 19, 1890, ch. 901, that the provision of the Act of June 9, 1874, which declares that none of the provisions of the Act of June 7, 1872, shall apply to sail or steam vessels engaged in the coastwise trade, except the coastwise trade between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, did not include the provisions of the Act of 1872 reproduced in R. S. sec. 4536, and that wages earned by a seaman in such coastwise trade are not subject to attachment.

Car ferries. — A person employed on board a steam ferryboat used for the purpose of transporting trains across the Mississippi river as a continuous line of transportation by a railroad company by which it is owned, is entitled to the benefit of this section. The St. Louis, (1891) 48 Fed. Rep. 312.

Attachment. — Irrespective of this section, and in the absence of express legislation on the subject by Congress, the right of a mariner to sue in the admiralty for his wages is not taken away or suspended by an attachment of his wages by trustee process in an action at law. Ross v. Bourne, (1883) 14 Fed. Rep. 858.

Execution. — There is, however, a marked difference between an attachment to secure the payment of an asserted, and, it may be, disputed and unfounded, claim, and the levy of an execution which simply seizes upon property of a debtor for the purpose of satisfying a valid judgment; and the wages of a seaman may be taken on execution issued out of a state court in the absence of a statute exempting them from such seizure. A prior payment of the amount due a seaman for wages is satisfaction of an execution issued against him and will constitute a good defense to a subsequent action brought by him in admiralty for the recovery of such wages. The Queen, (1890) 93 Fed. Rep. 834.

Where a seaman's wages were taken from his employers under execution and the proceedings supplementary thereto and not under attachment or arrestment, the provisions of this law do not exempt such wages from such process, and the court has jurisdiction to make an appropriation of the wages in satisfaction of the judgment against the seaman. Telles v. Lynde, (1891) 47 Fed. Rep. 912.

What constitutes an assignment. — A written order by a seaman on the captain and owners of a vessel to pay to a certain person named a certain sum, "to be paid when due, for services as sailor on board the W., and to be charged to my account at the end of the voyage or when duly discharged from said vessel," is an assignment of wages made prior to the accruing thereof within the prohibition of this section. The George W. Wells, (1902) 118 Fed. Rep. 761.

An agreement by a pilot serving on a vessel in which he had purchased a share, made with the other owners, that from his earnings as pilot there should be yearly retained by the other owners such sum of money as he was able to spare until the balance of the consideration of his purchase should be paid, is not an assignment of unaccrued wages within the meaning of this section, and such agreement gives no authority to the owners to apply any part of his wages to the purchase money without further direction from him. Somers v. The Jersey Blue, (1879) 2 N. J. L. J. 359, 22 Fed. Cas. No. 13,169.

Sec. 4537. [Limit of sum recoverable during voyage.] No sum exceeding one dollar shall be recoverable from any seaman, by any one person, for any debt contracted during the time such seaman shall actually belong to any vessel, until the voyage for which such seaman engaged shall be ended. [R. S.]

Act of July 20, 1790, ch. 29, 1 Stat. L. 133.

Sec. 4538. [Effects of deceased seamen.] Whenever any seaman or apprentice belonging to or sent home on any merchant-vessel, whether a foreign-going or domestic vessel, employed on a voyage which is to terminate in the United States, dies during such voyage, the master shall take charge of all moneys, clothes, and effects which he leaves on board, and shall, if he thinks fit, cause all or any of such clothes and effects to be sold by auction at the mast or other public auction, and shall thereupon sign an entry in the official log-book, and cause it to be attested by the mate and one of the crew, containing the following particulars:

First. A statement of the amount of money so left by the deceased.

Second. In case of a sale, a description of each article sold, and the sum received for each.

Third. A statement of the sum due to deceased as wages, and the total amount of deductions, if any, to be made therefrom. [R. S.]

Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 271.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

Deductions.—The language "the total amount of deductions, if any, to be made therefrom," found in specification three of this section, applies only to wages due the deceased mentioned in this specification. The proceeds of the effects of the deceased must be paid to the shipping commissioner or accounted for as provided by the sections. No deductions from such proceeds can be made on account of any claim due the vessel by the deceased for wages advanced and not earned. U. S. v. Tobey, (1882) 12 Fed. Rep. 347.

Sec. 4539. [Proceedings in regard to effects of deceased seamen.] In cases embraced by the preceding section, the following rules shall be observed:

First. If the vessel proceeds at once to any port in the United States, the master shall, within forty-eight hours after his arrival, deliver any such effects remaining unsold, and pay any money which he has taken charge of, or received from such sale, and the balance of wages due to the deceased, to the shipping-commissioner at the port of destination in the United States.

Second. If the vessel touches and remains at some foreign port before coming to any port in the United States, the master shall report the case to the United States consular officer there, and shall give to such officer any information he requires as to the destination of the vessel and probable length of the voyage; and such officer may, if he considers it expedient so to do, require the effects, money, and wages to be delivered and paid to him, and shall, upon such delivery and payment, give to the master a receipt; and the master shall within forty-eight hours after his arrival at his port of destination in the United States produce the same to the shipping-commissioner there. Such consular officer shall, in any such case, indorse and certify upon the agreement with the crew the particulars with respect to such delivery and payment.

Third. If the consular officer does not require such payment and delivery to be made to him, the master shall take charge of the effects, money, and wages, and shall, within forty-eight hours after his arrival at his port of destination in the United States, deliver and pay the same to the shipping-commissioner there.

Fourth. The master shall, in all cases in which any seaman or apprentice dies during the voyage or engagement, give to such officer or shipping-commissioner an account, in such form as they may respectively require, of the effects, money, and wages so to be delivered and paid; and no deductions claimed on such account shall be allowed unless verified by an entry in the official log-book, if there be any; and by such other vouchers, if any, as may be reasonably required by the officer or shipping-commissioner to whom the account is rendered.

Fifth. Upon due compliance with such of the provisions of this section as relate to acts to be done at the port of destination in the United States, the shipping-commissioner shall grant to the master a certificate to that effect. No officer of customs shall clear any foreign-going vessel without the production of such certificate. [R. S.]

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch.

260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

Effects in other cases.—It is only in cases of the death of a seaman, and under the circumstances indicated in the second division of this section, that any consular officer is authorized to require the money, wages, etc., of a seaman to be delivered to him. (1875) 14 Op. Atty.-Gen. 520.

Sec. 4540. [Penalty for neglect in regard to seaman's effects.] Whenever any master fails to take such charge of the money or other effects of a seaman or apprentice during a voyage, or to make such entries in respect thereof, or to procure such attestation to such entries, or to make such payment or delivery of any money, wages, or effects of any seaman or apprentice dying during a voyage, or to give such account in respect thereof as is above directed, he shall be accountable for the money, wages, and effects of the seaman or apprentice to the circuit court in whose jurisdiction such port of destination is situate, and shall pay and deliver the same accordingly; and he shall, in addition, for every such offense, be liable to a penalty of not more than treble the value of the money or effects, or, if such value is not ascertained, not more than two hundred dollars; and if any such money, wages, or effects are not duly paid, delivered, and accounted for by the master, the owner of the vessel shall pay, deliver, and account for the same, and such money and wages and the value of such effects shall be recoverable from him accordingly; and if he fails to account for and pay the same, he shall, in addition to his liability for the money and value, be liable to the same penalty which is incurred by the master for a like offense; and all money, wages, and effects of any seaman or apprentice dying during a voyage shall be recoverable in the courts and by the modes of proceeding by which seamen are enabled to recover wages due to them. [R. S.]

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch.

Sec. 4541. [Duties of consular officers in regard to deceased seaman's effects.] Whenever any such seaman or apprentice dies at any place out of the United States, leaving any money or effects not on board of his vessel, the consular officer of the United States at or nearest the place shall claim and take charge of such money and effects, and shall, if he thinks fit, sell all or any of such effects, or any effects of any deceased seaman or apprentice delivered to him under the provisions of this Title, and shall quarterly remit to the circuit court of the circuit embracing the port from which such vessel sailed, or the port where the voyage terminates, all moneys belonging to or arising from the sale of the effects or paid as the wages of any deceased seamen or apprentices which have come to his hands; and shall render such accounts thereof as the circuit court requires. [R. S.]

Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 272.

This section was amended to read as above by the Act of March 3, 1879, ch. 389, sec. 4, 29 Stat. L. 689. The amendment consisted in striking out after the words "shall quarterly remit to the" the words "district judge for the district," appearing in the section as originally enacted, and substituting in place thereof the words "circuit court of the circuit," and by striking out, after the words "such accounts thereof as the," the words "district judge," appearing in the section as originally enacted, and substituting in place thereof the words "circuit court," so as to make the section read as given in the text.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

Sec. 4542. [Payment of wages in case of death within the United States.] Whenever any seaman or apprentice dies in the United States, and is, at the time of his death, entitled to claim from the master or owner of any vessel in which he has served, any unpaid wages or effects, such master or owner shall pay and deliver, or account for the same, to the shipping-commissioner at the port where the seaman or apprentice was discharged, or was to have been discharged or where he died. [R. S.]

Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 272.

This section was amended by the Act of March 3, 1897, ch. 389, sec. 6, 29 Stat. L. 689, "by adding thereto the words 'or where he died,' inserted in the section as above set out.

This section is made applicable to seamen "shipped by a shipping commissioner for any American vessel in the coastwise trade, or the trade between the United States and the Dominion of Canada, or New Foundland, or the West Indies, or Mexico," by the Act of Aug. 19, 1890, ch. 801, as amended by Acts of Feb. 18, 1895, ch. 97, and March 3, 1897, ch. 389, sec. 8, supra, p. 851.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

Sec. 4543. [Payment to circuit court.] Every shipping-commissioner in the United States shall, within one week from the date of receiving any such money, wages, or effects of any deceased seaman or apprentice, pay, remit, or deliver to the circuit court of the circuit in which he resides, the money, wages, or effects, subject to such deductions as may be allowed by the circuit court for expenses incurred in respect to such money and effects; and should any commissioner fail to pay, remit, and deliver the same to the circuit court, within the time hereinbefore mentioned, he shall incur a penalty of not more than treble the value of such money and effects. [R. S.]

Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 272.

This section is made applicable to seamen "shipped by a shipping commissioner for any American vessel in the coastwise trade, or the trade between the United States and the Dominion of Canada, or New Foundland, or the West Indies, or Mexico," by the Act of Aug. 19, 1890, ch. 801, as amended by Acts of Feb. 18, 1895, ch. 97, and March 3, 1897, ch. 389, sec. 8, supra, p. 851.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

Sec. 4544. [Distribution of seaman's money and effects by circuit court.] If the money and effects of any seaman or apprentice paid, remitted, or delivered to the circuit court, including the moneys received for any part of his effects which have been sold, either before delivery to the circuit court, or by its directions, do not exceed in value the sum of three hundred dollars, then, subject to the provisions hereinafter contained, and to all such deductions for expenses incurred in respect to the seaman or apprentice, or of his money and effects, as the said court thinks fit to allow, the court may pay and deliver the said money and effects to any claimants who can prove themselves either to be his widow or children, or to be entitled to the effects of the deceased under his will, or under any statute, or at common law, or to be entitled to procure probate, or take out letters of administration or confirmation, although no probate or letters of administration or confirmation have been taken out, and shall be thereby discharged from all further liability in respect of the money and effects so paid and delivered; or may, if it thinks fit so to do, require probate, or letters of administration or confirmation, to be taken out, and thereupon pay and deliver the said money and effects to the legal personal representatives of the deceased; and if such money and effects exceed in value the sum of three hundred dollars, then, subject to deduction for expenses, the court shall pay and deliver the same to the legal personal representatives of the deceased. [R. S.]

Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 272.

This section is made applicable to seamen "shipped by a shipping commissioner for any American vessel in the coastwise trade, or the trade between the United States and the Dominion of Canada, or New Foundland, or the West Indies, or Mexico," by the Act of Aug. 19, 1890, ch. 801, as amended by Acts of Feb. 18, 1895, ch. 97, and March 3, 1897, ch. 389, sec. 8, supra, p. 851.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

Sec. 4545. [Unclaimed wages and effects of deceased seamen.] A circuit court, in its discretion, may at any time direct the sale of the whole or any part of the effects of a deceased seaman or apprentice, which it has received or may hereafter receive, and shall hold the proceeds of such sale as the wages of deceased seamen are held. When no claim to the wages or effects or proceeds of the sale of the effects of a deceased seaman or apprentice, received by a circuit court, is substantiated within six years after the receipt thereof by the court, it shall be in the absolute discretion of the court, if any subsequent claim is made, either to allow or refuse the same. Such courts shall, from time to time, pay any moneys arising from the unclaimed wages and effects of deceased seamen, which in their opinion it is not necessary to retain for the purpose of satisfying claims, into the Treasury of the United States, and such moneys shall form a fund for, and be appropriated to, the relief of sick and disabled and destitute seamen belonging to the United States merchant marine service. [R. S.]

Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 273.

This section was amended to read as above by the Act of March 3, 1897, ch. 389, sec. 7, 29 Stat. L. 689. The amendment consists in the addition of all that part of the section preceding the words "When no claim to the wages," etc., and the addition of the words "or proceeds of the sale of the effects."

This section is made applicable to seamen "shipped by a shipping commissioner for any American vessel in the coastwise trade, or the trade between the United States and the Dominion of Canada, or New Foundland, or the West Indies, or Mexico," by the Act of Aug. 19, 1890, ch. 801, as amended by Acts of Feb. 18, 1895, ch. 97, and March 3, 1897, ch. 389, sec. 8, supra, p. 851.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

Sec. 4546. [Summons for nonpayment of wages.] Whenever the wages of any seaman are not paid within ten days after the time when the same ought to be paid according to the provisions of this Title, or any dispute arises between the master and seamen touching wages, the district judge for the judicial district where the vessel is, or in case his residence be more than three miles from the place, or he be absent from the place of his residence, then, any judge or justice of the peace, or any commissioner of a circuit court, may summon the master of such vessel to appear before him, to show cause why process should not issue against such vessel, her tackle, apparel, and furniture, according to the course of admiralty courts, to answer for the wages. [R. S.]

Act of July 20, 1790, ch. 29, 1 Stat. L. 133; Act of Aug. 23, 1842, ch. 188, 5 Stat. L. 517.

This section is made applicable to seamen "shipped by a shipping commissioner for any American vessel in the coastwise trade, or the trade between the United States and the Dominion of Canada, or New Foundland, or the West Indies, or Mexico," by the Act of Aug. 19, 1890, ch. 801, as amended by Acts of Feb. 18, 1895, ch. 97, and March 3, 1897, ch. 389, sec. 8, supra, p. 851.

See cases under following section.

Sec. 4547. [Libel for wages.] If the master against whom such summons is issued neglects to appear, or, appearing, does not show that the wages are paid or otherwise satisfied or forfeited, and if the matter in dispute is not forthwith settled, the judge or justice or commissioner shall certify to the clerk of the district court that there is sufficient cause of complaint whereon to found admiralty process; and thereupon the clerk of such court shall issue process against the vessel. In all cases where the matter in demand does not exceed one hundred dollars the return day of the monition or citation shall be the first day of a stated or special session of court next succeeding the third day after the service of the monition or citation, and on the return of process in open court, duly served, either party may proceed therein to proofs and hearing without other notice, and final judgment shall be given according to the usual course of admiralty courts in such cases. In such suits all the seamen having cause of complaint of the like kind against the same vessel may be joined as complainants, and it shall be incumbent on the master to produce the contract and log book, if required to ascertain any matter in dispute; otherwise the complainants shall be permitted to state the contents thereof, and the burden of proof of the contrary shall be on the master. But nothing herein contained shall prevent any seaman from maintaining any action at common law for the recovery of his wages, or having immediate process out of any court having admiralty jurisdiction wherever any vessel may be found, in case she shall have left the port of delivery where her voyage ended before payment of the wages, or in case she shall be about to proceed to sea before the end of the ten days next after the day when such wages are due, in accordance with section forty-five hundred and twenty-nine of the Revised Statutes. [R. S.]

Act of July 20, 1790, ch. 29, 1 Stat. L. 133; Act of Aug. 23, 1842, ch. 188, 5 Stat. L. 517.

This section was amended to read as above by the Act of Dec. 21, 1898, ch. 28, sec. 6, 30 Stat. L. 756. The amendment consists in inserting the words beginning, "In all cases where the matter in demand," etc., and ending with the words "hearing without other notice," in place of the words, "and the suit shall be proceeded on in the court," appearing in the section as originally enacted, and inserting near the end of the section, after the words, "ten days next after the," the words closing the section, in lieu of the words "delivery of her cargo or ballast" appearing in the section as originally enacted.

It is provided by section 26 of the amendatory Act that section 6 above set out "shall not apply to fishing or whaling vessels or yachts." See supra, p. 870.

This section is made applicable to seamen "shipped by a shipping commissioner for any American vessel in the coastwise trade, or the trade between the United States and the Dominion of Canada, or New Foundland, or the West Indies, or Mexico," by the Act of Aug. 19, 1890, ch. 801, as amended by Acts of Feb. 18, 1896, ch. 97, and March 3, 1897, ch. 389, sec. 8, supra, p. 851.

Scope of notes. — The cases for both sections 4546, 4547 are given hereunder.

To what vessels applicable. — The provisions of these sections with respect to the recovery of wages apply only to the classes of vessels enumerated in sec. 4520. The M. W. Wright, (1871) Brown Adm. 290, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 9,983.

Fishing vessels. — These provisions of the law are not applicable to vessels and their crews engaged on a fishing cruise, but are to be restricted to merchant ships and those employed thereon. The Grace Darling (1878) 2 Hask. (U. S.) 278, 10 Fed. Cas. No. 5,651.

Foreign vessels. — Under the treaty between the United States and the kingdom of Italy, stipulating that "consuls-general, consuls, vice-consuls, and consular agents shall have exclusive charge * * * and shall alone take cognizance of questions, of whatever kind, that may arise, both at sea and in port, between the captain, officers and seamen without exception, and especially of those relating to wages, and the fulfilment of agreements reciprocally made," a justice of the peace has no power under R. S. secs. 4546 and 4547 to compel the clerk to issue admiralty process against an Italian ship for the wages of a seaman thereon. The Salomoni, (1886) 29 Fed. Rep. 534.

Shares as wages. — Agreements by which seamen are to receive for their services a share of the profits of the voyage are not partnerships, but contracts of hiring, and the shares so agreed upon are wages, and are recoverable as such, and this is so whether the compensation is to be made in kind or in money. Reed v. Hussey, (1836) Blatchf. & H. Adm. 525, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,646.

To what remedy applicable. — The sections prescribing the time and manner in which seamen may prosecute suits for wages have reference to actions in rem only and not to actions in personam. The right of a seaman to sue in personam for his wages is perfect as soon as the period of his service is completed. If the seaman is discharged before the delivery of the cargo, his right to sue in personam for his wages is perfect from the time of his discharge. Freeman v. Baker, (1833) Blatchf. & H. Adm. 372, 9 Fed. Cas. No. 5,084.

The right of a seaman to his wages is perfect upon the completion of his service. Before Act of July 20, 1790, ch. 29, sec. 6, if payment was refused he could instantly have commenced a suit in personam against the owners or master, or in rem against the vessel or freight. The statute affects only one of these remedies, viz., that against the vessel. It does not touch suits in personam or against the freight. By the statute, as a general rule, no proceedings can be had against the vessel, until ten days after the right to wages has accrued. But there are three events in which such proceedings may be had within the ten days, viz., (1) if a dispute has arisen; (2) if the vessel has departed from the port of her discharge; (3) if she is about to proceed to sea. In the last two cases the statute is inoperative and the right to process is the same as if it had never been passed. The expiration of ten days, and a dispute having arisen, are by the Act made equivalent to each other; and upon the happening of either the proceeding by summons to the master is authorized, but not required. The Ship William Jarvis, (1859) 1 Sprague (U. S.) 485, 29 Fed. Cas. No. 17,697.

The remedy is cumulative and not exclusive, and notwithstanding these provisions the courts of admiralty remain open to seamen for the usual process in rem against the vessel whenever they prefer to pursue that course. The Frank C. Barker, (1884) 19 Fed. Rep. 332; Murray v. Ferry-Boat F. B. Nimick, (1880) 2 Fed. Rep. 88; The Ship William Jarvis, (1859) 1 Sprague (U. S.) 485; The M. W. Wright, (1871) Brown's Adm. 290; The Waverly, (1877) 7 Biss. (U. S.) 465; The Schooner Edwin Post, (1881) 6 Fed. Rep. 206; The Shelbourne, (1887) 30 Fed. Rep. 510.

Time to sue.—A stipulation in the articles that the seamen shall not in any case demand their wages until the expiration of a certain time, is void in case the service is completed or the seamen are discharged before the expiration of that time. The Cypress, (1829) 1 Blatchf. & H. Adm. 83, 6 Fed. Cas. No. 3,530.

A seaman who hires for a trading voyage for a specified time, cannot sue for wages until the expiration of the time unless there be proof of his actual or constructive release. The Warrington, (1832) Blatchf. & H. Adm. 335, 29 Fed. Cas. No. 17,208.

The ten days' exemption from arrest.—"The language of section 4546 is somewhat different from that in section 6 of the Act of 1790 (1 Stat. L. 133), and may require a different construction; as by the latter process might issue, if the wages were not paid within ten days after the discharge of the cargo; while by section 4546, process could issue, if the wages are not paid within ten days after the time when the same ought to be paid according to the provisions of the statute." Fox, D. J., in The Grace Darling, (1878) 2 Hask. (U. S.) 278, 10 Fed. Cas. No. 5,651.

After service complete.—In The Mary, (1838) 1 Ware (U. S.) 465, 16 Fed. Cas. No. 9,191, it was held that the ten days "begin to run from the time when the wages become due, that is, from the day when the term of service is completed." The Annie M. Smull, (1872) 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 226, 1 Fed. Cas. No. 423.

After discharge of cargo.—Under the Act of July 20, 1790, the seaman could not sue until ten days after the discharge of the cargo had elapsed, unless there was a dispute between the master and mariners touching the wages. The Schooner Eagle, (1846) Olc. Adm. 232, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,233. Or unless she was about to proceed to sea before expiration of the ten days. The Cypress, (1829) 1 Blatchf. & H. Adm. 83, 6 Fed. Cas. No. 3,530.

Premature suits.—A suit brought to recover wages before the time allowed by Act of 1790, sec. 6, has elapsed is prematurely brought and will be dismissed. The Schooner David Faust, (1867) 1 Ben. (U. S.) 183, 7 Fed. Cas. No. 3,595.

Fifteen days will be taken as a reasonable time for a vessel to unload in ordinary cases, and where, for wages due on the delivery of the cargo, a vessel was arrested on the fourteenth day after she was moored, in her port of discharge, the suit was dismissed as prematurely brought. The Martha, (1830) Blatchf. & H. Adm. 151, 16 Fed. Cas. No. 9,144.

Where suit had been brought against a vessel by summons or citation before the ten days had expired, and the master of the vessel had neglected to appear upon such summons and show cause, and proceedings were taken by default against the vessel, it was held, that the claimants were not bound to answer in bar of the suit, and that it had been prematurely brought. Hill v. The Triumph, (1841) 12 Fed. Cas. No. 6,500.

There is no distinction, as to what is necessary to constitute the delivery of a cargo, where it is owned by a freighter, and where both ship and cargo belong to the same person. The Martha, (1830) Blatchf. & H. Adm. 151, 16 Fed. Cas. No. 9,144.

Exceptions.—"While this statute furnishes the seaman a simple and cost-saving mode of recovering his wages, if they are not paid within ten days after the time when the same ought to be paid, or if any dispute has arisen between the master and seaman touching wages before the expiration of ten days, it does not prevent him from maintaining an action at common law for the recovery of his wages, or having immediate process out of any court having admiralty jurisdiction wherever the vessel may be found, in case she shall have left the port of delivery, where her voyage ended, before payment of the wages, or in case she shall be about to proceed to sea before the end of ten days next after the delivery of her cargo or ballast, or in case his wages have not been paid within ten days after the time when the same ought to have been paid." The Shelbourne, (1887) 30 Fed. Rep. 510.

Vessel about to proceed.—Under Act of July 20, 1790, sec. 6, in order that admiralty process might issue within ten days after the arrival of the vessel it was sufficient to show a reasonable ground of belief that the vessel was about to proceed to sea within the ten days. The Trial, (1830) Blatchf. & H. Adm. 94, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,170.

Dispute as to wages.—A demand of wages and a refusal by the owner to pay till after ten days, do not constitute a dispute, within the statute, so as to authorize process in rem before the expiration of the ten days. The Commerce, (1842) 1 Sprague (U. S.) 34, 6 Fed. Cas. No. 3,054.

Allegations as to exceptions.—The complaint made by the crew must show that ten days have elapsed after the time when the wages ought to have been paid, or that a dispute has arisen between the master and seamen touching their wages. The Rockie E. Yates, (1880) 2 Hask. (U. S.) 430, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,980a.

Discharge without pay.—In the case of The Schooner David Faust, (1867) 1 Ben. (U. S.) 183, 7 Fed. Cas. No. 3,595, it was said by Blatchford, J.: "It has always been held in this court that where a seaman is discharged from a vessel, after her arrival, either arbitrarily or with his assent, the discharge terminates the contract, and the provision for ten days' delay after delivery of the cargo is released, and the seaman may proceed at once for his wages. The shipmaster or ship-owner may waive the statutory provision in regard to the ten days' delay, and is held to have done so in case he discharges a seaman without paying him his wages."

"It is very questionable whether a delay of ten days can be exacted, where a seaman is absolutely discharged from the vessel. That terminates the contract and takes away his claim for a continuance of wages, and it would seem but a just reciprocity to hold that the ship's term of credit is expired when by the act of the master the seamen can no longer charge her with wages." The Cypress, (1829) Blatchf. & H. Adm. 83, 6 Fed. Cas. No. 3,530.

Where seamen are discharged without any payment of wages, and no cause is assigned for the failure to pay them the amount of wages then payable, and there is no dispute as to the balance then due, they may recover double pay for ten days, although their libel is filed within such time. The right to double pay does not terminate by the commencement of an action to recover the wages earned. The Steamship Columbia, (1873) 6 Ben. (U. S.) 398, 6 Fed. Cas. No. 3,034.

Suits in personam.—The statute which precludes a seaman from having admiralty process for his wages against the vessel until ten days after the discharge of the cargo, does not affect his right to proceed in personam. The Commerce, (1842) 1 Sprague (U. S.) 34, 6 Fed. Cas. No. 3,054; Freeman v. Baker, (1833) Blatchf. & H. Adm. 372, 9 Fed. Cas. No. 5,084.

Waiver.—The ten days' exemption from arrest of a ship is waived by appearance, claim, and answer without protest, after that time has elapsed. The Grace Darling, (1878) 2 Hask. (U. S.) 278, 10 Fed. Cas. No. 5,651.

Where, in a suit in rem for wages, an answer is filed to the merits and issue is joined, and the case is brought to a hearing, and proofs are taken on both sides, that is a waiver by the claimant of any right of exception to the regularity of the proceedings of the libellant as to the time of instituting his suit. The Edward, (1832) Blatchf. & H. Adm. 286, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,289.

Procedure on issue of process.—Section 4547 does not require the filing of any depositions; indeed, does not require the taking of any depositions. The commissioner is authorized to make inquiry, and in his discretion to send up the certificate. His discretion is absolute and no one has a right to question it. Therefore, he need not send up any testimony, and cannot charge for it. Kelly v. The Topsy, (1891) 45 Fed. Rep. 486.

Certificate for process.—The court will not look beyond the certificate of the officer for the authority of the clerk to issue the process prescribed, and when such certificate is issued by a United States commissioner, it must show on its face that the commissioner had authority to act; and where such certificate does not state the residence of the judge of the district to be more than three miles from the place, or that he was absent from his residence at the time the proceedings were instituted, the writ will be set aside. Kief v. The Steamboat London, (1852) Newb. Adm. 6; (1854) 6 McLean (U. S.) 184, 14 Fed. Cas. No. 7,759.

"The commissioner is bound to inform himself of the absence of the judge from his place of residence, but the court will not go behind his certificate in that matter. . . . This being the action of a United States official, the maxim omnia presumuntur esse acta rite should apply to his action." The Schooner Jefferson Borden, (1881) 6 Fed. Rep. 301.

Stay of proceedings.—It is questionable whether an appeal to the judge lies from an order of a commissioner or justice of the peace granting certificates of cause for admiralty process under the Act of 1790. But the judge or court may stay proceedings or act upon the petition de novo. The Schooner Eagle, (1846) Olc. Adm. 232, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,233.

Issue of process.—In the absence of the judge the clerk may issue process according to rules prescribed or instructions given by the judge. The Ship William Jarvis, (1859) 1 Sprague (U. S.) 485, 29 Fed. Cas. No. 17,697.

Who may hear case.—While by the terms of the Act of Congress the district judge of the United States for the judicial district where the vessel is, is primarily charged with the duty of hearing these cases, if his residence be within three miles from the place where the vessel is; yet if he be absent from his place of residence, jurisdiction is without doubt given by the Act of Congress to any commissioner of the Circuit Court in the district to hear and dispose of the case in the manner pointed out by law. The Schooner Jefferson Borden, (1881) 6 Fed. Rep. 301.

Process.—A warrant of arrest on a libel filed for seamen's wages, issued by the clerk, without compliance with the statute, is void. The Berkeley, (1893) 58 Fed. Rep. 921.

Appearance and defense.—The master has a right to appear by attorney and establish a defense to the seamen's claims if he can. The Rockie E. Yates, (1880) 2 Hask. (U. S.) 430, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,980a.

Although in an action in rem for wages, a warrant is issued under a certificate of sufficient cause of complaint for admiralty process, conformably to the statute, yet the owner of the vessel may intervene by answer and bar the action by proving that the libellant had no right to sue. The Warrington, (1832) Blatchf. & H. Adm. 335, 29 Fed. Cas. No. 17,208.

Hearing.—The vessel against which the process is sought must be within the district at the time of the hearing before the justice. The Rockie E. Yates, (1880) 2 Hask. (U. S.) 430, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,980a.

Offset.—A valid claim of a seaman for wages may not be defeated by offsetting against it a debt of the seaman assigned to the master of the vessel personally. The Journeyman, (1894) 60 Fed. Rep. 295.

Running of wages.—The filing of a libel for wages is an election to treat the contract as at an end, and the seamen are not entitled to wages while the vessel is in the marshal's custody under their claim and during which time they render no services. The Chas. L. Baylis, (1885) 25 Fed. Rep. 863.

Personal liability for wages.—The master is personally liable for the wages of seamen shipped by him, which accrued while he was in command. Temple v. Turner, (1877) 123 Mass. 128.

The master is personally responsible for wages of a seaman earned while under his command, though the seaman was employed by a former master. Smith v. Oakes, (1886) 141 Mass. 454.

Part payments.—Payments to a seaman are properly applied to the earliest wages earned, though under a prior master. Smith v. Oakes, (1886) 141 Mass. 451.

Joinder of parties.—Under the section prior to the amendment, seamen having the same cause of complaint were compelled to join. Kelly v. The Topsy, (1891) 45 Fed. Rep. 486.

In a suit by a seaman for wages the court cannot compel the joinder of other seamen as libelants who have not brought suit. Nelson v. The Hercules, (1841) 4 Law Rep. 22, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 10,108.

The practice of the court, in conformity with the spirit of the statute, is to allow any of the members of a crew to come in on summary petition and enjoy the advantages of a prosecution instituted by a shipmate to recover the wages of a common voyage. If the Act is not to be construed as imperative, and as compelling the union of all the mariners in one suit, to recover the wages of the same voyage, it, at all events, removes every occasion for different actions and takes away all equity to costs when different actions are instituted. Reed v. Hussey, (1836) Blatchf. & H. Adm. 525, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,646.

Where the vessel is liable to two libelants for wages, for which, under the practice of the court in respect to the consolidation of suits, they may be compelled to sue in common, they may join in one action in rem, not only in suing for the common demands, but also in respect to other claims which are peculiar to each. The Sloop Merchant, (1847) Abb. Adm. 1, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 9,434.

Libel.—It is not necessary to annex to a libel for wages an account stating the rate of wages and the precise balance due. It is sufficient if the contract is stated and the service alleged in proper form. If the libelant sets forth a particular balance as due, and it appears by the proofs that a larger sum is due, the court is not limited to the precise amount claimed in the libel. Under a prayer for further relief a larger sum may be decreed if justice requires it. Pratt v. Thomas, (1837) 1 Ware (U. S.) 437, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,377.

Evidence.—The statement of the seaman is incompetent evidence to prove services rendered by him on board the vessel under the shipping articles. The Brig Osceola, (1846) Olc. Adm. 450, 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,602.

Of agreement.—In a suit upon shipping articles, by a seaman to recover wages for a voyage, if the articles are not produced by the master or owner at the trial, after due requirement by the seaman, his statement of the contents thereof, when disputed, will be prima facie evidence of the same. The Brig Osceola, (1846) Olc. Adm. 450, 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,602.

The right of a seaman to his wages depends on the service and not on the shipping articles, and he is not obliged to call for them in order to establish his claim to wages, though he may do so. The Trial, (1830) Blatchf. & H. Adm. 94, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,170.

Call for articles.—But a call for the articles at the time of trial is not a sufficient requirement unless it be made to appear they are then in the presence of the court, or directly within the control of the master or owner. The Brig Osceola, (1846) Olc. Adm. 450, 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,602.

Where a seaman shipped under articles at Boston in December, 1842, and at New Orleans in March, 1843, and left the ship at Bordeaux in June, 1843, and in his libel filed against the vessel in court for wages on those voyages he prayed that the shipping articles might be produced by the master or owner, it was held that this was not such notice or requirement as would render his statement proof of their contents. The Brig Osceola, (1846) Olc. Adm. 450, 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,602.

Contradicting evidence.—The claimants on proving a reasonable excuse for not producing the shipping articles on trial, may contradict by parol evidence the statement of their contents by the mariner. The Brig Osceola, (1846) Olc. Adm. 450, 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,602.

Interest.—In a suit for wages, interest is allowed from the time of a demand proved; and if no such demand is proved, from the commencement of the suit. Gammell v. Skinner, (1814) 2 Gall. (U. S.) 45, 9 Fed. Cas. No. 5,210.

In actions for seamen's wages, interest will as a general rule be allowed from the time the wages were due, until a tender or payment under the decree of the court. Interest will be allowed only upon regular wages, and not upon extra wages recovered by way of compensation for short allowance. The Elizabeth Frith, (1831) Blatchf. & H. Adm. 195, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,361.

Costs.—When two libels are filed where one only is required, costs only in one are allowed. The R. P. Chase, (1861) 3 Ware (U. S.) 294, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 12,099.

Lien for wages.—See notes under R. S. sec. 4535, supra, p. 873.

Time when wages due.—See notes under R. S. sec. 4530, supra, p. 867.

Sec. 4548. [Wages payable in gold.] Moneys paid under the laws of the United States, by direction of consular officers or agents, at any foreign port or place, as wages, extra or otherwise, due American seamen, shall be paid in gold or its equivalent, without any deduction whatever, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. [R. S.]

Act of March 3, 1873, ch. 265, 17 Stat. L. 602.

[IV. DISCHARGE.]

Sec. 4549. [Mode of discharge.] All seamen discharged in the United States from merchant vessels engaged in voyages from a port in the United States to any foreign port, or, being of the burden of seventy-five tons or upward, from a port on the Atlantic to a port on the Pacific, or vice versa, shall be discharged and receive their wages in the presence of a duly authorized shipping-commissioner under this Title, except in cases where some competent court otherwise directs; and any master or owner of any such vessel who discharges any such seaman belonging thereto, or pays his wages within the United States in any other manner, shall be liable to a penalty of not more than fifty dollars. [R. S.]

This section is made applicable to seamen "shipped by a shipping commissioner for any American vessel in the coastwise trade, or the trade between the United States and the Dominion of Canada, or New Foundland, or the West Indies, or Mexico," by the Act of Aug. 19, 1890, ch. 801, as amended by Acts of Feb. 18, 1895, ch. 97, and March 3, 1897, ch. 389, sec. 8. supra, p. 851.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

Forcible abandonment of officer or mariner in foreign port. See SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION.

To what voyages applicable. — For a voyage between the United States and the West Indies the crew may be paid off by the master elsewhere than in the presence of the shipping commissioner other than himself. The Bark Brothers, (1879) 10 Ben. (U. S.) 400, 4 Fed. Cas. No. 1,968; U. S. v. French, (1881) 9 Fed. Rep. 369.

Effect of R. S. sec. 4504. — Section 4504 makes a master or owner of a vessel bound on certain voyages a duly authorized shipping commissioner within the meaning of section 4549. The Bark Brothers, (1879) 10 Ben. (U. S.) 400, 4 Fed. Cas. No. 1,968.

If the master himself may not be regarded in certain cases as a duly authorized shipping commissioner in the terms of the section, there can be no doubt that the section is to be qualified by the language of section 4504, which expressly declares that nothing in this title shall prevent the owner, consignee, or master of any vessel, except vessels bound from a port in the United States to any foreign port, other than vessels engaged in trade between the United States and the British North American possessions, or the West India Islands, or the republic of Mexico, etc., from performing himself, so far as his vessel is concerned, the duties of shipping commissioner. This language expressly applies to the whole title, and, of course, to section 4549, which is a part of it. U. S. v. French, (1881) 9 Fed. Rep. 369.

Settlement and release. — See notes under R. S. sec. 4552, infra.

Sec. 4550. [Account on discharge.] Every master shall, not less than forty-eight hours before paying off or discharging any seaman, deliver to him, or, if he is to be discharged before a shipping-commissioner, to such shipping-commissioner, a full and true account of his wages, and all deductions to be made therefrom on any account whatsoever; and in default shall, for each offense, be liable to a penalty of not more than fifty dollars. No deduction from the wages of any seaman except in respect of some matter happening after such delivery shall be allowed, unless it is included in the account delivered; and the master shall, during the voyage, enter the various matters in respect to which such deductions are made, with the amounts of the respective deductions as they occur, in the official log-book, and shall, if required, produce such book at the time of the payment of wages, and, also, upon the hearing, before any competent authority, of any complaint or question relating to such payment. [R. S.]

Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 267.

This section is made applicable to seamen "shipped by a shipping commissioner for any American vessel in the coastwise trade, or the trade between the United States and the Dominion of Canada, or New Foundland, or the West Indies, or Mexico," by the Act of Aug. 19, 1890, ch. 801, as amended by Acts of Feb. 18, 1895, ch. 97, and March 3, 1897, ch. 389, sec. 8. supra, p. 851.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

Statements and entries. — The provisions of this section requiring a statement of the wages of the crew to be made by the master to the shipping commissioner at the end of the voyage, and all deductions to be entered in the log, do not prevent the court, in a suit for wages, from adjudicating upon the amount due according to the facts proven, although such statement and such entries were not made. The Bark T. F. Whiton, (1879) 10 Ben. (U. S.) 369, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,849.

Deductions. — The provisions of this section are inapplicable to cases embraced within the provisions of R. S. sec. 4604. The "deductions" referred to are deductions to be made from the wages to be paid, such as advances, money furnished during the voyage, supplies from the slop-chest, etc. The expenses occasioned by a desertion are not treated by the Act as "deductions" to be allowed the master. They are charges to the payment of which the wages forfeited are "in the first instance to be applied," and the "balance" only to be paid to the commissioner. The practical effect is, of course, the same by whatever term we characterize them. But the language of the section becomes significant when the question arises whether the "expenses" mentioned in the fifty-fifth section are embraced within the "deduction" spoken of in the twenty-third section of the Act of June 7, 1872. Stevenson v. Hamilton, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,415.

Sec. 4551. [Certificate of discharge.] Upon the discharge of any seaman, or upon payment of his wages, the master shall sign and give him a certificate of discharge, specifying the period of his service and the time and place of his discharge, in the form marked Table B in the schedule annexed to this Title; and every master who fails to sign and give to such seaman such certificate and discharge, shall, for each such offense, incur a penalty not exceeding fifty dollars. But whenever the master shall discharge his crew or any part thereof in any collection-district where no shipping-commissioner has been appointed, he may perform for himself the duties of such commissioner. [R. S.]

Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 267.

This section is made applicable to seamen "shipped by a shipping commissioner for any American vessel in the coastwise trade, or the trade between the United States and the Dominion of Canada, or New Foundland, or the West Indies, or Mexico," by the Act of Aug. 19, 1890, ch. 801, as amended by Acts of Feb. 18, 1895, ch. 97, and March 3, 1897, ch. 389, sec. 8. supra, p. 851.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

Sec. 4552. [Rules for settlement.] The following rules shall be observed with respect to the settlement of wages:

First. Upon the completion, before a shipping-commissioner, of any discharge and settlement, the master or owner and each seaman, respectively, in the presence of the shipping-commissioner, shall sign a mutual release of all claims for wages in respect of the past voyage or engagement, and the shipping-commissioner shall also sign and attest it, and shall retain it in a book to be kept for that purpose, provided both the master and seamen assent to such settlement, or the settlement has been adjusted by the shipping-commissioner.

Second. Such release, so signed and attested, shall operate as a mutual discharge and settlement of all demands for wages between the parties thereto, on account of wages, in respect of the past voyage or engagement.

Third. A copy of such release, certified under the hand and seal of such shipping-commissioner to be a true copy, shall be given by him to any party thereto requiring the same, and such copy shall be receivable in evidence upon any future question touching such claims, and shall have all the effect of the original of which it purports to be a copy.

Fourth. In cases in which discharge and settlement before a shipping-commissioner are required, no payment, receipt, settlement, or discharge otherwise made shall operate as evidence of the release or satisfaction of any claim.

Fifth. Upon payment being made by a master before a shipping-commissioner, the shipping-commissioner shall, if required, sign and give to such master a statement of the whole amount so paid; and such statement shall, between the master and his employer, be received as evidence that he has made the payments therein mentioned. [R. S.]

Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 267.

This section is made applicable to seamen "shipped by a shipping commissioner for any American vessel in the coastwise trade, or the trade between the United States and the Dominion of Canada, or New Foundland, or the West Indies, or Mexico," by the Act of Aug. 19, 1890, ch. 801, as amended by Acts of Feb. 18, 1895, ch. 97, and March 3, 1897, ch. 389, sec. 8. supra, p. 851.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

To what services applicable. — This section is intended to relate only to merchant seamen, and a contract to go as seaman between San Francisco and Pyramid Harbor, Alaska, and to work at the latter place during the season of that year as a fisherman, "or in any other capacity," is not, strictly speaking, such a contract as is contemplated by this section, and a settlement and release as provided therein is not necessarily binding. The Domenico v. Alaska Packers' Assoc., (1901) 112 Fed. Rep. 560.

Appearance before commissioner. — It is not necessary that the master and seaman appear before the shipping commissioner at the same time. A proposition of settlement may be left with the commissioner by the party making it, to be accepted or rejected by the other party when he appears before that officer, and a settlement and release made in that manner may be good. Petterson v. Empire Transp. Co., (C. C. A. 1901) 111 Fed. Rep. 931; The Pennsylvania, (1899) 98 Fed. Rep. 744.

Release conclusive. — A release properly executed and attested under the provisions of sections 4549 and 4552, in the absence of fraud or coercion, is conclusive on all parties. Petterson v. Empire Transp. Co., (C. C. A. 1901) 111 Fed. Rep. 931.

While the courts regard seamen as wards of the admiralty and protect them from unfair treatment, notwithstanding their own improvidence in signing away their rights, still seamen are recognized as men, and agreements which they make deliberately, intelligently, and voluntarily are to be enforced in their favor, and they are to be bound thereby the same as other competent parties to lawful contracts. The Charles D. Lane, (1901) 106 Fed. Rep. 746.

Not under seal. — The mutual release of wages by master and seaman before a shipping commissioner need not be under seal, and is conclusive if executed and attested as required, without fraud or coercion. Rosenberg v. Doe, (1888) 146 Mass. 193.

Sec. 4553. [Certificate of character.] Upon every discharge effected before a shipping-commissioner, the master shall make and sign, in the form given in the table marked "B," in the schedule annexed to this Title, a report of the conduct, character, and qualifications of the persons discharged; or may state in such form, that he declines to give any opinion upon such particulars, or upon any of them; and the commissioner shall keep a register of the same, and shall, if desired so to do by any seaman, give to him or indorse on his certificate of discharge a copy of so much of such report as concerns him. [R. S.]

This section is made applicable to seamen "shipped by a shipping commissioner for any American vessel in the coastwise trade, or the trade between the United States and the Dominion of Canada, or New Foundland, or the West Indies, or Mexico," by the Act of Aug. 19, 1890, ch. 801, as amended by Acts of Feb. 18, 1895, ch. 97, and March 3, 1897, ch. 389, sec. 8, supra, p. 851.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

[V. PROTECTION AND RELIEF.]

Sec. 4554. [Commissioner to act as arbiter.] Every shipping-commissioner shall hear and decide any question whatsoever between a master, consignee, agent, or owner, and any of his crew, which both parties agree in writing to submit to him; and every award so made by him shall be binding on both parties, and shall, in any legal proceedings which may be taken in the matter, before any court of justice, be deemed to be conclusive as to the rights of parties. And any document under the hand and official seal of a commissioner purporting to be such submission or award, shall be prima facie evidence thereof. [R. S.]

Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 267.

This section is made applicable to seamen "shipped by a shipping commissioner for any American vessel in the coastwise trade, or the trade between the United States and the Dominion of Canada, or New Foundland, or the West Indies, or Mexico," by the Act of Aug. 19, 1890, ch. 801, as amended by Acts of

Feb. 18, 1895, ch. 97, and March 3, 1897, ch. 389, sec. 8, supra, p. 851.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

"An award by the shipping commissioner is not binding upon the parties unless made by authority of a submission in writing." The W. F. Babcock, (1898) 85 Fed. Rep. 978.

Sec. 4555. [Examination of witnesses.] In any proceeding relating to the wages, claims, or discharge of a seaman, carried on before any shipping-commissioner, under the provisions of this Title, such shipping-commissioner may call upon the owner, or his agent, or upon the master, or any mate, or any other member of the crew, to produce any log-books, papers, or other documents in their possession or power, respectively, relating to any matter in question in such proceedings, and may call before him and examine any of such persons, being then at or near the place, on any such matter; and every owner, agent, master, mate, or other member of the crew who, when called upon by the shipping-commissioner, does not produce any such books, papers, or documents, if in his possession or power, or does not appear and give evidence, shall, unless he shows some reasonable cause for such default, be liable to a penalty of not more than one hundred dollars for each offense; and, on application made by the shipping-commissioner, shall be further punished, in the discretion of the court, as in other cases of contempt of the process of the court. [R. S.]

Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 267.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch.

260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

Sec. 4556. [Complaint that vessel is unseaworthy.] If the first and second officers under the master or a majority of the crew of any vessel bound on any voyage shall, before the vessel shall have left the harbor, discover that the vessel is too leaky or is otherwise unfit in her crew, body, tackle, apparel, furniture, provisions, or stores to proceed on the intended voyage, and shall require such unfitness to be inquired into, the master shall, upon the request of the first and second officers under the master or such majority of the crew, forthwith apply to the judge of the district court of that judicial district, if he shall there reside, or if not, to some justice of the peace of the city, town, or place for the appointment of surveyors, as in section forty-five hundred and fifty-seven provided, taking with him two or more of the crew who shall have made such request; and any master refusing or neglecting to comply with these provisions shall be liable to a penalty of five hundred dollars. [R. S.]

This section was amended "so as to read as" above by the Act of Dec. 21, 1898, ch. 28, sec. 7, 30 Stat. L. 757.

The section originally read as follows:

"SEC. 4556. If the mate or first officer under the master, and a majority of the crew of any vessel, bound on a voyage to any foreign port, shall, after the voyage is begun, and before the vessel shall have left the land, discover that the vessel is too leaky, or is otherwise unfit in her crew, body, tackle, apparel, furniture, provisions, or stores, to proceed on the intended voyage, and shall require such unfitness to be inquired into, the master shall, upon the request of the mate or other officer and such majority, forthwith proceed to or stop at the nearest or most convenient port or place where such inquiry can be made, and shall there apply to the judge of the district court of that judicial district, if he shall there reside, or if not, to some justice of the peace of the city, town, or place, taking with him two or more of the crew who shall have made such request." Act of July 20, 1790, ch. 29, 1 Stat. L. 132.

It is provided by section 26 of the amending Act that section 7 "shall not apply to fishing or whaling vessels or yachts." See supra, p. 870.

Right to leave unseaworthy ship.—The seamen are not authorized to determine the question as to the seaworthiness of the ship, and they cannot be relieved from their obligation to perform their contract under the shipping articles which they have signed on the ground of unseaworthiness. If they in good faith believe that it is unsafe for the ship to go to sea, they may demand a survey, which, if fairly made by competent persons, will be treated by the court as conclusive for the purpose of determining whether the men should or should not be discharged before the completion of the voyage. The C. F. Sargent, (1899) 95 Fed. Rep. 180.

See further notes under R. S. secs. 5359, 5360, infra, div. VII.

Sec. 4557. [Proceedings upon examination of vessel.] The judge, or justice, in a domestic port, shall, upon such application of the master or commander, issue his precept, directed to three persons in the neighborhood, the most experienced and skillful in maritime affairs that can be procured; and whenever such complaint is about the provisions one of such surveyors shall be a physician or a surgeon of the Marine Hospital Service, if such service is established at the place where the complaint is made. It shall be the duty of such surveyors to repair on board such vessel and to examine the same in respect to the defects and insufficiencies complained of, and make reports to the judge, or justice, as the case may be, in writing, under their hands or the hands of two of them, whether in any or in what respect the vessel is unfit to proceed on the intended voyage, and what addition of men, provisions, or stores, or what repairs or alterations in the body, tackle, or apparel will be necessary; and upon such report the judge or justice shall adjudge and shall indorse on his report his judgment whether the vessel is fit to proceed on the intended voyage, and, if not, whether such repairs can be made or deficiencies supplied where the vessel then lies, or whether it is necessary for her to proceed to the nearest or most convenient place where such supplies can be made or deficiencies supplied; and the master and the crew shall, in all things, conform to the judgment. The master or commander shall, in the first instance, pay all the cost of such review, report, or judgment, to be taxed and allowed on a fair copy thereof, certified by the judge or justice. But if the complaint of the crew shall appear upon the report and judgment to have been without foundation, the master or commander, or the owner or consignee of such vessel, shall deduct the amount thereof, and of reasonable damages for the detention, to be ascertained by the judge or justice, out of the wages of the complaining seamen. [R. S.]

This section was amended "to read as" above by the Act of Dec. 21, 1898, ch. 28, sec. 8, 30 Stat. L. 757.

The section originally read as follows:

"SEC. 4557. The judge or justice shall, upon such application of the master or commander, issue his precept directed to three persons in the neighborhood, the most skillful in maritime affairs that can be procured, requiring them to repair on board such vessel, and to examine the same in respect to the defects and insufficiencies complained of, and to make report to him. the judge or justice, as the case may be, in writing under their hands, or the hands of two of them, whether in any or in what respect the vessel is unfit to proceed on the intended voyage, and what addition of men, provisions, or stores, or what repairs or alterations in the body, tackle, or apparel will be necessary; and upon such report the judge or justice shall adjudge, and shall indorse on the report his judgment, whether the vessel is fit to proceed on the intended voyage; and if not, whether such repairs can be made or deficiencies supplied where the vessel then lies, or whether it is necessary for her to return to the port from whence she first sailed, to be there refitted; and the master and crew shall in all things conform to the judgment. The master or commander shall, in the first instance, pay all the costs of such view, report, and judgment, to be taxed and allowed on a fair copy thereof, certified by the judge or justice.

But if the complaint of the crew shall appear, upon the report and judgment, to have been without foundation, the master or commander, or the owner or consignee of such vessel, shall deduct the amount thereof, and of reasonable damages for the detention, to be ascertained by the judge or justice, out of the wages growing due to the complaining seamen." Act of July 20, 1790, ch. 29, 1 Stat. L. 132.

It is provided by section 26 of the amending Act that section 8, set out above, "shall not apply to fishing or whaling vessels or yachts." See supra, p. 870.

Sec. 4558. [Penalty for refusal to proceed when vessel found seaworthy.] If, after judgment that such vessel is fit to proceed on her intended voyage, or after procuring such men, provisions, stores, repairs, or alterations as may be directed, the seamen, or either of them, shall refuse to proceed on the voyage, he shall forfeit any wages that may be due him. [R. S.]

This section was amended "to read as" above by the Act of Dec. 21, 1898, ch. 28, sec. 9, 30 Stat. L. 757.

The section originally read as follows:

"SEC. 4558. If after judgment that such vessel is fit to proceed on her intended voyage, or after procuring such men, provisions, stores, repairs, or alterations as may be directed, the seamen, or either of them, shall refuse to proceed on the voyage, it shall be lawful for any justice of the peace to commit, by warrant under his hand and seal, every such seaman who refuses to the common jail of the county, there to remain without bail or mainprise until he has paid double the sum advanced to him at the time of subscribing the contract for the voyage, together with such reasonable costs as are allowed by the justice, and inserted in the warrant; and the sureties of such seaman, in case he has given any, shall remain liable for such payment; nor shall any such seaman be discharged upon any writ of habeas corpus or otherwise, for want of any form of commitment, or other previous proceedings, until such sum is paid by him or his surety, if sufficient matter be made to appear, upon the return of such habeas corpus, and an examination then had, to detain him for the causes hereinbefore assigned." Act of July 20, 1790, ch. 29, 1 Stat. L. 132.

It is provided by section 26 of the amending Act that section 9, above set out, "shall not apply to fishing or whaling vessels or yachts." See supra, p. 870.

Sec. 4559. [Appointment of inspectors by consul in foreign port.] Upon a complaint in writing, signed by the first or second officer and a majority of the crew of any vessel while in a foreign port, that such vessel is in an unsuitable condition to go to sea because she is leaky or insufficiently supplied with sails, rigging, anchors, or any other equipment, or that the crew is insufficient to man her, or that her provisions, stores, and supplies are not, or have not been during the voyage, sufficient and wholesome; thereupon, in any of these or like cases, the consul, or a commercial agent who may discharge any duties of a consul, shall cause to be appointed three persons, of like qualifications with those described in section forty-five hundred and fifty-seven, who shall proceed to examine into the causes of complaint, and they shall be governed in all their proceedings and proceed as provided in section forty-five hundred and fifty-seven. [R. S.]

This section was amended "to read as" above by the Act of Dec. 21, 1898, ch. 28, sec. 10, 30 Stat. L. 757.

The section originally read as follows:

"SEC. 4559. Upon a complaint in writing, signed by the first, or the second and third officers and a majority of the crew, of any vessel while in a foreign port, that such vessel is in an unsuitable condition to go to sea, because she is leaky, or insufficiently supplied with sails, rigging, anchors, or any other equipment, or that the crew is insufficient to man her, or that her provisions, stores, and supplies are not, or have not been, during the voyage, sufficient and wholesome, thereupon, in any of these or like cases, the consul or a commercial agent who may discharge any duties of a consul, shall appoint two disinterested, competent, practical men, acquainted with maritime affairs, to examine into the causes of complaint, who shall, in their report, state what defects and deficiencies, if any, they find to be well founded, as well as what, in their judgment, ought to be done to put the vessel in order for the continuance of her voyage." Act of July 20, 1840, ch. 48, 5 Stat. L. 396; Act of July 29, 1850, ch. 27, 9 Stat. L. 441.

It is provided by section 26 of the amending Act that section 10, above set out, "shall not apply to fishing or whaling vessels or yachts." See supra, p. 870.

Sec. 4560. [Report of inspectors.] The inspectors appointed by any consul or commercial agent, in pursuance of the preceding section, shall have full power to examine the vessel and whatever is aboard of her, so far as is pertinent to their inquiry, and also to hear and receive any other proofs which the ends of justice may require; and if, upon a view of the whole proceedings, the consul or other commercial agent is satisfied therewith, he may approve the whole or any part of the report, and shall certify such approval; or if he dissents, he shall certify his reasons for dissenting. [R. S.]

Act of July 20, 1840, ch. 48, 5 Stat. L. 396.

Sec. 4561. [Discharge of seamen on account of unseaworthiness of vessel — penalty for sending unseaworthy ship to sea.] The inspectors in their report shall also state whether in their opinion the vessel was sent to sea unsuitably provided in any important or essential particular, by neglect or design, or through mistake or accident; and in case it was by neglect or design, and the consular officer approves of such finding, he shall discharge such of the crew as request it, and shall require the payment by the master of one month's wages for each seaman over and above the wages then due, or sufficient money for the return of such of the crew as desire to be discharged to the nearest and most convenient port of the United States, or by furnishing the seamen who so desire to be discharged with employment on a ship agreed to by them. But if in the opinion of the inspectors the defects or deficiencies found to exist have been the result of mistake or accident, and could not, in the exercise of ordinary care, have been known and provided against before the sailing of the vessel, and the master shall in a reasonable time remove or remedy the causes of complaint, then the crew shall remain and discharge their duty. If any person knowingly sends or attempts to send or is party to the sending or attempting to send an American ship to sea, in the foreign or coastwise trade, in such an unseaworthy state that the life of any person is likely to be thereby endangered, he shall, in respect of each offense, be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by a fine not to exceed one thousand dollars or by imprisonment not to exceed five years, or both, at the discretion of the court, unless he proves that either he used all reasonable means to insure her being sent to sea in a seaworthy state, or that her going to sea in an unseaworthy state was, under the circumstances, reasonable and justifiable, and for the purpose of giving that proof he may give evidence in the same manner as any other witness. [R. S.]

The section originally read as follows:

"Sec. 4561. The inspectors in their report shall also state whether, in their opinion, the vessel was sent to sea unsuitably provided in any important or essential particular, by neglect or design, or through mistake or accident, and in case it was by neglect or design, and the consul or other commercial agent approves of such finding, he shall discharge such of the crew as require it, each of whom shall be entitled to three months' pay in addition to his wages to the time of discharge; but if, in the opinion of the inspectors, the defects or deficiencies found to exist have been the result of mistake or accident, and could not, in the exercise of ordinary care, have been known and provided against before the sailing of the vessel, and the master shall, in a reasonable time, remove or remedy the causes of complaint, then the crew shall remain and discharge their duty; otherwise they shall, upon their request, be discharged, and receive each one month's wages in addition to their pay up to the time of discharge." Act of July 20, 1840, ch. 48, 5 Stat. L. 396.

It was amended by the Act of June 26, 1884, ch. 121, sec. 4, 23 Stat. L. 54, to read as follows:

"SEC. 4561. The inspectors in their report shall also state whether, in their opinion, the vessel was sent to sea unsuitably provided in any important or essential particular, by neglect or design, or through mistake or accident; and in case it was by neglect or design, and the consular officer approves of such finding, he shall discharge such of the crew as request it, and shall require the payment by the master of one month's wages for each seaman over and above the wages then due. But if, in the opinion of the inspectors, the defects or deficiencies found to exist have been the result of mistake or accident, and could not, in the exercise of ordinary care, have been known and provided against before the sailing of the vessel, and the master shall, in a reasonable time, remove or remedy the causes of complaint, then the crew shall remain and discharge their duty."

It was again amended by the Act of Dec. 21, 1898, ch. 28, sec. 11, to read as given in the text. It is provided by section 26 of such amending Act that section 11, as above given, "shall not apply to fishing or whaling vessels or yachts." See supra, p. 870.

Sec. 4562. [Payment of charges for inspection.] The master shall pay all such reasonable charges for inspection under such complaint as shall be officially certified to him under the hand of the consul or commercial agent; but in case the inspectors report that the complaint is without any good and sufficient cause, the master may retain from the wages of the complainants, in proportion to the pay of each, the amount of such charges, with such reasonable damages for detention on that account as the consul or commercial agent directing the inquiry may officially certify. [R. S.]

Act of July 20, 1840, ch. 48, 5 Stat. L. 396.

Sec. 4563. [Refusal to pay wages and charges — damages — penalty.] Every master who refuses to pay such wages and charges shall be liable to each person injured thereby in damages, to be recovered in any court of the United States in the district where such delinquent may reside or be found, and in addition thereto be punishable by a fine of one hundred dollars for each offense. [R. S.]

Act of July 20, 1840, ch. 48, 5 Stat. L. 397.

Sec. 4564. [Neglect to provide sufficient stores — penalty.] Should any master or owner of any merchant vessel of the United States neglect to provide a sufficient quantity of stores to last for a voyage of ordinary duration to the port of destination, and in consequence of such neglect the crew are compelled to accept a reduced scale, such master or owner shall be liable to a penalty as provided in section forty-five hundred and sixty-eight of the Revised Statutes. [R. S.]

This section was amended "to read as" above by the Act of Dec. 21, 1898, ch. 28, sec. 12, 30 Stat. L. 758.

The section originally read as follows:

"SEC. 4564. [Provisions.] Every vessel belonging to a citizen of the United States, bound on a voyage across the Atlantic Ocean, shall, at the time of leaving the last port from whence she sails, have on board, well secured under deck, at least sixty gallons of water, one hundred pounds of salted flesh meat, and one hundred pounds of wholesome ship-bread, for every person on board such vessel, besides such other provisions, stores, and live-stock as shall by the master or passengers be put on board, and in like proportion for shorter or longer voyages." Act of July 20, 1790, ch. 29, 1 Stat. L. 135.

Sec. 4565. [Examination of provisions.] Any three or more of the crew of any merchant-vessel of the United States bound from a port in the United States to any foreign port, or being of the burden of seventy-five tons or upward, and bound from a port on the Atlantic to a port on the Pacific, or vice versa, may complain to any officer in command of any of the vessels of the United States Navy, or consular officer of the United States, or shipping-commissioner or chief officer of the customs, that the provisions or water for the use of the crew are, at any time, of bad quality, unfit for use, or deficient in quantity. Such officer shall thereupon examine the provisions or water, or cause them to be examined; and if, on examination, such provisions or water are found to be of bad quality and unfit for use, or to be deficient in quantity, the person making such examination shall certify the same in writing to the master of the ship. If such master does not thereupon provide other proper provisions or water, where the same can be had, in lieu of any so certified to be of a bad quality and unfit for use, or does not procure the requisite quantity of any so certified to be insufficient in quantity, or uses any provisions or water which have been so certified as aforesaid to be of bad quality and unfit for use, he shall, in every such case, be liable to a penalty of not more than one hundred dollars; and upon every such examination the officers making or directing the same shall enter a statement of the result of the examination in the log-book, and shall send a report thereof to the district judge for the judicial district embracing the port to which such vessel is bound; and such report shall be received in evidence in any legal proceedings. [R. S.]

Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 269.
For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

Withholding suitable food and nourishment punishable. See R. S. sec. 5347, infra, div. VII.

Sec. 4566. [Forfeiture for false complaint.] If the officer to whom any such complaint in regard to the provisions or the water is made certifies in such statement that there was no reasonable ground for such complaint, each of the parties so complaining shall forfeit to the master or owner his share of the expense, if any, of the survey. [R. S.]

Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 269.

This section was amended "to read as" above by the Act of Dec. 21, 1898, ch. 28, sec. 13, 30 Stat. L. 758. The amendment consists in the substitution of the words "forfeit to the master or owner his share of the expense, if any, of the survey," in lieu of the words "be liable to forfeit to the master or owner, out of his wages, a sum not exceeding one week's wages," appearing in the section as originally enacted.

It is provided by section 26 of the amending Act that section 13, being the section given in the text, "shall not apply to fishing or whaling vessels or yachts." See supra, p. 870. ¶

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

Sec. 4567. [Permission to enter complaint.] If any seamen, while on board any vessel, shall state to the master that they desire to make complaint, in accordance with the two preceding sections, in regard to the provisions or the water, to a competent officer, against the master, the master shall, if the vessel is then at a place where there is any such officer, so soon as the service of the vessel will permit, and if the vessel is not then at such a place, so soon after her first arrival at such place as the service of the vessel will permit, allow such seamen, or any of them, to go ashore, or shall send them ashore, in proper custody, so that they may be enabled to make such complaint; and shall, in default, be liable to a penalty of not more than one hundred dollars. [R. S.]

Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 269.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch.

260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

Sec. 728. [Power to enforce awards of foreign consuls, etc., in certain cases.] The district and circuit courts, and the commissioners of the circuit courts, shall have power to carry into effect, according to the true intent and meaning thereof, the award, or arbitration, or decree of any consul, vice-consul, or commercial agent of any foreign nation, made or rendered by virtue of authority conferred on him by such consul, vice-consul, or commercial agent, to sit as judge or arbitrator in such differences as may arise between the captains and crews of the vessels belonging to the nation whose interests are committed to his charge; application for the exercise of such power being first made to such court or commissioner by petition of such consul, vice-consul, or commercial agent. And said courts and commissioners may issue all proper remedial process, mesne and final, to carry into full effect such award, arbitration, or decree, and to enforce obedience thereto, by imprisonment in the jail or other place of confinement in the district in which the United States may lawfully imprison any person arrested under the authority of the United States, until such award, arbitration, or decree is complied with, or the parties are otherwise discharged therefrom, by the consent in writing of such consul, vice-consul, or commercial agent, or his successor in office, or by the authority of the foreign government appointing such consul, vice-consul, or commercial agent: Provided, however, That the expenses of the said imprisonment, and maintenance of the prisoners, and the cost of the proceedings, shall be borne by such foreign government, or by its consul, vice-consul, or commercial agent requiring such imprisonment. The marshals of the United States shall serve all such process, and do all other acts necessary and proper to carry into effect the premises, under the authority of the said courts and commissioners. [R. S.]

See notes under JUDICIARY, vol. 4, p. 551.

Sec. 4568. [Allowance for reduction of provisions.] If, during a voyage, the allowance of any of the provisions which any seaman is entitled to under section forty-six hundred and twelve of the Revised Statutes is reduced except for any time during which such seaman willfully and without sufficient cause refuses or neglects to perform his duty, or is lawfully under confinement for misconduct either on board or on shore; or if it shall be shown that any of such provisions are, or have been during the voyage, bad in quality or unfit for use, the seaman shall receive, by way of compensation for such reduction or bad quality, according to the time of its continuance, the following sums, to be paid to him in addition to and to be recoverable as wages:

First. If his allowance is reduced by any quantity not exceeding one-third of the quantity specified by law, a sum not exceeding fifty cents a day.

Second. If his allowance is reduced by more than one-third of such quantity, a sum not exceeding one dollar a day.

Third. In respect of bad quality, a sum not exceeding one dollar a day.

But if it is shown to the satisfaction of the court before which the case is tried that any provisions, the allowance of which has been reduced, could not be procured or supplied in sufficient quantities, or were unavoidably injured or lost, or if by reason of its innate qualities any article becomes unfit for use and that proper and equivalent substitutes were supplied in lieu thereof, the court shall take such circumstances into consideration and shall modify or refuse compensation, as the justice of the case may require. [R. S.]

This section was amended "to read as" above by the Act of Dec. 21, 1898, ch. 28, sec. 14, 30 Stat. L. 758.

The section originally read as follows:

"Sec. 4568. If, during a voyage, the allowance of any of the provisions which any seaman has, by his agreement, stipulated for,

is reduced, except in accordance with any regulations for reduction by way of punishment, contained in the agreement, and also for any time during which such seaman willfully, and without sufficient cause, refuses or neglects to perform his duty, or is lawfully under confinement for misconduct, either on board or on shore; or if it is shown that any of such provisions are, or have been during the voyage, bad in quality and unfit for use, the seaman shall receive by way of compensation for such reduction or bad quality, according to the time of its continuance, the following sums, to be paid to him in addition to and to be recoverable as wages:

"First. If his allowance is reduced by any quantity not exceeding one-third of the quantity specified in the agreement, a sum not exceeding fifty cents a day.

"Second. If his allowance is reduced by more than one-third of such quantity, a sum not exceeding one dollar a day.

"Third. In respect of bad quality, a sum not exceeding one dollar a day.

"But if it is shown to the satisfaction of the court before which the case is tried, that any provisions, the allowance of which has been reduced, could not be procured or supplied in sufficient quantities, or were unavoidably injured or lost, and that proper and equivalent substitutes were supplied in lieu thereof, in a reasonable time, the court shall take such circumstances into consideration, and shall modify or refuse compensation, as the justice of the case may require." Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 270.

It is provided by section 26 of the amending Act that section 14, set out in the text, "shall not apply to fishing or whaling vessels or yachts." See supra, p. 870.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

General construction.—This law is remedial, and was enacted for a beneficent purpose, and while not to be enforced with undue severity should, nevertheless, be construed liberally, so as to give its humane purpose full and practical effect, and cause it to be respected and obeyed by ship owners and masters. Schooner H. E. Thompson v. Martin, (1900) 16 App. Cas. (D. C.) 222.

Laying in supply.—The master of a vessel—particularly of a sailing vessel traveling to localities and ports not much frequented by vessels and traders—must not only be adequately supplied with provisions for his crew to last the ordinary voyage, but he is under the duty of preparing reasonably, to some extent, for the exigencies and necessities of a longer voyage than is expected or is usual. Petersen v. Cunningham Co., (1896) 77 Fed. Rep. 211.

Substitute for bread.—A surplus of meat or other provisions will not make up for a want of bread. Petersen v. Cunningham Co., (1896) 77 Fed. Rep. 211; Broux v. The Ivy, (1894) 62 Fed. Rep. 600; The Hermon, (1870) 1 Lowell (U. S.) 515, 12 Fed. Cas. No. 6,411; The Mary Paulina, (1843) 1 Sprague (U. S.) 45, 16 Fed. Cas. No. 9,224.

A bread composed of one-third flour and two-thirds copra (dried coconut) is not a sufficient and proper substitute for the more nourishing and staple article of bread called for by the statutory schedule. Petersen v. J. F. Cunningham Co., (1896) 77 Fed. Rep. 211.

Under the earlier Act of 1790 it seems that flour cooked into good bread by the ship's cook and served out in that form may be a substitute for ship bread, though flour served out to the men would not be. The Hermon, (1870) 1 Lowell (U. S.) 515, 12 Fed. Cas. No. 6,411; Poster v. Sampson, (1849) 1 Sprague (U. S.) 182, 9 Fed. Cas. No. 4,982.

Where the crew had the full navy ration of meat, and a short allowance of bread and of other articles, like beans, rice, etc., they were held entitled to but one day's extra pay for each day's short allowance. The Hermon, (1870) 1 Lowell (U. S.) 515, 12 Fed. Cas. No. 6,411.

Where an insufficient quantity of bread was provided for a foreign voyage, the crew are entitled to extra wages if put on short allowance, though the immediate cause of the deficiency was the spoiling of part of the bread by sea peril. The Hermon, (1870) 1 Lowell (U. S.) 515, 12 Fed. Cas. No. 6,411.

Compelling crew to provide food.—Where a ship was lying in the Bay of Mobile four months waiting for cargo, and the usual supply of provisions from the ship's store was withheld, the crew being required to furnish themselves by taking oysters from the oyster-beds when the state of the weather permitted it to be done, and the supply being insufficient in quantity, they were held to be entitled to additional wages. The John L. Dimmick, (1858) 3 Ware (U. S.) 196, 13 Fed. Cas. No. 7,355.

Consent to allowances.—The master had a "method" of his own as to the allowance of provisions for the crew. On objection by the crew and a request for the statutory scale of allowances, the master agreed to comply therewith, but after a few days the crew asked for a return to the master's "method," which the latter agreed to if the crew would be "satisfied in the future and make no more complaints," which agreement was entered in the log book. It was held that this latter contract was one-sided, without consideration, and invalid, and would not prevent recovery of the extra wages on account of a reduction in the allowances provided by law. Broux v. The Ivy, (1894) 62 Fed. Rep. 600.

Accidental deficiency.—In order to subject the master or owner of the vessel to the payment of extra wages for short allowance, some order or command to that effect must have been given or there must have been some gross negligence in the master; an accidental or unintentional deficiency would not subject him to the penalty. The Ship Elizabeth v. Rickers, 2 Paine (U. S.) 291, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,353.

Mutinous crew.—Seamen might recover their wages and claims for short allowance on the voyage, although they had been guilty of mutinous and disobedient conduct, where they had afterwards returned to duty and been criminally prosecuted for the offense. Hill v. The Triumph, (1841) 12 Fed. Cas. No. 6,500.

Cause of failure.—Whether the failure arose through negligence or inadvertence is immaterial so far as the recovery of the penalty provided for by section 4568 is concerned. The mere failure to furnish the crew with the scheduled allowance is actionable, and a recovery may be had unless it can be shown to the satisfaction of the court that any provisions the allowances of which had been reduced could not be procured or supplied in sufficient quantities or were unavoidably lost or injured, and that proper and equivalent substitutes were supplied in lieu thereof in a reasonable time, in which event the court may modify or refuse compensation as the justice of the case may require. Petersen v. Cunningham Co., (1896) 77 Fed. Rep. 211.

Detention, etc.—Where a detention occurred from stress of weather and not from design, wilfulness, or negligence, and where a short allowance of provisions was due to the delivery of a part of the provisions to a crew in distress, an ample supply of provision having been taken at the beginning of the voyage, the owners are not bound to pay extra wages for such short allowance. Burdett v. Williams, (1886) 27 Fed. Rep. 113.

Prolonged voyage.—Where the voyage is prolonged beyond all reasonable expectation the master will be justified, when no additional supplies can be procured, in reducing the allowance of food. Petersen v. Cunningham Co., (1896) 77 Fed. Rep. 211; Ferrara v. The Barque Talent, (1838) Crabbe (U. S.) 216, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,745.

Change of route.—A ship sailed from Hong Kong provisioned for a voyage to New York by the way of the Cape of Good Hope, which voyage is usually made in from one hundred and thirty to one hundred and eighty days. Shortly after leaving Hong Kong, she was driven by storms several hundred miles eastward, and the master changed his route to go by the way of Cape Horn, which was from five thousand to seven thousand miles farther. The vessel was out two hundred and sixty days, the men were put on short allowance and suffered severely from scurvy, the master making no effort to stop en route for additional supplies. It was held that the seamen could recover their actual pecuniary damages, taking account of the statutory compensation for short allowance. The T. F. Oakes, (1897) 82 Fed. Rep. 759.

Recovery.—Compensation for short allowance is recovered as wages, and a general form of pleading is sufficient to admit evidence of the right, if not excepted to before trial. Piehl v. Balchen, (1844) Olc. Adm. 24, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,137.

Joinder of parties.—All the crew may unite in a suit for double wages because of a short allowance of bread. The Bark Childe Harold, (1846) Olc. Adm. 275, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,676.

Proof of substantial failure to observe the requirements of the law with such reasonable particularity as to the number of days as will enable the court to assess the compensation with reasonable certainty is all that is necessary, without showing a failure from day to day, especially when the master and the owner knew of the scale in effect at the time and the seamen did not. Schooner H. E. Thompson v. Martin, (1900) 16 App. Cas. (D. C.) 222.

Costs.—When one of the libelants unites a demand for contract wages unpaid him with his claim for short allowance, and obtains a decree for those wages, the court will only allow him proportionate costs against the vessel on that demand, not including witness fees to his colibelants, and will order full costs against him in connection with his colibelants upon the other branch of the litigation. The Bark Childe Harold, (1846) Olc. Adm. 275, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,676.

If the libelants fail in maintaining their action, and it appears there was no colorable cause for bringing it, they will be charged with full costs of suit. The Bark Childe Harold, (1846) Olc. Adm. 275, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,676.

Action for damages.—The recovery of the penalty does not necessarily preclude the seaman from recovering damages, also, for a deficiency of other provisions. Collins v. Wheeler, (1850) 1 Sprague (U. S.) 188, 6 Fed. Cas. No. 3,018.

Under the earlier Act of July 20, 1790, section 9, the claim for additional wages was not founded on the mere fact that the crew was put on short allowance, but on the neglect or omission of the master to take on the quantity and species of provisions required by that Act. The two circumstances of deficiency in the quantity or quality of the provisions, and a short allowance, must have concurred in order to entitle the crew to the remedy provided by the section. Ferrara v. The Barque Talent, (1838) Crabbe (U. S.) 216, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,745; The Ship Elizabeth v. Rickers, 2 Paine (U. S.) 291, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,353; The Bark Childe Harold, (1846) Olc. Adm. 275, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,676; The Elizabeth Frith, (1831) Blatchf. & H. Adm. 195, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,361; Piehl v. Balchen, (1844) Olc. Adm. 24, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,137; The John L. Dimmick, (1858) 3 Ware (U. S.) 196, 13 Fed. Cas. No. 7,355.

When the crew is put on short allowance without necessity, in a case not within the Act of Congress, there is a wrong in breach of contract, and a remedy will be given by a court of admiralty in the form of additional wages. Sec. 4569. [Medicines.] Every vessel belonging to a citizen of the United States, bound from a port in the United States to any foreign port, or being of the burden of seventy-five tons or upward, and bound from a port on the Atlantic to a port on the Pacific, or vice versa, shall be provided with a chest of medicines; and every sailing-vessel bound on a voyage across the Atlantic or Pacific Ocean, or around Cape Horn, or the Cape of Good Hope, or engaged in the whale or other fisheries, or in sealing, shall also be provided with, and cause to be kept, a sufficient quantity of lime or lemon juice, and also sugar and vinegar, or other anti-scorbutics, to be served out to every seaman as follows: The master of every such vessel shall serve the lime or lemon juice, and sugar and vinegar, to the crew, within ten days after salt provisions mainly have been served out to the crew, and so long afterward as such consumption of salt provisions continues; the lime or lemon juice and sugar daily at the rate of half an ounce each per day; and the vinegar weekly, at the rate of half a pint per week for each member of the crew. [R. S.]

Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 270.
For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following supra, p. 850.

This section, and sections 4572 and 4573, R. S., prescribe a statutory duty in addition to the duty imposed upon shipowners by all maritime nations to provide proper medical treatment and attendance for seamen falling ill or suffering injury in the service of the ship. The Iroquois, (1903) 194 U. S. 240.

Provisions mandatory.—The provisions of this statute are mandatory, and the captain will be liable to the infliction of a fine if convicted of an omission to comply with his duty in respect to the serving of lime juice, even though the omission should be followed by no ill consequence to the crew. The Rence, (1890) 46 Fed. Rep. 805.

The consent of the crew to a violation of the positive provisions of this law can in no respect modify the master's liability for the offense, nor does it affect the right of the crew if their health is impaired. The Rence, (1890) 46 Fed. Rep. 805.

The fact that the crew preferred coffee to lime juice will not excuse the captain for a failure to serve lime juice. The Rence, (1890) 46 Fed. Rep. 805.

Antiscorbutics must be served out.—Where there were limes on board sufficient to last the entire voyage, yet it is not made to appear that the master ever served the crew with them, and even though the crew might have been free to help themselves whenever they chose or felt inclined to do so, this would not constitute a compliance with the provisions of this section, as it is the imperative duty of the master to supply the crew with a regular daily allowance as provided by the section. Petersen v. Cunningham Co., (1896) 77 Fed. Rep. 211.

Liability for injury by scurvy.—Where the statutory requirements with regard to lime juice are disregarded and scurvy appears among the crew, in the absence of proof or any reason to suspect that the disease had been contracted by the men on a previous voyage, the ship should be held liable for the damage sustained by the men by reason of the disease. The Rence, (1890) 46 Fed. Rep. 805.

The expense of caring for a sick seaman in the course of the voyage is a charge on the ship by the maritime law; and in this charge are included not only medicines and medical advice, but nursing, diet, and lodging, if the seaman be carried ashore. Harden v. Gordon, (1823) 2 Mason (U. S.) 541, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 6,047.

The Act of Congress for the regulation of seamen, etc., has not changed the maritime law, except so far as respects medicines and medical advice, when there is a proper medicine chest with medical directions on board the vessel. The charges of nursing and lodging are not affected by the Act. Harden v. Gordon, (1823) 2 Mason (U. S.) 541, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 6,047.

The Court of Admiralty has jurisdiction to enforce the payment of these expenses by a libel, for they are in the nature of additional wages during sickness. Harden v. Gordon, (1823) 2 Mason (U. S.) 541, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 6,047.

Payment for medical services.—An answer averring in general terms that a vessel was supplied with a medicine chest, according to law, is not, of itself, sufficient evidence to discharge a master from his liability for a physician's bill for attendance upon a sick seaman. An express promise by a sick seaman to pay the amount of such bill is without consideration, and void. Freeman v. Baker, (1833) Blatchf. & H. Adm. 372, 9 Fed. Cas. No. 5,084.

A stipulation that the seamen shall pay for medical advice and medicines without any condition that there shall be a suitable medicine chest, etc., is void, as contrary to the policy of the Act of Congress. Harden v. Gordon, (1823) 2 Mason (U. S.) 541, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 6,047.

The onus probandi in respect to the sufficiency of the medicine chest lies on the owner. Harden v. Gordon, (1823) 2 Mason (U. S.) 541, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 6,047.

Sec. 4570. [Penalty for failure to keep medicines.] If, on any such vessel, such medicines, medical stores, lime or lemon juice, or other articles, sugar, and vinegar, as are required by the preceding section, are not provided and kept on board, as required, the master or owner shall be liable to a penalty of not more than five hundred dollars; and if the master of any such vessel neglects to serve out the lime or lemon juice, and sugar and vinegar in the case and manner directed, he shall for each such offense be liable to a penalty of not more than one hundred dollars; and if any master is convicted in either of the offenses mentioned in this section, and it appears that the offense is owing to the act or default of the owner, such master may recover the amount of such penalty, and the costs incurred by him, from the owner. [R. S.]

Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 270.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following supra, p. 850.

The penalty provided for in section 4568 cannot be made applicable by implication to section 4569. The former statute relates exclusively to the failure of the master or owners to supply the crew with the provisions stipulated for in the shipping articles, while the latter statute relates only to the failure of the master to serve the crew with antiscorbutics, and the failure to have on board a medicine chest, medical stores, lime juice, etc. Petersen v. Cunningham Co., (1896) 77 Fed. Rep. 211

Recovery of penalty.—An information as in the nature of an action of tort will lie by the United States to recover a penalty under this section. U. S. v. Elliott, (1879) 25 Int. Rev. Rec. 319, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 15,043.

This penalty does not inure to the benefit of the crew; nor is it provided that they shall recover any penalty in the way of additional wages for the master's omission in this respect. Petersen v. Cunningham Co., (1896) 77 Fed. Rep. 211.

Sec. 4571. [Weights and measures.] Every master shall keep on board proper weights and measures for the purpose of determining the quantities of the several provisions and articles served out, and shall allow the same to be used at the time of serving out such provisions and articles, in the presence of a witness, whenever any dispute arises about such quantities, and in default shall, for every offense, be liable to a penalty of not more than fifty dollars. [R. S.]

Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 270.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch.

260, note thereunder, and provisions following supra, p. 850.

Sec. 4572. [Clothing and fuel.] Every vessel bound on any foreign voyage exceeding in length fourteen days shall also be provided with at least one suit of woollen clothing for each seaman, and every vessel in the foreign or domestic trade shall provide a safe and warm room for the use of seamen in cold weather. Failure to make such provision shall subject the owner or master to a penalty of not less than one hundred dollars. [R. S.]

This section was amended "to read as" above by the Act of Dec. 21, 1898, ch. 28, sec. 15, 30 Stat. L. 759. The section originally read as follows:

"Sec. 4572. Every vessel bound on any foreign voyage shall also be provided with at least one suit of woollen clothing for each seaman, for use during the winter months; and every such vessel shall be provided with fuel and a safe and suitable room in which a fire can be kept for the use of seamen." Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 270.

It is provided by section 26 of the amending Act that section 15, as above set out, "shall not apply to fishing or whaling vessels or yachts." See supra, p. 870.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch.

260, note thereunder, and provisions following supra, p. 850.

Effect of failure.—The failure of the master of a vessel to provide a safe and warm room as provided by this section, after complaint made by the crew, will justify the seamen in leaving the vessel and recovering their wages for the time served. The Ida McKay, (1900) 99 Fed. Rep. 1002.

Necessity of complaint.—Seamen are not justified in leaving a vessel because the fore-castle where they slept was not heated and made comfortable as required by existing laws, where no complaint or request respecting that matter was made to the captain. The C. F. Sargent, (1899) 95 Fed. Rep. 180.

SEC. 11. [Slop-chest and contents.] That every vessel mentioned in section forty-five hundred and sixty-nine of the Revised Statutes shall also be provided with a slop-chest, which shall contain a complement of clothing for the intended voyage for each seaman employed, including boots or shoes, hats or caps, under clothing and outer clothing, oiled clothing, and everything necessary for the wear of a seaman; also a full supply of tobacco and blankets. Any of the contents of the slop-chest shall be sold, from time to time, to any or every seaman applying therefor, for his own use, at a profit not exceeding ten per centum of the reasonable wholesale value of the same at the port at which the voyage commenced. And if any such vessel is not provided, before sailing, as herein required, the owner shall be liable to a penalty of not more than five hundred dollars. The provisions of this section shall not apply to vessels plying between the United States and the Dominion of Canada, Newfoundland, the Bermuda Islands, the Bahama Islands the West Indies, Mexico and Central America. [23 Stat. L. 56.]

This is from the Act of June 26, 1884, ch. 121, "An act to remove certain burdens on the American merchant marine, and encourage the American foreign carrying trade, and for other purposes."

See following provisions in the text.

Articles sold to seamen. — The master will not be allowed to charge the seamen for articles sold to them during the voyage in excess of an advance of ten per cent. over the prices actually paid for them by the master. The Edwin, (1885) 23 Fed. Rep. 256.

SEC. 13. [Exceptions as to slop-chests.] That section eleven of "An act to remove certain burdens on the American merchant marine and encourage the American foreign carrying-trade, and for other purposes," approved June twenty-sixth, eighteen hundred and eighty-four, shall not be construed to apply to vessels engaged in the whaling or fishing business. [24 Stat. L. 82.]

This is from the Act of June 19, 1886, ch. 421, "An act to abolish certain fees for official services to American vessels, and to amend the laws relating to shipping commissioners, seamen, and owners of vessels, and for other purposes."

Sec. 4573. [List of crew to be delivered to collector.] Before a clearance is granted to any vessel bound on a foreign voyage or engaged in the whale-fishery, the master thereof shall deliver to the collector of the customs a list containing the names, places of birth and residence, and description of the persons who compose his ship's company; to which list the oath of the captain shall be annexed, that the list contains the names of his crew, together with the places of their birth and residence, as far as he can ascertain them; and the collector shall deliver him a certified copy thereof, for which the collector shall be entitled to receive the sum of twenty-five cents. [R. S.]

Act of Feb. 28, 1803, ch. 9, 2 Stat. L. 203;
Act of April 4, 1840, ch. 6, 5 Stat. L. 370.

Fees abolished. — See Act of June 19, 1886, ch. 421, sec. 1, under SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION.

"Foreign voyage." — The terminus of a voyage determines its character; if it be within the limits of foreign jurisdiction, it is a foreign voyage and not otherwise. Taber v. U. S., (1839) 1 Story (U. S.) 1, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,722.

Sec. 4574. [Certificate to list.] In all cases of private vessels of the United States sailing from a port in the United States to a foreign port, the list of the crew shall be examined by the collector for the district from which the vessel shall clear, and, if approved of by him, shall be certified accordingly. No person shall be admitted or employed on board of any such vessel unless his name shall have been entered in the list of the crew, approved and certified by the collector for the district from which the vessel shall clear. The collector, before he delivers the list of the crew, approved and certified, to the master or proper officer of the vessel to which the same belongs, shall cause the same to be recorded in a book by him for that purpose to be provided, and the record shall be open for the inspection of all persons, and a certified copy thereof shall be admitted in evidence in any court in which any question may arise under any of the provisions of this Title. [R. S.]

Act of March 3, 1813, ch. 42, 2 Stat. L. 809.

Irregular shipment.—No indictment lies against a master of a ship for discharging irregularly, in a foreign port, a seaman shipped irregularly in the United States. (1856) 7 Op. Atty-Gen. 730.

Sec. 4575. [Rules as to list of crew.] The following rules shall be observed with reference to vessels bound on any foreign voyage:

First. The duplicate list of the ship's company, required to be made out by the master and delivered to the collector of the customs, under section forty-five hundred and seventy-three, shall be a fair copy in one uniform handwriting, without erasure or interlineation.

Second. It shall be the duty of the owners of every such vessel to obtain from the collector of the customs of the district from which the clearance is made, a true and certified copy of the shipping-articles, containing the names of the crew, which shall be written in a uniform hand, without erasures or interlineations.

Third. These documents, which shall be deemed to contain all the conditions of contract with the crew as to their service, pay, voyage and all other things, shall be produced by the master, and laid before any consul, or other commercial agent of the United States, whenever he may deem their contents necessary to enable him to discharge the duties imposed upon him by law toward any mariner applying to him for his aid or assistance.

Fourth. All interlineations, erasures, or writing in a hand different from that in which such duplicates were originally made, shall be deemed fraudulent alterations, working no change in such papers, unless satisfactorily explained in a manner consistent with innocent purposes and the provisions of law which guard the rights of mariners.

Fifth. If any master of a vessel shall proceed on a foreign voyage without the documents herein required, or refuse to produce them when required, or to perform the duties imposed by this section, or shall violate the provisions thereof, he shall be liable to each and every individual injured thereby in damages, to be recovered in any court of the United States in the district where such delinquent may reside or be found, and in addition thereto be punishable by a fine of one hundred dollars for each offense.

Sixth. It shall be the duty of the boarding-officer to report all violations of this section to the collector of the port where any vessel may arrive, and the collector shall report the same to the Secretary of the Treasury and to the United States attorney in his district. [R. S.]

Act of July 20, 1840, ch. 48, 5 Stat. L. 394, 395, 397.

This section was amended by the Act of Feb. 27, 1877, ch. 69, 19 Stat. L. 252, by striking out after the words, "Second. It shall be the duty of the owners of every such vessel to obtain from the," the words "shipping commissioner, or officer acting as such in," appearing in the section as originally enacted, and inserting in lieu thereof the words "collector of the customs of," as above given.

Alterations.—In The Richard Vaux. (1884) 20 Fed. Rep. 654, it was held that while this provision was not enforced as an express statute as respects a vessel in the coastwise trade, as by the Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, such vessels were excepted from the provisions of the statute, yet, however, the principle of the statute being a salutary one should be followed as a sound rule where the evidence as to an alteration of the rate of wages is conflicting; and where the evidence was evenly balanced as to an alteration reducing the seamen's wages, and the alteration was not otherwise satisfactorily explained, the larger rate should be allowed.

Immaterial erasures.—The provision in regard to the erasures in shipping articles applies to alterations which would vary their effect in respect to seamen. Immaterial erasures will be disregarded. The Schooner Eagle, (1846) Olc. Adm. 232, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,233.

Sec. 4576. [Return of seamen — production of crew list and crew — penalty for failure.] The master of every vessel bound on a foreign voyage or engaged in the whale fishery shall exhibit the certified copy of the list of the crew to the first boarding officer at the first port in the United States at which he shall arrive on his return, and also produce the persons named therein to the boarding officer, whose duty it shall be to examine the men with such list and to report the same to the collector; and it shall be the duty of the collector at the port of arrival, where the same is different from the port from which the vessel originally sailed, to transmit a copy of the list so reported to him to the collector of the port from which such vessel originally sailed. For each failure to produce any person on the certified copy of the list of the crew the master and owner shall be severally liable to a penalty of four hundred dollars, to be sued for, prosecuted, and disposed of in such manner as penalties and forfeitures which may be incurred for offenses against the laws relating to the collection of duties; but such penalties shall not be incurred on account of the master not producing to the first boarding officer any of the persons contained in the list who may have been discharged in a foreign country with the consent of the consul, vice-consul, commercial agent, or vice-commercial agent there residing, certified in writing, under his hand and official seal, to be produced to the collector with the other persons composing the crew, nor on account of any such person dying or absconding or being forcibly impressed into other service of which satisfactory proof shall also be exhibited to the collector. [R. S.]

This section was amended "to read as" above by the Act of March 3, 1897, ch. 399, sec. 3, 29 Stat. L. 688.

The section originally read as follows:

"Sec. 4576. The master of every vessel bound on a foreign voyage or engaged in the whale fishery, shall enter into bond, with sufficient security, in the sum of four hundred dollars, that he shall exhibit the certified copy of the list of the crew, to the first boarding-officer, at the first port in the United States at which he shall arrive on his return, and also produce the persons named therein to the boarding-officer: whose duty it shall be to examine the men with such list, and to report the same to the collector; and it shall be the duty of the collector at the port of arrival, where the same is different from the port from which the vessel originally sailed, to transmit a copy of the list so reported to him to the collector of the port from which such vessel originally sailed. But such bond shall not be forfeited on account of the master not producing to the first boarding-officer any of the persons contained in the list, who may be discharged in a foreign country with the consent of the consul, vice-consul, commercial agent, or vice-commercial agent there residing, certified in writing, under his hand and official seal, to be produced to the collector with the other persons composing the crew; nor on account of any such person dying or absconding, or being forcibly impressed into other service, of which satisfactory proof shall be then also exhibited to the collector." Act of Feb. 28, 1803, ch. 9, 2 Stat. L. 203.

Vessel sold abroad. — This section does not embrace the case of a vessel sold in a foreign port, and which does not return to the United States. Montell v. U. S., (1840) Taney (U. S.) 24, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 9,723.

Seaman separated from vessel. — This section does not extend to cases where the seaman is lawfully separated from the ship, or is separated from her without the fault of the master or owner. It applies to those cases only where the vessel returns to a port of the United States; to cases where the seamen continue subject to the lawful authority of the master, and where it was in his power to bring them home. Montell v. U. S., (1840) Taney (U. S.) 24, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 9,723.

Foreigners shipped abroad. — This section, so far as it is applicable to the return of seamen, does not apply to the case of foreigners shipped in their own country for a distinct voyage or part of voyage ending in their port of shipment. U. S. v. Parsons, (1866) 1 Lowell (U. S.) 107, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,002.

Discharge by consent of consul. — Where a master procures the discharge of a seaman by a United States consul, in a foreign port, if any deceit or collusion has been practised by the master in obtaining the discharge, he can claim no benefit or immunity under it. When there is no evidence of improper conduct on the part of the master in obtaining a seaman's discharge by a consul, and it appears that the consul has proceeded fairly, and on clear prima facie proofs has ordered the seaman to be discharged for criminal conduct, such discharge itself is a bar to any continuing claim for wages which might be enforced if the seaman's connection with the vessel still subsisted. The propriety of the consul's interference is to be determined upon the facts before him, and not by the case which may be afterwards shown upon a trial. Tingle v. Tucker, (1849) Abb. Adm. 519, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 14,057.

The certificate of the consul to excuse the master under the proviso of this Act must state that the seamen were left in a foreign port with his consent. A certificate that they were left in a hospital unable to return, and that the master had paid for their maintenance, and left the amount of their wages, was held insufficient, and parol evidence of the consent of the consul or seamen inadmissible. U. S. v. Hatch, (1824) 1 Paine (U. S.) 336, 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,325.

Sec. 4577. [Return of seamen.] It shall be the duty of the consuls, vice-consuls, commercial agents, and vice-commercial agents, from time to time, to provide for the seamen of the United States, who may be found destitute within their districts, respectively, sufficient subsistence and passages to some port in the United States, in the most reasonable manner, at the expense of the United States, subject to such instructions as the Secretary of State shall give. The seamen shall, if able, be bound to do duty on board the vessels in which they may be transported, according to their several abilities. [R. S.]

Deduction from wages. — Where a U. S. consul-general has provided shipwrecked, destitute seamen with food, clothing, and passage to a port in this country, the amount so expended should not be deducted from the wages of such seamen. (1894) 21 Op. Atty-Gen. 25.

Liability of consul. — The crew of an American vessel wrecked in the South Pacific Ocean were supplied with necessary clothing by a United States consul, who on learning that wages were due them, applied to the master of the vessel to pay for the clothing out of the wages due, which the latter did. On their arrival in the United States, the crew brought suit against the owners of the wrecked vessel for their wages, and recovered a judgment therefor. It was advised that such owners had no valid claim against the United States for the money paid by the master, as above; that their remedy, if any they had, was against the consul and the sureties on his bond. (1887) 19 Op. Atty-Gen. 22.

Seaman to do duty. — Where a distressed American seaman was sent home on board of an American vessel by the consul from a foreign country, it was held that he was bound to do duty as a seaman, when called upon by the mate, although his passage had been paid by the American consul. U. S. v. Salisbury, (1843) 2 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 53, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,214.

Sec. 4578. [Transportation of destitute seamen to United States — penalty for refusal.] All masters of vessels of the United States, and bound to some port of the same, are required to take such destitute seamen on board their vessels, at the request of consular officers, and to transport them to the port in the United States to which such vessel may be bound, on such terms, not exceeding ten dollars for each person for voyages of not more than thirty days, and not exceeding twenty dollars for each person for longer voyages, as may be agreed between the master and the consular officer when the transportation is by a sailing vessel; and the regular steerage-passenger rate, not to exceed two cents per mile, when the transportation is by steamer; and said consular officer shall issue certificates for such transportation, which certificates shall be assignable for collection. If any such destitute seaman is so disabled or ill as to be unable to perform duty, the consular officer shall so certify in the certificate of transportation, and such additional compensation shall be paid as the First Comptroller of the Treasury shall deem proper. Every such master who refuses to receive and transport such seamen on the request or order of such consular officer shall be liable to the United States in a penalty of one hundred dollars for each seaman so refused. The certificate of any such consular officer, given under his hand and official seal, shall be presumptive evidence of such refusal in any court of law having jurisdiction for the recovery of the penalty. No master of any vessel shall, however, be obliged to take a greater number than one man to every one hundred tons burden of the vessel on any one voyage or to take any seaman having a contagious disease. [R. S.]

This section was amended "so as to read as" above by the Act of June 26, 1884, ch. 121, sec. 9, 23 Stat. L. 55, and the Act of June 19, 1886, ch. 421, sec. 18, 24 Stat. L. 83.

The section originally read as follows:

"SEC. 4578. All masters of vessels belonging to citizens of the United States, and bound to some port of the same, are required to take such destitute seamen on board of their vessels, at the request of the consuls, vice-consuls, commercial agents, or vice-commercial agents, respectively, and to transport them to the port in the United States to which such vessel may be bound, on such terms, not exceeding ten dollars for each person, as may be agreed between the master and the consul or officer. Every such master who refuses the same on the request or order of such consul or officer shall be liable to the United States in a penalty of one hundred dollars for each seaman so refused. The certificate of any such consul or officer, given under his hand and official seal, shall be presumptive evidence of such refusal, in any court of law having jurisdiction for the recovery of the penalty. No master of any vessel shall, however, be obliged to take a greater number than two men to every one hundred tons burden of the vessel, on any one voyage." Act of Feb. 28, 1803, ch. 9, 2 Stat. L. 204.

It was amended by the Act of 1884, above noted, to read as set forth in the text, except that the Act of 1886, above noted, added after the words "and the consular officer" the words "when the transportation is by a sailing vessel; and the regular steerage-passenger rate, not to exceed two cents per mile, when the transportation is by steamer," and at the end the words "or to take any seaman having a contagious disease," as above given.

Foreigners while employed as seamen in the merchant-ships of the United States are deemed to be "mariners and seamen of the United States," within the language and policy of this section. Matthews v. Offley, (1837) 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 115, 16 Fed. Cas. No. 9,290.

American seamen shipped on a foreign vessel, and in consequence of its being wrecked left in a foreign port destitute, were held entitled to the relief provided in the Act of Feb. 28, 1803, sec. 4. (1852) 5 Op. Atty-Gen. 547.

Seamen on board vessels of war are not entitled to pecuniary assistance from consuls abroad, under the Act of Feb. 28, 1803. The moneys in the hands of the secretary of state were raised for the wages of merchant seamen only, and should be applied only for the relief of that class of seamen which has contributed to the fund. (1841) 3 Op. Atty-Gen. 683; (1841) 3 Op. Atty-Gen. 685.

Destitute deserters.—The fact of desertion from an American ship—whether she be in port or not at the time when the seaman becomes destitute—does not supersede the authority of the consul to require another American ship to bring him to the United States. Matthews v. Offley, (1837) 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 115, 16 Fed. Cas. No. 9,290.

Certificate of refusal.—The certificate of the consul is prima facie evidence of the refusal of the master to take the seaman on board and of all the facts stated in the enacting clause which are necessary to bring the case within the penalty. Matthews v. Offley, (1837) 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 115, 16 Fed. Cas. No. 9,290.

The action for the penalty must be brought in the name of the United States, and not of the consul or vice-consul. Matthews v. Offley, (1837) 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 115, 16 Fed. Cas. No. 9,290.

Sec. 4579. [Additional allowance for transportation of destitute seamen.] Whenever distressed seamen of the United States are transported from foreign ports where there is no consular officer of the United States, to ports of the United States, there shall be allowed to the master or owner of each vessel, in which they are transported, such reasonable compensation, in addition to the allowance now fixed by law, as shall be deemed equitable by the First Comptroller of the Treasury. [R. S.]

Act of Feb. 28, 1811, ch. 28, 2 Stat. L. 651.

Sec. 4580. [Discharge of seaman and payment of wages.] Upon the application of the master of any vessel to a consular officer to discharge a seaman, or upon the application of any seaman for his own discharge, if it appears to such officer that said seaman has completed his shipping agreement, or is entitled to his discharge under any act of Congress or according to the general principles or usages of maritime law as recognized in the United States, such officer shall discharge said seaman, and require from the master of said vessel, before such discharge shall be made, payment of the wages which may then be due said seaman; but no payment of extra wages shall be required by any consular officer upon such discharge of any seaman except as provided in this act. [R. S.]

This section was amended "so as to read as" above by the Act of June 26, 1884, ch. 121, sec. 2, 23 Stat. L. 54.

The section originally read as follows:

"SEC. 4580. [Extra wages on discharge.] Upon the application of any seaman to a consular officer for a discharge, if it appears to such officer that he is entitled to his discharge under any act of Congress, or according to the general principles or usages of maritime law, as recognized in the United States, the officer shall discharge such seaman; and shall require from the master of the vessel from which such discharge shall be made, the payment of three months' extra wages, over and above the wages which may then be due to such seaman. When, however, after a full hearing of both parties, the cause of discharge is found to be the misconduct of the seaman, the consular officer may remit so much of the extra wages as would be, by section forty-five hundred and eighty-four, payable to the seaman." Act of Aug. 18, 1856, ch. 127, 11 Stat. L. 62; Act of March 3, 1873, ch. 243, 17 Stat. L. 580.

See note to R. S. sec. 4577, supra.

Foreign seamen. — In the case of foreigners shipped abroad as such, and domiciled in a foreign country, the consul need not be formally applied to to ratify their discharge on the termination of their contract of shipment. U. S. v. Parsons, (1866) 1 Lowell (U. S.) 107, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,002.

Justification for discharge. — Where, in answer to a libel for wages, the claimants set up a discharge of libellant in a foreign port, by order of the consul, it is incumbent on them to set forth in their answer a state of facts justifying the discharge relied on, and to support the allegations by adequate proof. The Atlantic, (1849) Abb. Adm. 451, 2 Fed. Cas. No. 620.

Drunkenness. — The master of an American steamship requested the discharge of a seaman, the latter joining in the request. The log book showed that on a certain day the sailor refused to work, alleging sickness, which proved to be intoxication, and the following day he was unable to work from consequent illness. For these reasons the master deducted from his wages four and eight days' pay respectively. It was held that the consul-general was justified in discharging the seaman. (1898) 22 Op. Atty.-Gen. 212.

Shirking and insolence. — A premeditated and persistent shirking and slighting of duty, or a deliberate and continued attitude of insolence and defiance by a seaman, is a sufficient cause for discharge, particularly when it appears that the seaman thereby intends to coerce or constrain the master in the discharge of his duty. The T. F. Oakes, (1888) 36 Fed. Rep. 442.

Effect of repentance. — The master may discharge a seaman from the vessel before the termination of the voyage for a legal cause, but not for slight offenses nor for a single offense unless of a very aggravated character. If he has sufficient cause for discharging him, and the seaman repents and offers amends and to return to duty, the master is bound to receive him. Hutchinson v. Coombs, (1825) 1 Ware (U. S.) 58, 12 Fed. Cas. No. 6,955.

Subsequent wages. — A consular officer of the United States may discharge a seaman, on the application of the master, for any cause sanctioned by the usages and principles of maritime law, as recognized in the United States, on the payment of the wages then earned; and all claim for wages for the remainder of the voyage is thereby cut off and barred. The T. F. Oakes, (1888) 36 Fed. Rep. 442.

Review of consul's action. — The action of a consul in the exercise of the discretion given him by sections 4580, 4581, 4583, and 4584, respecting the discharge of seamen in a foreign port, is not reviewable otherwise than by some competent court. (1879) 16 Op. Atty.-Gen. 268.

Forced discharge without hearing. — Where a hearing has been on the merits, on the demand of the master or the seaman, and a proper record preserved of the consul's decision and judgment discharging the seaman, it is ordinarily entitled to full credence. But where there was no hearing, no judgment, no record, a forced discharge, with no pay beyond the day of discharge, is inhuman and opposed to the policy and the statutes of this country (R. S. sec. 4580), and it is no defense that it was abetted by the irregular action of the consular office. The Sachem, (1894) 59 Fed. Rep. 790.

Intimidation. — Where a seaman is induced to assent to his discharge upon payment of a nominal sum from just apprehension of future ill treatment arising from the misconduct of the master, such assent is given under a species of duress and is no bar to the recovery of the amount actually due to him at the time of his discharge. If subsequently to such discharge the seaman ships in another vessel at an advanced lay, it is not a correct principle in settling his claim against the first ship to reckon full wages for the entire voyage of such ship, and to deduct therefrom his earnings in the second ship during the time. The amount due at the time of his discharge from the first ship is an absolute debt. Bates v. Seabury, (1858) 1 Sprague (U. S.) 433, 2 Fed. Cas. No. 1,104.

A consular certificate of the discharge of a seaman on the application of the master is only prima facie evidence of the material facts stated therein; and in a suit for wages for the unperformed part of the voyage by the discharged seaman, it may be shown that such discharge was illegal or without sufficient cause. The T. F. Oakes, (1888) 36 Fed. Rep. 442; Hutchinson v. Coombs, (1825) 1 Ware (U. S.) 58, 12 Fed. Cas. No. 6,955.

The certificate of the consul that the discharge of a seaman was granted upon the seaman's consent is conclusive upon that fact unless it is shown that the conduct of the consul was corrupt or fraudulent. Lamb v. Briard, (1848) Abb. Adm. 367, 14 Fed. Cas. No. 8,010.

Collection of wages by consul.—Where a consul has collected extra wages of the master of a vessel in a foreign port, or requested collection of such extra wages, on the arrival of the vessel in the United States it is not competent for the secretary of the treasury, or any bureau of the treasury department, in the examination of the accounts of the consul, to do anything more than revise the amount of collection and determine its arithmetical accuracy. (1879) 16 Op. Atty.-Gen. 268.

Discharge of master.—Under the Act of Feb. 28, 1803, sections 3 and 4, it was held that the master of the vessel is a "mariner," and was entitled, if a citizen of the United States, to three months' additional wages on being discharged in a foreign port, as in the case of a like discharge of any other seaman or mariner. Arey's Case, (1866) 11 Op. Atty.-Gen. 458.

Measure of damages for discharge.—If a seaman is discharged without justifiable cause and without his own consent, the measure of damages is the full amount of wages till the return of the vessel and the expenses of his return. The intermediate earnings of the seaman may be deducted from the expenses of his return, but not from the wages due. Hutchinson v. Coombs, (1825) 1 Ware (U. S.) 58, 12 Fed. Cas. No. 6,955.

What constitutes a discharge.—The owners are bound by the acts of the master, and when the master had arrested and imprisoned the crew on a criminal charge, before the voyage was ended, and when one of the crew had been discharged on a hearing before the magistrate from the criminal complaint and the others had been committed to prison and were awaiting trial, and no orders of the master had been given that such prisoners should return to duty when discharged, this worked a discharge of the crew from the vessel and absolved the relationship of master and seaman. Hill v. The Triumph, (1841) 12 Fed. Cas. No. 6,500.

Abandonment of vessel.—If the seaman abandons the ship by consent of the master, such mutual agreement annuls the shipping contract between them, and the seaman cannot afterwards reclaim his place on board the ship. The master may be subject to penalties or the ship to a charge of extra wages by positive law, for abandoning or leaving a seaman in a foreign port, but this does not reinstate the shipping contract. The Philadelphia, (1845) Olc. Adm. 216, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,084.

Sec. 4581. [Wages on discharge of seaman — collection — expenses of maintenance and return of sick seaman.] If any consular officer, when discharging any seaman, shall neglect to require the payment of and collect the arrears of wages and extra wages required to be paid in the case of the discharge of any seaman, he shall be accountable to the United States for the full amount thereof. The master shall provide any seaman so discharged with employment on a vessel agreed to by the seaman, or shall provide him with one month's extra wages, if it shall be shown to the satisfaction of the consul that such seaman was not discharged for neglect of duty, incompetency, or injury incurred on the vessel. If the seaman is discharged by voluntary consent before the consul, he shall be entitled to his wages up to the time of his discharge, but not for any further period. If the seaman is discharged on account of injury or illness, incapacitating him for service, the expenses of his maintenance and return to the United States shall be paid from the fund for the maintenance and transportation of destitute American seamen. [R. S.]

The section originally read as follows:

"SEC. 4581. If any consular officer, when discharging any seaman, shall neglect to require the payment of and collect the extra wages required to be paid in the case of the discharge of any seaman, he shall be accountable to the United States for the full amount of their share of such wages, and to such seaman to the full amount of his share thereof; and if any seaman shall, after his discharge, have incurred any expense for board or other necessities at the place of his discharge, before shipping again, such expense shall be paid out of the share of three months' wages to which he shall be entitled, which shall be retained for that purpose, and the balance only paid over to him." Act of Aug. 18, 1856, ch. 127, 11 Stat. L. 62.

It was amended by the Act of June 26, 1884, ch. 121, sec. 7, 23 Stat. L. 55, to read as follows:

"SEC. 4581. If any consular officer, when discharging any seaman, shall neglect to require the payment of and collect the arrears of wages and extra wages required to be paid in the case of the discharge of any seaman, he shall be accountable to the United States to the full amount thereof. If any seaman, after his discharge, shall have incurred any expense for board or other necessities at the place of his discharge, before shipping again, or for transportation to the United States, such expense shall be paid out of the arrears of wages and extra wages received by the consular officer, which shall be retained for that purpose, and the balance only paid over to such seamen [sic]."

It was again amended by the Act of April 4, 1888, ch. 61, sec. 3, 25 Stat. L. 80, by striking out all after the words "to the full amount thereof," and inserting in lieu thereof as follows:

"If any seaman, after his discharge, shall have incurred any expense for board or other necessities, or for reasonable charges for medical care and nursing, at the place of his discharge, before shipping again, or for transportation to the United States, such expense shall be paid out of the arrears of wages and extra wages received by the consular officer, which shall be retained for that purpose, and the balance only paid over to such seaman; and if such arrears and extra wages are not sufficient to defray such expense, the deficiency shall be paid from the fund in the Treasury for the maintenance and transportation of destitute American seamen."

It was again amended by the Act of Dec. 21, 1898, ch. 28, sec. 16, as above stated, to read as given in the text.

See note to R. S. sec. 4577, supra.

A disabled seaman, discharged in an American port at his own urgent solicitation, in order that he may be admitted to a United States marine hospital, cannot recover subsequent wages. Raymond v. The Ella S. Thayer, (1887) 40 Fed. Rep. 902.

Where a seaman shipped for a voyage is so severely chastised, with an improper weapon, because of his insolence, as to be necessarily left behind at a foreign port, he is entitled to his wages at the time of the vessel's arrival at the last port of delivery. Brown v. The Brig Independence, (1836) Crabbe (U. S.) 54, 4 Fed. Cas. No. 2,014.

Sick seaman not discharged. — A seaman, though sick, who is left by the master in a foreign port without his consent, and without being discharged, is entitled to his wages up to the end of the voyage, or until he can get back to his home port, though the consul collected from the master of the vessel wages actually due him and three months' extra wages. Heynashon v. Merriman, (1880) 1 Fed. Rep. 728.

"Other necessities," as used in amendment of 1884. See The W. L. White, (1885) 25 Fed. Rep. 505.

Sec. 4582. [Extra wages upon discharge in case of sale — transportation to home port.] Whenever a vessel of the United States is sold in a foreign country and her company discharged, it shall be the duty of the master to produce to the consular officer a certified list of the ship's company, and also the shipping articles, and besides paying to each seaman or apprentice the wages due him, he shall either provide him with adequate employment on board some other vessel bound to the port at which he was originally shipped, or to such other port as may be agreed upon by him, or furnish the means of sending him to such port, or provide him with a passage home, or deposit with the consular officer such a sum of money as is by the officer deemed sufficient to defray the expenses of his maintenance and passage home; and the consular officer shall indorse upon the agreement with the crew of the ship which the seaman or apprentice is leaving the particulars of any payment, provision, or deposit made under this section. A failure to comply with the provisions of this section shall render the owner liable to a fine of not exceeding fifty dollars. [R. S.]

This section was amended "to read as" above by the Act of Dec. 21, 1898, ch. 28, sec. 17, 30 Stat. L. 759.

The section originally read as follows:

"SEC. 4582. Whenever a vessel belonging to a citizen of the United States is sold in a foreign country, and her company discharged, or when a seaman, a citizen of the United States, is, with his own consent, discharged in a foreign country, it shall be the duty of the master to produce to the consular officer, the certified list of his ship's company, and to pay such consul or officer, for every seaman so discharged, designated on such list as a citizen of the United States, three months' pay, over and above the wages which may then be due to such seaman." Act of Feb. 28, 1803, ch. 9, 2 Stat. L. 203.

It was first amended by the Act of June 26, 1884, ch. 121, sec. 5, 23 Stat. L. 54, to read as follows:

"SEC. 4582. Whenever a vessel of the United States is sold in a foreign country, and her company discharged, it shall be the duty of the master to produce to the consular officer the certified list of his ship's company, and also the shipping articles, and to pay to said consular officer for every seaman so discharged one month's wages over and above the wages which may then be due to such seaman; but in case the master of the vessel so sold shall, with the assent of said seaman, provide him with adequate employment on board some other vessel bound to the port at which he was originally shipped, or to such other port as may be agreed upon by him, then no payment of extra wages shall be required."

It was again amended by the Act of 1891, as above stated, to read as given in the text.

Sale because of wreck.—The earlier statute requiring three months' extra wages to be paid to the crew whenever the vessel was sold in a foreign country was held not to apply to sales rendered unavoidable by an imperious necessity for which the master or owner was not responsible. Brown v. Chandler, (1877) 4 Fed. Cas. No. 1,998; The Wenonah, (1875) 1 Hask. (U. S.) 606, 29 Fed. Cas. No. 17,412; The Dawn, (1841) 2 Ware (U. S.) 126, 7 Fed. Cas. No. 3,666; The Dawn, (1839) 1 Ware (U. S.) 499, 7 Fed. Cas. No. 3,665; Henop v. Tucker, 2 Paine, (U. S.) 151, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 6,368; Gallagher v. Murray, (1879) 10 Ben. (U. S.) 290, 9 Fed. Cas. No. 5,193; (1831) 2 Op. Atty.-Gen. 418; (1804) 1 Op. Atty.-Gen. 148. Contra, Wells v. Meldrun, (1832) Blatchf. & H. Adm. 342, 29 Fed. Cas. No. 17,402; Pool v. Welsh, (1830) Gilp. (U. S.) 193, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,269; Hoffman v. Yarrington, (1867) 1 Lowell (U. S.) 168, 12 Fed. Cas. No. 6,580. But where the vessel is sold in consequence of a disaster at sea, the owners will not be exempted from the payment of the extra wages if the vessel can be repaired at a reasonable expense and in a reasonable time, and the burden of proof to show that she could not be repaired is upon the owners. The Dawn, (1839) 1 Ware (U. S.) 499, 7 Fed. Cas. No. 3,665; The Dawn, (1841) 2 Ware (U. S.) 126, 7 Fed. Cas. No. 3,666; (1831) 2 Op. Atty.-Gen. 418; (1804) 1 Op. Atty.-Gen. 148. And so where the sale had been occasioned by the fault of the owner, as where the vessel was unseaworthy at the commencement of the voyage, the extra pay will be due. Brown v. Chandler, (1877) 4 Fed. Cas. No. 1,998; Hoffman v. Yarrington, (1867) 1 Lowell (U. S.) 168, 12 Fed. Cas. No. 6,580. So where the necessity for the sale was occasioned by the natural decay and wear of the ship from natural causes, which existed at the inception of the voyage, and which were in no manner occasioned by any peril of the sea or disaster during the voyage, it was held to be within the provision of the Act, and the seamen were entitled to their extra wages. The Wenonah, (1875) 1 Hask. (U. S.) 606, 29 Fed. Cas. No. 17,412; Wells v. Meldrun, (1832) Blatchf. & H. Adm. 342, 29 Fed. Cas. No. 17,402.

The Act of 1803 was held equally applicable to the discharge of the men when such discharge took place in a foreign port, whether it was at the termination of their agreement or before such termination. Dustin v. Murray, (1871) 5 Ben. (U. S.) 10, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,201.

Discharge for want of funds.—Where seamen are discharged in a foreign port where there is no consul, the captain of the vessel stating that "there were no funds to pay with, and that she could sail no further," wages to the time of discharge being paid, they are entitled to extra wages under this section, as it read prior to the amendment. Gove v. Judson, (1864) 19 Fed. Rep. 523.

Effect of payment.—The payment to the consul of the amounts required by law, which the men failed to receive, or apply for, discharges the owners' liability therefor; but the master has no right to deduct from the amount due the men a charge for exchange. Drew v. Pope, (1871) 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 7, 7 Fed. Cas. No. 4,080.

Recovery.—The seamen have the right to maintain an action against the shipowner to recover as wages the amounts required to be paid by the master on a discharge in a foreign port. Wells v. Meldrun, (1832) Blatchf. & H. Adm. 342, 29 Fed. Cas. No. 17,402; Emerson v. Howland, (1816) 1 Mason (U. S.) 45, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,441; Orne v. Townsend, (1827) 4 Mason (U. S.) 541, 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,583; Dustin v. Murray, (1871) 5 Ben. (U. S.) 10, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,201; Woodworth v. Fennell, 30 Fed. Cas. No. 18,015.

Sec. 4583. [Discharge on complaint of seaman—extra wages and transportation.] Whenever on the discharge of a seaman in a foreign country by a consular officer on his complaint that the voyage is continued contrary to agreement, or that the vessel is badly provisioned or unseaworthy, or against the officers for cruel treatment, it shall be the duty of the consul or consular agent to institute a proper inquiry into the matter, and, upon his being satisfied of the truth and justice of such complaint, he shall require the master to pay to such seaman one month's wages over and above the wages due at the time of discharge, and to provide him with adequate employment on board some other vessel, or provide him with a passage on board some other vessel bound to the port from which he was originally shipped, or to the most convenient port of entry in the United States, or to a port agreed to by the seaman. [R. S.]

This section was amended "to read as" above by the Act of Dec. 21, 1898, ch. 28, sec. 18, 30 Stat. L. 760.

The section originally read as follows:

"Sec. 4583. No payment of extra wages shall be required upon the discharge of any seaman in cases where vessels are wrecked, or stranded, or condemned as unfit for service. If any consular officer, upon the complaint of any seaman that he has fulfilled his contract, or that the voyage is continued contrary to his agreement, is satisfied that the contract has expired, or that the voyage has been protracted by circumstances beyond the control of the master, and without any design on his part to violate the articles of shipment, then he may, if he deems it just, discharge the mariner without exacting the three months' additional pay. No payment of such extra wages, or any part thereof, shall be remitted in any case, except as allowed in this section." Act of July 20, 1840, ch. 48, 5 Stat. L. 395; Act of Aug. 18, 1856, ch. 127, 11 Stat. L. 62.

It was first amended by the Act of June 26, 1884, ch. 121, sec. 3, 23 Stat. L. 54, to read as follows:

"SEC. 4583. Whenever on the discharge of a seaman in a foreign country, on his complaint that the voyage is continued contrary to agreement, the consular officer shall be satisfied that such voyage has been designedly and unnecessarily prolonged in violation of the articles of shipment, or whenever a seaman is discharged by a consular officer in consequence of any hurt or injury received in the service of the vessel, such consular officer shall require the payment by the master of one month's wages for such seaman over and above the wages due at the time of discharge."

It was again amended by the Act of 1896, as above stated, to read as given in the text.

Prior to the amendment it was held, under this section, that where an American vessel has been condemned in a foreign port as unfit for service and sold, and it appears that the master has acted in good faith and as a prudent owner would do if uninsured, and nothing more is shown excepting that the ship had met with some rough weather and some injuries from perils of the seas, the crew could not recover two months' extra wages, for they are within the proviso of section 26 of the Act of Aug. 18, 1856 (11 Stat. L. 62), denying extra wages when a ship is condemned as unfit for service. Nor in such a case can the crew recover the expense of their return to the United States. Hoffman v. Yarrington, (1867) 1 Lowell (U. S.) 168, 12 Fed. Cas. No. 6,580.

A literal strict construction of the exemption provided for by this section, before the amendment, was not the intention of Congress, but it was rather its purpose only to exonerate the master and owner from this liability when the enterprise is determined by a loss or condemnation of the vessel for which her owners are not directly responsible by their own neglect. The Wenonah, (1875) 1 Hask. (U. S.) 306, 29 Fed. Cas. No. 17,412.

Sec. 4584. [Disposal of extra wages.] [Repealed.]

This section was as follows:

"SEC. 4584. Whenever any consular officer upon the discharge of any seaman demands or receives extra three months' wages for such seaman, two-thirds thereof shall be paid by such officer to the seaman so discharged, upon his engagement on board of any vessel to return to the United States.

Unseaworthy vessel.—To bring a vessel within the exception of the section prior to amendment, as condemned as unfit for service, it is necessary that the vessel be condemned, the mere fact that the vessel was unseaworthy, and that the master had no funds to proceed farther, does not make an exception under this statute. Gove v. Judson, (1884) 19 Fed. Rep. 523.

Change of rule.—"The general maritime law, which in a case of semi-naufragium, or where the vessel was condemned and sold as too unseaworthy to be repaired, gave discharged seamen passage home and wages up to the time of reaching home, is unquestionably affected and modified by the statutes of the United States, which provide for all cases of discharge of seamen in foreign ports, and in case of destitute seamen their return home by the consular agents of the United States at the expense of a fund derived from the one-third of the three months' extra wages collected by the consul or agents from all American ships discharging seamen in foreign ports, except where ships are stranded or wrecked, or condemned as unfit for service." Pardee, J., in Kelly v. Otis, (1885) 23 Fed. Rep. 903.

Refusal to permit complaint.—The refusal of the master to permit a seaman to go on shore and lay his complaints of ill-treatment before the consul, and a well-grounded apprehension of continued ill-treatment, would justify the seaman in leaving the vessel and will entitle him to full wages to the end of his contract term. Knowlton v. Boss, (1848) 1 Sprague (U. S.) 163, 14 Fed. Cas. No. 7,901.

Recovery of extra wages.—Where an American seaman is discharged by the master in a foreign port, he may recover, in a libel for wages, the advance authorized if the same be not paid to the consul abroad to be distributed according to the Act. The onus probandi is on the master to show that the advance was paid. Orne v. Townsend, (1827) 4 Mason (U. S.) 541, 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,583.

Damages for tort.—The extra month's wages allowed by this Act does not prevent the recovery for damages for the tort or for the expense of cure. The W. L. White, (1885) 25 Fed. Rep. 503.

Expenses of cure.—A discharge by the consul in a foreign port, while sick ashore as a result of an injury received in the service of the ship, will not affect the seaman's right to recover the expense of his cure. The W. L. White, (1885) 25 Fed. Rep. 503.

The remaining third shall be retained for the purpose of creating a fund for the payment of the passages of seamen, citizens of the United States, who may be desirous of returning to the United States, and for the maintenance of American seamen who may be destitute, and may be in such foreign port; and the several sums retained for such fund shall be accounted for with the Treasury every six months by the persons receiving the same." Act of Feb. 28, 1803, ch. 9, 2 Stat. L. 203; Act of July 20, 1840, ch. 48, 5 Stat.

L. 395; Act of Aug. 18, 1856, ch. 127, 11 Stat. L. 62.

It was expressly repealed by the Act of June 26, 1884, ch. 121, sec. 8, 23 Stat. L. 55.

Secs. 4585-4587. [Relate to assessments and collections for hospital fund. See HOSPITALS AND ASYLUMS, vol. 3, p. 250, note.] [Repealed.]

Sec. 4588. [Certificate of citizenship.] The collector of every district shall keep a book or books, in which, at the request of any seaman, being a citizen of the United States of America, and producing proof of his citizenship, authenticated in the manner hereinafter directed, he shall enter the name of such seaman, and shall deliver to him a certificate, in the following form, that is to say: "I, A. B., collector of the district of D., do hereby certify, that E. F., an American seaman, aged _____ years, or thereabouts, of the height of _____ feet _____ inches, (describing the said seaman as particularly as may be,) has, this day, produced to me proof in the manner directed by law; and I do hereby certify that the said E. F. is a citizen of the United States of America. In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and seal of office, this _____ day of _____." It shall be the duty of the collectors to file and preserve the proofs of citizenship so produced. For each certificate so delivered, the collectors shall be entitled to receive from the seaman applying for the same the sum of twenty-five cents. [R. S.]

Act of May 28, 1796, ch. 36, 1 Stat. L. 477.

Fees abolished.—See Act of June 19, 1886, ch. 421, sec. 1, under SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION.

Naturalization of seamen.—See NATURALIZATION, vol. 5, p. 210.

Absence of certificate.—It is no objection to the recovery of extra wages that the name of the seaman is omitted as an American citizen in the list of the crew, certified from the collector's office, under the Act of 1796, ch. 36, sec. 4, 1 Stat. L. 477, if he is named as an American citizen on the master's list of the crew. Orne v. Townsend, (1827) 4 Mason (U. S.) 541, 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,583.

Sec. 4589. [Protest upon impressment.] [Repealed.]

Sec. 4590. [Penalty for neglect to make protest.] [Repealed.]

These sections were as follows:

"SEC. 4589. The master of every vessel of the United States, any of the crew whereof shall have been impressed or detained by any foreign power, shall, at the first port at which such vessel arrives, if such impressment or detention happened on the high seas, or if the same happened within any foreign port, then in the port in which the same happened, immediately make a protest, stating the manner of such impressment or detention, by whom made, together with the name and place of residence of the person impressed or detained; distinguishing also whether he was an American citizen; and, if not, to what nation he belonged. Such master shall also transmit, by post or otherwise, every such protest made in a foreign country, to the nearest consul or agent, or to the minister of the United States resident in such country, if any such there be; preserving a duplicate of such protest, to be by him sent immediately after his arrival within the United States to the Secretary of State, together with information to whom the original protest was transmitted. In case such protest shall be made within the United States, or in any foreign country, in which no consul, agent, or minister of the United States resides, the same shall, as soon thereafter as practicable, be transmitted by such master, by post or otherwise, to the Secretary of State." Act of May 28, 1796, ch. 36, 1 Stat. L. 477.

"SEC. 4590. The collectors of the districts of the United States shall, from time to time, make known the provisions of the two preceding sections to all masters of vessels of the United States entering or clearing at their several offices. The master of every such vessel shall, before he is admitted to an entry by any such collector, be required to declare on oath whether any of the crew of the vessel under his command have been impressed or detained, in the course of his voyage, and how far he has complied with the directions of the preceding section. Every master who willfully neglects or refuses to make the declarations herein required, or to perform the duties enjoined by the preceding section, shall be liable to a penalty of one hundred dollars. The collectors shall prosecute for any forfeiture that may be incurred under this section." Act of May 28, 1796, ch. 36, 1 Stat. L. 478.

They were expressly repealed by the Act of March 3, 1897, ch. 389, sec. 16, 29 Stat. L. 691.

Sec. 4591. [List of certificates of citizenship.] The collector of every port of entry in the United States shall send a list of the seamen to whom certificates of citizenship have been granted, once every three months, to the Secretary of State, together with an account of such impressments or detentions, as shall appear, by the protests of the masters, to have taken place. discharge, from the wages of all persons except apprentices, so engaged or discharged, and retain, any sums not exceeding the sums specified in that behalf in the table marked 'E' in the schedule annexed to this Title." Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 263.

260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

[VII. OFFENSES AND PUNISHMENTS.]

Sec. 4596. [Various offenses by seamen.—penalties.] The words “domestic trade” in this section shall include trade between ports of the United States and trade between ports of the United States and the Dominion of Canada, Newfoundland, the West Indies, and Mexico. The words “foreign trade” shall include trade between ports of the United States and foreign ports, except as above specified, and trade between Atlantic and Pacific ports of the United States. Whenever any seaman who has been lawfully engaged or any apprentice to the sea service commits any of the following offenses he shall be punishable as follows:

First. For desertion, if the offense occur at a port of the United States or a foreign port in the domestic trade, by forfeiture of all or any part of the clothes or effects he leaves on board and of all or any part of the wages or emoluments which he has then earned. If the offense occur at a foreign port in the foreign trade, by forfeiture of all or any part of the clothes or effects he leaves on board and of all or any part of the wages or emoluments which he has then earned; and also, at the discretion of the court, by imprisonment for not more than one month.

Second. For neglecting or refusing, without reasonable cause, to join his vessel or to proceed to sea in his vessel, or for absence without leave at any time within twenty-four hours of the vessel's sailing from any port, either at the commencement or during the progress of any voyage, or for absence at any time without leave and without sufficient reason from his vessel or from his duty, not amounting to desertion or not treated as such by the master, if the offense occur at a port of the United States or a foreign port in the domestic trade, by a forfeiture from his wages of not more than two days' pay, or sufficient to defray any expenses which have been properly incurred in hiring a substitute; or if the offense occur at a foreign port, in the foreign trade, by a forfeiture from his wages of not more than two days' pay, or, at the discretion of the court, by imprisonment for not more than one month.

Third. For quitting the vessel, in whatever trade engaged, at a foreign or domestic port, without leave after her arrival at her port of delivery and before she is placed in security, by forfeiture from his wages of not more than one month's pay.

Fourth. For willful disobedience to any lawful command at sea, by being, at the option of the master, placed in irons until such disobedience shall cease, and upon arrival in port, if of the United States, by forfeiture from his wages of not more than four days' pay, or upon arrival in a foreign port by forfeiture from his wages of not more than four days' pay, or, at the discretion of the court, by imprisonment for not more than one month.

Fifth. For continued willful disobedience to lawful command or continued willful neglect of duty at sea by being, at the option of the master, placed in irons, on bread and water, with full rations every fifth day, until such disobedience shall cease, and upon arrival in port, if of the United States, by forfeiture, for every twenty-four hours' continuance of such disobedience or neglect, of either a sum of not more than twelve days' pay or sufficient to defray any expenses which have been properly incurred in hiring a substitute, or upon arrival in a foreign port, in addition to the above penalty, by imprisonment for not more than three months, at the discretion of the court.

Sixth. For assaulting any master or mate, in whatever trade engaged, by imprisonment for not more than two years.

Seventh. Eighth. For any act of smuggling for which he is convicted, and whereby loss or damage is occasioned to the master or owner, in whatever trade engaged, he shall be liable to pay such master or owner such a sum as is sufficient to reimburse the master or owner for such loss or damage; and the whole or any part of his wages may be retained in satisfaction or on account of such liability; and he shall be liable to imprisonment for a period of not more than twelve months. [R. S.]

This section was amended "to read as" above by the Act of Dec. 21, 1898, ch. 28, sec. 19, 30 Stat. L. 760.

The section originally read as follows:

"SEC. 4596. Whenever any seaman who has been lawfully engaged, or any apprentice to the sea-service, commits any of the following offenses, he shall be punishable as follows:

"First, For desertion, by imprisonment for not more than three months, and by forfeiture of all or any part of the clothes or effects he leaves on board, and of all or any part of the wages or emoluments which he has then earned.

"Second. For neglecting and refusing, without reasonable cause, to join his vessel, or to proceed to sea in his vessel, or for absence without leave at any time within twenty-four hours of the vessel sailing from any port, either at the commencement or during the progress of any voyage; or for absence at any time without leave, and without sufficient reason, from his vessel, or from his duty, not amounting to desertion, or not treated as such by the master; by imprisonment for not more than one month, and also, at the discretion of the court, by forfeiture of his wages, of not more than two days' pay, and, for every twenty-four hours of absence, either a sum not exceeding six days' pay, or any expenses which have been properly incurred in hiring a substitute.

"Third. For quitting the vessel without leave after her arrival at her port of delivery, and before she is placed in security, by forfeiture out of his wages of not more than one month's pay.

"Fourth. For willful disobedience to any lawful command, by imprisonment for not more than two months, and also, at the discretion of the court, by forfeiture out of his wages of not more than four days' pay.

"Fifth. For continued willful disobedience to lawful commands, or continued willful neglect of duty, by imprisonment for not more than six months, and also, at the discretion of the court, by forfeiture, for every twenty-four hours' continuance of such disobedience or neglect, of either a sum not more than twelve days' pay, or sufficient to defray any expenses which have been properly incurred in hiring a substitute.

"Sixth. For assaulting any master or mate, by imprisonment for not more than two years.

"Seventh. For combining with any others of the crew to disobey lawful commands, or to neglect duty, or to impede navigation of the vessel, or the progress of the voyage, by imprisonment for not more than twelve months.

"Eighth. For willfully damaging the vessel, or embezzling or willfully damaging any of the stores or cargo, by forfeiture out of his wages, of a sum equal in amount to the loss thereby sustained, and also, at the discretion of the court, by imprisonment for not more than twelve months.

"Ninth. For any act of smuggling of which he is convicted, and whereby loss or damage is occasioned to the master or owner, he shall be liable to pay such master or owner such a sum as is sufficient to reimburse the master or owner for such loss or damage; and the whole or any part of his wages may be retained in satisfaction or on account of such liability; and he shall also be liable to imprisonment for a period of not more than twelve months." Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 273.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following, infra, p. 850.

Effect of other provisions. — The effect of the Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, was to sweep away all the penal provisions of the Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, as carried into the Revised Statutes, in so far as they applied to vessels in the coastwise trade, with the exceptions named in the repealing Act. U. S. v. Buckley, (1887) 31 Fed. Rep. 804; U. S. v. Bain, (1889) 40 Fed. Rep. 455; U. S. v. Mason, (1888) 34 Fed. Rep. 129; U. S. v. King, (1885) 23 Fed. Rep. 138; U. S. v. Bain, (1880) 5 Fed. Rep. 192; U. S. v. The Grace Lothrop, (1877) 95 U. S. 532.

But by the Act of Aug. 19, 1890, ch. 801 (supra, p. 851), the provisions of sections 4596 and 4597 are extended and made applicable to vessels in the coastwise trade and the trade between the United States and the Dominion of Canada or Newfoundland, or the West Indies, or Mexico, where the crews of such vessels have been shipped by a shipping commissioner as authorized by the Act of June 19, 1886, ch. 421, sec. 2 (supra, p. 850). The Victorian, (1898) 88 Fed. Rep. 797.

Foreign vessels. — This section applies to seamen engaged on foreign vessels while in American waters. U. S. v. McArdle, (1873) 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 367, 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,653.

Commencement of service.—A seaman is a member of the crew from the time he signs the shipping articles and subject to all the penalties imposed on seamen by the maritime laws of the United States. The Ida G. Farren, (1904) 127 Fed. Rep. 766; Tucker v. Alexandroff, (1902) 183 U. S. 424. See also notes to R. S. secs. 4511, 4520, 4530, supra.

Desertion.—The Act of Congress of July 20, 1790 (1 Stat. L. 131), makes desertion carrying with it a forfeiture of wages a statutory offense and defines the evidence by which it is to be established. The Martha, (1830) 1 Blatchf. & H. Adm. 151, 16 Fed. Cas. No. 9,144.

Deviation.—Seamen are justified in leaving a vessel on the announcement made by the master that he intends to deviate from the voyage stipulated in the shipping articles. The Laura Madsen, (1897) 84 Fed. Rep. 362.

Persistent ill-treatment of seamen by the officers of the vessel justifies them in leaving the vessel, and if they do so they are not deserters. Coffin v. Weld, (1871) 2 Lowell (U. S.) 81, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,953.

Where the crew of a vessel had been wantonly treated with great harshness and severity, on a passage from Boston to a foreign port, and one of them after arriving at such port was, without cause, severely beaten by the mate, whereupon he appealed to the master, demanding to see the American consul, and refusing to serve longer under the mate, it was held that the seaman had the right to lay his complaint before the consul, and that the master had no right to require him to return immediately and unconditionally to duty under the mate. Knowlton v. Boss, (1848) 1 Sprague (U. S.) 163, 14 Fed. Cas. No. 7,901.

The master having punished the seaman for refusing so to return, and having given no assurance that the mate would be discharged, it was held that the seaman had a right to leave the service of the ship and to recover his wages up to the time of his reaching Boston by another vessel; and also damages for the punishment and for refusal of permission to see the consul. Knowlton v. Boss, (1848) 1 Sprague (U. S.) 163, 14 Fed. Cas. No. 7,901.

Forcible return.—If a seaman who absents himself from his vessel is afterwards forcibly brought back, and returns to his duty, that is a condonation of his offense and a remission of the forfeiture of his wages; and a stipulation in the shipping articles that it shall not have such effect will be held to be void. Freeman v. Baker, (1833) Blatchf. & H. Adm. 372, 9 Fed. Cas. No. 5,084.

Discharge.—On a controversy between the seamen and master over claims for wages, the seamen were told to go to work or go ashore, and they agreed to the latter if they were paid off in full to date, and orders were given them for their wages. It was held that the seamen were discharged and were not deserters. The Frank C. Barker, (1884) 19 Fed. Rep. 332.

Termination of contract.—There can be no desertion after the voyage is ended. The voyage is ended when the vessel is safely moored at her last port of discharge. The Martha, (1830) 1 Blatchf. & H. Adm. 151, 16 Fed. Cas. No. 9,144.

The failure of the captain to punish a seaman for his neglect of duty and for leaving the vessel from time to time for the purpose of dissipation does not give rise to an implication of consent on the part of the master to the termination of the contract. The Occidental, (1898) 87 Fed. Rep. 485.

Intent.—Where a seaman went ashore without intention to desert, and while in a saloon on shore was taken in custody by the police as a witness against the saloonkeeper, and imprisoned in a house of detention, if the vessel meanwhile leaves the port, these facts do not make out a desertion. The Lizzie M. Dun, (1887) 30 Fed. Rep. 927.

A seaman's leaving the vessel without permission is not necessarily desertion. In order to constitute desertion in the sense of the law, he must quit the ship and her service, not only without leave but without justifiable cause, and with intent not again to return to the ship's duty. The Mary C. Conery, (1881) 9 Fed. Rep. 222.

A seaman who goes ashore without the intention of deserting, to apply to an American consul for redress for alleged cruel treatment on board, leaves the vessel for reasonable cause, and does not incur a forfeiture of wages. Freeman v. Baker, (1833) Blatchf. & H. Adm. 372, 9 Fed. Cas. No. 5,084.

Drunkness is no excuse for desertion. The Mermaid, (C. C. A. 1902) 115 Fed. Rep. 13, (1900) 104 Fed. Rep. 301.

Where a seaman has gone ashore by permission and without knowing that the ship was about to sail, and his failure to rejoin her is caused by drunkenness, but without any intention on his part to desert, only a qualified forfeiture will in such case be imposed. The Ship Ericson, (1876) 3 Sawy. (U. S.) 559, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,510.

Absence without leave.—Where a seaman is sent ashore on an errand and stays beyond all reasonable limit warranted by the errand on which he has been sent, and the master makes all reasonable efforts to find him, the master need not wait for him longer, but may leave him, and where there is no intention on the part of the seaman to desert, this will not be considered desertion, but will be absence from duty without leave and without sufficient excuse, for which the court may inflict punishment in its discretion, and the master will not be liable for the board or expenses of return incurred by the seaman. Brink v. Lyons, (1883) 18 Fed. Rep. 605.

Failure to join vessel.—A seaman is guilty of desertion and forfeits his wages where, when he leaves the ship by permission, he does not return in time to sail with her, knowing the time when she is to leave port, and when thereafter he does not attempt to join her at a port where he knows she will be, but goes to a port where he knows she will not be, until the season is over. The Ida G. Farren, (1904) 127 Fed. Rep. 766.

A seaman leaving a ship at a foreign port, during her voyage, with or without leave, and not returning within a reasonable time, before another man is hired in his place, forfeits the wages then due him. The Philadelphia, (1845) Olc. Adm. 216, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,084.

If a seaman sent on shore in the employment of the ship neglects to return to his duty, the ship continuing at the port a sufficient time to give him opportunity to do so, the master in the meantime making inquiry for him, such voluntary absence will be a desertion and work a forfeiture of his wages. Piehl v. Balchen, (1844) Olc. Adm. 24, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,137.

Refusal to join vessel.—When a seaman, against the orders of the master and knowing that the ship was about to sail, went ashore and failed to return to the ship, and subsequently, when apprehended by the master, broke away from his custody, and it appeared that further delay would have imperiled the ship, this conduct amounted to a desertion, and the wages due the seaman were forfeited. The Ship Ericson, (1876) 3 Sawy. (U. S.) 559, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,510.

Absence without leave.—The forfeiture of wages for absence without leave is left largely to the discretion of the court; and where such absence was not fully justified, but had caused no pecuniary loss to the master, a small deduction from the wages should be made. Scott v. Rose, (1874) 2 Lowell (U. S.) 381, 21 Fed. Cas. No. 12,545.

Whether these provisions of law are now applicable to coastwise voyages or not, the principles involved in them should govern the courts in dealing with seamen. They but reflect the spirit of the maritime law. Following the general rule of the maritime law which abhors the entire forfeitures that would often leave seamen helpless and dependent, and which refuses to enforce such forfeitures except for gross misconduct, a forfeiture of the entire wages should be limited to cases of that character. In a case not amounting to desertion, and not of any aggravated misconduct, the forfeiture upon the analogy of the statute should not exceed more than two days' pay, etc., and the "expense of hiring a substitute." The San Marcos, (1886) 27 Fed. Rep. 567.

Clandestine return.—After a mariner has voluntarily left the vessel in a foreign port without leave of the officer in command, and his place has been supplied by another, he cannot acquire a right to be reinstated, and to wages, by coming clandestinely on board and remaining concealed from her officers until she is out at sea. The Philadelphia, (1845) Olc. Adm. 216, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,084.

The master under such circumstances is authorized to compel him to work his passage while he continues with the ship, and no engagement to pay him wages can be implied therefrom. The Philadelphia, (1845) Olc. Adm. 216, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,084.

Punishment for desertion.—Where seamen deserted and were detained in the prison of the port in consequence of their refusal to return to duty on board the ship, the proper charges for their arrest and detention, the wages of their substitutes, and the amounts paid by the ship for injury to property by them while in custody on their way to the ship, should be deducted from their wages. The W. F. Babcock, (C. C. A. 1898) 85 Fed. Rep. 978.

A stipulation in writing for a series of voyages may be terminated or varied by mutual consent of the master and crew and a new voyage be substituted by parol agreement. But the desertion of the seamen during the second voyage cannot be made to inure to the master as a forfeiture of wages earned and due under the first one. Piehl v. Balchen, (1844) Olc. Adm. 24, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,137.

Disobedience of orders.—A seaman must obey orders or suffer the penalty under the statute; therefore he does not assume the risk of operating the winch, known to be dangerous, when ordered so to do by his superior officer, and if he exercises reasonable care to avoid injury he may recover damages for injuries received in obeying such orders. Eldridge v. Atlas Steamship Co., (1892) 134 N. Y. 187.

Quarrelsomeness, etc.—No forfeiture of wages is incurred by quarrelsomeness or the use of foul language. The general maritime law empowers the master, by means of other punishments, to enforce proper discipline in these respects. The Alps, (1883) 19 Fed. Rep. 139.

Insubordination on the part of a steward, an educated man, is a greater offense than on that of an ordinary mariner. Peters v. Martens, (1875) 2 W. N. C. (Pa.) 603, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,031.

A refusal to do duty at a moment of high excitement from punishment inflicted on the party, if not followed by obstinate perseverance, does not cause a forfeiture of wages. Orne v. Townsend, (1827) 4 Mason (U. S.) 541, 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,583.

Embezzlement.—Where one of the libellants had been guilty of embezzling the cargo and had abandoned the vessel without leave, before the final relinquishment by the master of prosecuting the voyage according to the original contract, such libellant should not recover wages, although criminally punished for the offense of mutinous and disorderly conduct on shipboard. Hill v. The Triumph, (1841) 12 Fed. Cas. No. 6,500.

Punishment.—Where the libellants were guilty of insubordinate and mutinous conduct on board of the vessel on the voyage, and the master had arrested and imprisoned them on a criminal prosecution for the offense, they should not, in addition to the punishment for the criminal offense charged against them, absolutely forfeit their wages for the voyage. Hill v. The Triumph, (1841) 12 Fed. Cas. No. 6,500.

On a libel being filed in admiralty on the civil side of the court to recover seamen's wages, it appearing that the libelants had been guilty of insubordinate and mutinous conduct on the voyage, yet that they had subsequently performed duty on board and aided in bringing the vessel safely into port, it was held that their wages should not be totally forfeited. Hill v. The Triumph, (1841) 12 Fed. Cas. No. 6,500.

Imprisonment on shore.—"All laws sanctioning and regulating imprisonment and the use of force to compel involuntary servitude on the part of seamen in the merchant vessels of this country were repealed and abrogated by the Act of Dec. 21, 1898, except that disobedience at sea may be punished by confinement in irons with a bread and water diet. In this statute the legislative intent to extend to sailors the benefit of the Thirteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States is plainly indicated, and at the present time it is just as unlawful to imprison a sailor, who at any port refuses to perform a contract which he has entered into for service on a ship, as to imprison a journeyman mechanic or farm laborer for a similar refusal. No matter how much inconvenience and loss shipowners and merchants and travelers may suffer by detention of an American ship, caused by refusal of the crew when the ship is in port to proceed on a voyage, it is unlawful to use judicial process or force to coerce the crew." Per Hanford, D. J., The South Portland, (1901) 111 Fed. Rep. 767.

Liability of vessel.—Imprisonment at the instance of the master, whether through judicial process or otherwise, is a violation of personal rights which renders the vessel liable for damages. The South Portland, (1901) 111 Fed. Rep. 767; Johnston v. Mowatt, (1902) 115 Fed. Rep. 844.

Where seamen refuse to work while in a port and before the termination of the voyage, and where the master notifies the authorities of that fact and asks that he may discharge such seamen, but the authorities refuse permission, but take charge of the matter and confine the seamen in prison, returning them thereafter to the ship, upon which they finish the voyage, doing their work as seamen, the master of the vessel cannot be held liable for such imprisonment, it not being at his instance and he having no control over it. Johnson v. Mowatt, (1902) 115 Fed. Rep. 844.

Sec. 4597. [Entry of offense in log book.] Upon the commission of any of the offenses enumerated in the preceding section an entry thereof shall be made in the official log book on the day on which the offense was committed, and shall be signed by the master and by the mate or one of the crew; and the offender, if still in the vessel, shall, before her next arrival at any port, or, if she is at the time in port, before her departure therefrom, be furnished with a copy of such entry, and have the same read over distinctly and audibly to him, and may thereupon make such a reply thereto as he thinks fit; and a statement that a copy of the entry has been so furnished, or the same has been so read over, together with his reply, if any, made by the offender, shall likewise be entered and signed in the same manner. In any subsequent legal proceedings the entries hereinbefore required shall, if practicable, be produced or proved, and in default of such production or proof the court hearing the case may, at its discretion, refuse to receive evidence of the offense. [R. S.]

Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 274.

This section was amended to read as above by the Act of Dec. 21, 1898, ch. 28, sec. 20, 30 Stat. L. 761. The amendment consists in the addition in the first clause of the words "on the day on which the offense was committed"; the omission of the word "either" before the words "be furnished with a copy," and the insertion of the word "and" in place of the word "or" before the words "have the same read."

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following. supra, p. 850.

The evident purpose of the statute is to prevent prosecutions for breaches of discipline on shipboard, except in those cases where the master shall deem the matter of sufficient importance, while the circumstances are all fresh in his memory and before there is any temptation to make use of it as a means to some other end, to enter a charge against the offender, together with his reply, in the official log book. If any difficulty arises between the crew and the master, a previous offense or dereliction, of which no entry was made, cannot be invoked or trumped up, as a makeweight in this subsequent controversy. U. S. v. Brown, (1876) 3 Sawy. (U. S.) 602, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,672.

The general purpose of these provisions of law is to prevent the oppression of seamen by trumping up unfounded claims of misconduct; and ordinarily, and if the facts are left in doubt, the failure to enter the facts in the log should defeat the attempted defense. The Bark T. F. Whiton, (1879) 10 Ben. (U. S.) 369, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,849.

Prior to the amendments of this and the preceding section by the Act of 1898, it was held that under the Act of Aug. 19, 1890, ch. 801, as amended by the Act of Feb. 18, 1895, vessels engaged in coastwise trade (except between the ports on the Atlantic and ports on the Pacific coast) and vessels engaged in trade in the ports of the United States and the Dominion of Canada are exempt from the requirements of the Act as to keeping official log books. Therefore the production of an official log book containing evidence of the desertion of any of the crew of such vessels is not necessary for the forfeiture of a deserter's wages. The Victorian, 80 Fed. Rep. 797.

Time of entry in log.—To make the log of any value as evidence the entries should be made at the time of the transactions referred to. The Mary C. Conery, (1881) 9 Fed. Rep. 222.

The captain's entries in his memorandum book, a month afterwards, from previous pencil memoranda, are not entitled to the weight of evidence of a log book with proper contemporaneous entries. Brink v. Lyons, (1883) 18 Fed. Rep. 605.

Refusal to hear read.—The command that a seaman attend to hear the entry in the log read is a lawful command, and a wilful disobedience of it will subject the seaman to the penalty provided by statute. The Alps, (1883) 19 Fed. Rep. 139.

The failure to enter facts in the log on which deduction of wages is claimed does not absolutely prevent proof of those facts, but gives the court a discretion to reject the evidence. The Bark T. F. Whiton, (1879) 10 Ben. (U. S.) 369, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,849.

A prosecution cannot be maintained against a seaman for any of the offenses defined in R. S. sec. 4596, unless an entry of the circumstances is made by the master in the official log book of the vessel as soon as possible after the occurrence, and read over to the seaman, or a copy furnished him and his reply thereto entered in the same manner. U. S. v. Brown, (1876) 3 Sawy. (U. S.) 602, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,672.

Contradicting log.—If the log book states a desertion, it may be repelled by proof of the falsity of the entry, or its being made by mistake. Orne v. Townsend, (1827) 4 Mason (U. S.) 541, 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,583.

Failure to produce log.—As the log book was not produced the presumption was that the entry was not made in the log. The Bark T. F. Whiton, (1879) 10 Ben. (U. S.) 369, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,849.

Desertion may be proved either under the maritime law, including proof of intent not to return or absence without leave, or under section 4596 without reference to that intent, and where proved under the maritime law an entry in the ship's log at the time need not be shown. Welcome v. The Yosemite, (1883) 18 Fed. Rep. 383.

Sec. 4598. [Deserters may be apprehended on justice's warrant.] [Repealed.]

Sec. 4599. [Arrest of seamen without warrant, when allowable.] [Repealed.]

These sections were as follows:

"SEC. 4598. If any seaman who shall have signed a contract to perform a voyage shall, at any port or place, desert, or shall absent himself from such vessel, without leave of the master, or officer commanding in the absence of the master, it shall be lawful for any justice of the peace within the United States, upon the complaint of the master, to issue his warrant to apprehend such deserter, and bring him before such justice; and if it then appears that he has signed a contract within the intent and meaning of this Title, and that the voyage agreed for is not finished, or altered, or the contract otherwise dissolved, and that such seaman has deserted the vessel, or absented himself without leave, the justice shall commit him to the house of correction or common jail of the city, town, or place, to remain there until the vessel shall be ready to proceed on her voyage, or till the master shall require his discharge, and then to be delivered to the master, he paying all the cost of such commitment, and deducting the same out of the wages due to such seaman." Act of July 20, 1790, ch. 29, 1 Stat. L. 134.

"SEC. 4599. Whenever, either at the commencement of or during any voyage, any seaman or apprentice neglects or refuses to join, or deserts from or refuses to proceed to sea in, any vessel in which he is duly engaged to serve, or is found otherwise absenting himself therefrom without leave, the master, or any mate, or the owner, or consignee, or shipping-commissioner, may, in any place in the United States, with or without the assistance of the local public officers or constables, who are hereby directed to give their assistance if required, and also at any place out of the United States, if and so far as the laws in force at such place will permit, apprehend him without first procuring a warrant; and may thereupon, in any case, and shall in case he so requires and it is practicable, convey him before any court of justice or magistrate of any State, city, town, or county, within the United States, authorized to take cognizance of offenses of like degree and kind, to be dealt with according to the provisions of law governing such cases; and may, for the purpose of conveying him before such court or magistrate, detain him in custody for a period not exceeding twenty-four hours, or may, if he does not so require, or if there is no such court at or near the place, at once convey him on board. If such apprehension appears to the court or magistrate before whom the case is brought to have been made on improper or on insufficient grounds, the master, mate, consignee, or shipping-commissioner who makes the same, or causes the same to be made, shall be liable to a penalty of not more than one hundred dollars; but such penalty, if inflicted, shall be a bar to any action for false imprisonment." Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 274.

They were expressly repealed by the Act of Dec. 21, 1898, ch. 28, sec. 25, supra, p. 870.

Sec. 5280. [Arrest of deserting seamen from foreign vessels.] On application of a consul or vice-consul of any foreign government having a treaty with the United States stipulating for the restoration of seamen deserting, made in writing, stating that the person therein named has deserted from a vessel of any such government, while in any port of the United States, and on proof by the exhibition of the register of the vessel, ship's roll, or other official document, that the person named belonged, at the time of desertion, to the crew of such vessel, it shall be the duty of any court, judge, commissioner of any circuit court, justice, or other magistrate, having competent power, to issue warrants to cause such person to be arrested for examination. If, on examination, the facts stated are found to be true, the person arrested not being a citizen of the United States, shall be delivered up to the consul or vice-consul, to be sent back to the dominions of any such government, or, on the request and at the expense of the consul or vice-consul, shall be detained until the consul or vice-consul finds an opportunity to send him back to the dominions of any such government. No person so arrested shall be detained more than two months after his arrest; but at the end of that time, shall be set at liberty, and shall not be again molested for the same cause. If any such deserter shall be found to have committed any crime or offense, his surrender may be delayed until the tribunal before which the case shall be depending, or may be cognizable, shall have pronounced its sentence, and such sentence shall have been carried into effect. [R. S.]

Sec. 4600. [Reclamation and discharge of deserters by consular officers.] It shall be the duty of all consular officers to reclaim deserters, discountenance insubordination by every means in their power, and, where the local authorities can be usefully employed for that purpose, to lend their aid and use their exertions to that end in the most effectual manner. In all cases where seamen or officers are accused the consular officer shall inquire into the facts and proceed as provided in section forty-five hundred and eighty-three of the Revised Statutes; and the officer discharging such seamen shall enter upon the crew list and shipping articles and official log the cause of discharge and the particulars in which the cruel or unusual treatment consisted, and subscribe his name thereto officially. He shall read the entry made in the official log to the master, and his reply thereto, if any, shall likewise be entered and subscribed in the same manner. [R. S.]

This section was amended "to read as" above by the Act of Dec. 21, 1898, ch. 28, sec. 21, 30 Stat. L. 761.

The section originally read as follows:

"SEC. 4600. It shall be the duty of consular officers to reclaim deserters and discountenance insubordination by every means within their power; and where the local authorities can be usefully employed for that purpose, to lend their aid and use their exertions to that end, in the most effectual manner. In all cases where deserters are apprehended, the consular officer shall inquire into the facts; and if he is satisfied that the desertion was caused by unusual or cruel treatment, the seaman shall be discharged, and receive, in addition to his wages to the time of the discharge, three months' pay; and the officer discharging him shall enter upon the crew-list and shipping-articles the cause of discharge, and the particulars in which the cruelty or unusual treatment consisted, and subscribe his name thereto, officially." Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 275.

It was first amended by the Act of June 26, 1884, ch. 121, sec. 6, 23 Stat. L. 55, to read as follows:

"SEC. 4600. It shall be the duty of consular officers to reclaim deserters and discountenance insubordination by every means within their power, and where the local authorities can be usefully employed for that purpose, to lend their aid and use their exertions to that end in the most effectual manner. In all cases where deserters are apprehended the consular officer shall inquire into the facts; and if he is satisfied that the desertion was caused by unusual or cruel treatment, he shall discharge the seaman, and require the master of the vessel from which such seaman is discharged to pay one month's wages over and above the wages then due; and the officer discharging such seaman shall enter upon the crew-list and shipping articles the cause of discharge, and the particulars in which the cruelty or unusual treatment consisted, and the facts as to his discharge or re-engagement, as the case may be, and subscribe his name thereto officially." It was again amended by the Act of 1898 as above stated to read as given in the text.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

Duty of consul.—The statute does not in terms authorize consuls to seek the use of the prisons of a foreign nation. It makes it their duty to obtain the return and restoration of deserters, to get them back to the ship, and to obtain the assistance of local officers for that purpose, and when the deserters have been apprehended, to inquire into the facts, ascertain the cause of the desertion, and if the cause was the cruelty of the officers, to discharge the seamen; but if the desertion was without cause, and the seamen refuse to return to the ship, and assert a determination to desert, then it is still the duty of the consuls to reclaim the deserters and discountenance insubordination, and to that end the seamen will be left in the custody of the local authorities, or will be committed to their custody so that they may be treated in accordance with the local statutes or regulations upon the subject of the detention of seamen who are at large in the port. Their actual imprisonment, in the absence of local statutes giving foreign consuls such a special power, is by the act of the local magistrates or officers. The W. F.

Babcock, (C. C. A. 1898) 85 Fed. Rep. 978. See also Jordan v. Williams, (1851) 1 Curt. (U. S.) 69, 13 Fed. Cas. No. 7,528.

Hearing and proceedings.—Whether the men are deserters or not, they cannot lawfully be thrown into prison without such an inquiry and opportunity to be heard as the statutes provide. And when such measures are taken by the master with a view of confiscating the wages of seamen for several months succeeding, he must take good care to collect and preserve for his defense and for the defense of the ship sufficient legal evidence to show both the necessity for such proceedings and a substantial compliance with all the statutory requirements to justify it. The W. F. Babcock, (1897) 79 Fed. Rep. 92.

Proceedings to be certified.—It cannot be inferred because a sailor was arrested for desertion in a foreign port, and afterwards went to jail, that the consul inquired into the facts of the desertion and contumacy, because his detention in jail is by virtue of local laws and does not depend upon the action of foreign consuls. Neither do the naked facts of an appearance before the consul and a subsequent detention by police officers raise a presumption of a judicial investigation and a finding of facts by a consul. They simply show that the police kept the sailors in detention. The finding and the action of the consul must be shown by affirmative testimony. When he acts as a magistrate with power to discharge the seaman, or to cause or obtain his imprisonment, his acts and his conclusions should be certified, as in the case of other officers of the same character, by written records, and intendments will not supply the entire absence of proof from the consul's office. The W. F. Babcock, (C. C. A. 1898) 85 Fed. Rep. 978.

Proceedings as evidence.—To make proceedings before the consul evidence, there must be either a duly proved copy of his record, or else his deposition, as in the case of other witnesses. The W. F. Babcock, (1897) 79 Fed. Rep. 92.

Effect of record and certificate.—The consular agent is intrusted with large powers in regard to the question of desertion, and the presumption of regularity and validity attaches to the contemporaneous record of his official proceedings as an examining magistrate, and his records will have credence and receive every reasonable intendment in their favor, when they show that he had jurisdiction, and that the parties were present and were heard. The W. F. Babcock, (C. C. A. 1898) 85 Fed. Rep. 978.

Discharge for cruel treatment.—The provisions requiring consuls, when deserters are apprehended and brought before them, to inquire into the facts, and if satisfied that the desertion was caused by unusual or cruel treatment, to discharge the deserter, who shall have three months' extra pay, is applicable to cases of seamen who have not deserted. Coffin v. Weld, (1871) 2 Lowell (U. S.) 81, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,953.

Duty of consul.—Where a crew having complained to the consul of cruel conduct on the part of the mate, a compromise was effected by him by which the mate was discharged and the crew went to work, after which they refused duty upon an unfounded suspicion that the mate had not been discharged, and they were then regularly discharged for disobedience, it was held that they were entitled to extra wages, as they had a right to a discharge on the ground of cruelty. Coffin v. Weld, (1871) 2 Lowell (U. S.) 81, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,953.

Extra pay.—If the seaman was discharged because of unusual or cruel treatment he is entitled to one month's extra wages allowed by statute, and in such cases the consul-general is authorized to exercise some reasonable discretion in determining this extra allowance in reference to actual or anticipated ill-treatment. (1898) 22 Op. Atty-Gen. 212.

Damages.—The payment of one month's extra wages on a discharge for cruel treatment does not bar a claim for damages for injuries inflicted by such cruelty. The W. L. White, (1885) 25 Fed. Rep. 504.

Excessive punishment of a seaman by a master is not excused because erroneously authorized by a consul. Peters v. Martens, (1875) 2 W. N. C. (Pa.) 603, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,031.

Expenses.—"This statute has been construed in the Circuit Court to give consuls jurisdiction over the imprisonment of our seamen in foreign jails, and in such case to relieve the master from responsibility in the matter if he has acted in good faith. Jordan v. Williams, (1851) 1 Curt. (U. S.) 69, 13 Fed. Case. No. 7,528. * * * In suits between the crew and the master or owners such an imprisonment by order of a consul must be presumed to have been necessary; and it seems to follow and is intimated by the court that the necessary charges resulting from that course must fall upon the seamen, as between them and the owners, though they have a right of redress against the consul." Chester v. Benner, (1871) 2 Lowell (U. S.) 76, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,660.

Liability of vessel.—Since the passage of the Act of July 20, 1840, when a master of a vessel in a foreign port lays a complaint against any of his crew fully and fairly before the consul, and the complaint is such that a competent master may fairly believe it to be within the consul's jurisdiction, and the consul upon examination finds it expedient or necessary to make use of the local authorities to keep the men safely, the master is not responsible for their imprisonment as for a tort, the consul being answerable to the injured party for any malversation or abuse of power. Jordan v. Williams, (1851) 1 Curt. (U. S.) 69, 13 Fed. Cas. No. 7,528.

The liberty given to the crew by said Act to lay their complaints before the consul is to be exercised under the fair and reasonable discretion of the master of the vessel as to the time and mode of landing; and a refusal of duty on the part of the crew, because such permission is not given, would be justifiable only when such refusal is necessary to prevent the loss of the right. Jordan v. Williams, (1851) 1 Curt. (U. S.) 69, 13 Fed. Cas. No. 7,528.

Under the Act of Congress of July 20, 1840, sec. 16, 5 Stat. L. 396, the phrase, "to lay their complaints before the consul," applies only to such causes of complaint as are specified in the Act, viz., that the mariner is detained contrary to his agreement, or that the vessel is unseaworthy, etc., and not to affrays or quarrels between the officers and crew. Jordan v. Williams, (1851) 1 Curt. (U. S.) 69, 13 Fed. Cas. No. 7,528.

Sec. 4601. [Penalty for secreting seamen.] [Repealed.]

This section was as follows:

"Sec. 4601. Whenever any person harbors or secretes any seaman belonging to any vessel, knowing him to belong thereto, he shall be liable to pay ten dollars for every day during which he continues so to harbor or secrete such seaman, recoverable one-half to the use of the person prosecuting for the same, the other half to the use of the United States." Act of July 20, 1790, ch. 29, 1 Stat. L. 133.

It was amended by the Act of Feb. 18,

1875, ch. 80, 18 Stat. L. 320, to correct a misspelled word.

It was expressly repealed by the Act of Dec. 21, 1898, ch. 28, sec. 25, set out supra, p. 870.

The following cases construed the provisions of the above section: Grant v. U. S. (C. C. A. 1893) 58 Fed. Rep. No. 694-696; U. S. v. Grant, (1893) 55 Fed. Rep. 414-416; U. S. v. Sullivan, (1890) 43 Fed. Rep. 603; U. S. v. Minges, (1883) 16 Fed. Rep. 657; Ex p. Young (1900) 36 Oregon 249.

Sec. 4602. [Penalty for drunkenness or neglect of duty.] Any master of, or any seaman or apprentice belonging to, any merchant-vessel, who, by willful breach of duty, or by reason of drunkenness, does any act tending to the immediate loss or destruction of, or serious damage to such vessel, or tending immediately to endanger the life or limb of any person belonging to or on board of such vessel; or who, by willful breach of duty, or by neglect of duty, or by reason of drunkenness, refuses or omits to do any lawful act proper and requisite to be done by him for preserving such vessel from immediate loss, destruction, or serious damage, or for preserving any person belonging to or on board of such ship from immediate danger to life or limb, shall, for every such offense, be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable by imprisonment for not more than twelve months. [R. S.]

Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 274.

This section is made applicable to seamen "shipped by a shipping commissioner for any American vessel in the coastwise trade, or the trade between the United States and the Dominion of Canada, or New Foundland, or the West Indies, or Mexico," by the Act of Aug. 19, 1890, ch. 801, as amended by Acts of Feb. 18, 1895, ch. 97, and March 3, 1897, ch. 389, sec. 8, supra, p. 851.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

Sec. 4603. [Enforcement of forfeitures.] Any question concerning the forfeiture of, or deductions from, the wages of any seaman or apprentice, may be determined in any proceeding lawfully instituted with respect to such wages, notwithstanding the offense in respect of which such question arises, though hereby made punishable by imprisonment as well as forfeiture, has not been made the subject of any criminal proceeding. [R. S.]

Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 275.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch.

260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

Sec. 4604. [Disposal of forfeitures.] All clothes, effects, and wages which, under the provisions of this Title, are forfeited for desertion, shall be applied, in the first instance, in payment of the expenses occasioned by such desertion, to the master or owner of the vessel from which the desertion has taken place, and the balance, if any, shall be paid by the master or owner to any shipping-commissioner resident at the port at which the voyage of such vessel terminates; and the shipping-commissioner shall account for and pay over such balance to the judge of the circuit court within one month after the commissioner receives the same, to be disposed of by him in the same manner as is prescribed for the disposal of the money, effects, and wages of deceased seamen. Whenever any master or owner neglects or refuses to pay over to the shipping-commissioner such balance, he shall be liable to a penalty of double the amount thereof, recoverable by the commissioner in the same manner that seamen's wages are recovered. In all other cases of forfeiture of wages, the forfeiture shall be for the benefit of the master or owner by whom the wages are payable. [R. S.]

Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 275.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

Effects, etc., of deserting seamen.—The proper steps for the master of the vessel to take on the desertion of the men are pointed out in this section and in secs. 4597 and 4599, supra. If he is unable to find and arrest them, it is his duty to take charge of and hold their clothes, effects, and wages until his arrival at the port at which his voyage terminated. At that port he should, although no forfeiture is as yet declared, deliver the balance of the property, after deducting the expenses occasioned by the desertion, to the shipping commissioner, to be by him paid over to the judge of the Circuit Court of the United States. (1875) 14 Op. Atty-Gen. 520.

Where the clothing and effects of deserting seamen have been sold by a United States consul in a foreign port, and the proceeds thereof, together with the amount due the seamen as wages, have been turned over to the state department, and the deserters do not appear and cannot be found in due time so that service can be had upon them, the amount, after deducting expenses, etc., should be paid into the treasury to be added to the fund for the relief of sick, disabled, and destitute seamen. (1875) 14 Op. Atty-Gen. 521.

Authority of consul.—A consul has no authority to demand and receive from the master of a vessel the money and effects belonging to a deserter from the vessel. (1875) 14 Op. Atty-Gen. 520.

Account of expenses.—Notwithstanding that the statute does not require the master to furnish an account of expenses occasioned by the desertion to the commissioner, it is evidently fit and proper that he should do so. A knowledge of what expenses are claimed to have been incurred is necessary to enable the commissioner to ascertain what balance, if any, is due to the United States, and a fair and just account rendered by the master will usually lead to a prompt settlement of the matter without resorting to a suit, which, in the absence of all information on the subject, the commissioner may feel it his duty to bring. Stevenson v. Hare, (1874) 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 583, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,416.

Deduction of expenses.—The Act does not require an account of expenses occasioned by the desertion to be furnished to the commissioner. The omission to do so does not forfeit the right of the master to have those wages applied in the first instance to the payment of such expenses, and when sued for double the amount of a balance alleged to be due he may defeat the suit by showing that the expenses have equalled or exceeded the amount of such forfeited wages, and that no balance is due. Stevenson v. Hare, (1874) 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 583, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,416.

Sec. 4605. [Appropriation of wages to costs of conviction.] Whenever in any proceeding relating to seamen's wages it is shown that any seaman or apprentice has, in the course of the voyage, been convicted of any offense by any competent tribunal, and rightfully punished therefor, by imprisonment or otherwise, the court hearing the case may direct a part of the wages due to such seaman, not exceeding fifteen dollars, to be applied in re-imbursing any costs properly incurred by the master in procuring such conviction and punishment. Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 275.

This section was amended by the Act of Feb. 27, 1877, ch. 69, 19 Stat. L. 252, by striking out, after the words "of the wages due to such," the word "seamen," appearing in the section as originally enacted, and substituting therefor the word "seaman," as given in the text.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 280, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

Sec. 4606. [Penalty for boarding vessels before arrival. See SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION.]

Sec. 4607. [Penalty for soliciting seaman as lodger.] If, within twenty-four hours after the arrival of any vessel at any port in the United States, any person, then being on board such vessel, solicits any seaman to become a lodger at the house of any person letting lodgings for hire, or takes out of such vessel any effects of any seaman, except under his personal direction, and with the permission of the master, he shall, for every such offense, be punishable by a fine of not more than fifty dollars, or by imprisonment for not more than three months. For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch.

260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

Sec. 4608. [Carrying sheath-knives prohibited.] No seaman in the merchant-service shall wear any sheath-knife on shipboard. It shall be the duty of the master of any vessel registered, enrolled, or licensed under the laws of the United States, and of the person entering into contract for the employment of a seaman upon any such vessel, to inform every person offering to ship himself of the provisions of this section, and to require his compliance therewith, under a penalty of fifty dollars for each omission, to be sued for and recovered in the name of the United States, under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury; one half for the benefit of the informer, and the other half for the benefit of the fund for the relief of sick and disabled seamen. [R. S.]

Act of July 27, 1866, ch. 286, 14 Stat. L. 304.

Sec. 4609. [Penalty for extortion for obtaining employment.] [Repealed.]

This section was as follows:

"SEC. 4609. If any person shall demand or receive, either directly or indirectly, from any seaman or other person seeking employment as a seaman, or from any person on his behalf, any remuneration whatever other than the fees hereby authorized, for providing him with employment, he shall, for every such offense, be liable to a penalty of not more than one hundred dollars." Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 264.

It was expressly repealed by the Act of Dec. 21, 1898, ch. 28, sec. 25, supra, p. 870.

Sec. 4610. [Penalties and forfeitures, how recovered.] All penalties and forfeitures imposed by this Title, for the recovery whereof no specific mode is hereinbefore provided, may be recovered, with costs, in any circuit court of the United States, at the suit of any district attorney of the United States, or at the suit of any person by information to any district attorney in any port of the United States, where or near to where the offense is committed or the offender is found; and if a conviction is had, and the sum imposed as a penalty by the court is not paid either immediately after the conviction, or within such period as the court at the time of the conviction appoints, it shall be lawful for the court to commit the offender to prison, there to be imprisoned for the term hereinbefore provided in case of such offense, the commitment to be terminable upon payment of the amount and costs; and all penalties and forfeitures mentioned in this Title for which no special application is provided, shall, when recovered, be paid and applied in manner following: So much as the court shall determine, and the residue shall be paid to the court and be remitted from time to time, by order of the judge, to the Treasury of the United States, and appropriated as provided for in section forty-five hundred and forty-five: Provided always, That it shall be lawful for the court before which any proceeding shall be instituted for the recovery of any pecuniary penalty imposed by this act, to mitigate or reduce such penalty as to such court shall appear just and reasonable; but no such penalty shall be reduced to less than one-third of its original amount: Provided also, That all proceedings so to be instituted shall be commenced within two years next after the commission of the offense, if the same shall have been committed at or beyond the Cape of Good Hope or Cape Horn, or within one year if committed elsewhere, or within two months after the return of the offender and the complaining party to the United States; and there shall be no appeal from any decision of any of the circuit courts, unless the amount sued for exceeds the sum of five hundred dollars. Procedure. — Under the language of this statute prosecution for the recovery of penalties and forfeitures may be had either by information or indictment. U. S. v. Grant, (1893) 55 Fed. Rep. 414.

In name of United States. — In attempting to mark out the procedure for enforcing the penalties authorized by the several preceding sections of the Act it was designed to permit a civil action for the penalties with quasi-criminal procedure in enforcing that judgment. An action, therefore, is properly brought in the name of the United States as the party plaintiff. U. S. v. Kellum, (1881) 7 Fed. Rep. 843.

Effect of deserters. — See R. S. sec. 4604, supra, p. 919.

Sec. 4611. [Corporal punishment forbidden — penalty.] Flogging and all other forms of corporal punishment are hereby prohibited on board any vessel, and no form of corporal punishment on board any vessel shall be deemed justifiable, and any master or other officer thereof who shall violate the aforesaid provisions of this section or either thereof shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable by imprisonment not less than three months or more than two years. Whenever any officer other than the master of such vessel shall violate any provisions of this section, it shall be the duty of such master to surrender such officer to the proper authorities as soon as practicable. Any failure upon the part of such master to comply herewith, which failure shall result in the escape of such officer, shall render said master liable in damages to the person illegally punished by such officer. [R. S.]

This section was amended "to read as" above by the Act of Dec. 21, 1898, ch. 28, sec. 22, 30 Stat. L. 761.

The section originally read as follows:

"Sec. 4611. Flogging on board vessels of commerce is hereby abolished." Act of Sept. 28, 1850, ch. 80, 9 Stat. L. 515.

Corporal punishment.—For cases on this subject, prior to the amendment, see Payne v. Allen, (1855) 1 Sprague (U. S.) 304, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 10,855; Bangs v. Little, (1839) 1 Ware (U. S.) 520, 2 Fed. Cas. No. 839; Charge to Grand Jury, (1853) 1 Curt. (U. S.) 509, 30 Fed. Cas. No. 18,249; U. S. v. Cutler, (1853) 1 Curt. (U. S.) 501, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 14,910; *Carleton v. Release.—Where a seaman on a whaling voyage, upon his discharge in a foreign port, signed a writing acknowledging that he had received a certain sum in full of his share of the proceeds of the voyage and relinquishing all claims against the owners, master, and officers, it was held that the relinquishment was only of the claim for which he had received compensation, and not of claims for personal violence committed by the master. Payne v. Allen, (1855) 1 Sprague (U. S.) 304, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 10,855.

Nominal damages for torts.—The admiralty will not entertain suits for mere nominal damages in cases of personal torts not involving any subject-matter beyond such a claim for damages. Barnett v. Luther, (1853) 1 Curt. (U. S.) 434, 2 Fed. Cas. No. 1,025.

Sec. 5347. [Maltreatment of crew by officers of vessels.] Every master or other officer of any American vessel on the high seas, or on any other waters within the admiralty and maritime jurisdiction of the United States, who, without justifiable cause, beats, wounds, or imprisons any of the crew of such vessel, or withholds from them suitable food and nourishment, or inflicts upon them any cruel and unusual punishment, shall be punished by a fine of not more than one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment not more than five years, or by both. [R. S.]

Act of March 3, 1835, ch. 40, 4 Stat. L. 776.

This section was amended by the Act of March 3, 1897, ch. 389, sec. 18, 29 Stat. L. 691, by omitting after the words "jurisdiction of the United States, who," the words "from malice, hatred, or revenge, and" appearing in the section as originally enacted. The amendatory section also contains the provision set forth in the following text, p. 924.

Summary trials for offenses against navigation laws. See SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION.

Scope of notes.—The cases hereunder were all decided prior to the amendment of R. S. sec. 4611 abolishing corporal punishment, and must be read in the light of such amendment.

Who liable as officer.—Any one who by authority exercises the function of command over the actions of the crew while on duty, or any of them, is an officer pro hac vice, and liable to the penalties of this statute as such, if he violate its provisions. U. S. v. Trice, (1887) 30 Fed. Rep. 490.

None but the master ever had the power to punish, or has now; but if any assume it by virtue of his office, be that office what it may, thereby he becomes to all intents and purposes of this statute amenable to all the penal consequences if he abuse that power which he assumes. U. S. v. Trice, (1887) 30 Fed. Rep. 490.

Liability of master for acts of others.—The master when on board has generally the sole authority to authorize punishment to be inflicted on any of the crew; and if he is present when any punishment is inflicted by a subordinate officer, and can prevent it and does not, he is personally responsible for the act. And neither the mate nor any subordinate officer has authority to punish any seaman, even for improper behavior or misconduct to himself personally, when the master is on board, except by the authority express or implied of the master. U. S. v. Taylor, (1837) 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 584, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,442.

The word "crew" was intended to include the officers as well as the common seamen, and the master is liable under the statute for an imprisonment of the first mate of the ship. U. S. v. Winn, (1838) 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 209, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,740.

The Act was intended to protect every individual composing the ship's crew, in the ordinary acceptance of the term, from an abuse of power by those in higher authority; and while the ordinary seamen are protected from injury by the "master or other officer" the inferior officers have a like protection from injury by the master of the ship. U. S. v. Winn, (1838) 1 Law. Rep. 63, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,739a.

One who secretes himself on board a vessel before sailing and discovers himself after the vessel is at sea is not one of the crew though the master requires him to work as a condition for his having food, and he does work. U. S. v. Small, (1855) 2 Curt. (U. S.) 241, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,314.

Punishment by crew.—There is a limit to the authority of the master. The crew are not bound to inflict punishment upon his mere caprice. Any seaman has a right to refuse to inflict punishment unless some justifiable cause was pointed out to him. He has a right to do this for his own protection. U. S. v. Winn, (1838) 1 Law. Rep. 63, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,739a.

Justifiable cause.—If the punishment inflicted is flogging it is without justifiable cause. U. S. v. Cutler, (1853) 1 Curt. (U. S.) 501, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 14,910.

In case of desertion and persistent refusal to perform duty, the master may inflict punishment and use means of coercion; but they must not be such as would be permanently injurious to the health or constitution of the seaman. U. S. v. Alden, (1844) 1 Sprague (U. S.) 95, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,427.

Quantum of punishment.—When it is apparent that punishment is merited, the court will not undertake to adjust very exactly, according to its own ideas of fitness and propriety, the balance between the gravity of the offense and the quantum of punishment, and will not award damages unless the punishment is manifestly excessive. Butler v. McClellan, (1831) 1 Ware (U. S.) 220, 4 Fed. Cas. No. 2,242.

Punishment by subordinate.—The authority of any subordinate officer to punish exists only when it is at the very moment absolutely required by the necessities of the ship's service to compel the performance of duty. The master stands in this respect in the relation of a parent to the seaman, and is bound to exercise his own judgment as to the time, the manner, and the circumstances under which punishment is to be inflicted on the crew for any past misdemeanors or any present misdemeanors not immediately and materially affecting the ship's service or security. U. S. v. Taylor, (1837) 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 584, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,442.

Malice defined.—See U. S. v. Cutler, (1853) 1 Curt. (U. S.) 501, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 14,910.

Corporal punishment.—See U. S. v. Trice, (1887) 30 Fed. Rep. 490; Riley v. Allen, (1886) 23 Fed. Rep. 46.

Coercive measures.—The master of a ship has a right to use coercive measures to compel obedience to his lawful orders. U. S. v. Alden, (1844) 1 Sprague (U. S.) 95, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,427.

Resistance.—If a seaman is attacked without provocation or disobedience on his part, he can defend himself; and under all excessive blows and punishment for disrespect or disobedience he can justify as a child or apprentice or scholar resisting the excess. Fuller v. Colby, (1846) 3 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 1, 9 Fed. Cas. No. 5,149.

Jurisdiction.—The law of the United States, especially this section, follows an American vessel wherever she may be on navigable waters, so that an offense committed on board such vessel is an offense against the United States though the vessel be in the harbor or river of a foreign country. U. S. v. Bennett, (1877) 3 Hughes (U. S.) 466, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,574.

The courts of the United States have jurisdiction over a tort committed by one of the ship's company on another on board of a ship or vessel of the United States while lying in the harbor, although she may be within the body of a county. Roberts v. Skolfield, (1858) 3 Ware (U. S.) 184, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,917.

Extradited for different offense.—A prisoner having been extradited upon a charge of murder on the high seas under R. S. sec. 5339, the Circuit Court has no jurisdiction to put him to trial upon an indictment under this section charging him with cruel and unusual punishment of the same man; he being one of the crew of an American vessel of which the defendant was an officer and such punishment consisting of the identical acts proved in the extradition proceedings. U. S. v. Rauscher, (1886) 119 U. S. 407.

Indictment.—The Act describes four distinct offenses,—beating or wounding, imprisoning, deprivation of suitable food and nourishment, infliction of any cruel and unusual punishment. Each of these is a substantive criminal act when proceeding without justifiable cause, and one of these offenses cannot be properly described in the indictment by words used in the Act of Congress to describe another offense. U. S. v. Collins, (1854) 2 Curt. (U. S.) 194, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 14,836.

Short allowance.—The captain is bound to provide a reasonable surplus, a reasonable margin, for all known contingencies of the sea; and if he sails without doing so, and in consequence of not having made such provision there is a short allowance, the withholding is not justifiable, because he ought to have seen that the vessel was supplied with proper provisions. U. S. v. Reed, (1897) 86 Fed. Rep. 308.

Due to change of route.—If a master meets with difficulty, with trouble at sea, if he be blown out of his course, it is his duty before changing his route for a very much longer one to exercise exactly the same care to see that he is properly provisioned for the new voyage as for the former route; and to provision his vessel by any practical methods that the circumstances reasonably admit. U. S. v. Reed, (1897) 86 Fed. Rep. 308.

Due to detention.—If a vessel sails on her voyage well provisioned with all that is required, and by stress of weather she is detained long beyond the usual passage, and there are no ports where any food can be procured, so that the allowance must be shortened in order to enable the vessel to reach a port, it is very plain that the shortening of the allowance is necessary, and the crew are therefore put on what is called a short allowance, that is, shorter than is prescribed. That is a justifiable cause. Under those circumstances the necessary food may be lessened, and there is no criminality in that, because it is justifiable. U. S. v. Reed, (1897) 86 Fed. Rep. 308.

Elements of the offense.—In U. S. v. Reed, (1897) 86 Fed. Rep. 308, prior to the amendment of this section, it was held that the three main elements which enter into the offense of withholding suitable food and nourishment, and which are to be considered by the jury, are, first, whether there was a lack of suitable food supply; second, if there was, then whether this was withheld without justifiable cause; and finally, if so, whether this was done for malice, hatred, or revenge. In order to convict a defendant the jury must find that each of these three elements existed in the case and beyond a reasonable doubt. See also U. S. v. Taylor, (1837) 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 584, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,442.

Malice.—Prior to the amendment of this section it was held in U. S. v. Reed, (1897) 86 Fed. Rep. 308, that a captain of a vessel is not to be condemned for any mere error of judgment, nor for mere negligence, if it was nothing more than that, in providing a proper supply of food for the crew; but he is to be condemned if the additional element of malice in connection with them is found to exist, not as a malignant intention to do a particular harm to anybody, but in the sense of a wilful disregard of what he knew to be his duty. The wilful disregarding of an obligation which the captain knew and understood, knowing that his act was liable to produce injury to the crew, is malice in the sense of the law. See also U. S. v. Taylor, (1837) 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 584, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,442.

Evidence.—The fact that every seaman on board a ship was afflicted with scurvy is sufficient evidence for the jury to attribute it to the cause of the lack of proper variety of food, and particularly a vegetable food, where there is no other evidence showing some other cause for the prevalence of the disorder. U. S. v. Reed, (1897) 86 Fed. Rep. 308.

What constitutes short allowance.—See R. S. secs. 4568, 4612, infra, pp. 893, 930.

Civil liability.—See Butler v. McClellan, (1831) 1 Ware (U. S.) 220, 4 Fed. Cas. No. 2,242; Riley v. Allen, (1885) 23 Fed. Rep. 46.

SEC. 18. [R. S. sec. 4611 not affected.] * * * Nothing herein contained shall be construed to repeal or modify section forty-six hundred and eleven of the Revised Statutes. [29 Stat. L. 691.]

This is from the Act of March 3, 1897, ch. 389, "An Act To amend the laws relating to navigation." The omitted part of the section amends R. S. sec. 5347, and is set forth in the preceding text.

Sec. 5359. [Inciting revolt or mutiny on shipboard.] If any one of the crew of any American vessel on the high seas, or other waters within the admiralty and maritime jurisdiction of the United States, endeavors to make a revolt or mutiny on board such vessel, or combines, conspires, or confederates with any other person on board to make such revolt or mutiny, or solicits, incites, or stirs up any other of the crew to disobey or resist the lawful orders of the master, or other officer of such vessel, or to refuse or neglect their proper duty on board thereof, or to betray their proper trust, or assembles with others in a tumultuous and mutinous manner, or makes a riot on board thereof, or unlawfully confines the master, or other commanding officer thereof, he shall be punished by a fine of not more than one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment not more than five years, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [R. S.]

Act of March 3, 1835, ch. 40, 4 Stat. L. 776; Act of April 30, 1790, ch. 9, 1 Stat. L. 115.

Effect of later Acts.—This section is not repealed by the provisions of the Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260. In re Simpson, (1901) 119 Fed. Rep. 620.

This section was not repealed by implication by paragraph 7 of R. S. sec. 4596, which paragraph was omitted from that section by the amending Act of Dec. 21, 1898, ch. 28, sec. 19. In re Simpson, (1901) 119 Fed. Rep. 620.

Application of section.—The provisions of this section apply to the mate and other officers of a vessel as well as to ordinary seamen. U. S. v. Huff, (1882) 13 Fed. Rep. 630.

It was not the intention of these statutes to make the courts of the United States a place to discipline every member of a ship's crew who is guilty of simple disobedience of the master's orders, but every case of mere resistance to his free and lawful exercise of authority and command on board is so punishable if accompanied by force, fraud, intimidation, violence, or conspiracy among the men. U. S. v. Huff, (1882) 13 Fed. Rep. 630.

American vessel.—The character of the vessel must be proved to be an American vessel, but the title of the ship may be proved by parol. U. S. v. Crawford, (1843) 25 Fed. Cas. No. 14,890.

On the trial of an indictment for an endeavor to make a revolt on board of an American vessel in a foreign port it is not necessary to give documentary proof establishing the national character of the vessel, but it is sufficient to prove orally that she is owned by an American citizen. U. S. v.

Seagrist, (1860) 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 420, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,245.

To render a vessel American so far as to punish offenses on board of her, it is enough to show that she sailed from and to an American port, and was apparently owned and controlled by citizens of the United States. U. S. v. Peterson, (1846) 1 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 305, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,037.

Vessel not registered or licensed. — A ship engaged in a whaling voyage without having surrendered her register or taken out an enrollment and license pursuant to law is not an American ship within the purview of this section, and an indictment will not hold under this section against the crew for an endeavor to make a revolt. U. S. v. Rogers, (1838) 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 342, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,189.

Where the crew of an American whaling vessel were convicted of an attempt to revolt on a whaling voyage to the South seas, and it appeared on the trial that the vessel had not been enrolled and licensed under the Act of Congress, the case did not come within the operation of this Act, the prisoners were improperly convicted, and they were entitled to an arrest of judgment. U. S. v. Jenkins, (1843) 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,473a.

Foreigners. — Persons who were not citizens of the United States, and had enlisted on board of an American vessel, could not be punished for disobedience of orders in the absence of a treaty with the government to which they belonged, unless such act of disobedience amounted to a violation of the law of nations. U. S. v. Crawford, (1843) 25 Fed. Cas. No. 14,890.

Foreign seamen on board American ships are as much subject to punishment for disobedience or violence as Americans, and are alike to be protected and redressed on their return home. U. S. v. Peterson, (1846) 1 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 305, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,037.

Foreign port. — An endeavor to commit a revolt is an offense if committed in a foreign port. The section does not confine the penalty to cases on the high seas. U. S. v. Keefe, (1824) 3 Mason (U. S.) 475, 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,509.

Seamen not articulated. — Seamen of the United States, put on board a vessel of the United States by a consul, are within the meaning of this Act, and they are bound by the same obligations which exist in cases of articulated seamen. U. S. v. Sharp, (1815) Pet. (C. C.) 118, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,264.

Who are seamen. — A cooper of the ship is a seaman within the provisions of the Act. U. S. v. Thompson, (1832) 1 Sumn. (U. S.) 168, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,492.

Disrated mate. — The fact that a mate of a vessel is deposed from his position as mate does not take him from under the authority of the captain as long as he is on board, and while he or any member of the crew remains on board, no matter in what capacity, he is bound to obedience and subordination to all proper control and discipline to the ship's officers in authority over him. U. S. v. Huff, (1882) 13 Fed. Rep. 630.

Change of master. — The contract of seamen for the voyage is not suspended or extinguished by the death, removal, or resignation of the original master; but they are bound to perform the voyage under any person who is lawfully substituted in his stead. U. S. v. Cassidy, (1837) 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 582, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 14,745.

The crew of a ship who have signed shipping articles for a voyage under a particular master without any clause providing for a change of master are not discharged from the articles by the dismissal of the master by reason of sickness or any other reasonable cause, and the appointment of a new master; but they are bound to obey the new master. If in such case they combine together to refuse all duty on board and to refuse obedience to the new master, that is an endeavor to make a revolt. U. S. v. Haines, (1829) 5 Mason (U. S.) 272, 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,275.

Disability of master. — If the master of a ship after the commencement of the voyage is by sickness disabled from pursuing it, and a new master is appointed, the shipping contract with the seamen is not dissolved thereby. U. S. v. Hamilton, (1818) 1 Mason (U. S.) 443, 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,291.

Jurisdiction. — On an indictment for an endeavor to make a revolt in a ship it is not necessary to prove that it was committed on the high seas. U. S. v. Hamilton, (1818) 1 Mason (U. S.) 443, 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,291.

An indictment lies in the United States Circuit Court in admiralty against the crew of a vessel who had endeavored to commit a revolt and mutiny on board of the ship while she lay at anchor about sixty yards from the wharf in the city of New York, ready for sea, and in the stream of the East river where the tide ebbs and flows. U. S. v. Lynch, (1843) 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,648.

Although the state courts might have jurisdiction of certain offenses committed on board of vessels while lying within the municipal territory of such state, yet the Circuit Court of the United States would take jurisdiction and exercise their authority in cases of mutiny and revolt, or endeavor to make a revolt, on board of such vessels, by virtue of the power conferred in the Act. U. S. v. Lynch, (1843) 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,648.

Indictment. — In an indictment for an endeavor to commit a revolt and for confining the master of a ship on the high seas, it is not necessary to allege that the master was at the time in the peace of the United States or that he was an American citizen. U. S. v. Thompson, (1832) 1 Sumn. (U. S.) 168, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,492.

The crime of endeavoring to make a revolt on board a vessel is one against the master of the vessel, and it is sufficient to charge it with the words of the Act to give the court cognizance of it. U. S. v. Seagrist, (1860) 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 420, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,245.

Where an indictment against several prisoners charges all simply and alike with "making a revolt," this is not such a clear and specific description of the offense of each of the defendants as may be given under the language of the Act, and is insufficient, there being four distinct classes of unlawful acts which are included by the section in the definition of a maritime revolt. U. S. v. Almeida, (1847) 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,433.

If there be two counts in one indictment for offenses committed at the same time and place and of the same class, but different in degree, as one for a revolt, and another for an attempt to excite it, the judgment will not be arrested, though a verdict of guilty is returned on both. U. S. v. Peterson, (1846) 1 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 305, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,037.

Variance.—If in an indictment for an endeavor to commit a revolt it is averred to be on the high seas, the allegation is not material to be proved; and if the offense is proved to have been committed in a foreign port, it is sufficient. U. S. v. Keefe, (1824) 3 Mason (U. S.) 475, 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,509.

An indictment for confining the captain and for an assault with a dangerous weapon committed on the high seas in the "outer road" off St. Domingo, in a vessel belonging to citizens of the United States, is supported by proving those offenses to have been done in the "inner" road and in port. U. S. v. Stevens, (1825) 4 Wash. (U. S.) 547, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,294.

Evidence.—The log book kept by the master is not evidence in an indictment for a revolt and confining the master. U. S. v. Sharp, (1815) Pet. (C. C.) 118, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,264.

On charge of revolt against seamen, a copy of the shipping articles purporting to be signed by the prisoners cannot be given in evidence to show that the prisoners were part of the crew, without proof of loss or destruction of the original articles. The original articles cannot be given in evidence unless the handwriting of the prisoner is proved. U. S. v. Doughty, (1855) 25 Fed. Cas. No. 14,987.

"Endeavor to make a revolt" defined.—"The offense consists in the endeavor of the crew of a vessel, or any one or more of them, to overthrow the legitimate authority of her commander with intent to remove him from his command, or against his will to take possession of the vessel by assuming the government and navigation of her, or by transferring their obedience from the lawful commander to some other person." U. S. v. Kelly, (1826) 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 417; U. S. v. Smith, (1811) 3 Wash. (U. S.) 78, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,344.

"In truth, I consider the definition given by the Supreme Court not to have been designed to have more than an affirmative operation; that is, to declare that such Acts would amount to the offense, and not negatively that none others would." Story, J., in U. S. v. Haines, (1829) 5 Mason (U. S.) 272.

Any conspiracy to accomplish the usurpation of the authority and command of the ship and to overthrow that of the master or commanding officer, or to resist a lawful command of the master for such purpose, or any endeavor to stir up others of the crew to such resistance, is an endeavor to commit a revolt, within the meaning of the section. U. S. v. Hemmer, (1825) 4 Mason (U. S.) 105, 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,345; U. S. v. Smith, (1816) 1 Mason (U. S.) 147, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,337.

Who are officers.—The pilot is an officer of the ship when on board to pilot the vessel to or from the sea, and the crew are bound to obey his orders as such; but when the captain is on board, he is master of the vessel, and the orders of the pilot are in law considered as the master's. U. S. v. Forbes, (1845) Crabbe (U. S.) 558, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 15,129.

The pilot of a vessel cleared at the custom house and ready for sea with the crew on board is an officer of said ship and vessel within the meaning, spirit, and intent of the Act. U. S. v. Lynch, (1843) 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,648.

While the master and mates of the vessel had gone on shore, the pilot had authority to order the crew to duty, and a disobedience of his orders rendered the prisoners liable to indictment under the Act. U. S. v. Lynch, (1843) 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,648.

Intent.—An endeavor to commit a revolt may be complete, not merely by stirring up, encouraging, or combining with others of the ship's crew to produce a general disobedience of all orders, but also by stirring up, encouraging, and combining with any one or more of the crew to produce a deliberate disobedience to any one lawful order of the master or other officers; for to this extent it is an endeavor to commit a mutiny and to overthrow the lawful authority of the master and officers. But there must be a clear intent to produce such a revolt, and not merely gross or insolent language used by the party which may, undesignedly, encourage others to such disobedience. U. S. v. Thompson, (1832) 1 Sumn. (U. S.) 168, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,492.

Endeavor to incite others.—The offense is not committed if the party does not attempt or endeavor to combine or incite others of the crew to aid in his unlawful purposes. U. S. v. Smith, (1816) 1 Mason (U. S.) 147, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,337.

To constitute an endeavor to commit a revolt it is necessary that there should be some effort or act to stir up others of the crew to disobedience of the master. U. S. v. Savage, (1830) 5 Mason (U. S.) 460, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,225.

To sustain an indictment for an endeavor to commit a revolt a confederacy or combination must be shown between two or more of the seamen to refuse to do further duty on board the ship and to resist the lawful commands of the officers. U. S. v. Cassidy, (1837) 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 582, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 14,745.

Prior combination not essential.—Neither a previous deliberate combination for mutual aid and encouragement nor any preconceived plan is necessary to bring it within the Act.

U. S. v. Morrison, (1833) 1 Sumn. (U. S.) 448, 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,818.

Combination not to do duty.—If the crew combine together not to do duty it is an endeavor to make a revolt, although no orders are actually given afterwards. U. S. v. Barker, (1829) 5 Mason (U. S.) 404, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,516.

If the crew combine together to refuse to do duty and actually refuse until the master complies with some improper request on their part, it is an endeavor to make a revolt. U. S. v. Gardner, (1829) 5 Mason (U. S.) 402, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 15,188.

A mere refusal to do duty on the part of a seaman without any attempt to encourage or aid or influence any others of the crew to the same act would certainly not amount to an endeavor to commit a revolt. There must be some effort or act to incite or encourage others to disobedience or some common combination or understanding to act together for mutual encouragement or support in such disobedience. U. S. v. Haines, (1829) 5 Mason (U. S.) 272, 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,275.

A mere act of disobedience to a lawful command of the officers is not of itself an endeavor to make a revolt. But to amount to the offense it must be combined with an attempt to incite others of the crew to a general resistance or disobedience of orders or a general neglect and refusal of duty. U. S. v. Smith, (1816) 1 Mason (U. S.) 147, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,337.

A mere passive act of disobedience on the part of a single member of the crew, unaccompanied by any element of force, intimidation, or fraud upon the master or other officer in command, and free from all conspiracy with and incitement of others of the crew to join in the act, is not a violation of this section or section 5360. U. S. v. Huff, (1882) 13 Fed. Rep. 630.

A mere disobedience of orders by a seaman without encouraging or aiding or co-operating with others in the same act is not an endeavor to commit a revolt. U. S. v. Thompson, (1832) 1 Sumn. (U. S.) 168, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,492.

When one of the crew came on deck, apparently to see what was the cause of a disturbance going on, and was ordered peremptorily to go below, and neglected to do so, he was guilty of disobedience of orders and might be punished under the Act of Congress for disobedience of orders and an endeavor to make a revolt. U. S. v. Roberts, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,172.

Combination to resist single order.—If the crew were to combine together to resist a single lawful order of the master, or to compel him by force to yield up his authority in a single case, and were to proceed in the execution of their purpose, all their acts done towards its accomplishment might perhaps be properly deemed endeavors to make a revolt. U. S. v. Smith, (1816) 1 Mason (U. S.) 147, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,337.

Resisting punishment.—Where the master directed one of his crew to be punished for gross misbehavior, and the crew interposed and prevented the infliction of the punishment, compelling the master by acts of violence and intimidation to desist therefrom, this was held to be an endeavor to commit a revolt within the Act. U. S. v. Morrison, (1833) 1 Sumn. (U. S.) 448, 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,818.

Such combination and intimidation may be lawful if, from the improper conduct of the captain, the crew have good reason to believe, and do believe, that they will be subjected to unlawful and cruel or oppressive treatment, or that a great wrong is about to be inflicted on one of their number; they have a right to take reasonable measures for his or their protection. U. S. v. Borden, (1857) 1 Sprague (U. S.) 374, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,625.

Resisting sailing of unseaworthy vessel.—On an indictment for an endeavor to commit a revolt, it is sufficient defense of the parties accused that the combination charged as an endeavor was to compel the master to return into port because of the unseaworthiness of the vessel, if they act bona fide and the vessel is actually unseaworthy; so also if they act bona fide and upon reasonable grounds and apparent unseaworthiness, and it is doubtful whether the vessel be seaworthy or not. But if the vessel in such case be clearly seaworthy, it is no defense. U. S. v. Ashton, (1834) 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 13, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,470.

Resisting deviation.—Where there is a deviation from the voyage in the shipping articles, a refusal of the seamen subsequently to do duty on that account does not amount in law to an endeavor to commit a revolt. U. S. v. Matthews, (1837) 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 470, 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,742.

Where the refusal of seamen to proceed on a voyage has been charged against them criminally as constituting the offense of "endeavoring to make a revolt," or is set up as working a forfeiture of wages, the courts refer at once to the shipping articles for the purpose of determining the rights and responsibilities between the sailor and the public and the master and owners. The law upon this subject is unequivocal and imperative, declaring that the shipping articles must contain a statement of the precise voyage or voyages for which the sailor contracts, and if a deviation from such speculation is carried out not caused by a "vis major," without the consent of the mariner, by going to intermediate ports and landing or receiving on board passengers or freight, or an ulterior voyage is attempted to be superadded or substituted, and the sailors refuse to do further duty, such conduct on their part is justifiable and does not either forfeit their wages or render them liable criminally under the Act in question for an "endeavor to make a revolt." U. S. v. White, (1848) 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,683.

Where seamen on board of a vessel refused to do duty on the ground that they were not bound to go the voyage by the terms of the shipping articles, and to do the duty which they were ordered to do, it was held that they should have made such objection at the time of the disobedience of orders. U. S. v. Lynch, (1843) 28 Fed. Cas. No. 15,648.

Where seamen shipped under articles for a voyage from New Orleans to Havre, thence to one or more ports in Europe, and thence back to a port of discharge in the United States, and the master, intending to make Charleston the final port of discharge, stopped at New York, and landed passengers and freight, it was held that the seamen were not guilty of the offense of "endeavoring to make a revolt" in refusing to get the ship under way and doing further duty for the purpose of proceeding to Charleston. U. S. v. White, (1848) 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,683.

Detention of vessel.—A combination by the crew to prevent the vessel from going to sea pursuant to the orders of the master is an attempt to commit a revolt. U. S. v. Nye, (1855) 2 Curt. (U. S.) 225, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 15,906.

Effort to resist arrest.—A seaman is not justified in drawing and brandishing a knife or an axe, using them to prevent his arrest, whether for an original offense or the use of the knife. Fuller v. Colby, (1846) 3 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 1, 9 Fed. Cas. No. 5,149.

Resisting injury.—If the master use an unlawful weapon or the seaman is exposed to danger of his life or limbs, he may resort to any necessary species of defense to avoid this danger. U. S. v. Smith, (1811) 3 Wash. (U. S.) 78, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,344.

Mere offensive or insolent language does not constitute this crime. U. S. v. Forbes, (1845) Crabbé (U. S.) 558, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 15,129.

CONFINING MASTER.

General definition.—The confinement forbidden by the statute need not necessarily be a physical confinement of the master's person by depriving him of the use of his limbs or shutting him in the cabin. If he is prevented by either force or intimidation from the free use of every part of the vessel, or by threats of bodily injury in the performance of his proper functions as master, or if he is in any way restrained by conduct on the part of his crew, or any of them, such as would reasonably intimidate a firm man, in every such or like case it is in law a confinement. U. S. v. Huff, (1882) 13 Fed. Rep. 630; U. S. v. Sharp, (1815) Pet. (C. C.) 118, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,264; U. S. v. Smith, (1811) 3 Wash. (U. S.) 78, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,344; U. S. v. Hemmer, (1825) 4 Mason (U. S.) 105, 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,345.

The master going armed to every part of the vessel, if it was necessary for his safety that he should so protect himself, does not alter the case. U. S. v. Bladen, (1816) Pet. (C. C.) 213, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,606.

The offense.—In The Ulysses, (1800) 5 Law. Rep. 241, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,330, it was held that the offense of revolt or that of confining the master was not a felony.

Must be felonious.—To constitute the offense of confining the captain the act of confinement must be feloniously done. U.

S. v. Henry, (1824) 4 Wash. (U. S.) 428, 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,351.

Intent.—To confine the master without lawful authority for so doing is a misdemeanor, consummated in doing the act, whether accompanied by an endeavor to commit a revolt or any other offense. Lander v. U. S., (1844) 14 Fed. Cas. No. 8,039.

It can accordingly be no protection to the accused to prove he had no other offense in view and that he seized the captain only to restrain him doing what the sailor wished to prevent. He must prove more—that the confining was justifiable, or that it was under circumstances from which it might be supposed to be involuntary on the part of the seaman. Lander v. U. S., (1844) 14 Fed. Cas. No. 8,039; U. S. v. Savage, (1830) 5 Mason (U. S.) 460, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,225.

Resisting master.—If in endeavoring to resist force necessary to bring a seaman to lawful obedience the seaman confined the master, such act would be unlawful, and an offense within the statute. Lander v. U. S., (1844) 14 Fed. Cas. No. 8,039.

Assault and battery by a seaman upon the master of a vessel does not amount to a confinement of the commander nor an attempt to excite a revolt within the Act of Congress. U. S. v. Lawrence, (1802) 1 Cranch (C. C.) 94, 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,575.

Momentary restraint.—Seizing the person of the master, although the restraint be but momentary, is a confinement prohibited by the law, and such conduct is not excused or justified by a previous battery on the seaman, whose duty it was to have obeyed the command of the captain which was enforced by such battery. U. S. v. Bladen, (1816) Pet. (C. C.) 213, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,606.

The seizing of the master and holding him back against the ship's rail against his will is, in the sense of the Act, a clear case of confinement of the master; and it matters not whether it was for a long or short time, for a minute or for an hour or for a day. The law looks to the fact and not to the duration of the confinement. Lander v. U. S., (1844) 14 Fed. Cas. No. 8,039; U. S. v. Bladen, (1816) Pet. (C. C.) 213, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,606; U. S. v. Thompson, (1832) 1 Sumn. (U. S.) 168, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,492.

Seizing person.—If the person of the master is in fact seized, or if he is in fact held in personal restraint (whether for a long or a short time is immaterial), it is a confinement within the meaning of the statute. U. S. v. Savage, (1830) 5 Mason (U. S.) 460, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,225.

Purpose of seizure.—It matters not that the seizure or restraint was principally or wholly for the purpose of inflicting personal chastisement upon the master; that it was to beat or to wound him, and not to deprive him of his command or authority on board the ship; or that the confinement was a means of personal punishment and not an end. The law looks to the act and not merely to the intent. If the seizure is unlawful it is a confinement. The law esteems the person of the master sacred, and protects him from all restraint which is unlawful. U. S. v. Savage, (1830) 5 Mason (U. S.) 460, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,225.

Justification for restraint.—A master of a vessel may so conduct himself as to justify the officers and crew in placing restraint upon him to prevent his committing acts which might endanger the lives of the seamen or the lives of all persons on board; but such measures should cease the moment the occasion for them ceases. U. S. v. Sharp, (1815) Pet. (C. C.) 118, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,264; U. S. v. Thompson, (1832) 1 Sumn. (U. S.) 168, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,492.

Every confinement is not an offense within the Act. It must be an illegal confinement or restraint. If the master is about to do an illegal act, and especially to do a felony, a seaman may lawfully confine or restrain him. So a seaman may confine the master in justifiable self-defense. U. S. v. Thompson, (1832) 1 Sumn. (U. S.) 168, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,492.

Accessories.—One who joins in the general conspiracy and by his presence countenances acts of violence, but who does not individually use force or threats to compel the master to resign the command of his vessel, is guilty of the offense of confining the master. U. S. v. Sharp, (1815) Pet. (C. C.) 118, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,264.

Sec. 5360. [Revolt and mutiny on shipboard.] If any one of the crew of an American vessel on the high seas, or on any other waters within the admiralty and maritime jurisdiction of the United States, unlawfully and with force, or by fraud, or intimidation, usurps the command of such vessel from the master or other lawful officer in command thereof, or deprives him of authority and command on board, or resists or prevents him in the free and lawful exercise thereof, or transfers such authority and command to another not lawfully entitled thereto, he is guilty of a revolt and mutiny, and shall be punished by a fine of not more than two thousand dollars, and by imprisonment at hard labor not more than ten years. [R. S.]

Act of March 3, 1835, ch. 40, 4 Stat. L. 775; Act of April 30, 1790, ch. 9, 1 Stat. L. 113.

Revolt defined.—A revolt is an open rebellion or mutiny of the crew against the authority of the master in the command, navigation, or control of the ship. If the crew in a mutiny were to displace him from the actual command of the ship and appoint another in his stead, that would clearly be a revolt. It would be an actual usurpation of his authority on board of the ship and an ouster of him from the possession and control of it. U. S. v. Haines, (1829) 5 Mason (U. S.) 272, 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,275; U. S. v. Forbes, (1845) Crabbe (U. S.) 558, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 15,129.

The unlawful acts which now fall within the definition of a maritime revolt are distributed by the language of this section into four categories or classes: (1) simple resistance to the exercise of the captain's authority; (2) the deposition of the captain from his command; (3) the transfer of the captain's power to a third person; (4) the usurpation of the captain's power by the party accused. U. S. v. Almeida, (1847) 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,433.

Master compelled to do will of crew.—There may be a revolt independent of the appointment of another to the command. If the crew should compel the master against his will, by threats or otherwise, to navigate the ship or manage her concerns according to their own directions, and prevent him from the free exercise of his own judgment, that would be an effectual usurpation of the command of the ship, and in the sense of law a revolt. U. S. v. Haines, (1829) 5 Mason (U. S.) 272, 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,275; U. S. v. Forbes, (1845) Crabbe (U. S.) 558, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 15,129.

A positive refusal to perform any duty on board until the master has yielded to some illegal demand of the crew, when it has produced a suspension of his power of command, or when by a general combination the crew refuse obedience to the lawful orders of the master, is a revolt. U. S. v. Forbes, (1845) Crabbe (U. S.) 558, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 15,129; U. S. v. Haines, (1829) 5 Mason (U. S.) 272, 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,275.

Suspension of free command.—Wherever by the overt acts of the crew the authority of the master in the free navigation or management of the ship, or in the free exercise of his rights and duties on board, is entirely overthrown, and there is intentionally caused by such acts a suspension, actual or constructive, of his power of command, it is a revolt of the crew. U. S. v. Haines, (1829) 5 Mason (U. S.) 272, 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,275.

Direct or positive force upon or constraint or imprisonment of the master is not essential. U. S. v. Forbes, (1845) Crabbe (U. S.) 558, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 15,129.

Revolts on shipboard consist not only in attempts to usurp the command from the master, or to transfer it to another, or to deprive him of it, for any purpose, by violence, but in resisting him in the free and lawful exercise of his authority. U. S. v. Peterson, (1846) 1 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 305, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,037.

Forcible displacement.—Where a portion of the crew of the steamer forcibly displaced the master thereof from command and took possession of the vessel, this did not constitute the offense of piracy but of mutiny. (1872) 14 Op. Atty-Gen. 589.

Incompetent master.—If a person substituted as master be grossly incompetent to the duties of his station from want of skill or bad habits, or profligate and cruel behavior, the seamen may be justified in refusing to do duty or to remain by the ship. U. S. v. Cassidy, (1837) 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 582, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 14,745.

Disarming master.—The crew have no right to disarm the captain, though using a deadly weapon, if they are in a mutinous state and using personal violence to resist his lawful commands. U. S. v. Peterson, (1846) 1 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 305, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,037.

A mere disobedience of orders by one or two of the seamen, without combining with the others to produce a deliberate disobedience, although it is highly censurable and may be punished by the master on board the ship or by forfeiture of wages, is not a revolt. U. S. v. Forbes, (1845) Crabbe (U. S.) 558, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 15,129.

Resisting lawful commands.—A master is prevented in the free and lawful exercise of his authority, within the meaning of the Act, if he be prevented from carrying into effect any one lawful command; and a command to continue the business of whaling is prima facie lawful. U. S. v. Borden, (1857) 1 Sprague (U. S.) 374, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,625.

A combination to refuse to pursue such business is not, of itself, the intimidation required as an element to constitute the crime, but it may be the means of intimidation. U. S. v. Borden, (1857) 1 Sprague (U. S.) 374, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,625.

Resisting sailing of unseaworthy vessel.—If subsequent to the shipment and commencement of service the vessel is believed not to be seaworthy, the seamen cannot refuse obedience, but may ask a survey if in port, and if not, but within sight of land, request the master to return and have the survey. Should he then conduct himself unreasonably, or in any way treat them with unnecessary severity, their remedy is at law after their return, and not a resort to violence unless in danger of the actual loss of life, and then at their peril as the result may turn out. U. S. v. Staly, (1846) 1 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 338, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,374.

If seamen have reason to believe, and do believe, a vessel is unseaworthy before the voyage is begun, they may lawfully refuse to go to sea in her. But they must prove these facts. U. S. v. Nye, (1855) 2 Curt. (U. S.) 225, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 15,906.

If the crew of a vessel, acting in good faith and upon reasonable grounds of belief, refuse to go to sea because of the unseaworthiness of the vessel, they cannot be found guilty of revolt, even though the jury should not upon all the evidence be in doubt as to the actual seaworthiness of the vessel. U. S. v. Givings, (1844) 1 Sprague (U. S.) 75, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 15,212.

If the seamen as soon as they could examine the vessel and her sails after coming on board, and decide on her seaworthiness, did so, and then reasonably objected to enter on their contract, they were not punishable as criminals for refusing merely to begin to serve at all under their contract. U. S. v. Staly, (1846) 1 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 338, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,374.

If no actual revolt is made, section 5359 punishes, though in a milder manner, attempts to commit a revolt and various acts likely to lead to mutiny, and among them to assemble with others on board "in a tumultuous and mutinous manner." U. S. v. Peterson, (1846) 1 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 305, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,037.

See also cases under R. S. sec. 5359, supra, p. 924, for general construction of the original Act.

[VIII. MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS.]

Sec. 4612. [Definitions, schedule, and tables.] In the construction of this Title, every person having the command of any vessel belonging to any citizen of the United States shall be deemed to be the "master" thereof; and every person (apprentices excepted) who shall be employed or engaged to serve in any capacity on board the same shall be deemed and taken to be a "seaman;" and the term "vessel" shall be understood to comprehend every description of vessel navigating on any sea or channel, lake or river, to which the provisions of this Title may be applicable, and the term "owner" shall be taken and understood to comprehend all the several persons, if more than one, to whom the vessel shall belong.

And it is hereby agreed that any embezzlement, or willful or negligent destruction of any part of the vessel's cargo or stores, shall be made good to the owner out of the wages of the person guilty of the same; and if any person enters himself as qualified for a duty which he proves himself incompetent to perform, his wages shall be reduced in proportion to his incompetency. And it is also agreed that if any member of the crew considers himself to be aggrieved by any breach of the agreement or otherwise, he shall represent the same to the master or officer in charge of the vessel, in a quiet and orderly manner, who shall thereupon take such steps as the case may require. Act of June 7, 1872, ch. 322, 17 Stat. L. 277.

This section was amended by the Act of Dec. 21, 1898, ch. 28, sec. 23, 30 Stat. L. 762, by substituting the scale of provisions and substitutes in Table A, as here given, in place of that in the section as originally enacted which was as follows:

"(Here any stipulation for changes, or substitution of one article for another, may be inserted.)

"SUBSTITUTES.

"One ounce of coffee, or cocoa, or chocolate, may be substituted for one-quarter ounce of tea; molasses for sugar, the quantity to be one-half more; one pound of potatoes or yams, one-half pound flour or rice; one-third pint of pease or one-quarter pint of barley may be substituted for each other. When fresh meat is issued, the proportion to be two pounds per man per day, in lieu of salt meat. Flour, rice, and pease, beef and pork, may be substituted for each other, and, for potatoes, onions may be substituted."

It is provided by section 26 of the amending Act that the provisions of section 23, above given, "shall not apply to fishing or whaling vessels or yachts." See supra, p. 870.

For exceptions, see Act of June 9, 1874, ch. 260, note thereunder, and provisions following, supra, p. 850.

The fees provided by tables C, D, and E are abolished by the Act of June 19, 1886, ch. 421, sec. 1. See SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION.

Foreign vessels.—This section does not exclude foreign vessels from the operation of the statute, by declaring that a person in command of a vessel belonging to a citizen of the United States shall be considered the "master" thereof. U. S. v. Sullivan, (1890) 43 Fed. Rep. 602.

The last clause but one of section 4612 seems to be conclusive on the point that the word "vessel" as used in title 53 includes a foreign vessel as well as a domestic one. U. S. v. Sullivan, (1890) 43 Fed. Rep. 602.

Merchant vessels only.—This section applies only to merchant vessels. The Grace Darling, (1878) 2 Hask. (U. S.) 278, 10 Fed. Cas. No. 5,651.

Vessel defined.—A steam ferryboat used for the purpose of transporting trains across the Mississippi river, used as a portion of an interstate railroad line so as to form a continuous line of transportation, is a ship within the meaning of this section. The St. Louis, (1891), 48 Fed. Rep. 312.

A steam dredge employed in the work of cleaning out and deepening channels in navigable waters, but without means of propulsion, is a "vessel" as defined by R. S. sec. 3, and persons engaged in working on such dredge and the accompanying scows are seamen within the meaning of the above section, and consequently entitled to a maritime lien for their wages. Saylor v. Taylor, (C. C. A. 1896) 17 Fed. Rep. 476.

Seamen defined.—The effect of these definitions "is only to declare in a certain class of cases, to wit, ships, 'belonging to any citizen of the United States,' two things already well established: (1) That the person having the command of a ship shall be deemed the master thereof; and (2) that every person employed thereon shall be deemed a seaman. But the section does not declare that the term 'seamen' as used in the Act, or that the Act itself shall be held to apply only to seamen serving on ships belonging to citizens of the United States." Deady, J., in U. S. v. McArdle, (1873) 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 367, 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,653.

This section does not declare that the word "seamen," as used in the statute, is confined to one employed on a vessel belonging to a citizen of the United States, but rather and only that every person employed on such a vessel should be considered a "seaman." U. S. v. Sullivan, (1890) 43 Fed. Rep. 602.

But see Grant v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1893) 58 Fed. Rep. 694, in which it was held that R. S. sec. 4601 (since repealed), relating to harboring or secreting "any seamen belonging to any vessel," was not applicable to a vessel not belonging to a citizen of the United States.

To the same effect, see U. S. v. Minges, (1883) 16 Fed. Rep. 657.

An assistant engineer of a steam vessel is a seaman, within the meaning of this section, though he is employed by the chief engineer, who was under a contract with the vessel to supply his assistants for a lump sum. The D. C. Fogel, (1890) 41 Fed. Rep. 155.

Printing scale in articles.—The scale of provisions provided by this section must be printed in the copy of shipping articles for coastwise steamers and posted. (1899) 22 Op. Atty.-Gen. 349.

Food and allowances.—See further R. S. secs. 4568, 5347, and notes, supra, pp. 893, 922.
